One of the most disagreeable things of life is also something that we encounter often on a college campus. On the weekends we encounter this virulent phenomenon often in a more disagreeable state than usual, due to the presence of alcohol. This is what leads to the decline of a civilization: swearing without style.

The occasional expletive is ary, unless one is Sweet Polly Purebred it is often difficult to get through one's whole life -let alone a stress-filled day - without uttering some word found unacceptable some group, be it Webster's, Tipper Gore and her ilk, or Hell's Angels. Language is wonderful because it allows each human being mexpress him/herself in an individual way, and the variations found within an individual's set of language symbols is often fascinating. The difference between a good writer and a trash writer is not the book cover or even the plot; even the Odyssey and the Illiad have been stold in ways to make Homer turn over in his grave. Then think of the reaction when one hears that Judith Krantz has written a new book, knowing that it will be a trite saga of costume changes and promiscuity. Other writers can make characters who are clothes-horses and promiscuous (Flaubert, Madame Boyary) yet they are considered classics. The fault lies not in our stars, but in how we describe them This analogy can be applied to swearing. At any given time it is easy to overhear a conversation peppered with expletives. Time and again they are the same ones. A sense of tradition is important, but it tends to become ridiculous. A factor which augments this repetition is that many students - in direct conflict with their grammatical training - use these words as nouns, verbs, adjectives and ar-

follow the time honored principle of simply inserting a convenient word in between every other phrase, making the English language sound something close to Pig Latin.

Perhaps the problem is that people are not aware that there are other ways to speak. They don't know that there are synoymns for swear words; maybe they shouldn't be blamed since most thesauruses don't carry alternative expletives for the most common ones. In that case, something even more aweinspiring than the guy who can chug a whole keg in ten minutes must be mentioned. It is called Imagination. Some people on this campus have heard of it. Some may have forgotten about it. Some may be lacking a sense of humor and that is surely a detriment to Imagination.

I will explain Imagination. Think back to the time when you were locked in an amorous embrace with someone...met...(picked up) at a party. Suddenly you hear your usual Beloved's voice just outside the door. Certain that you will be seen leaving a dark room looking disheveled with Someone Else, you start thinking of ways to explain this behavior in such a way that you still have a date for the Christmas Semiformal. Imagination is also called into play when papers are late and ses are needed. Besides using imagination to escape un pleasant situations, it can be used for other useful things. Start with compelled to say one of the more frequented expletives, substitute something. It doesn't have to be startling at first, or too innovative. Just something different, Differentness will not prove fatal, although sometimes it might seem a bit scary "Zounds," "Drat," "Bugger It, may sound really stupid and weird at first but after awhile others will see that it's rather refined and kind of intriguing. You may even impress someone. If you know a foreign language, or someone who knows one, you have ample oportunity to discover whole new worlds of curses, be it in the original or in translation. They are especially colorful and really irritate people who have never been called things like the son of a camel merchant, a chess piece face or even a chowder head. Words from other eras can be effective too, and can readily be found in dictionaries of slang, or from watching movies that came before Gone With the Wind

Expletives are necessary, of course. But as with all things in life, it should be done with style. It's fine to be trendy, and nice to feel like part of a crowd, but there comes a time when it's just you and your swear words. Well, when it comes to swearing, it seems lately that everyone is saying the same thing, whether it is in reference to morning classes or an ex-boyfriend or girlfriend. It is time that people started to be creative when they swear. It would be a lot easier on the ear, and to look forward to

Recreation, etc.

by Jennifer L. Nicholson

swearing. The next time you feel

Residing in a small town as a college student has left many Washington College students to wonder what to do after classes or on a free week-end. Although Kent County is small, there are recreational areas available The Chester River Yacht and Country Club on Quaker Neck Road, about two miles outside of Chestertown, offers junior membership to college students for $500 as the initiation fee and $430 dollars every other year as a member. At the ountry club, a golf course and wimming pool are available, and he use of the club house. Founded in 1926, the country club is located on the Chester River and will open its doors to members only. Anyone interested in joining should call Bill Falls at 778-1369.

Another option for fun and frolic is Great Oak Landing whose facilities consist of a nine hole, executive golf course, tennis courts, and a swimming pool. Approximately ten miles outside of Chestertown, Handy Point Road leads to the landing which overlooks the Chesapeake Bay. Here it costs $8 per person a day to play golf. Golf clubs may be rented out at the front desk for $3 a set, and golf balls are also available. The charge is $1 per per-son to use the pool. Although Great

Oak does not have boats available, La Vida Yacht Brokerage,nearby does rent out large boats for use. In addition, a man named Mr. Kjellbourg, located on the beach at Great Oak, rents out small boats to the public. For more information about Great Oak Landing call 778-2100.

Another choice for W.C. students may be the historical Betterton beach in Kent County. Although small, Betterton is a public beach usually with a lifeguard on tablished on the Chesapeake Bay. The scenery is breathtaking in the evening and new construction of the town mixes a modern scenario with that of the early twentieth century.

Stam

Drug Co.

215 High Street

Chestertown, Maryland

778-3030

Complete Hair Care 10 Visits for $40.00

Our SunTana SunSystem guarantees you a glorious, Our SunTana Sunsystem guarantees you a young-adiant tan that you can keep all year long. A tan you acheve with soft, comfortable and SAFE U.V.A. light and without all the burning, peeling and flaking you get in natural sunlight. Our SunSystem is GUARANTEED to lan anyone who tans in the sun...while you relax in cool

We'd like to tell you more about this exciting new way to tan. A single visit will convince you.

The Beauty Lounge

Phone: 778-2635

Chestertown, MD 21620
NEXUS PRODUCTS AVAILABLE
Complete Hair Care * Manicures * Sculptur

Callus or Midtown Mall by today.

Visa/Mastercard Accepted

Used Furniture For Your College Needs

Sofas, Chairs, End and Coffee Tables, Desks, Lamps and Much More.

> Crowding's Store Rt. 297

Four Miles North of C-Town

Worton, Md. 778-0389

· Hudson's

Vitamins

 Cosmetics Russell

Stover Candy •Soda Fountain

Peer Advisers

Chemistry major Mark Malkus comes from Cambridge, Maryland. The junior is a member of the chemistry club

Junior Becky Cox comes to Washington College from Hartly, Delaware. A business management major / computer science minor

A senior from Gambrills, Maryland, Muge (Lillie) Turgut is majoring in political science and minoring in Mike McGinnis is a member of the Writers' Union and a reporter for The Collegian.

Brent Hopkins is a sophomore from Lewes, Delaware who plans to major in sociology with a possible minor in philosophy.

Michele Baize is a junior from Glen Burnie, Maryland. A double major in art and English, she is the photogra-

Cynthia Panowicz, a junior from Joppa, Maryland, is a biology major who works as a campus tour guide.

Political science major Lynn Burris, a junior from New Castle, Delaware, is a member of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority.

Junior Jennifer Vaughan, a business management major / Spanish minor from Elkton, Maryland, is a member of the Spanish Club.

Karen Hinson, a resident of Baltimore, Maryland, is majoring in history and minoring in political sci-

Psychology major George Small, a junior from Shadyside, Maryland, is a member of the Theta Chi fraternity and a basketball player.

Senior Audra Philippon is majoring in sociology and minoring in history and psychology. She is the Head Peer Adviser

Political science major / English minor Kim Harb is a senior from Norwich, Connecticut. Kim is a member of the Student Academic Majoring in business management and minoring in math, senior Melody Redman, comes from Chester-

A political science major / history minor, junior Monte Bourjaily halls from Alexandria, Virginia. He participates on the debate team and in

Majoring in international studies and minoring in French, senior Ren Jerome is active in the class of 1988 and works as a tour guide

Senior Cecilia Kosenkranius, a humanities major from Wilmington, pelaware, works as a campus tour quide and Spanish tutor.

Wilmington, De. resident Tim Rohs is a junior psych major with a minor in history. Tim works for The Pegasus

Brenda Connor, a senior from Cumberland, Maryland, is majoring in political science and minoring in Political science major Lynn Burris, a junior from New Castle, Delaware, is a member of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority.

Sophomore April Baugher, a prospective science major from LaVale, Maryland, works for the Dining Serv-

A political science major with a minor in economics, junior Arian Ravanbakhsh is the editor-in-chief of The Pegasus.

Lisa Lambert, a junior from Callfon, New Jersey, is majoring in international studies and minoring in economics.

A junior from Lutherville, Maryland, biology major Jackle Langdon is an officer in the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority

The vice-president of the Kappa Alpha order and a member of the Interfraternity Council, senior Joe Bucci is a biology major international studies major with a minor in Spanish, comes from Killingworth, Connecticut

Darnelle Shingleton is a junior from Baltimore, Maryland majoring in business management

Baltimorean Carolyn Naff is a junior psychology major. The assistant editor of The Pegasus participates on the debate team

Senior Sean Ireton is a Spanish/ German major from Boston Lake, New York. He runs cross country and is active in language clubs.

Joe McAleer, a senior from Reisterstown, Maryland, is a business management major with a concentration in computer science.

Business management major Chris Huebner comes from Bethesda, Maryland. The junior lacrosse player is a member of the Lembids Pi Delta

Sophomore Susan McGuirk plans to major in international studies and minor in Spanish. She lives in Cheverly, Maryland

Resident Assistants

Scott Jones, a junior from Mt. Airy, Md., is the resident assistant in Dorchester House. The political science major plays on the men's baskethall and basehall teams Junior Richard Gerhardt, the resident assistant on the second floor (north) of Kent, is from Somers, Ct. The business and economics major is an avid fan of sailing and skiing.

Junior Matt Keller, the resident assistant for first floor Kent (south), is an English major from Baltimore, Maryland. Matt plays intramural sports and works for the audiovisual department.

Political science major Rachel

Smith of Geneva, NY is the resident assistant for first floor Reid. The junior is also a member of Omicron Delta Kappa and is the Chairman of the Conduct Screening Board.

Junior Cathy Jewell of Grasonville, Md. is the resident assistant for second floor Caroline. A double major in English and history, she serves as the managing editor of The Elm.

The third floor of Caroline House is designated as the language floor and junior Chip Schaller is the resident assistant. An international studies major from Centreville, Md., Chip is active in the Campus Christian Fellowship, the Early Music Consort, the international relations club, and various language clubs.

The resident assistant on the first floor (north) of Kent is senior Al Hepting. An English

major from Ellicott City, Md.,

he plays basketball and is a campus peer minister.

Bill Faust, a biology major, is the resident assistant on the first floor of Caroline House. A senior from North Plainfield, NJ, he is The Elm's circulation manager

Senior Sue Odenath is the resident assistant in Talbot. A psychology major from Pine

Hill, NJ, she enjoys volleyball.

Second floor Queen Anne's resident assistant is Genie Auchincloss, a junior from Radnor, Pa. An English major, she is a member of the women's Janet Szabo is a senior biology major from Avon, Ohio. She is the resident assistant for second floor Worcester, the women's quiet floor.

Debbie Kirkpatrick is the resident assistant in West Hall, which is reserved for seniors. The history major / political science minor comes from Jupiter, Fla., and is a tour guide

1987 - 88

Senior Demetri Zerefos is the resident assistant for the first and second floors of Somerset. Demetri is a biology major from New Castle, De.

Junior Cyndy Dingus of Flanders, NY is the resident assistant for the second floor of Minta Martin, the Alpha Chi floor. Cyndy, a business management major, is a member of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority

Adrienne Cupka, a junior from Kendall Park, NJ, is the resident assistant on the fourth floor of Minta Martin. The sociology major plays softball and is the rush chairman for the Zeta Tau Alpha sorroity.

Senior Liz Whelan, a sociology major from Summit, NJ, is the resident assistant for the third floor of Minta Martin. Liz is a member of the women's field hockey, lacrosse and swim teams.

Third floor Reid's resident assistant is senior Rita Brigman, a sociology major from West Chester, Pa. Rita is secretary of the class of 1988 and plays on the women's lacrosse team.

Senior Chip Bailey, a business major from Baltimore, Md., is the resident assistant for the second floor (south) of Kent. Chip plays baseball and is a member of the Theta Chi fraternity and the Student Academic Board.

Tracy Smith, a senior from St. Michaels, Md., is the resident assistant for the third floor of Somerset. The business management major is an accounting tutor and an employee of the Central Services department.

Junior Kim Cavolo is the resident assistant for the first floor of Queen Anne. A psychology major from Timonium, Md., she is the secretary of the Student Government Association and is a member of the Alpha Omicron Pi sorority.

East Hall's resident assistant is senior Mark Mickum from Chevy Chase, Md. The English major plays lacrosse and is a member of the Phi Sigma fraternity.

Tina Smith, the resident assistant on second floor Reid, is a coxswain for the women's crew. The Andover, Md. sophomore plans to major in psychology or English.

Senior David Healey, a double major in English and Spanish from Cooksville, Md., is the resident assistant for the writer's floor on the second floor of Wicomico.

Junior Jim Spencer is a business major from West Chester, Pa. J n is the resident assistant for the men's quiet floor on first floor Worcester.

SPORTS

Minus Few, Plus Several, Sho'men Hope to Build on Success

Soccer Schedule

September 12 Catholic University (H)

19 Muhlenburg College (A) at 1:30nm 23 St. Mary's College (A)

at 1:30mm 26 Franklin & Marshall (H) at 1:30om 29 Lebanon Valley (A)

at 4:00pm October 3 Swarthmore College (A)

at 1:30pm 6 Salisbury State (A) at 1:30pm 8 Western Maryland (H) at 3:00 pm

10 Albright College (H)

13 Ursinus Vollege (A) at 3:00 pm 17 Haverford College (A)

at 1:30pm 21 Widener University (A) at 3:00 pm 27 Gallaudet College (A) at 3:30pm 31 Johns Hopkins (H) at 1:30pm

November 3 Delaware Valley (H) at 3:00 pm

7-9 Maryland State Tourney

And In the Crystal Soccer Ball I See ...

by Jim Collins

The Sho'men soccer team has been praised for its efforts and triumphs over the years. Last year's team, although they struggled early, finished at 9-9 1 as runners-up in the Maryland State Tournament This year, hoping to build from last year's end of season success. Assistant Coach Peter Miller predicts an even better season.

The present twenty-six man roster is filled with many returning lettermen to season the new freshmen. Misssing, however, is John Larson, top scorer from last year's team, who did not return this season. "Even though Larson isn't back," says Miller, "we will still be a strong team."

The Sho'men freshmen line-up is headed by: Scott Smith, Long Island; Frank Garlitz, Cumberland; and Ben Crabbs, McDonough. Top returning players expected to perform include Scott Beeler, Dave Reamer, Raul Felipa, Steve Leary, Tom Bowman, Alan Lerch, Pete Van Buren, Todd Emmons Frank Davis, John Thomas, and Steve Attias. These are the players to watch as the season progresses

Coach Allen indicated that the team looks better and stronger than last year's group, which was primarily composed of freshmen and sophomores. The quality of the new players, combined with the number of returning upperclassmen, seems to verify Allen's suggestion. But of course can the Sho'men match last year's playoff success? The opening weeks of the season will be a better indicator, but a return trip to the state finals is within the grasp of this team's expansive capabilities.

o success, victory should come easy for the W.C. Sho tomorrowagainst Catholic University. Game starts at 1:30pm.

HAMSTRING STRETCH:

There are many good ones, including this voga exercise. Sit on the floor with your legs stretched out in front of you. Flex your left hip and knee and bring your left heel to your crotch with the outside of your thigh flat on the floor. Keep your right knee straight and your toes pointed straight up. Then lean forward and try to touch your right toes with both hands Don't force it: stretch gently.

Stretch Away Pesky Pain in the Knees

Dear Dr. Jock: My daughter is a 14 year old and enjoys running and playing tennis on a regular basis. Lately, she's been complaining of knee pain. She hasn't had an injury and her knee isn't swollen, but when she exercises, she feels pain around the kneecap in front of the knee. What do you suggest? T.C., Los Angeles.

Dear T.C.: Don't panic. Your daughter's complaint is not uncommon. Many young girls experience knee pain, especially if they are active in sports. If the problem persists, you'll have to see a doctor for a routine examination and some knee X-rays. In the meantime, it's reasonable to ask what is most likely causing her pain, and what you can do to help. Naturally, this advice pertains to ALL athletes with knee

TEST FOR TIGHTNESS Young people with knee pain often have tight muscles, especially thier Amity Bakery

and Coffee Shop

pain, so listen up:

quadriceps, hamstrings, and iliotibial band. You can test for quadriceps tightness by having your daughter lie face down and flex her knee. Most all young people should be able to bring their heel up to their buttock. If she can't, it means her quads (or anterior thigh muscles) are tight; too tight for comfort.

Dr. Jock

Next, test the hamstring or posterior thigh muscles. Have your daughter bend over and touch her toes. She shouldn't push or strain. If she can't do it with ease, she needs to work on stretching her hamstrings. It's something that many adults with knee pain need to work on, too.

Home testing for iliotibial band tightness is trickier and may have to be done by a doctor. If the other two areas are tight, it's a good bet that the iliotibial band is tight, too. Why this happens is not known for sure, but it may be related to a sudden growth spurt where bone growth outpaces muscle and tendon growth and causes a temporary shortness of the muscle complex across the knee. Temporary" is the key word here. Treatment may be unnecessary. The problem may solve itself as muscle and tendon growth catches up with

Alternate legs, and repeat until your STRETCH FOR TIGHThamstring muscles feel looser. NESS Simple stretching excercises can relieve knee pain and allow your one leg and bring the other heel up to the buttocks. Grasp the ankle with your hand and while keeping you back erect, extend your hip. Focus your attention on your (anterior) thigh muscles and feel the stretch. Alternate legs and repeat until the muscle feel looser.

BEAUTY SHOP

ILIOTIBIAL STRETCH: This is a bit more diffidaughetr to continue her workouts: cult than the others. Stand sideways. QUADS STRETCH: Stand on at arms lengths from a desk or table.

Lean on the table with your hand and cross the opposite leg across in front of the leg nearest the table. Keep the leg nearest the table in front straight and and thrust that hip toward the table. Feel the stretch in the muscles around the hip. Alternate legs and repeat until muscles feel looser.

Sports Calendar

September

11 Field Hockeyvs.

Haverford College (H) at 4:00 pm

Catholic University (H) at 1:30 pm 14 Field Hockeyvs.

Wesley College (A) at 4:00 pm

17 Field Hockeyes Elizabethtown College(A) at 4:00 pm

Volleyball vs Swarthmore/Widener(A) at 7:00 pm

REMEMBER: Don't ex overnight recovery. Stretch regularly will produce results... it will take time. Maybe months pain persists or weaken, see a di

© 1987 by Ruba House Distibuted by Tribune Media Servi

Austin Carpet 778-4656

Rt.213 North

Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

BARBER STYLISTS

The Thompson Building College Heights

507 Washington Ave Chestertown, Maryland 21620 Res. 639-7201 Carroll, Jane and John Thompson

FLOWER SHOP

LIQUOR STORE

Breakfast 5 A.M.-11 A.M. unch - Soups & Sandwiches Kent Plaza, Chestertown 778-2228

Mon.-Sat. 5 A.M.-5 P.M. Sunday 5 A.M.-2 P.M.

Review Reaquaints Alumni to College

"We think it's great," proons Professor Robert Day, coning the first Alumni issue of the chington College Review. sy, editor-in-residence Sarah arhart was busy putting together their living in writing. first summer issue of the Wash-on College Review. Professor Day came up with idea to have an alumnus edit an e of the Review; it was coincial that Sarah, who graduated . . . a history m Washington College in 1975. and to edit an issue of the Rew. An agreement was made with rah and to learn what was inwed in producing magazine, she

The basic plan of having a nni Review issue was to reaqtalumni who have fallen out of h with professors and the Colwolve those members of the mni Association who were at time involved with the Creative ing Program," explains Kathy ner. Wagner believes this issue good way to "tap them as a Review to Alumni members n the Writer's Union over the 15 years, we're hoping to reach aybody," says Wagner. The Reto have graduated since 1969 Though this particular issue is unt of student work appearing willing to spend a summer produc

my idea to have a magazine where beginning writers' work was appearing with writers who were obviously more accomplished than they were." He also believes that it is an students were home this honor for students to have their mer, working or simply taking it work appear in the same text with previous graduates who have made

According to Day, the Alumni issue will always contain a lot of

"gives students they have not experienced."

thed the student editors during student work, mixed in with more professional work. He has been criticized for this policy but it is not something to which he has given a lot of thought.

Getting an editor for this first ingeneral. "We've been trying Alumni issue was relatively easy, since Sarah, as editor-in residence. is also an alumna of the College. But problems could arise in choosing future editors. The alumni who have heard about and contributed to the Alumni issue, generally like the urce... to reinvolve them in the idea. "We are going to go to them," explains Day. They will ask various "By sending out this issue of people who have graduated within the past 10-15 years who were involved in the Writing Program.

Kathy Wagner foresees problems in finding editors for future will also be mailed out to all Alumni issues. "The problem is alish majors and creative writers finding someone who wants to do it. and finding someone who is in the area." Because there is no salary Alumni issue, there is a good involved, finding someone who is editor of the Alumni issue is the fact that the magazine is produced during the summer, therefore leaving much of the proofreading and layout procedure up to the editor alone. During the school year, there are generally three student editors, making the different tasks less tedi ous. "Sarah worked gradually on this issue all Spring, allowing herself a large amount of time to put the issue together, "Wagner recalls. Day points out that this issue of the Review "gives students here a sense of a history they have not experienced." He naturally would let recent graduates distance themselves from the college environ ment, before they are considered for the editor position. "It's interesting for students who think that the only literary program that existed here is the O'Neill Literary House," Day says, referring to Marty Williams ('75) "Richmond House Redux' We learn about the previous Liter ary House in this issue. And the Alumni issue does not necessarily have to be about the early days. "I'd like to have a student write about James Dickey and ing a summer issue is to have an for the "common reader," the time he fell out of the College Volkswagon bus, or essays on other ent flavor to it," states Kathy Wagteachers not in the English Department," Day explains. "There are issue because it is more readable. flavorful, interesting people back

ve been around," he continue issue which has a completely differ-

"One of the goals of publish- reflects Sarah's interest in literature

Though definite plans have ner. The students like this particular not been made yet for next summer's issue, both directors at "The tenor of the articles is more the Literary House are confident there, just in the 10-15 years that laid back, less academic." Wagner that the next Alumni issue will be something to look forward to

Announcing

"The OTHER Film Series"

Handsome men, beautiful women. few allusions and no academic credit

Tuesday evenings at the Alumni House, 7 pm First 15 get sofa seats, others bring pillows. Snacks and sodas courtesy of the Alumni Dept.

starring: Mickey Rourke, Matt Dillon and Dennis Hopper

Two great ways to cruise through the semester.

The hand on the left is poised on what could be the most essential part of vour education

A Macintosh" computer.

And the hand on the right is gripping pure, simple, unadulterated fun. A Honda Scooter. One we're giving away

All you have to do for a chance to drive it away is visit your campus computer center and fill out an entry form. While you're there, take a Macintosh for a test drive

Because Macintosh can help you write term papers, categorize elements of the periodic table, plot the rise and fall of pork-belly prices, compile computer code, and talk to other computers.

And the first 250 people on campus who get behind a mouse, so to speak, will receive a free Apple" memo board

So head over to your campus computer center today. And ask about our Student Financing Program.

Who knows? You may soon find yourself cruising a little farther than you expected.

. Test drive a Macintosh.

You may ride away on a Honda Scooter.

Enter September 8 - October 16

Washington College Bookstore

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 4

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, September 18, 1987

Department Chairs To Be Evaluated

by Tony Caligiuri After four years of internal discussion and external recomendations, President Douglass Cater issted new criteria for the selection of department chairpersons, which will ultimately affect the chair of each academic department at Washington College.

such a policy came about from past recommendations by the Appointments and Tenure committee. members of the administration and faculty, and the Middle States Evaluating team in 1983, according personal relationships, and providing relief from the administrative duties of a chairmanship. This is not a rotating chair manship in the literal sense," said Baer, who explained that an evaluation by the committee would no necessarily lead to the replacement of that chairperson. She further The decision to implement pointed out that a formal, indepth

The evaluations and subsequent actions are not punitive in nature are not intended as a sign of dissatisfaction over the work of the chair man

ment posted in mid-May of 1987, tive," said Baer. The Appointments and Tenure Committee will routinely consider the effective functioning of department chairs and make recommendations to the President for change." According to Cater and Baer, several department chairs will be evaluated each year over a period of fiveorsix years. Once every department has experienced such an evaluation and the results and recommendations implemented, the fire to six year process would begin

The president, who, according to the College bylaws has the issued seven criteria for the considtration of appointments. These agement. thieria and goals include the opporunity for developing new leadership in each department, administrative ability, tenure status and seniority, establishing good inter

According to a policy state- but everyone has been very suppor-

"Department Chairmanships were never intended as permanent positions," said Cater. "This should bring new energy to the departments." He pointed out that the evaluations would not follow any rigid systematic order, but those who had been chairing departments the longest would be evaluated first.

Both Cater and Baer emphasized that the evaluations and subsequent actions are not punitive in nature and are not intended as a sign of dissatisfaction over the work of the chairman

The first three departments to fight and responsibility to appoint be affected beginning this year were department chairpersons, further philosophy, political science/international studies, and business man-

> Dr. Tai Sung An was replaced by Dr. Daniel Premo in the international studies/political scicontinued on page 4

Inside:

Dining Hall.....p.4 Off the Cuff.....p.7

Last Friday night, the Kappa Alpha Beach Bash attracted several hundred students to join in the celebration for the end of the summer. One of those so at the party who is above was Spuds Mckenzie

Administrative Promotions Announced

by Tony Caligiuri President Cater, after reviewing positions represented on the College Executive Council, reinstated five executive positions, including two promotions. The promotions took place with the approval of the Board of Visitors and Governors and were announced at Monday's faculty meeting in Dunning Hall.

Cater reinstated Elizabeth A Bacras Provost and Dean of the College, whose responsibility rests as chief academic officer and second

Gene Hessey was reinstated as ment and Finance as well as Treas urer for the Board. His responsibilities include budget preparations. David Wheelan was assigned responsibilities last February as Vice President for Development and College Relations, and his position was clarified as well. In recognition of his past accomplishments, Kevin Coveney, currently the director of admissions, will assume the title of vice-presi dent. His responsibilities increased to include research, long range planning for recruitment of non-tradiional students, development of student financial aid policies, manage ment of programs relating to retention of students, and development of volunteer recruitment networks. Sherry P. Magill was designated Vice President and Deputy to the President as Chief Staff Officer for the President's Office. She will Council and serve as planner for the

According to a statement made by Cater before Monday's meeting. the announcement was intended to "recognize the successful evolution of the Executive Council." Cater also said he hoped that "by assigning responsibilities commensurate with their services to encourage longevity in offices that are ill-served by frequent turnovers."

Four New Members to Join Board

by Lynn Burris

Four new members were recently selected to join Washing ton College's Board of Trustees of Delegates of the Maryland Gen-Chestertown civic leader Clare S.

Mitchell was selected by the years ago, the state of Maryland was awarded with a special citation for leadership beyond the call of duty in 1985, and in January 1987

Mitchell, a resident of Kent County, has been a member of the House of Delegates since 1971, and has served for the past four years as chairman of the Floor Appropriations Committee. He is also Vice-Chairman of the

Spending Affordability Committee and is a member of the Legislative Policy Committee and the Joint Budget and Audit Committee Pat Ingersoll graduated cum laude with honors in sociology in 1971. She then attended graduate school at the University of Pennsylvania earning an M.A. and an A.B.D. in her field. Ingersoll has worked at the college as a substitute instructor, tutor, and part-time instructor in sociology. A trustee of the Kent County Public Library, she has served as secretary, vice-president, and president. Ingersoll is a member of the Mid-Shore Symphony Society and is a member of St. Paul's Church, where she serves

"I am deeply appreciative of the trust the alumni have placed in me in asking me to represent them," Ingersoll says. "As a Washington College wife, student, alumna, parent, part-time faculty, and longtime resident of Chestertown, I have known the College in many ways. It has added so much to my life that I think it was only appropriate to offer, in return, whatever talent, experience,

continued on page 5

Editorial

Beyond The Glorified Dance Committee

Last week, the Student Government Association held dorm senator elections. That is, they tried to hold dorm senator election

Actual races, with the number of candidates running for office exceeding the number of seats open, were conducted in only three dormitories - Queen Anne, Reid, and Worcester, In other buildings. simply filing a petition was enough to win a spot. In a few dorms, applications still failed to meet the number of positions available. This embarrassing outcomes forces SGA officers to recruit students to serve in the legislative branch. While eligible candidates and voters were not inundated with reminders about the petition deadline and the election, the publicity seems sufficient: notices in campus mail, posters in Bill Smith and Hodson Hall.

Much of the apathy, among upperclassmen at least, can be blamed on previous dorm senators. Too many throw away their promises to represent their peers when they throw away their cam paign posters, and seem content with the addition of yet another job title on some future resume. Students keep abreast of SGA affairs not through the dorm senators, whose job includes such dissemination of information, but through The Elm or the campus grapevine

Still, the lack of interest in serving as dorm senator is problematic. Perhaps we are simply too overburdened with the demands of our academic lives to allow for extracurricular involvement; given the flexibility of the Four Course Plan, however, this seems doubtful. Or perhans we have decided that, with the exception of booking an occasional band to play the CoffeeHouse, student government will do little for us

And sometimes that is true. Sometimes, a particularly unimaginative Student Government Association deserves the title that cynics attach to it - a glorified dance committee. In the worst of circumstances, they don't even do a good job of organizing the social life, and there are noticeable gaps in the calendar.

But without student participation, we are doomed to this from the outset. We complain about the housing crunch or new alcohol policies, but we do little to see that our interests are represented to the administration. Few are willing to serve even in a limited capacity as dorm senators; others fail even to vote.

Last week, President Cater met with various student leaders the SGA executive board, class officers, Elm editors - to discuss their plans for the semesters ahead. Next year, without a halt to this dangerous drop in student leadership, those meetings may be very brief indeed

Washington College Elm

| Frendal 190n              |  |
|---------------------------|--|
| Editors                   |  |
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Keh   |
| News Editor               | Tony Caligin   |
| Features Editor           | lennifer Harris  |
| Sports Editor             | Dit Dooler   |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Jenny Fishe  |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Ba   |
| Managers                  | and the state of t |
| Managing Editor           | Cathy Jew  |
| Advertising Manager       |  |
| Circulation Manager       | William Fan  |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed columns, co taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editor convictors to incention are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editors cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the Can the control of th The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be considered for publication in that week's issue.

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main to dormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Great Taste, Less Pressure

To the Editor In the Campus Voices sec tion of last week's Elm the issue of the tighter control of alcohol or campus was examined from two different, but valid, viewpoints. The first, by Leigh Mendelsen stressed that if the Greek system. now the social center of the college does not uphold a leadership position on controlling consumption. the administration will be forced to implement tougher restrictions on alcohol than already exist. Mark Stenger, in his opinion, made it clear that even though the C-House will not serve minors and in fact has made it tougher for minors to do so it still can be a social scene at WC Just because beer cannot be nurchased does not mean that the fun is gone in fact a student may find it more comfortable than the atmos phere of pressure to drink that over

As Co-Chairman of the Student Alcohol Awareness Commit tee, I would like to invite each and every student to think about what alcohol means to you. If you like being able to go to parties and have a beer or if you could do without one, then go ahead make that choice What should be understood, though by both groups is that if a party gets out of control than it stops being a party and becomes a mob. If all students, and not just Greeks, do not take the responsibility to insure that parties stay calm then the administration will have to act in the manner of which Mr. Mendelsen hangs most college parties

As Mr. Stenger pointed out, way of staying in control is not to drink. The C-House is only taking steps to stay within the law and also to keep itself open. Parties and social gatherings outside of the C-House could follow suit and make sure that non-alcoholic beverages are easily accessible to students. Those who do choose to drink should know their limits, and those who don't choose could help in keeping others from hurting the

To sum this up, it will take the efforts of the entire student body forced to go dry. Look out for each other and if you find yourself in a situation that is not under control don't look the other way but speak out and correct the problem Chris Schanno

> Junior Psychology

Satire And Salad Bars

To The Editor:

I'd like to address two issues on campus. First, to the freshmen who wrote letters concerning Kelly Lamoree's SATIRE in the Elm two weeks ago: I hope you get a good education here, because you certainly need one. Kelly's article was SATIRE- that's when you say the opposite of what you mean, for effect. It is not to be taken literally An example of satire is when "A Lonely [sic] Freshman!" says, "Once again thank you for the w come!" Other examples of SAT-"A daily room inspection would be totally thrilling for me. .[M]aybe your [sic] right, we should live on the Chester river and swim to our nightime classes, thus building up our bodies.

See, you used SATIRE and didn't even know it! Sometimes it's hard to tell if something is SATIRICAL or not. Kelly's article was SATIRE. She didn't mean literally that freshmen should be housed in tents; she was pointing out that the administration of this college was unprepared to deal with the housing demands of a large incoming class

Now that we have concluded our lesson on SATIRE, perhaps we should all go to the Writing Lab. When I was a freshman, one had to demonstrate the ability to write a complete sentence in English. Apparently this is no longer a requirement for admission to the college. -$12,000 a year for the pleasure of living in a tent,- is not a Furthermore, "Much sentence. more a boat yee-ha," is not a complete thought, let alone a complete sentence. "Much more a boat veeha." Trained monkeys have said more intelligent things

After reading these three letters from members of the freshto insure that the College is not man class, I now know why one third of all students who enter col-lege never graduate.

My second point is addressed to the administration; bar? We don't need a new salad bar. the cafeteria was fine just the wayit was. What we need is fresh vege tables in the old salad bar. What's mushrooms are still going to be brown, the tomatoes soggy, and the lettuce wilted? I've heard that the money for the new salad bar came from cutting the art department's budget I'd gladly suffer wilted vegetable and the same old (perfectly good) salad bar for the sake of quality education. Maybe next semester we should have art classes in the Dining Hall. [To all freshmen: that was another example of SATIRE.]

I've also heard that we're getting new tables and carpeting in the dining hall. Is this true? Before we get anything new in the cafeteria, why doesn't the schol get the roof fixed? It's leaked every time it rains for the past three years

I agree with the freshmen that the prospect of living in a tent for a semester would be miserable but I have lived in a tent, and at less! the roof didn't leak

Someday someone wear ing flat-soled topsiders is going to slip and injure themselves on that puddle that forms on the cafeteria floor. If the school doesn't deem it necessary to fix the roof, though perhaps we could set up a Dining Tent every time it rains, and the leaky cafeteria roof will no longer be a problem.

[QUICK, FRESHMEN TAKE THIS QUIZ: True or False the idea of setting up a tent every time it rains is SATIRE.

Dean Heberl

Letters continued on page 5

William James Forum ANTHONY PODESTA The Potential Disaster of Judge Bork

Tuesday, Sept. 22 7:30 p.m. Hynson Lounge

Senate's Importance Often Obscured

wondered what exact meaning the quesastrying to get at. The unspecific nature he question creates the possibility of a variety of interpretations and, corredingly, a wide variety of responses. Was nestion a question of whether the senate saything useful for its constituents? Was indictment of the notification and preoral process? Was the question an atto probe into the nature of apathy, is the frighteningly dominate attitude siscampus? Or was the question an effort ing the entire SGA, particularly its legis-branch, into examination? Ithink it was all of these. Some of these ons are more important than others and re more detailed and difficult solutions. I will not try and justify the existence of nate much less the SGA. I don't believe needs to be done and further, I do not we it is the issue. The Senate is a useful when first confronted with this ques- body and it does address many pertinent is- of sentiment should by no means allow for the tion to committee appointments. The Senate SGA. helps dictate social life but it also helps formu late academic policy. The committees on pre-electoral process. In my previous years at which SGA Senators sit are among the most important of the college. Ultimately, how ever, the quality of the Senate depends upon the individual Senators who compose the body. The Senate is analogous to the school in praise and undue criticism. This obfuscation awareness sues. These issues range from budget allocabelittlement of the legislative branch of the even further than I realized by the seemingly

The question brings to our attention the

Perry Finney

this manner. It is only what one makes of it. WC, in which I was a Senator, I found out Too often the Senate is obscured by the about Senate elections from my RA. This executive board. Accordingly it is often not year I told my RA. This is because the SGA given the credit or attention it deserves and President and I organized and ran the elecequires. Senators rarely worry about polititions. Some 760 student mailers were sent cal adversary because if confronted with it the out, RA's notified, and posters set up. Despite issue becomes diluted among the various this, several dorms failed to produce a single opinions and personalities within the organi- candidate and several more failed to fill the zation. Since criticism is often difficult to allotted Senate seats. After this I cannot help levy against this amorphous body, the execu- but feel as though I did not do enough to tive council is often the recipient of undue stimulate and promote student interest and

Perhaps my problem is compounded contagious apathy and indolence which so pervades the campus. The Senate was not the only organization lacking interested participants. The SCC was almost paralyzed by an extraordinarily low application rate. It sometimes seems that if the event an organization holds does not have alcohol involved, then the mainstream students want no part of it. This sort of attitude is unimaginable to me, especially at a school where students' input can have a major impact on the decision making bodies at the College. So while I am sure that certain Senators (as well as students) will continue to work hard at whatever they do. I see no solutions to the problems apathy and heartlessness create for this school.

Perry Finney, the vice-president of the Student Government Association and the dorm senator elections chairman, is a junior majoring in philosophy.

SSUE: How effective is the dorm senator election process?

Dean Turkali Sophomore Delray Beach, Florida

or their own personal ambitions underway. consequently share very little dorm residents

ampus Voices

Erika Del Priore Junior Gaithersburg, Maryland

many of us students these elec- I imagine that it's as effective as it. In one sense it is effective because sare of little consequence, since can be. It is unfortunate that the ne of us know scant of what the voting must be done so early in the didate are running for. It seems year when there are so many new

Kelly Lamoree Senior Reacon New York

there are senators elected, but it's: popularity contest at the moment Whoever makes the glitziest poster: be that many senator candidates faces, but the SGA needs to get or whatever wins. There should be more of a systen, like the SGA one where people tell what they'll do

Darin Roser Junior

Easton, Maryland I'm a transfer student so I don't What's a dorm senator? Are they know much about the election proc- the ones who conducted the Iraness, and was not informed about the Contra hearings? voting process.

Steve Linhard Senio

Chernobyl, Russia

by Tom Andrews

Senate Looked Upon As A Joke

held last week, does anyone remember re? Once again the Student Government tiation held its senate election which than one third of the campus participated In the four years I've been at Washington gethe senate elections have been looked as a joke. While about ten percent of the classmen vote the only people who take lection seriously are the freshman girls. do not mean to mock or ridicule these I think its great that they participate, I wish everyone else would follow their As past chairman of the Student oct Council and a recently elected senator" I have been able to see where of the problems begin and maybe I have suggestions for the future

The main deterrent to large voter turnonce again that taboo word "apathy." right. Student apathy once again years now works its way back into the limelight. What it really boils down to is that the majority of the students on this campus just don't give a damn about who is their senator representative to the SGA. Sure the freshman girls participate but they see afterwards that no one else cares

Chris Fascetta

so as sophomores they fall into the same apathetic rut as everyone else. The apathetic attitude of WC's male populus begins with the freshman class as well. The freshman guys are all trying to fit in with the upperclassmen who through peer pressure convince them its a joke, and not to vote is the thing to do. Now I know there are some freshman guys who do vote and I don't mean to offend those but I have seen this same attitude develop for four really originate from? In my opinion the "just don't give a damn" attitude originates in the SGA itself. Now I don't mean to criticize the executive branch maliciously, I hope they can take some constructive criticism from an old executive member and friend. The way in which the senate elections are held each year is pathetic. The senate is the life line fo the SGA and should be the priority of the SGA each September. One main flaw is that no one has any idea when the election is to be. A couple of sporadic posters ( I only saw two) just does not cut it. Posters should be put up in all the dorms and all over campus. To get someone's attention you must badger them constantly. Possibly a banner above the cafeteria advertising when petitions are due and when the election will be held. Another idea science major, was formerly the Chairman is to get rid of the paper ballots and get voting of the Student Conduct Council and is pres-

So where does the apathetic attitude election appear more official as well as acquaint students with using the machines

These are only a few suggestions but something has to be done. If apathy is to be beaten its roots must be weeded first. I hope that I have ruffled a few feathers but at the same time I hope I have not offended anyone. for that was not my purpose. Freedom of choice (voting) is a constitutional right that everyone has. It is a real shame that the majority of the students here don't exercise that right. I just hope that those who are complaining about the SGA later this year are not those people who do not vote in student elections - just remember, you had your Christopher M. Fascetta, a senior political machines donated. This would make the ently the dorm senator from Middle Hall.

Dining Hall To Receive Renovations This Year

by Tony Caligiuri In an effort to improve students' perceptions of the W.C. Dining Service, several major renovations will take place this year in the Dining Hall.

Last year, Jeff DeMoss, assistant director of the Dining Service, and David Knowles, director of design to Gene Hessey, Senior Vice meet President for management and fi- normal mealtime use by anyone nance, then President Douglass committee was set up. Knowles anticipates that the committee will be finished its work by the end of this month, and that much of the work can begin over winter break.

The project will include seven major goals, the first of these being the new salad bar installed last week. Knowles pointed out that although it is in use, its position is not permanent. "We're still playing around with it, trying to figure out its best use," said Knowles. He added that lights will probably be installed inside the main bar to assist students in viewing its contents.

The second goal is to increase student capacity by 25 to 50 ended," I know that we can't be seats. Although Knowles does not perfect...But we have a tremendous see crowding as a problem at this time, he is trying to utilize all extra space. The third phase of the work will include a new and expanded beverage area. He further plans on having carpeting down under the tables and new tiles in the center area. Carpeting will also be extended up the walls to cut down on

The seventh part will involve the Dining Service, were asked to a mobil wall dividing the back secdraft a proposal for the renovation/ tion into two separate rooms. These remodeling. After presenting the can be used for groups wishing to during meal hours or for

Knowles hopes that these Cater, the plan was approved and a renovations will "modernize" the appearance of the Dining Hall as well as add designed facilities and remove those no longer practical. He points out that these physical renovations are part of a large plan to improve the dining experience

> "We stress' the neeed for communication between the boarding students and over managers. said Knowles, who urges students with comments, suggestions, or criticisms to approach one of the managers on the dining floor. "We also have a suggestion box that I hope students will see and take seriously,," added Knowles, who willingness to do the best we can

Mom's Cookie Jar

If your diet is balanced and contains a variety of fruits and vege tables, you probably don't need to take vitamin supplements. But here are times when extra vitamins help fight a particular problem.

Dieters often miss out on important nutrients; a vitamin B complex supplement and extra vitamin C (100 mg or more) will compensate. Smokers need at least 100 mg a day of vitamin C to replenish what this habit depletes. And heavy drinkers should consider taking a multivitamin containing C. niacin. folacin, pyridoxine and thiamine.

For iron deficiency anemia, vitamin C may be prescribed to increase iron absorption. If you bruise easily, the cause may be insufficient vitamins C or K. Evidence indicates that Vitamin C won't prevent the common cold but mg twice a day for the duration of the cold. Vitamin D helps promote calcium aabsorption, which is important in preventing osteoporosis. I strongly urge that you consult your doctor before taking vitamin supplements as too much could be

I hope you all enjoyed the Steak and Lobster Dinner last Wednesday evening. It was such a big success last year and maybe we will be able to make this particular dinner an annual event. As in past years, bussing tables seems to be somewhat of a problem again this year. I would like to request that each of you PLEASE bus your trays and clean up after yourself. If the table was clean when you sat down. surely whoever sits at your table. after you have eaten and left, would like the area to be clean too

Positions are still available in the dishroom and on the serving line. If anyone is interested in earning some extra spending money, see the supervisor on duty for more information. For catering may lessen its severity. Take 500 position, see Mr. Darrell Jester Catering Manager

Just a reminder, for those students who find the lunch hour conflicting with classes, you can order box lunch from the Dining Hall, giving 24 hours notice

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-5 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:30-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD

The Elm wishes to congratulate the following students in their election to the SGA:

William Edwards.....Cecil

Arian Ravanbakhsh.....Talbot Travis Aldous......Worcester

Jennifer Harrison......Wicomico

Liam Kennedy.....Kent

Bill Kerbin.....Caroline

Jane Horsefield.....Queen Anne Kathi Winter.....

Reid

Pam Tichenor.....Reid

Dawn Damms......Minta Martin

Kelly Fyans......Minta Martin

Jennie Smith......Minta Martin

Jenni Pollard......Minta Martin

Chris Fascetta.....Middle Hall

Kim Harb......West Hall

Sean Kennedy.....East Hall

Department Chairmanship Evaluated

continued from page 1

ence department, while Dr. Mich Malone was replaced by Dr rence Scout in the department business management.

In the Philosophy dope ment, Dr. David Newell replace Dr. Peter Tapke. Newell, secon seniority to Tapke, was also ac chairman of the department wi Tapke was on sabbatical during spring of 1987.

'[The four philosophy m fessors] have a very good work relationship and I'm sure I wil ceive and enjoy the support of other three," said Newell of his position

When asked if he thou that the new policy will indeed advantageous, Newell respon "The new policy properly uni stood and corectly implement probably a good thing for the lege. Some times it is good to it duce new blood while giving of a chance to lead and former char step down and decide other thing

Newell said that the transition will be "kind of rough for all while", but that the transitions "civilized and graceful." Asfer general reception amoung their ulty of the new policy, Newell that although it was not discusse a great degree, he found a feeling 'acceptance...not enthusiastic then there was no great outcry."

Nate Smith, Chairman of it History Department and Cham of the Board of Appointment Tenure, expressed his dissaid tion with Cater's actions who said, "I was indeed unhappy a the process that was actually in mented for review of Chaim work prior to the decision toch the chairmanship. The comm did not have a full and properch to review and the administ proceeded with an abbreviate view. I have expressed my op concerning the procedures it committee and to the president

Smith said that he basis did not feel that the committee the chance to provide a thin report on each chair. Because of dissatisfaction, he has asked th be relieved of his position as ( man of the History departmen ginning next year

Austin Carpet 778-4656

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

RESTAURANT CHESTERTOWN, MD.

Rt. 213 & 201

New Members Join Board

continued from page I

and energy I have John H. Davie is president of sharp Corporation of Philadelphia, one of the leading pharmaceutical ackaging companies in the U.S. He has served on the Board of Direcors of the Merion Cricket Club, the Roard of Directors of Gladwyn Civic Association, and was president of the Gladwyn Sports Association. Davie considers serving on the board a "labor of shle to "repay the College for preraring me so well to enjoy a satisfying and full life."

Walter Sondheim, Jr., chairman of the Charles Center-Inner Harbor Management Inc. in Baltimore, is awards attesting to his work in community affairs since his retirement from the position of Senior Vice-President and Treasurer of Hochschild, Kohn and Company in 1970. He received the William J. Casey Award from the American Red Cross in 1973. He also received the Irving Blum Award, awarded by the United Fund of Central Mary land, in 1976.

Sondheim has received honorary love" and looks forward to being degrees from Morgan State Univer sity, Haverford College and the University of Maryland. He served as Honorary Director of the Baltimore Regional Chapter of the American Red Cross and the Jewish Family and Children's Bureau. He is curthe gubernatorial appointment to rently serving as Honorary Trustee the board. He has received many of Sinai Hospital of Baltimore and Libby Cater welcomes Clayton Mitchell, Speaker of the House of Delegates of the Maryland General Assembly, to the Board of Trustees. Mitchell was selected in recognition of his continued support

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

continued from page 2

Vent Concerns Without Anonymity

The reactions by Freshmer

To The Editor

to Kelly Lamorce's Elm article came as somewhat of a surprise to me. In response to the unsigned letters in The Elm and the person(s responsible for the flyers on cam pus. I would just like to ask "What makes you think you're so unique! In the history of Washington Col lege and in other institutions as well Freshmen have always been treat upon or used as the scapegoal Evidence of this precedent can be found in our own archives. For many years, the "rules" for Fresh men conduct were printed in the handbook. One can only assume that printing them in black and white gave the upperclassmen a way to strictly enforce these often sill "rules." Times have changed and the handbook no longer contain such things. But the satirical senti ments expressed in Ms. Lamorce' article will probably continue wel into and beyond your college educa

I am not trying to make light of these Freshmen's concern over the overcrowded classrooms, dorms and mailroom which they seem to take so seriously and which we all suffer from. It is good to see students who are aware of a problem. But the energy that was spent commenting on Ms. Lamoree's well written piece of SATIRE, could have been better spent on the people who actually created this uncomfortable situation; members of the administration.

If you feel so strongly that your rights as a student of Washington College have been infringed upon, then may I suggest that you try and bring about change by demonstrating your concern in a more constructive vein and without anonymity. In this matter, the respect which you believe you deserve will be gained from your peers, the faculty and the administration

Jan Hartley English Major

Growth Not Uncontrollable

To The Editor:

Two points in Kelly Lamoree's article of September 4 require clarification. First, the growth of our undergraduate enrollment has not been "uncontrollable. The College's success in the areas of student retention and admissions is the result of measured efforts to move Washington College from an under-enrolled status to a capacity

In the three years following Kelly's matriculation in 1984, new student enrollments (including both freshmen and transfer students) have increased by only 332 students. As you might imagine, enrollment management is frequently influenced by a variety of variables. This year, two unexpected conditions contributed to our increased enrollments: the pool of collegebound students, despite demographic predictions to the contrary, increased and the percentage of accepted students who enrolled was greater than anticipated.

The other misconception that I would like to lay to rest is the notion that the charter of Washington College states that "...there may be no more than 800 students here..." There is no such restriction

> Sincerely. Kevin Coveney Director of Admissions

during the month of September. All unclaimed materials will be disposed of on October 1

CINDERELLA

formal gowns for rental or sale Located in Scotties Shoe Store

CAMPUS REP

National College Marketing Company seek indvidual or campus group to work part time assisting students in applying for credit cards. Flexible hours, excellent money. Full training Meet students and have fun.

Call Vicki, 800-592-2121

Colev

Audra

Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists

OLD WHARF INN

Enjoy Waterfront Dining Located at the foot of Cannon Street

> Chestertown, Md. (301) 778-3566 Credit Cards Accepted

Used Furniture For Your College Needs

Sofas, Chairs, End and Coffee Tables, Desks, Lamps and Much More.

Crowding's Store Rt. 297

Four Miles North of C-Town Worton, Md.

778-0389

Visa/Mastercard Accepted

FEATURES

The International floor:

by Jennifer M. Harrison

"Living on the language floor has made me more aware of what different cultures have to offer and I've learned how to use those aspects to enrich my life, reflected Chip Schaller, resident assistant of third floor Caroline, which is traditionally the Interna tional Floor. Schaller, a junior majoring in international studies has been a part of the language floor since he was a freshman Like the other residents on the hall. Schaller has an interest in other cultures, and it is on the International Floor that many different cultures are united.

The Wine of the Worlds party, set for November, is the major event of the year for the floor. It is semi-formal, and takes place in the hall lounge, which is decorated by tables laden with wines and cuisine from various nations. In the past the party has sponsored by the floor and the French, German and Spanish clubs. Each club presents food and wines from its respective culture, and other countries are represented by the students on the hall with a background or interest in another nation.

Schaller said this event as an opportunity for the modern language professors and other foreign language speaking professors a chance to meet informally with students who speak foreign languages fluently. or are even from that particular country

In addition to the Wine of the Worlds party, the floor has

A Gathering of Nations

Students find cameraderie in the lounge of the International Floor sponsored salsa, taco and pinata parties, all representative of the South American culture. And last spring the floor sponsored a French dinner in order to talk to students interested in living on the floor this Sophomore Mariella Ruiz came to the language floor last year from South America. She found that the culture shook she experienced in her first semester in America was eased by living with people interested in other cultures, and having an RA who was aware of cultural differences

Now though Ruiz has conquered her culture shock, she finds that she is more at home on an international floor than she would be elsewhere. Actively involved with the floor's activities. Ruiz helped to choose the returning students who were interested in residing there. She found Student Affairs and admissions to be very helpful in continuing the tradition of international students residing on the third floor of Caroline. She said, "I think they did a good job this year... most are international or interested in one language or another.

Petra Fajerson came to the language floor from a school in Switzerland that she commuted to from her residence in France. She speaks both French and Swedish. and was born and lived in Sweden for six years. Presently her parents live in London and are planning to buy a house in Washington, D.C. On coming to the language floor she was atmosphere, and found "a lot of camaraderie," making the transition to Maryland much easier John Upto discovered the floor to be a friendly, interesting place, though his first thought as he moved in was "Oh my gosh, this is going to be boring." is a transplanted Londoner who attended a junior college in California before coming to

Washington College In addition to Sweden England and South America, Germany, Turkey, France and Spain are represented on the International Floor this year Some of the students are majoring or minoring in a foreign language, or are involved because of an interest in other cultures

The students on the floor look forward to organizing more activities, and developing the floor

further. Schaller hopes to get the floor more involved with the German Club's Oktoberfest, and to celebrate some Spanish holi days. He also wants the language floor to be used as a focal point of culturally different holidays. Another goal of his is to organi trips to D.C. to see what some of the consulates have to offer in education about their countries, and to participate in cultural events like art expositions and concerts. Ruiz added, "I want the floor to be a sort of gathering place for the international students of this school."

Linking Graduates to their Alma Mater

by Jeannette Smith

Students of Washington College, do you ever find it difficult to stay in touch with your friends, whether they are thou sands of miles away or simply down the hall? Imagine attempting to keep tabs on 65,000 alumni all over the world. An incomprehensible feat? Actually the Alumni House has successfully 1954. Under the direction of Pat Trams and Mackey Streit, the Alumni House is able to keep in contact with many graduates Mackey Streit explained that they rely on the alumni to let the office know when they have moved. In addition to the director's efforts. an Alumni Council exists consisting of thirty people who graduated from 1920-1980. The Council helps plan various events sponsored by the House every

According to Pat Trams, the Alumni House is "a liason between the different regional alumni chapters." Currently seven chapters exist, with plans for more in the works

Each chapter is active, together for reunions. Every summer the Kent and Oueen Anne County chapters host a crab feast. Chapter will take a trip to the National Aquarium. The Washing ton Chapter has scheduled a party at Mt. Vernon, and the Philadelphia Chapter plans to take a trip to the Philadelphia Art Museum in 1988. Various chapters hold a luncheon every month, where professors from the college are invited as guest speakers. Perhaps the single largest event coordinated by the Alumni House is the Fall Weekend Traditionally Alumni return to tennis matches, lacrosse, crew events, and to enjoy a picnic. This year they hope to incorporate academics into the weekend by allowing alumni to sit in classes on

The Alumni House is not exclusively for those who have already left Washington College Pat Trams expressed an interest in having students involved with the planning and workings of the House. She hopes to organize students from the sophomore and junior class in the second semester, to host campus events Freshmen interested in becoming involved may fill out an application at the Activities Fair Freshmen recently had the themselves which the Alumni House will mail back to them in five years. Not only will this remind graduates of their first college days but it will help the office keep in touch with them after graduation

In a further attempt to House, a film series of student According to Trams, "It will not only be an enjoyable evening, but will also acquaint students with the House programs, sponsoring trips and recreational weekends, the Alumni House provides graduates with the chance to remain in contact with friends and the events of their alma mater. In addition, the Alumni House gives current students another chance to college

The Alumni House, on the corner of Campus and Washington Avenues houses the offices of Alumni Affairs.

The Caveman Advantage hy Michael Cannon

Sarcasm is running rampant on this campus and I aim to figure out why. Sure it's always interesting to read a good satire, but when arcasm begins to pervade every conversation things begin to get mally uncomfortable. These days. then you try to compliment omebody on an interesting idea or hought, the response you get

off the cuff

is,"Yeah, like I really had to think about it a long time." Well hardee ar har. I usually feel like saying, Oh. It's amazing you ever had a hought in your head," but I'm just o nice a guy Sarcasm in everyday life is derable but only to a certain extent. I used to complain about the dumb small talk conversations du are always going on some where, but now I find them to be nfinitely more enjoyable than a never-ending battle of wits. Sure here's always room for a joke ere and there but how are you ver supposed to really get to now somebody if all you meet is their sense of humor?

are probably thinking, "Gee, what the hell is this guy talking about? We always have dumb small talk conversations." Well I realize that and am becoming more and more envious as the days go by. I'm (myself especially) use sareasm ( cover up the fact that their lives are incredibly, mind-numbingly boring. I discovered that one day last year when I was bouncing a lacrosse ball in Kent. I said to longer I'll totally veg out and be able to save up anything in my head for a few good dumb small talk conversations later on. Maybe that's why team sports were invented in the first place. A bunch of weisenheimer cavemen were sitting around the campfire cracking jokes when one of them just couldn't stand it anymore and said, "Jeezus, I gotta go bounce a ball or something!

It's a shame that bouncing one of those little balls or throwing them back and forth with a netted stick eventually makes you sweat. Consequently, I don't do that and wind up making witty, sarcastic remarks the rest of the day. But that's all gotta stop. It's non, maybe even counter, produc-

That brings me back to my original point, thank God, from which I have long since strayed unhappy, so stop it. If you must Michael Cannon is a sophomore involved in the Writer's Union.

How to Write A Hate Letter

by Kelly Lamoree

First, one should consider one's motives, as they determine everything else. Are you writing to irritate, frighten, or to just express your disapproval about something? If you are writing to irritate, use very ugly stationery, say mustard colored with ducks or something like that. The ink should contrast horribly with the paper. Try and make the paper sharp enough so that the recipient will receive a paper cut.

If you are writing to frighten, use notebook paper, the kind with the icky little things on the side which show that it was torn out of a bona-fide notebook. It will reveal your rather high-school level of thinking but will get the point across. Use blue or, better yet, red ink. If you are writing to express your opinion, try a nice, elegant sort of stationery and a matching ink; the recipient of a hate letter always takes the hater more seriously if they seem to

Once you have selected your stationery and ink, consider what you are going to say and then figure out how to say it. Absence of punctuation and correct snelling seriously. Curse words are effective in the same ways. If you grievance in language that is understandable. For instance, do

Another thing to look for while visiting the refuge is the co-op farm which is also located on the island have a brain.

not send writers letters that are filled with grammatical errors. non-punctuation and misspelt words; they are used to crafting language in subtler ways and will probably miss the point. If you are incapable, however, of writing such a letter because you are so upset, then you must consider the alternatives. You can hire someone to write the letter for you. You can write the letter anyway and hope that they get the gist of what you are feebly attempting to say.

Of course you can try the last, most desperate alternative: writing a letter, xeroxing it, then posting it

off the cuff

all over so that people will not realize that you actually are incapable of writing a real letter Posters require broader statements, so it is easier for the person who thinks simply (very simply). Statements such as "Kill him/ her!!!" come across much better on a poster than a phrase like, "I opinion clashes with mine, and that to mollify my sense of honor I felt compelled to elucidate you on this matter; more specifically, I

Kelly Lamoree is a senior majoring in art history.

213. However, nature at the Eastern Neck National Wildlife Refuge is nature untainted by the modern world. It is an attempt to preserve the beautiful landscape which makes up Maryland's Eastern Shore." The future looks bright for the refuge, because in the case of maintaining nature, they are suc campus especially annoying or amusing and would like to let others know in a witty, satirical way? Write an Off the Cuff for the Elm, which you can submit through campus mail.

Making Nature

Seven miles south of Rock Hall sits an island known as the Eastern Neck National Wildlife Refuge. This island houses some of he most beautiful wildlife in Mary-environment, as the refuge is home to one of the largest deer popula- of the Eastern Neck Refuge is the intions in Maryland. Admission to the digenous Delmarva fox squirrel, an refuge is free of charge.

through and observe some of the takes extra precautions in observing forty thousand Canadian geese the growth and reproduction of this endangered species which finds in One may also walk the refuge a safe home. The refuge

In preserving the beauty of the Maryland's Eastern Shore, Easte Neck Wildlife Refuge has met the refuge was purchased in 1962 m a private owner as part of the ck Stamp" program, a federal on to gain land for refuges across ountry. The money raised from se stamps is used to obtain wildrefuges in each state. Eastern tck is one of the best places to which arrive on the Eastern Shore animal. Other special efforts are every fall season. Here, the geese made in an attempt to save the bald appeals were made to the state, as are well protected from the large eagle. One pair of the national bird did many other Shore farmers, for number of hunters in the Delaware/ made its way onto Maryland's East- help in this emergency, Maryland area. Also housed on the ern Shore, mated and produced one island are five to six thousand tun- offspring. All three are being it is typically Eastern Shore. The dra swan and roughly the same watched by not only the refuge, but animals and wildlife housed there amount of ducks that frequently rest by other federal refuges similiar to are all roughly the same ones which the deer in their own protected here on their path to the south. Eastern Neck which require little machinery, in order to maintain the environment. The farm, however, was hit hard by the drought which struck the Eastem Shore this summer. Efforts and The refuge is not a large one, yet

can be seen on any ride along Route

The Week In Review

Amidst high expectations the Sho'men (0-1 overall; 0-0 MAC) opened their season Saturday losing to Catholic University 3

Falling behind 1-0 early, the Shei'men ended the first half ahead 2-1 with a late pair of goals by Tom Bowman, assisted by Ben Crabbs and Todd Emmons. Catholic quickly tied it up and then scored the game-winner with about twenty minutes left in game

Field Hockey:

The Shorewomen (2-0 season; 1-0 MAC) opened their season with a pair of victories, Friday 2-1 against Haverford and Monday 2-0 at Wesley.

Leading the way Friday with a pair of goals 42 seconds apart was Beth Matthews. Carole Reece and Stephanie Milton each provided an assist on Crabbs controls the ball here, but Catholic University controlled the game in the second half, leading them to a 3-2 victory.

Against Wesley, Reece net ted two goals, assisted once by Matthews. Both games were high lighted by strong goaltending by Linda Anders.

Get A Lift By Lifting Weights Properly

DEAR READERS: Weight training is getting more and more popular with fitnessminded people across the country...for some very good reasons. Weight-training won't make you fit but it will build strength. shape your body and help protect you against certain injuries and disease. It can work on your muscles - and your mind - in a positive, health-giving way IF your are able to understand some of the basics and proceed with caution. So today, to help lift the veils of ignorance that still surround this popular new pastime, here are some basic answers to common questions

IS IT SAFE?

You can hurt yourself that's true in any sport - but if you're smart and careful, weight training can be done with little risk The key is to learn proper lifting (and breathing) techniques from an expert and continue doing supervised workouts until you're fairly expert yourself.

Just about everyone can benefit from a weight-training program but the one major contradiction is uncontrolled high blood pressure. Lifting weights can push your pressure dangerously high if it's high to begin with. If yours is, check with your doctor before starting a weight-training program WHAT ABOUT KIDS?

SENIORS?

Weight training for very young children (pre-puberty) is pretty much a waste because they lon't have enough circulating male ormone (testosterone ) to build the ruscle bulk. If kids hold off until ey're old enough to see the results cy'll like lifting more. When kids re ready, make sure they get into a likely to try to lift too much, too soon, and hurt themselves.

Older folks in good health really can get a lift from weight training. As strength increases, confidence and energy builds. Seniors should steer clear of heavier weights, however, going instead for lighter weights and more repeti-

WHAT ABOUT WOMEN AND WEIGHTS? This is a powerful combin-

. but first, let's dispel some lingering myths: Women who work with weights will not bulk up into Amazonian figures, . . unless they turn competitive and force extreme muscle definition with diet (and, foolishly, drugs). Also, women do supervised program or they're not stop menstruating, grow mous- into other areas of life: It makes they stop lifting.

Dr. Jock

Forget the myths and remember instead that working with weights is the best, most efficient way to reshape your body and become the healthy, attractive person you want to be. Severe dieting won't do that. Neither will generalized aerobic classes. Weight training will. Women who weight train also report that lifting carries over taches, or turn to jellyflesh when them stronger for other sports; less ERS: vulnerable to injuries; and it gives them a real boost in self-confidence. Always stretch your muscles before and self-esteem HOW SHOULD YOU get, the tighter you get, and if you BREATHE WHEN YOU LIFT? Breathing correctly is an important issue and if it's not stressd injuries. by your instructor, find another coach. You should exhale as you lift. . . and inhale as you lower the weight. Never hold your breath when you lift. Inhaling as you lift increases the intrathoracic and intrabdominal pressure and increases your blood pressure. That can be dangerous to your health. So be sure and exhale fully upon exertion. Grunt, groan, make as much noise as

A FEW OTHER POINT

STAY FLEXIBLE you work them. The stronger you work too hard on muscles that an too tight, you will suffer overuse

-KEEP A TRAINING JOURNAL: Once you and you coach decide on a proper program write down the stretch, the weight the number of repetitions . keep track as you progress to hear ier and heavier weights.

-DRINK WATER: Don' wait until you're thirsty to drink Have a few glasses of water before you start a workout... and keep drinking as you go along.

lete of the Week

Beth Matthews

A junior from Alexandria, Va., Beth Matthews scored two goals and an assist this week to lead the Shorewomen Field Hockey team to a pair of victories and earn her the honor of Athlete of the Week Beth is a Sociology major who, as her friends describe her, is "sensative to other people's needs. She even cries at commercials.

And although Both has been playing field hockey since the sixth grade, she is also interested in most other sports, especially "outdoor and nature stuff.

Here's what she says about her team, which opened the season with a pair of victories despite a shortage of players: "Everyone has such a positive attitude which makes us play so well together. And that makes us a winner." That makes you a winner, too. Beth.

So will Beth play field hockey for the rest of her life? Probably not. After graduation she's more likely to be listening to Huey Lewis tapes while she counsels abused children. Or you may find her as a park ranger or smoke jumper (you know, one of those guys who jumps out of airplanes into fires.)

In any case, congradulations, Beth, and good luck in leading the Shore women to more victories

The Dollars and Sense of Pro Expansion

"... the value of a sports team is not measured in dollars. It contributes much more to the morale of a city than it takes from it.

As a result, the attraction of a major league team is worth far more than the cost involved."

by Arian D. Ravanbakhsh

Last week, the Maryland Court of Appeals upheld legislation allowing the city of Baltimore to build two new stadiums, one for baseball and one for football. The city of Baltimore, which lost the Colts to Indianapolis in 1984, believes that building a new stadium is the most important step to getting a new NFL franchise.

It is also believed that a new baseball stadium, to replace the aging Memorial Stadium, would guarantee that Orioles owner Edward Bennett Williams will not move the pam. This is just one example of millions of taxpayers dollars being spent to keep or attract professional sports teams.

Why this fascination with sports teams? For one reason, the mayors of America believe that their city will not become a "major league" city unless they have more than one professional sports franchise. Therefore, they spend lots of time trying to attract the attention of the Expansion Committees of the various leagues

chip shots

And with major-league-team-hungry cities frothing, expansion is a top priority in every major professional league. For example, it is expected that the National Football League will expand by adding two more teams before the end of the decade trying to claim one of these football teams. They are Baltimore, Memphis, Phoenix, Jacksonville and Oakland. Two of these cities, Baltimore and Oakland, lost their teams because of the unscrupulous nature of their

Currently, there are five major cities base, and that hard to measure quality called candidates for the new teams. Baltimore is

With baseball financially in the black, it "football tradition". It is generally considered seems likely that expansion will occur before that Memphis and Phoenix are the most likely the 1989 season now a close third because of the recent court. League Baseball is looking at a different set of

The expansion committee for Major criteria for awarding a franchise. Cities have to show not only the basic requirements of population and interest, but they must also have a commitment from people who would purchase season tickets.

Washington is considered to have the biggest advantage in this category. It is estimated that there are twenty thousand people who would purchase season tickets should Washington get a franchise. Other cities on this list are also collecting these commitments but are not fairing as well as the Nation's Capital.

Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth is not publicly commenting on the prospects for expansion. However, it is generally considered that Washington and Denver have the best chances of getting a team. Only time will tell what cities will succeed with their expansive efforts

As long as sports dominate American culture, there will be cities trying to attract teams of any kind. Currently, there are millions of dollars involved in the public relations campaigns of the various cities.

Critics claim that a forty-eight million dollar stadium complex will do very little for a city with people on welfare. But, the value of a sports team is not measured in dollars. It contributes far more to the morale of a city than it takes from it. As a result, the attraction of a major sports team is worth far more than the cost involved.

owners, Robert Irsay and Al Davis. The other football to those areas of the country. Each of to fourteen teams the cities have committed millions of dollars to building or improving stadiums.

building one (in Baltimore) to adding luxury the possibility of acquiring a team. boxes (in Memphis). But is stadium improvement a guarantee of acquiring a major league team? Unfortunately for cities like Washing- previous fling with a major league baseball ton and Baltimore, the answer is no. The decision to expand will be made by looking at a wider variety of factors. Among in the minor leagues which are making these are television market size, population

Football, though, is not the only sport three cities hosted preseason games this year looking to expand. Baseball is exploring the to prove that there is interest in bringing possibility of expanding the National League

In baseball, there are four cities after teams. Washington, Tampa, Phoenix and Improvements to stadiums range from Denverhave all set up committees to look into

> Washington is the only city to have a team, the Senators who left town more than a decadeago. Denver and Phoenix have teams

Two great ways to cruise through the semester.

The hand on the left is poised on what could be the most essential part of your education

A Macintosh™ computer

And the hand on the right is gripping pure, simple, unadulter-

A Honda Scooter. One we're giving away

All you have to do for a chance to drive it away is visit your campus computer center and fill out an entry form. While you're there, take a

Because Macintosh can help you write term papers, categorize elements of the periodic table, plot the rise and fall of pork-bells prices, compile computer code, and talk to other computers

And the first 250 people on campus who get behind a mouse, so to speak, will receive a free Apple" memo board.

So head over to your campus computer center today. And ask

Who knows? You may soon find yourself cruising a little farther than you expected

HONDA

Enter September 8 - October 16

Washington College Bookstore

Sho'women Ready After Year of Maturing

Success could help balance men's and women's sports at W.C.

by Phil-Tom Jackson

First off I would like to apolo- that there is a girl's field behind the gize to the women's volleyball team train tracks? for not putting more time into this

Well that's going to change, article than I did. Now on with the starting here and now. Let's get to know the 1987 Women's Volley-

At the start, I was asked to look into the possibility that last year's team. Well the person who asked

This year's team differs in team may have been only a club many respects to last year's, in case you don't know. Coach Penny Fall that is way out of touch with sports pointed out that last year the team at Washington College. That's not was basically composed of inexperienced freshmen who had to learn the various elements of the sport. Since volleyball at W.C. is a This year, however, should be dif-

women's sport, I'm sure that not too ferent many people are in touch with it. After all, women's sports at this Macintosh And steak and lobster else. Meanwhile, men's sports bask

"The team is more experienced college tend to take a back seat to the than last year," says Coach Fall. "This team won't make the same dinners. And just about everything mistakes that last year's did. They know what it takes to work together and have the fundamentals to win.

Does anyone even know that

On campus since late August, there is a women's swim team, or the team spent part of the summer in tournament the next day. And you

Sports Calendar

September

18-19 Volleyball (A) Scranton Tournament

Soccer (A) vs.Muhlenburgh at1:30pm

Field Hockey (A) vs. Hood College at 1:00pm Cross Country (H)

W. C. Invitational at 1:00pm Field Hockey (A)

vs. Marymount at 1:00pm Volleyball (H) vs. Gettysburgh/ Salisbury State

Soccer (A) vs. St. Mary's at 1:30 p.m.

Field Hockey (H) vs. Western Maryland

Volleyball (H) vs. Hood College/ Marymount

early training preparing for a tough season. In one weekend they will have to face playing two teams on a Thursday then return home for classes on Friday just to turn around and travel for a night game plus a thought that your schedule was

That's not an easy schedule in any sport, especially one as demanding as volleyball. If you know what wrestling is like, then you have a pretty good idea of how tough volleyball can be. We are not on the beach here people. This is a physical sport that requires constant drilling in basic skills, and training with weights and the hydro-fitness equipment.

But through it all - the lack of awareness, the long practices, the busy weekend schedules, the weight lifting - Coach Fall and her team are pretty excited about the season at hand. With an increase in competition in the Mid-Atlantic conference they are looking for a .500 or better

With three seniors, one junior, four sophomores, four freshmen, including an exchange student, the team has a well-balanced mixture which can meet this year's goals and build toward the future. And perhaps that future will include build ing respect for the Women's athletic program

HELP WANTED

Now accepting applications for yacht broker. Full / part time position available at Yacht Sales and Marina Operation, offering secure, long term commitment with

Send resumes to: Yacht Sales Position

P.O. Box 6

Georgetown, Md. 21930

| Can the Shorewomen | bump their way to victory this weekend at the Scrain | nton Tourney?  |
|--------------------|--|--|
| September          | Volleyball Schedule 1987                             |  |
| 17                 | Swarthmore College and Widener University            | (A) 7:00 p.m.  |
| 18-19              | Scranton Tournament                                  | (A)  |
| 22                 | Gettysburgh College and Salisbury State              | (H) 7:00 p.m.  |
| 24                 | Hood College and Marymount Univ. of Va.              | (H) 6:00 p.m.  |
| 26                 | Dickenson College                                    | (A) 1:00 p.m.  |
| 28                 | Wilmington and College of Notre Dame                 | (H) 7:00 p.m.  |
| 30                 | Catholic University                                  | (A) 7:00 p.m.  |
| October            |  |  |
| 1                  | Delaware Tech College Stanto                         | (A) 7:00 p.m.  |
| 6                  | Johns Hopkins and Goucher College                    | (A) 7:00 p.m.  |
| 9-10               | Washington College Invitational                      | (H) 6:00 p.m.  |
| 14                 | Western Maryland College                             | (H) 7:00 p.m.  |
| 16-17              | Galludet College Tournament                          | (A) 6:00 p.m.  |
| 21                 | Haverford College and St. Mary's College             | (H) 7:00 p.m.  |
| 28                 | Franklin & Marshall and Delaware/Tech                | (H) 7:00 p.m.  |
| 30-31              | CWAC Tournament                                      | (A) TBA  |
| November           |  | Charles and the same of the sa |
| 4                  | Wilmington College                                   | (A) 7:00 p.m.  |
| 6-7                | MAC Conference Tournament                            | TBA  |
| 11                 | Cecil CC and Anne Arundel CC                         | (H) 7:00 p.m.  |

THE Collegian...

- features

- campus news

commentary

- fiction

- poetry

- comics

- satire

- book reviews

is coming soon

for information call: 778-1332

THE MONTHLY MAGAZINE OF THE WASHINGTON COLLEGE ELM

ARTS K2 Suspends Washington College

The Drama Department sekles one of the most diffucult days of the last decade this Friday when K2, a play by Patrick Meyers. mens at 8 pm. behind the Gibson ine Arts Center. This piece, which opened on Broadway to amazed laudits in 1982, is not a run of the nill theatre piece

...an adventure not only of body but of soul.

K2 is set on a mountain, or ore accurately, on an icy ledge 27,000 feet above sea level. It has a cast of two, in this case Ryder Daniels and Chas. Foster. They portray two Californians, a district stomey and a physicist, who have lost most of their equipment and don't seem likely to be rescued. The physicist has in fact broken his leg; it is up to the district attorney to make some effort to save their lives.

new dimension to the typical time warp saga, which offers entertain-one movie critic put it. "Who would so much about marriage, compromise, and coming to terms with the year reunion and the once promising couple, Peggy Sue (Kathleen Turner) and Charlie (Nicolas Cage)

are planning to divorce. What ev-do; it is a great play to do, full of many fascinating themes. Plays the mountain, and also convey the A Different kind of Time Warp Saga

To summarize Peggy Sue Got prom king and queen are left with

It is Buchanan High's 25th ensues is both humorous and emoto the year 1960

be enjoyed by all.

Married as a mere adventure story limited options. However, Peggy would be to overlook many of its Sue finds fate compromising when

Chas. Foster and Ryder Daniels play two Californians stranded on a ledge 27,000 feet above sea level, in K2 need to have some sort of conflict, many texts and sub-texts mixed into before it's seen whether it is man vs. man, man vs. himself, or man vs. the world.

In K2, there are all of these conflicts, yet much more. It is as in this play it takes a lot of courage main theme, but the audience learns mental performance. The actors are This is not just a hard play to trussed up in harnesses and must convincingly climb-or attempt-ity of altering her present state of unhappiness through the past. What tionally compelling, a movie sure to

of the Washington College Film

Peggy Sue Got Married is part

the plot.

element of suspended disbelief, and Friendship under adversity is the on the part of the actors, director and something about why these men are stage crew to even consider such a so far from sunny California, fami production; this is a bold move on lies and hedonistic lifestyles, risk the part of the Drama Department ing death. It is an adventure not only which should be applauded even of body but of soul

K2 is also not just an action In every play there is the play, or a simple melodrama.

Arts Update

Premo to Lecture

by Susan Di Leo

7:30 p.m. Dr. Daniel Premo will most admirable qualities. It adds a she faints and is taken back in time give a lecture entitled Nicaraguan Notes: Impressions of a Recent Director Francis Ford Cop Visit. The lecture is sponsored by ment to a wider range of viewers. As pola successfully proves that remaking important decisions is no the International Relations Club and the political science department, expect a time travel movie to tell us easier the second time around. and will be held in Hynson Lounge. Peggy Sue is faced with the possibil> lecture is to add another dimension to American's views concerning the cently visited Nicaragua in order to istas take part in a seminar researching the Nicaraguan government and the public and all are invited to atlifestyle. During his stay, he was tend able to meet people of all classes On Thursday September 24, at from government officials to peas ants. Many of the impressions he formed contradict those put forth by the American government

Most, if not all of the information Americans receive about Nicaragua is provided by the U.S. govemment. Premo believes that much of this information is either faulty or Premo's purpose in giving the deliberately inaccurate in order to support the Reagan administration's position with re-Nicaraguan Government. He re- gard to the Contras and the Sandin-

Dr. Premo's lecture is open to

Campus Calendar

RIDAY, SEPTEMBER 18

farried Norman James, 7:30p.n

Drama Production: K2 Behind Gibson Fine Arts Center,

-town Movie Theatre: Can't Buy Me Love veckends 7:00 and 9:00p.m. M-Th 7:45 p.m. $3.00 admission

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 20

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21

Film Series: Peggy Sue Got

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEM-

Tom Larson Blues Band Coffee House, 9-12:00 p.m reeAdmission Sponsored by GA and Coffee House

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER

ecture: Nicaraguan Not mpressions of a Recent Visit Dr. Daniel Premo, speak Hynson Lounge, 7:30 pa

tryone considered the picture per- Series and can be seen September fectromance has turned sour and the 18,20 and 21 at 7:30 p.n. Chestertown Movie Theater

Can't Buy Me Love on: Fri.-Sun. 7 & 9 p.m. Sept. 18 - Sept. 24 778-1575

OLYMPIA

Authorized Dealer

SALES - SERVICE - RENTALS GASCON'S BUSINESS MACHINES

> 837 High St. CHESTERTOWN, MD

778-5611

Repair & Service On Most Makes Of Typewriters And Calculators

Complete Hair Care 10 Visits for $40.00

Our SunTana SunSystem guarantees you a glorious radiant tan that you can keep all year long. A tan you achieve with soft, comfortable and SAFE U.V.A. light and without all the burning, peeling and flaking you get in natural sunlight. Our SunSystem is GUARANTEED to tan anyone who tans in the sun...while you relax in cool

We'd like to tell you more about this exciting new way

The Beauty Lounge

Callus Phone: 778-2635 or come Midtown Mall

by today... Chestertown, MD 21620
NEXUS PRODUCTS AVAILABLE

Stam Drug Co.

215 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 778-3030

- Greeting Cards Cosmetics
- Russell
- Stover Candy

ENTERTAINMENT

Zevon Makes A Come Back in '87

by Michael Gaucher

After five years of semi-retire ment since 1982's The Envoy Warren Zevon is back with a rew album, Sentimental Hygiene that re-establishes him as one of rock's most underrated songwriters. When it comes to the sardonic and cynical, Zevon ranks right up there with Randy Newman. But where Newman's songs are often melodi

..re-establishes him as one of rock's most underrated songwriters.

ous and complex, Zevon's are mor

Zevon is backed impeccably by Peter Buck, Mike Mills and Bill Berry of R.E.M. Together, this foursome produces a tight, tough sound that, along with a crystal clear mix, provides perfect backing for but not overbearing, use. "Bad Karma." But the guest list Neil Young Brian Setzer and Mike Campbell provide expert guitar, while Bob Warnes and Don Henley also make alcohol problems. The song has his all-star cast of players to good, R.E.M. vocalist Michael the title track is especially effective:

> song is "Detox Mansion", a subject And it's hard not to fall apart/ Up on which Zevon is something of an first it is a sarcastic indictment of bilitation with lines like "Growin" quiet life I Lead/ But I'm dying to "Well it's tough to be somebody/ here on Rehab Mountain/ We

The album also has a few glar-ms to be Zevon's forte. It is most evident on tracks like "Trouble Waiting to Happen": "My day was right back into bed again/ I'd write this down if I could hold a pen/ I jump on the current artistic band might get better but I don't know when," and the mock-psychedelic "Bad Karma" in which Zevon asks "Was it something I did in another material to keep any listener into life?" and says that he ". .took a wrong turn on the astral plane."

Humorous selfdeprecation seems to be Zevon's Forte.

"Boom Boom Mancini", an ominous character sketch, and thehonest-rockstar-against-greedyhangers on story "Even A Dog Can Shake Hands" prove to be other solid songs on the album

Zevon does let his paranoid and sarcastic exterior down for two Me" and "The Heartache" in which Guess I should have been a realist/ That's the trouble with relationships/ They end too soon.

contains Zevon's off the wall lyng approach: "I'd kill my wife or she kill me/ But we gotta go to work att factory," but the song still soundship a bad attempt at a Springsteen bla collar workout. An altogethe neglectable harmonica solo by Ber

"Leave My Monkey Alone," arranged by George Clinton, is strange, out of character song to The modern funk mir doesn't gel with the rest of the alban while the lyrics seem an attempt to wagon against Apartheid

Despite these shortcomings Sentimental Hygiene ested, especially those who enjo witty, ironic lyrics. And backed by R.E.M. along with a host of other notables make for intriguing per-

Anyone interested in writingalbum reviews, contact Jenny Eisberg Reid 100A

Send Letters to the Editor c/o The Elm, campus mail

WASHINGTON COLLEGE FILM SERIES

NORMAN JAMES THEATER

Friday * Sunday * Monday

7:30 p.m.

$1 Admission, Students / Faculty / Staff

Parking Violations Vield Fines

by Melanie Wade Finding a parking space has ne easier this year, according Security Director Jerry Roderick here seem to be fewer cars on campus and more spaces available

Despite the availability of arking, some students insist on arking illegally and are finding the pink slips of paper on their ndshields. The number of tickets his year remains consistent with hat of last year. Sergeant Lenny Thompson states, "The lots are full: nts are realizing that they can't ust park anywhere. Students seem nore willing to walk this year.

Both Thompson and Roderick stress the importance of not Nocking the firelanes. Roderick ams students to be "cautious about king in the fire-lanes. It is imporant that emergency vehicles have access to the various buildings on ampus. It is for everyone's safety.

Anyone who has been ticketed for an unregistered vehicle may register their vehicle and the fines will be dropped.

The beginning of the year rought only a few problems with arking. Some students were parkg on Washington Avenue, which in the jurisdiction of the State thway Commission. Also, since he semester, several of the no parksigns around campus have sappeared; this also falls in the alm of the State Highway amission. For the most part re has been an overall improveentwith only three cars towed thus

Plans for additional parking are ing looked at and reviewed by the mistration; nonetheless, it will hobably be some time before any wlots are added. Roderick does at out that parking was added on Son Avenue last spring; hower, students should not park in the llow curbed areas. Currently the are no plans to limit the numof cars on campus. Some students have not yet reg-

red their vehicles. Unregistered icles have been ticketed as a thing, and in the near future the Department will begin ving unregistered vehicles. tver, Roderick said, "Anyone has been ticketed for an unregd vehicle may register their ele and the fine will be The deadline for this crime was a college warning while as to whether the party did or did not er is September 30.

Despite the chilly September weather, numerous teams turned out for last Saturday's Theta Chi Fall Softball Tournament at Kibler Field.

Phi Kappa Sigma: Status Still Questioned

by Marie Ensor

Phi Kappa Sigma, a colony on campus is in the middle of deciding whether or not to become a full fledged national fraternity or if they will fold the organization

Kappa Sigma is a junior majoring in History. Buchler says the reason for ler, starting this colony was that they wanted to initiate something new with a different approach

Colonies are somewhat different than fraternities. Colonies are on a trial stage and they don't carry a charter. When a colony becomes a full-fledged national fraternity a number of rescrictions are applied.

"It's a really good idea, however, the biggest problem is getting everyone to take part and put forth their best effort," added Roshen Koshy, secretary of the Phi Kappa

Sigma's majoring in humanities The Phi Kappa Sigma's have membership because they are not as conducted meetings to make a decision on their standings. As of now no definite ruling has been made 'It all depends on the participation, enthusiasm, and financial situ ation of the colony whether it will Mark Buchler, president of Phi become a national freternity or if it will diminish," commented Buch-

> The Phi Kappa Sigma's have completed all the necessary require ments to become a fraternity. However, one of the main problems of becoming a national fraternity is the financial situation. Each member would have to put forth a substancial amount of money. This becomes a problem when some members can't contribute.

Some of the guidemarks the Phi Kappa Sigma's are searching for are outgoing, fun, hardworking students with a descent GPA. The Phi Kappa Sigma's have a limited tightly knit as a national organization. Because most of the members are juniors, when they graduate a

The Loving Cup was awarded to the Phi Kappa Sigma's last year because they as a colony accumulated the highest grade point average on campus.

The Phi Kappa Sigma's have participated in various community service activities. They volunteered at a camp for handicapped children and helped beautify the campus by planting trees and lended a hand with the upkeep of the campus

Mike Almony holds the office of vice president and Henry Ramsy is treasurer of the Phi Kappa Sigma

I feel the colony has potential; at best we could be a local if every one is willing," says Gerard McGarrity, a junior Phi Kappa Sigma

Party Registration: Policies Changed

by Tony Caligiuri In a September 11 memorandum to campus leaders, the Student Affairs Office issued new guidelines under which open campus parties serving alcohol must be

Dean Maureern Kelly McIntire of Student Affairs in agreement with Chief Mauritz Stetson, Chestertown Police Chief. implemented a new two-part policy for the registration of parties.

According to the memorandum, "If the local police are called to campus in response to a complaint about a campus party, the student(s) in charge of the party will be held responsible for any underage drinking," The memo further pointed out that such a charge is a criminal of fense and carries stiff charges.

The second part of the memorandum called for, "Anyone registering a campus party at which alcohol will be served must be at least 21 years of age."

McIntire said that the new policy does not reflect on any particular past problems, although several petitions for parties had been turned down because of age.

"It was not always seen as a problem because it was assumed that the person registering the party was an organization president and usually 21," said McIntire. "It's a completely reasonable policy."

Chris Fascetta, President of Kappa Alpha Order, pointed out several problems that all organiza tional leaders will have to deal with He cited several situations in which parties at Middle and East Hall have made their way outside and with a simple complaint of a passer by, the situation could result in the arrest of the fraternity president. Because of this, Fascetta said,"I'm going to have to be more aware, as other fraternities are, on exactly who is being served and whether there is any possibility of outside complaint." Many other campus leaders whose organizations hold alcoholrelated events have expressed simi-

SCC Opens Year With Two Cases

by Greg Hay

On the evening of September 22, 1987, the Student Conduct Council (SCC), commenced to hold the first hearings of Washington College's 1987-1988 Academic

The first of two cases involved a freshman, accused of vandalism case. The incident occured in a bathroom in Kent House, alcohol was involved fessed to his resident advisor, Matt College student Keller, and to Washington College Security, made an attempt at fixing Council members say he was in the damages himself and apolo- violation of the spirit and letter of gized for his actions by signing a the honor code. The party was written confession to his error.

file will be kept on his misconduct. He was also fined for the amount of damage he had caused and sentenced to serve community service in Kent dormatory for three weekends on Saturday and Sunday morn-

The second of the two Student Conduct Council hearings also took place on the evening of September 22, 1987. This case involved a male-senior, charged for The accused party con- conduct unbecoming a Washington considering an appeal to the conduct screening board. If an appeal is not granted, then the penalties issued by the Council be stand as indicated. Possible penalties are unknown at this time, due to the fact that the case is unresolved.

The Student Conduct found responsible under delibera-The punishment for the tions of the council, but no comment

The party in question is

INSIDE:

| Literary House | page 5 |
|----------------|--------|
| Fall Classic   | page 6 |
| Chip Shots     | page 7 |
| Concert Series | page 8 |

Editorial

Mortar And Makeup

Campus wits have said that Washington College has "an edifice complex." A look around at the renovations and construction recently completed or currently underway - Minta Martin, Reid, Hodson Hall, Dunning Science Center, even the Literary House porch - makes this joke hit home

While these projects are a necessary part of expansion, they are merely cosmetic. We must not allow ourselves to become so preoccupied with the superficial that we forget to address other concerns the College faces, such as the continuing problem with alcohol and vandalism. It doesn't matter how pretty the building is if it houses students who are compelled to trash bathrooms when they have too much to drink.

The planned Academic Resource Center, with groundbreaking set for this spring, will no doubt serve as a focal point for intellectual life on campus. Still, a new building can't solve our weaknesses in academic areas such as the rejection from Phi Beta Kappa last spring - or toughen graduation requirements, which even now allow for six D's, two of them in the major.

But while we are refurbishing our facilities, let's take care of academic ones first. Rome wasn't built in a day; nor can the renovation of the old boiler plant into an arts center - one aspect of the College's capital facilities campaign - occur as quickly as we might like. Nonetheless, the students who are paying almost $12,000 a year to attend Washington College now deserve better working conditions than the present ones. Some patchwork began on McAlpin Art Studio last week to fix a rickety front step and a hole in the floor, and to replace missing panes of glass, but tubes of oil paint still bear the small bite marks of mice

The College's future is a bright one, but attention must be given to improving academics, not merely buildings. Let's make Washington College more than just a pretty face

Washington College Elm

| Editors                   |                   |
|---------------------------|-------------------|
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Kehoe      |
| News Editor               | Tony Caligiuri    |
| Features Editor           | lennifer Harrison |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekman      |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Jenny Eisberg     |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Balze     |
| Managers                  |                   |
| Managing Editor           | Cathy Jewell      |
| Advertising Manager       |                   |
| Circulation Manager       | William Faust     |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is ublished every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and

Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed column taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editor cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departme major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments. Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mailed c/o The Elm Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters become the property o The Firm upon reveint and must be received no later than Tuesday to be considered for

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main founge of Queen Annual formittery. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

WHEN REMOVETION MADNESS STRIKES

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Student Apologizes

To Whom It May Concern: I'm writing in reference to the small fire which occurred in my room on August 31, 1987. The fire was the result of some fire crackers which were in my possession, that were accidentally set off by a friend of mine (not a WC student). I know that the incident was the result of poor judgment on the parts of both me and my friends. I believe the fire marshall and the administration are taking the proper steps in disciplining the parties involved. I realize the amount of damage that could have occurred by my actions, and I plan to keen myself and others out of this type of situation in the future

My apologies to the students, faculty members, and the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Department, especially, for all the trouble that I caused. I'll be sure it doesn't happen again.

Donna Dietz

Letter Misconstrued

To the Editor:

"last, most desperate alternative" in diculous and sarcastic (or was that college community) "satirical"?) remarks have been made in reference to the Freshman Class/Living situation. (Note: The Freshman have no direct correlation to the administration. If one wishes to attack the administration, one should not go about it by degrading the Freshman.)

It's not that I don't enjoy good satire, I do - when it's amusing. Thus far, I have yet to be "tickled pink" by anything written in reference to the class of 1991.

There was also some confu sion as to whether or not I am capable of "writing a real letter." in the Freshman Writing Lab. By some people's standards, I should ence an open mind. write more precisely. Perhaps, something more along these lines:

I regret to inform you that your opinion clashes with mine, and that to mollify my sense of honor I felt compelled to elucidate you on this matter...But then, I'd probably be ridiculed for the lack of original

In closing, if there are anymore qualms as to who's at fault (or whatever the original argument was), please leave us out of it. Sincerely.

Elizabeth Wall Freshman Pre-Law

No Excuse For Belligerence

To The Editor: I am angry and concerned about the conduct of several students Friday 9-18-87. I was at a party sponsored by the Theta Chi fraternity in the basement of Cullen. Several Theta Chi's approached two students from the University of Sincerely. Delaware. The Theta's told the two students that they were out of place and did not belong. They insisted that they leave the party. When the U. of D. students gave no reaction to the juvenile behavior, the Theta's became belligerent and violent.

I realize that people under the I don't believe that I took the influence of alcohol are often obnoxious and exhibit dangerous bewriting that letter which was xer- havior. But there is no excuse for oxed and posted across campus. I this type of harassment. What kind knew exactly what I was doing, as I of mentality verbally abuses somedo now. Unfortunately, it was mis- one just because their haircut or construed as a "hate letter" by a few clothes are different? What gives individuals. Now, I am not one to you the right to judge others? And show an immense hatred towards what power do you possess to order anyone, I just feel that enough ri- someone to leave a party open to the

> Normally I disregard the ignorance of college students. But this time the Thetas stepped beyond the boundaries of "normal abusive behavior." Is the common purpose of the Theta Chi brothers to alienate and frighten everyone not associated with their fraternity? I try to be objective and see both sides of a story But this conflict was onesided: The Thetas were the antagonists and the U. of D. students were passive victims of abuse

This time I realize there will be no justice. But time will bring a rude awakening to those of you who Hopefully, this will dismiss all are prejudiced. I hope that some of doubt as whether or not I should be you, while attending this institution for higher education, will experi-

Stephen D. Kogler

Assistance Guaranteed?

To The Editor: I have realized, as of late, that I have been having a problem in the communications field. I do not be lieve that my problem originates in such basic forms of the art such a conversation or telepathy; mor precisely, my problem is deep rooted and related to the nature and actual meaning of words then-

I find that I do not have problem with simple formulas & signed to convey inelaborate con cepts such as "Bill Smith Hall": "No Parking - Fire Lane." How ever, I have begun to questi whether or not I can decipher state ments of a more elaborate nature I happened upon a piece of literature the other day which seemed to directly affect the future of a fellow stufent. This certain piece of literature, interestingly enough, made a guarantee of 100 financial aid to the student in que tion. It now appears that I, in some way, misinterpreted the message that this document had intended, a the business office has generously bestowed another bill on my fellow student. Consequently, this bil demands that a sum of money b posted immediately upon penalty of expulsion. I am hoping that perhaps a more literary mind may be able) decipher the complex message hidden in the statement: guarantee 100% financial assistance.

Sincerely David Morrison English

Correction: A letter from Keri Coveney, Director of Admission printed in last week's issu contained a typographical em made by The Elm. Since 1984, no student enrollments have increase by only 32 students, not 332. The Elm regrets the error.

Gannett Funds Available Funds for projects in journalism and non-fiction writing are now available on a matching basis through a grant from the Gannett Foundation. Anyone interested in sponsoring such programs should contact Robert Day, ext. 432.

New Buildings Will Improve Quality of Life

around campus is the large number of provements and renovations that are in

These changes range from the iding of a new science center and the nating of a new student center to the instalion of a new salad bar in the Dining Hall chone is designed to enhance the quality of ment life at Washington College through modernization of the campus. Since ennent is increasing dramatically, changes se to be made, and are being made, at all vels of the College.

The most popular student argument sst the physical changes now being made he campus is summed up in this frequently ed quote: "I don't want my tuition dollars to use." One thing that the students should The next major addition to the campus will be realize is that all of the money for all of the physical changes has been donated to the campus comes from these private sources. The major changes now being undertaken are all aimed at modernizing the College. When completed, the Alonzo G. Decker Science Laboratory Center will provide necessary and valuable laboratory space to all disciplines that involve lab and research work. One can hardly say that these changes are not necessary. The new science center will allow the psychology department to escape from aging Foxwell Hall. You can argue the new student center, which will benefit all. This building, which again will be College. Every major change to a building on constructed with private funds, will become the most important building on campus. It will house the Admissions Office, a larger Bookstore, and an expanded Central Services Department. All of these departments would benefit greatly from the expansions that are that this addition will only affect a small being planned for the College.

Arian Ravanbakhsh

ones that benefit from private contributions.

For example, the Literary House was able to build a new porch to the exterior of the House through a private donation. So the next time you feel that you should not be paying for a building you will not use, realize that most of the money required for new expansions and buildings comes to the College from private sources. Also, it should be obvious that changes need to be made if Washington College is going to continue expanding its enrollment. All of these changes will benefit the College both now and well into the future.

Arian D. Ravanbakhsh is a junior majoring in political science.

ISSUE: Are the various renovation / construction projects around campus worth the money?

Michael McGinnis Sophomore Milford, Maryland

Brent Hopkins Sophomore Lewes, Delaware

Chip Bailey Senior Baltimore, Maryland

Lily Turgut Senior Annapolis, Maryland

Chip Schaller Junior Centreville, Maryland

is worthwhile because the psychology department is in great need of little extreme

The recent construction on Dunning I think that a better part of the con- They are worth the money. They are worthwhile because they Yes, I think the renovations are new facilities. However, the recent diverted to the renovation of some students and donations. addition to the dining hall seems a of the more dilapidated dorms on campus.

is weak, and we need to improve on rable institutions.

struction is worthwhile. However, invest the money to make the cam- are needed. Dunning Hall espe- necessary in order to make the colperhaps some of the funds could be pus more appealing to acquire new cially, because the science program lege competitive to other compa-

Campus Voices

by Susan H. Stobbart

Put Resources Where Needed Most

wn fact of life. We've all accepted this timely decision. and have chosen Washington College to pursue an exceptional education in a fine institu-

Like every other institution, Washingon College has its faults. Perhaps one may be the areas of the school receiving increased funding and those whose budgets have been out If you've walked into the Dining Hall ou've noticed the improvements and most bely heard of more on the way. Sprucing up talked about is gift giving. Financial gifts to House. My point is that with a bit of tact, the Ken Haltom is a sophomore.

That college is expensive is a well the dining area is a nice idea but not a very the college are a necessary part of its exis- administrators of the college can tell potential

Why? Well, just ask the residents of Reid Hall who reside in unfinished rooms I'm sure parents didn't appreciate the new cereal dispensers while their daughters moved into a half renovated dorm. Some of this generous Dining Hall funding could have been used in various academic programs also.

Ken Haltom

Another question that needs to be Swim Center and a new porch on the Lit

tence. Thanks to generous giving we have the givers where we need the money most- in academics. If we put grants towards hiring new professors and beginning new courses, they will be put to the best use for everyone of the college.

> Washington College is on the path to prosperity and national recognition, but to stay on that path the college has got to put its resources in the places most deserving

Mom's Cookie Jar paid for by the

It is documented that if a person exercies the heart at 120-1130 beats per minute for half an hour, three days a week, that a person would undergo what is known as a training effect That person, all else being con stant, would lose weight, have lowe blood pressure, be less tired during the nity to express my thanks and appre day, tend to stop smoking if a smoker, have lower cholestoral levels in the blood, be less prone to heart attacks and strokes, and have a stronger sense of well being People who exercise regularly tend to live longer and lead more fuffling lives. So Exercise-Prudently!!!! On Tuesday, September 29, the W.C.D.S. will recognize all those whose birthday is in September with a gigantic birthday cake. I would like to take this opportunity to extend happy birthday wishes to all those celebrating

W.C.D.S. birthdays in September

There are still some positions lable on the serving line and in the dishroom. Anyone interested in work ing for the dining service should contact

I would like to take this opportu tion to Jennifer Harrison and Bill Beekman for their assistance in getting my articles to press on time.

For those students enrolled in our linen package service, don't forget, you can pick-up your clean linens on Thursdays during the dinner meal. There are several students who have paid for the service and as of yet have not avathemselves of the service. If you have any questions, contact Mrs. Crew

Well, I guess that's it until next MOM

***

Sights such as this were common on campus with the numerous tickets levied

Amnesty International at Washington College

by Elizabeth Usuka

Amnesty International was founded in 1961. It is a world-wide human rights organization with over 750,000 members in more than 55 countries. Amnesty has three

The release of all priosoners of conscience: those people detained for their beliefs, race, sex, language, religion, or ethnic origin, who have neither used nor advocated vio-

- Fair and prompt trials for all political prisoners -An end to torture in all cases.

On November 11th of last year, the Washington College Chapter held its first meeting. Over 100 students and faculty attended. The more area have expressed interest. Chapter sponsored a Write-A-fundraisers. Letters were sent to heads of state and foreign ministers requesting the release of prisoners of conscience or asking for fair trials or and end to torture depending on the individual case. The Chapter Malkus encourages anyone who also raised $100 which was sent directly to Amnesty International,

USA This year over 40 new members joined; many were freshmen. The group plans to hold monthly meetings at which letters will be written and human rights discussed. Plans for the upcoming year include a benefit concert with 2 or more live bands. The local WC band "Shy at Parties" has already agreed to play and bands from the D.C. and Balti-

Thon, two lectures, and several The group also plans to sell T-shirts in October and hopes to sponsora lecture by an ex-prisoner of conscience as well as several gues speakers.

> is interested in joining Amnesty to contact her through student mailer at 778-6275. The Chapter is willing to take new members at anytime and encourages members to bring friends to the meeting. Malke states, "It may sound idealistic bu Amnesty works. Prisoner of conscience are released every day. It this country we think of freedoma a way of life. We take it for granted Most people don't get that chance It is our responsibility to see that they do."

In Brief

Miller Library The Clifton M. Miller

Library has announced a supple mental information service for the campus community - transportation to and from two major libraries: the Library of Congress and the University of Delaware. The purpose of this service is to make these more extensive collections available to students.

The van holds 14 people, so reservations are encouraged Contact Jeff Chaffin at extension 391 for details

September 26 Library of 9:00 a.m. October 10 Library of Congress 9:00 a.m. October 24 Library of 9:00 a.m Congress November 7 Univ. of 9:00 a.m. Delaware November 21 Univ. of 9:00 a.m. Delaware

Graduation

All students expecting to receive their degree by May 1988 must file an application for graduation with the Registrar's Office by the 30th of September. Anyone expecting to graduate who did not receive a form should go to the Registrar's Office at once to pick up an application.

The Writing of Fact and Fiction:

A Conversation Between Two Writers

President Douglass Cater Professor

Robert Day Moderated by Dr. Daniel Premo

> Septembern 28, 1987 4:30 p.m. Hynson Lounge

Auditions

The Government Inspector by

Nikolai Gogol

Wednesday, September 30 4:00 - 6:30 p.m. Thursday, October 1 4:00 - 6:30 p.m.

Tawes Theater

Many roles for both men and women. Production Dates: Nov. 19 - 21, 1987

Stam Drug Co. 215 High Street

Chestertown. Maryland 778-3030

- · Greeting Cards
- Cosmetics • Russell
- Stover Candy
- Soda Fountain

Austin Carpet 778-4656 Rt.213 North

Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

OLD WHARF INN

Enjoy Waterfront Dining Located at the foot of Cannon Street

Chestertown, Md.

(301) 778-3566 Credit Cards Accepted

OUTDOORSMAN

available

Forneys Jewelers Chestertown 106 Cross St.

The Literary House:

A Spirit of Artistic Independence

by Anne Lindenbaum

A walk in the front door will ell you that you are not entering a typical college building. A first glance around confronts you wish a freplace, poslished wooden hoes. real rugs, and portraits of Salacespears, Wellon Ginsberg, Virginia Woolf, and Rose O'Neill Caesy, almost simultaneously. A oppial college building? The O'Neill Literary House does not seem typical of anything on cam-

The Lit house generates an environment different than that of any place else on campus. "I go where for the coffee and the comfortable chairs, and the fun people to talk to. It's a friendly place to wady," explains sophomore Elizateh Rollins.

"The noise in Kent reglidd me across the street," says feshman Rob Thompson. "And there's a comfortable chair here with alightover it." Freshman Ben Loobs, who is partial to the comfortable couch, says that the lit loose is "quiet and conducive to writing and thinking."

"And the walls aren't monoton and acobs were instituted to the house and its pleasure at the Writers' Union Penic held at the beginning of the year. It wasn't, however, always

The O'Neill Literary House, a haven for students yearning to escape cinderblock walls lege," says English professor Bob to, but students only have their ries. In fact, the lege," says English professor Bob Day. Betty and Eugene Casey have donated, among other things, the Casey Swim Center, and most recently the future Academic Resource Center.

Day continues, "President Cater, having heard of our previous house, the Richmond House,

"It's a home away from home. And I ike the way the chairs in the kitchen reak when you sit in them. There's to other place on campus that has uch rustic chairs.'''

called 'O'Neill' or known as 'liter-

Through the 1930's and supte in to the 40's this house was thown as the Bell Haven Inn, which by reputation was a lovely taxe to have supper. After that it real through a series of owners for soral years, and around 1982 or 30. our lovely Board Member 6h. Betty Casey purchased the tous with the idea that it might be 450 of a cademic use for the colfood academic use for the colfood academic which had to be torn down because it was too disheveled, suggested to me that if I'd like to start a new literary house, this one was available."

And so it began. While Day was away on leave, the job of preliminary painting and renovating fell to English professor Kathy Wagner. "We are very grateful to Mrs. Casey," states Wagner. "Faculty members always have their homes to go back to, but students only have their dorms... this is a pleasant place to sit and read and talk. It feels homey, and there are always people around for some company and conversation."

Because of its former name, the house was affectionately referred to as the Bell House until 1985, when it was dedicated as the O'Neill Literary House, after Rose O'Neill Casey, Eugene Casey's mother.

"Mrs. Casey asked that the house be named in her mother-in-law's honor, and it was ..." explains Day, "and delightfully so. It's kind of charming because we know it's named for Mrs. Rose O'Neill but the world thinks it's named for Eugene O'Neill. So we get the benefit of honoring our generous benefactor, and at the same time the world thinks it's for a great American playwright."

The O'Neill house has undergone many changes since it was dedicated as such. In the last three years a side deck, a press room, and a front porch have been added to the existing house, the latter two additions courtesy of Mrs. Casey. Richmond House, the first literary house used in the early seventies, had none of these luxuries. In fact, the walls of the house itself, where it stood near Foxwell, seemed questionable at best. "Richmond House was a fun, rundown, dilapidated old place, full of energy," relates English professor Bennett Lamond. "It was a challenge to make it livable." Kathy Wagner remembers it well, for she lived there when she was a student here at Washington College in the seventies. "I remember they had an old stove in there where we would occasionally try to cook meals . . . one day it blew up in my face. . . I remember being thrown back and the ends of my hair being Despite its problems, though, Wagner was sorry to see it Day, who also lived there, says," Richmond House was very bohemian, very radical, and the number of students who lived there were very few. There were only six to ten, depending on the number of girlfriends or boyfriends they had in tow. It supplied a facility for a very small, elite, politically radical and interesting group. There was something always slightly disheveled and unofficial about the whole place. There was a life-in-the-garret quality in the place.

Does the O'Neill House

capture the same sense that the Richmond House had? "No," says Lamond," although that may not be a bad thing. This house is not so spontaneous."

"This house has a different flavor about it," says Day. "It's more generous in space, it's cleaner, it's better kept, and it is used more because we have more students who want to be writers. It has to accomodate more students. One thing that unifies the two houses though is the spirit of artistic independence. One of the things that people still have without trying to have is an educated independence. Writers who make use of the place have a great deal of nerve, they still have their own artistic sense, and they still want the college to read them, and for the college to like what they read. And they still want to have a lot of fun doing it.

Day also feels that the O'Neill House suits the students with Constitute and the American a Literary and friendly, "It's a place where people can gather and discuss literature or just do work or have paperbacks available at their fingertips. I like to go there because it provides a good working environment and a good intellectual environment, not just for sting and working, but for the discussion of poetry, literature, art and music," says sophomore Alison K. Auber.

son K. Auber.
Junior Todd Karr says," It's like being at home without the parents because you have the coffee, the computers, the kitchen, etc.
It's a home away from home. And I like the way the chairs in the kitchen creak when you sit in them.
There's no other place on campus that has such rustic chairs."

There's no other place on campus like the O'Neill Literary

The Literary House Workshops in Journalism presents

"The Anatomy of an Article"
Roy Hoopes discussing his article

"Douglass Wallop"

published in Maryland Magazine

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 2 4:00 p.m. - 6:00 p.m.

buffet dinner and discussion to follow call Tom Schuster at 778-1332 for details and reservations

OLYMPIA

Authorized Dealer

SALES - SERVICE - RENTALS

GASCON'S BUSINESS MACHINES 837 High St.

837 High St. CHESTERTOWN, MD 778-5611

> Repair & Service On Most Makes Of Typewriters And Calculators

Sports Calendar

September

Franklin and Marshall 1:30 pm, Kibler Field

Cross Country at Mary Washington Washington & Lee

Volleyball at Dickensor 1:00 pm

28 Volleyball vs College of Notre Dame 7:00 pm, Cain Gymnasium

29 Field Hockey vs. Albright 4:00 pm, Women's field

Lebanon Valley 4:00 nm

30 Volleyball at Catholic University

October

1 Volleyball at Delaware Tech 7:00 pm

Reminder: Campus Alcohol Policy States that Alcoholic Beverages are Not Permitted at Athletic Events.

Theta Chi Softball a Success

by Bill Beekman

Softball fever swept Washington College last weekend as the Theta Chi fratentity sponsored their annual Fall Classic softball tourna-

Proclaiming the weekend a success, Theta president Matt Wilson was pleased with both the high turnout and competitiveness of

Fourteen teams competed from all reaches of the campus - fraterni ties, sororities, sports teams, alumni, and so on,

Said one participant, Patty Wienke, a Zeta, "It's nice to see so many people involved and not apathetic toward W.C. activities, even at such God-awful times on week

With most every team competitive, the original fourteen were narrowed to two, Surf 'n Turf and the Thetas, who squared off in the championship game Sunday afternoon. Led by the bat and glove of Al Hepting and strong pitching from Tracey Coleman, Surf 'n Turf edged the Thetas 8-4. Hepting credited the victory to a "team effort

Other members of the winning Surf 'n Turf team include: Chris Long, Chris Rosfelder, John Mac Aleer, Tank Duckett, Dave Puskar, Scott Jones, Mary Jo Allison Brenda Conner, Mike Hearn, and Sandy Coulter.

المها المعارض including this loss to Gettysburg

Athlete of the Week

Andle Bakory

Al Hepting

Dominant. That's what Al Henting was last weekend in the Theta Chi Fall Classic, going 11 for 13 on the tournament with three homeruns in leading Surf 'n Turf to the champoinship.

Hepting, a senior English maior from Ellicott City, MD, also plays basketball for the Sho'men and is a Kent House R.A. He played first base for Surf 'n Turf.

Of Surf 'n Turf's victory Hepting says: "The victory was a total team effort. To win this award is icing on the cake.

CINDERELLA

formal gowns for rental or sale Located in Scotties Shoe Store

Reece, Schminger, and Stephanie Mil-CAMPUS REP

W.C.'s leading scorer, Beth Matthews

got even better as the Shore

National College Marketing Company seek indvidual or ampus group to work part time sisting students in applying for credit cards. Flexible hours, excellent money. Full training. Meet students and have fun

Call Vicki, 800-592-2121

Shoremen Sports Week in Review

Last Thursday, the Shoreen lost for the first time this season Volleyball: Season 2-5; MAC 0-1 to MAC rival Elizabethtown. But they Getting off to a strong start by quickly bounced back winning impres beating Widener College 15-4, 15-2, the sively against Hood College and Mary Shorewomen dropped five of their next Against Hood, different players After the Widener victory, W.C. counted for each goal as freshmen pped against Swarthmore 15-12, 11-Kristy Schminger and Erin O'neal 15, 6-15. The next day, Friday, they scored, as well as Carole Reece and captured their only other victory in a squeeker against the University cranton, 13-15, 17-15, 15-13. This was Tuesday against Hood, things followed with four consecutive losses. nauled Marymount 12-1. Sandy to MAC rival Elizabethtown, 10-15, 5-Coulter scored a season-high five 15, Moravian College, 13-15, 2-15, goals, with four additional goals coming Susquehana College, 6-15, 4-15, and from Matthews and one each from Gettysburg, 7-15, 2-15. The Shorewomen hope to regain their touch at Dickenson tomorrow.

Need A Job?

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yacht and Country Club

> $4.00 an hour 778-6765

Cross Country: Season 0-1;MAC Competing in a field of it Saturday, the Sho'men (51 points) ished last in the Washington Colk

Invitational, behind winner Cabo University (23 points) and runnt Salisburt State (37 points). Top runner for the Sho's Freshman Rob Press from J nesburg, South Africa, who fre eigth overall with a time of 30:25 Tomorrow they face h Washington and Washington& Lee Soccer: (Season 0-2; MAC 0-1) In an important game MAC rival Muhlenburg, the Shi dropped a 1-0 decision in Penas) on Saturday, keeping them with the season. Wednesday they F away at St. Mary's

> Submit poetry and short prose

Broadsides

c/o Jennifer Harrison

campus mail

NFL Strike Will Soon Be Just A Bad Memory

by Bill Beekman

I may be foolish to write about n NFL players strike on Tuesday shich may not be a strike on Friday. Being foolish hasn't stopped me before, though. So I continue. The NFL strike is a joke, bad for all thich will come to a grinding halt in the near future Who knows? Maybe it already 135. I don't think so, though. Yet. Basically, this second strike alled in six years by the NFL Play-Association comes down to the mestion of free agency. The players ant it. The owners don't. Some ther issues are thrown in there, too, ke pension benefits and guaraned contracts

chip shots

Yet after meeting at least nineentimes over the last five months, NFLPA and the owners' repre- owners would ensue. native, the Management Coun-al, have settled just about nothing. And, still, despite no progress five months and two sides which k, the strike will end quickly.

everything comes down to money ure is expected to go down more. The players must hang together and get less when their contracts expire and this is no exception.

On Tuesday when the players officially walked out they really had nothing to lose. Sure they lose a few days practice and pay, but nothing major And the owners are basically in parties involved and not involved, the clear until Sunday when all those games that are supposed to be played aren't. On Sunday, however, and each subsequent Sunday without football, each team stands to lose about one million dollars. A long strike could be devastating. The owners, of course, have a remedy for that: assemble new teams composed of free agents, cuts, and cast-offs. And scabs But do the owners really expect that these B-class at best cast-offs who were not NFL-caliber players two weeks ago will suddenly be able to replace the real thing? I don't think that they made their billions being that stupid.

were well received, a long strike

More likely, however, is this scenario. A recent ABC-Washington Post poll found that sixty percent of the population is against the nonly sporadically even agree to owners' plan. And only about sixty percent of the regular viewers would watch the weekly reject

Result: lower ratings for the games, which means less, if any, television revenues and a big financial loss for the owners. Is that enough to convince the owners to accept "free" free agency?

Not entirely. But big losses should make the owners lessen their firm stand to something that the Players Association can accept.

not cross the picket lines to play for the owners reject teams.

Especially, "star" players cannot cross or else the Makeshift Football League may draw enough fan support to survive. Three - Indianopis' Gary Hogeboom, the Raiders Marc Wilson, and the N.Y. Jets Mark Gastineau - have already said that they will cross, which is concerns. Things such as this may only ones who will gain anything substantial from free agency. And they are the only ones who can in-them relent. But by playing, boom and others like them enable the owners to hang on through the table and players like themselves

The "star" players are about the prolong the strike.

Also, picket line crossers are branded for life and will experience great resentment when the real pros finally return.

So a short strike is likely. The players simply have to stick together, guaranteeing the owners to lose big bucks. And the owners have to give a little, enough to make the Players Assocation's gain outweigh the average of fifteen thousand or so dollars that the average player stands to lose per game In the end, solving the strike comes down to pinching pocketbooks enough to deflate the egos of both the owners and the players, enabling both sides to get together and make fair concessions. With both players and owners egos burst by the power of money, progress can be made and the strike settled.

And how, finally, can the people who really lose out, the fans, help the most. Simple. Ignore professional football. Ignore the Makeshift Football League, and when the strike finally ends boo them, both

We, after all, are ultimately the ones stuffing their pockets with dollars that they quibble over. Let's input our say into the bargaining strike, thereby giving the owners an process by watching a college game this weekend and spending time with families and friends on Sunday. Strike the NFL. And then maybe they'll finally learn

"...solving the strike comes down to pinching pocketbooks enough to deflate the egos of both the owners and the players..."

Of course, to stop the strike the counterproductive to their own players, too, will have to give a little. They are shooting for the freedom to change teams after their contract If somehow, contrary to most expires for all players with four sane predictions, the reject games years experience. For a short strike, they may have to bend a little, acwith a favorable bottom line for the cepting a "limited" free agency jure the owners enough to make program, though one more farreaching than the current, almost Gastineau and Wilson and Hoge nonexistent one in which only one player has switched teams in ten years. Additionally, they can proba-ances, such as pension plans. There is one more necessary less, if anything, at the bargaining Simple: money. It seems that games. After seeing them, that fig-condition for quick end to the strike.

bly make gains on their other griev- advantage at the bargaining table. Given that, the NFLPA gets

Two great ways to cruise through the semester.

The hand on the left is poised on what could be the most essential part of your education.

A Macintosh" computer

And the hand on the right is gripping pure, simple, unadulter-A Honda Scooter. One we're giving away

All you have to do for a chance to drive it away is visit your campus computer center and fill out an entry form. While you're there, take a Macintosh for a test drive

Because Macintosh can help you write term papers, categorize elements of the periodic table, plot the rise and fall of pork-belly prices, compile computer code, and talk to other computers.

And the first 250 people on campus who get behind a mouse, so to speak, will receive a free Apple® memo board. So head over to your campus computer center today. And ask about our Student Financing Program

Who knows? You may soon find yourself cruising a little farther than you expected

. Test drive a Macintosh. You may ride away on a Honda Scooter.

Enter September 8 - October 16

Washington College Bookstore

ARTS

Ragtime Ensemble Opens Series

by Susan Di Leo

Friday, September 25 marks the opening of this season's Concert Series at Washington College, with a performance by the Peabody Ragtime Ensemble. The concert is sponsored by the Peggy and Yale Gordon Trust, a Baltimore-based foundation which has supported the series since last year.

Baltimore-based, the septet dedicates itself to keeping America's only original musical genre-jazz-alive. The group includes Maureen Royce on flute, piccolo, and tenor sax; Paul Garment on clarinet and alto sax; Al Patacca on trumpet and fluglehorn; Bill Taylor on trombone; Ed Goldpiano; and Kevin Hayles on drums.

According to Professor Garry Clarke, chairman of the Music department, the ensemble enjoys an excellent reputation, so when Mrs. p.m. in Tawes Theatre

Bernstein, the head officer of the Trust, suggested that they perform at the College, Clarke agreed at once: "I listened to a tape (of the ensemble) that was sent over from Baltimore, as did my colleagues, and we thought they were an excellent group, and people we know who had seen them perform said that they were spectacular.

The program consists of all-American music from 1880 to the 1940's. The ensemble's emphasis will be on the compositions of such artists as Scott Joplin, Eubic Blake, and will feature Dixieland selections, big band arrangements and novelty tunes Students at Washington Colstein on tuba; Lawrence Cione on lege received their season tickets for the Concert Series this week in campus mail. Admission is $7.00 for adults; children under 18 are free. The concert will begin at 8:00

Greeks Sponsor Campus Party

Fraternal Council (IFC) and the Pan This Saturday proves to be a day filled with events for the frater- Hellenic Council (PHC) will be for regular students, $4.00 for nities and sororities of Washington College. The day gets underway 12:30 a.m., with the SGA sponsoring the band, "The Bash." The party with the Greek Games, beginning at 11:00 a.m. outside of Bill Smith on is tentatively scheduled to be held behind the Fine Arts building; in the the lawn

Movie Preview

Sirens Are Hot in Police

Police films typically present the rough, unemotional policeman harrassing the helpless, even if Noria (Sophie Marceau), one of the guilty, victim. Director Maurice family member's girlfriend. Pialat's Police portrays the policeman, though as the movie progresses, the audience captures the essence of Pialat's characters. Police opens with police detective Mangin (Gèrard Depardieu) toughly interrogating a Tunisian man who has been suspected of drug smuggling. Mangin is seen performing all of the various things that make up his job. He asks questions, jokes with his co-workers, incriminates suspects. Mangin spends compatable evenings with the same lawyer who bails out the Tunisian gangsters that Mangin is chasing after. What makes this film work is the absence of the conventional police movie trappings. Later in the movie, Mangin further involves himself with the sponsoring a party from 7:00 p.m. to Greeks, and the drinks are free. Non-alcoholic beverages will also be served

This is the first annual all-During the evening, the Inter event of rain, it will be moved to the and PHC. Come and join the fun.

Mangin's priorities become confused, as the audience observes, in the scene where he and Noria make love at the police headquarfamily through his interrogation of f the Tunisian crime

ters, late at night; they pause in fear whenever anyone passes nearby. Through his actions in this movie, Mangin's loneliness and profound emotion are revealed. Depardicu combines these characteristics, along with intelligence and brutishness with a subtlety that has

Pialat's direction is "lively and energetic" which ". . .easily sustains interest," writes Janet Maslin of The New York Times. His characters stand alone, and Pialat refrains from judging them. It is up to the viewer to watch, listen and think about the character's life, his personality and physicality. This responsibility creates a curiosity and Coffee House. Admission is $5.00 a sympathy in the viewer as he becomes involved with the character's

Police will be shown this Friday, Sunday and Monday nights at 7:30 p.m. in Norman James Thecampus party sponsored by the IFC atre. It is in French with English subtitles

Campus Calendar

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 25

Concert Series: Peabody Razzin, Ensemble, Gibson Fine Arts Center, 8:00 p.m.

Film Series: Police Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER

Greek Games, outside Bill Smith

on lawn, 11:00 a.m.

Greek Sponsored Party: behind Gibson Fine Arts, 7:00 p.m. to 12:30 p.m. Admission $5.00 non-Greek

$4.00 Greeks SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER I

Film Series: Police Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.a.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER I

Film Series: Police Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.n. WEDNESDAY, SEPTEM-BER 30 Bach's Lunch, Library Terrace,

12:30 p.m.

Chestertown Movie Theater

Back To The Beach Hours: Fri. Sun. 7 & 9 p.m. Sept. 25 - Oct. 1 Mon. Thurs. 7:45 p.m.

778-1575

HELP WANTED

Now accepting applications for yacht broker. Full / part time position available at Yacht Sales and Marina Operation, offering secure, long term commitment with growing company. Send resumes to: Yacht Sales Position P.O. Box 6

Georgetown, Md. 21930

Ironstone Cafe

236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30-9:00 Sunday Brunch: 11:00-3:00 Closed Mondays

A FILM BY MAURICE PIALAT

NORMAN JAMES THEATER

Friday * Sunday * Monday

7:30 p.m.

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Jume 59, Number 6

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, October 2, 1987

Art House In Need Of Repairs

Cater asks for work order

hy Andrea Kehoe Repairs began recently on the Alpin Art Studio following a of the facility by the Friends of Arts, a local group not officially to the College. President plass Cater has asked Professor n Tessem, chairman of the art rment, to send him a "wish and painthouse.

ident is interested in doing ething about this," she said, ing out that her repair sugges can be resolved before second ster classes begin and without Tessem said space is the st problem. Currently, room sinsufficient to allow painting es to set up easels, but the Stu-Affairs Office has offered use chasement of Minta Martin, "It little inconvenient for them ting students) to be set up ss Route 213 from me," Tessem

She has requested that an 11 8 foot garage, currently used as ge for athletic equipment, be erted into a paint studio. This, le're not advocating dumping a lot of money this building," Said Andrews. "It's falling part; if you sneeze, it will come down."

Vewell's Appointment.....page 5

Remington Farms.....page 6

WCDS.....page 7

Field Hockey.....page 9

Drama Production.....page 11

oblition to the removal of a parti- ing of windows, the latter somein the printmaking and pottery thing she could not recall being of the main facility, would inse classroom space by almost square feet sened by the growth in the dement in recent years, bringing number of majors to 14. A rse in Visual Design - one that its toward distribution - curlly has an enrollment of 18, forc-adents to sit on desks er problems in the building are Sult, Tessem said, of neglect, haps because the studio is "out of nside :

the mainstream of the campus. Missing bricks in the walls of the basement pottery area have left a hole, exposing rat poison, and the remaining bricks are chipping. Electrical wires are exposed, including some leading to the circuit box, and a window screen is rotting Ventiliation over acid baths in the of additional repairs needed in etching area and storage of chemicals are inadequate, said Tex An-"We're encouraged that the drews, a lecturer in the art depart-In the painthouse, woodwork is splintered, the door lacks a screen, and the floor of one room tilts. Two window sashes are new, but they have been nailed shut. "We're not advocating dumping a lot of money in this (building). Andrews said. "It's falling apart; if you sneeze it will come down.

Another weakness of the main facility is lighting. Fixtures are missing, and track lighting and fluorescent tubes with color-cor rected daylight tubes are needed Tessem's memorandum to the President also included requests for shelves and cabinets, a 24 by 120 inch sink, regular pest control. painting of inside walls, and wash done in over a decade Andrews said he felt that regular preventive upkeep of the Limitations in space are studio should be a responsibility of the College's maintenance depart-"A lot of this should have been taken care of a long time ago, he said. "It drops between the cracks - it's not the President's job, it's not the Dean's job, it's not Sue Tessem's job as chair of the art department, it's not my job as a part-

In the Art House basement, pictured above, a large hole in the wall exposes rat poison Also visible are the dirt floors and dangling electrical wires.

Kate Rand Lloyd To Visit College

Editor of Working Woman, Former Editor of Vogue, Glamour

Large of Working Woman maga-Woodrow Wilson Fellow. Before joining Working Woman ten years ago. Lloyd worked as a managing editor at Glamour and later at Vouge magazine with Conde Nast Publica-

Lloyd will share her interests and experience as one of the nation's premier writer-editors and Lloyd will give a public address, ests with students and the larger Just Isn't What It Used To Be," also zine, will spend the week of October College community. She will be 11 at Washington College as a giving a talk on "Careers in Publishing and Magazine Editing" at a tea on Monday, October 12 at 4:00 pm in the O'Neill Literary House. The same evening, Lloyd will discuss "Balancing a Family and a Career" with students, staff, and faculty at 8:00 pm in Hynson Lounge.

On Tuesday at 8:00 pm,

Greek Weekend A"Smash"

by Cate Lucas

Each year Greek fraternity and sorority members come together for a four day weekend of bowling, greek games, and this year for the first time, a greek "bash"

Greek weekend is an annual fall gathering of fraternities and sororities, sponsored by the Pan-Helenic Council and the Interfraternal Council of Washington College. Compared to previous years, this gathering was possibly the most enthusiastic ever.

The events began on Thursday evening with Greek Bowling with competition amoung the fra ternities and sororities. The Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority, whose members came dressed in togas and olive leaves, earned the highest score while the Theta Chi's won the competition among the fraternities.

During the week, Pan-Hel held a raffle which awarded Steph Stanze $42.50.

Greek Games were the highlight of the weekend. The games consisted of the leap-frog, tug of war, body pass, ballon toss, egg toss, the three legged race, and a pie eating contest. The Thetas and the Zetas maintained their superiority

One of the biggest fundraisers of the day was the pie assassin. At 50 cents a pie, over 100 were thrown in two hours.

The day was ended when at 7:00 pm a party was held outside behindTawes. Entertainment was provided by the "Bash" and beer by the fraternities. The band and party were sponsored by the SGA and the interfratemal council.

Kate Rand Lloyd, Editor-at-noted authority on women's inter-entitled "The Trouble Is, The Future set for Hynson Lounge. At a second tea, sponsored by the Maryland Delta Chapter of Phi Sigma Tau, the philosophy honor society, Lloyd will participate in a discussion of "Ethics in Journalism." Throughout her week at the college, Lloyd will sit in on and speak at several classes involving journalism, the media, and women's issues.

> Lloyd graduated cum laude from Bryn Mawr College in Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania after winning the Prix de Paris offered by Vogue Magazine. Since then, the native of Minneapolis, Minnesota has gained recognition repeatedly for her commitment to journalism and women's interests. Among her most significant honors are being named Outstanding Woman in Magazine Publishing by the March of Dimes and receiving the prestigious Headliner Award from Women in Communication, Inc.

> Lloyd currently serves extensively throughout the country on topics related to American working women, and also on the Board of Directors for Planned Parenthood Federation, the Women's Forum, Advertising Women of New York, the Child Care Action Campaign, the Women's Economic Round Table, and many others.

Invisible, With Justice For All

From the basement of the White House to the basement of West Hall, people are beginning to realize the importance of a solid set of checks and balances in any governing body

During the summer of 1987, we were blasted day after day by the televised Iran-Contra hearings, a frightening and sometimes unreal account of what sectors of the Federal government can do when they are left on their own and out of touch with the people. Although the events under investigation uncovered serious flaws in a democratic society, it served as a strong reminder of the importance of accountability on the part of authority

The students at Washington College like to and are usually inclined to believe that our small "society" of 850 students lives in a democratic atmosphere. In almost every respect, students can influence or at least monitor the actions of the college. Whether it be by way of Senate elections, course evaluations, SGA Task Forces, or a letter to the editor, a student can be aware of the decision making process at Washington College. EXCEPT... Brenda Conner, Chairman of the Student Conduct Council, was quoted a few weeks ago in The Elm as saying she would like to make the SCC more visible on campus with higher student participation. Last Wednesday when an Elm representative went to report the proceedings of the Student Conduct Council, that individual was stopped before entering the Hearing Room, excluded from the proceedings, and presented with a one-sided account of the "findings" of the Council. This action not only contradicts the text of the Student Handbook which states that an Elm member may attend the presentation of evidence and findings during an SCC case, but also contradicts Conner's own words.

To Conner, as well as other campus Judicial officers, the Elm may be a foreign or disturbing presence that is not necessary nor welcome in the Judicial proceedings which take place each week in the basement of West Hall. Yet in reality, the Elm writer is a representative of the students, a symbol of the accountability to which every other campus organization must answer.

The fact that the identity of an accused party in an SCC case can not be revealed is accepted by the members of The Elm, whet in agreement or not. Yet the students of Washington College have every right to be aware of the proceedings of such an authoritative council as the Student Conduct Council.

This is not to question the credentials or capability of any council member, but at a time when student service on judiciary boards is still lacking and the position of Juror and Clerk must be taken on by one individual during a case, the decisions of the Conduct Council can not always be assumed infallable

The Student Conduct Council is not the Supreme Court, it is not protected from tough scrutiny by a form of "Executive Privilege," and it is not above accountability to the students which it serves -Tony Caligiuri

Washington College Elm

| Editor                    | rs                   |
|---------------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Kehon         |
| News Editor               | Tony Calining        |
| Features Editor           | lennifer M. Harrison |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekman         |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Jenny Eishere        |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Balze        |
| Manag                     | ors                  |
| Managing Editor           | Cathy Jewell         |
| Advertising Manager.      | Mariella Ruiz        |
| Circulation Manager       | William Faust        |
|                           |                      |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed colu

taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editors.

All letters to the office are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the outors cannot always pushible every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or geramars. Letters should be signed, except in area creas where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and while to y visation by the lower of his name. Students should include their year and while the properties of the letter is needed. Using phone numbers in the cent that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Using phone numbers in the enter that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Using phone numbers in the enter that the marked how as the editorial difference or in the Dinnig Italia, or mailed of 27 Fe Ent. Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21020. Letters become the property of AFE Ent upon received no later than Italia; or mailed of 27 Fe Ent. The property and must be received no later than Italia; to be considered for lication in that week's issue

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Anne dormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ber 4's Elm, "Authorities Respond

No Title Necessary

To The Editor I am writing this letter in response to the title of the article I wrote for you last week, "Senate Looked Upon As A Joke." To begin with I would like to apologize to the SGA officers and the Senate for the Elm editors obviously opinionated title. I do not think the Senate is a joke, and my article did not represent this either. If you had taken th time to read my article you would have realized the article's focus was about student apathy. I do not deny I said the words "joke" and "Senate in the same sentence but you took this completely out of context, as usual. It is upsetting to watch you (the Elm editor) consistantly make individuals who write for your pa per, which I did as a favor to you and your news editor, look like complete asses with your biased titles. Even neonle who write editorials and letters to the editor become victims of you sick sense of humor. I just wish you would stop executing people with your title selections and stick to your job of editing. Maybe if you started making friends instead of enemies you would have people to write for you instead of your editors

Chris Fascetta

Avoid Mention of Race

having to write every article.

Gannett Funds Available

Funds for projects in journalism and non-fiction writing are now available on a matching basis through a grant from the Gannett Foundation. Anyone interested in sponsoring such programs should contact Robert Day, ext. 432

To the Editor: In the lead story of Septem-

To Minta Martin, Assault," news editor Tony Caligiuri reports that, "According to a Chestertown Police report, the female victim was attacked by a black male on Campus Avenue..." Why isn't the race of the victim reported as well? I assume she is white. If a complete physical description of the alleged attacker were given, mention of race might be justified. In this case, however, reference to race serves no purpose. except perhaps to encourage, intentionally or not, racial tension and prejudice. Though this may be the information provided by the Chestertown Police Department, The Elm has no obligation to mirror social awareness of this organization. Encouraging such attitudes is antithetical to the purpose of the newspaper of a liberal arts college. Major newspapers such as The Washington Post abandoned indis criminate references to race long ago. The Elm should consider doing Sincerely,

Suzanne Niemeyer Class of 1986

Tutorial Not A Disgrace

To the Editor:

Intellectual arrogance has no place on a college campus. The implication of recent letters to The

Need A Job?

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yacht and Country Club

> $4.00 an hour 778-6765

Elm - that going to the Writing Program is somehow disgracefulseems arrogant, although perhap this misperception is born of misu derstanding. If so, we hope this letter sets things straight. The Freshman Tutorials for from being a punishment meted ou to those who don't know a fragment from a complete sentence, offer a opportunity to review the writing process and sharpen the cognitive skills necessary for analysis and synthesis. Students who have de veloped the habit of examining their writing critically in the ten-week series have tended to do well in their college careers. Some of them have subsequently walked off with aca demic honors. This year's freshme again strike us as serious and hard working, glad to take advantage of all the resources the college offers and mature enough to be more intoested in their education than in their

The Writing Program is always glad for publicity, but we want it to represent us accurately to the college community as welcoming those interested in improving their expository skills. Last semestr over a third of the student body. many of them upper-classmen and excellent writers, spent time (notati time) with one or all of us. We see our office, not as a first aid station for deficient writers, but as a so source for people who care about ideas and their mode of expression

Sincerely Gerry Fisher Alice Goodfelles Gail Tubbi

Submit poetry and short prose

Broadsides

c/o Jennifer Harrison campus mail

Advisers Worth More Than Ten Cases of Beer

controversy these days about how the college pends its money. Maybe this is why the nestion of whether or not peer advisors hould be paid has become more frequently ked. I hope not, because I consider peer wisors somehow elevated beyond the realm of salad bars and porches. Peer advising is more idealistic than shredded lettuce, and eals with living flesh and blood and not the ind whipped together with mayonaise and nickle juice That settled, here is the question again. should peer advisors be paid one hundred icks for their services? I say yes. I certainly wish I had been paid when I was a peer advisor, the first year that the program was sed, when it was still groping out of Dean Berry's file cabinets. But I still advised, and would have advised this year- penniless - if I hafn't been hired instead to make the big bocks as an RA. Money is not a motivation for per advisors, the people doing this job right ow would still be doing it even if they eren't paid. Believe it or not, there are people out there who will do what they think advisees. That's all the proof I need. is an important job and do it for free

Now that I have denied the campus junior yuppies their self-centered philosophy of finance, I might ask, what is the big deal about paying peer advisors, since they them selves would probably admit that they would do the job without that check? The big deal is not the money, because one hundred bucks is nothing. The current exhange rate is about twelve Italian pizzas, ten cases of German beer, one Japanese radio. Besides, think of all those administrators hidden in the maze of Buntagon. They get a lot more than a hundred bucks, and who really knows what they do? Or even who they are? At least we know what peer advisors do and who they are. They get their pictures in The Elm, of all things. What

It's not the money, it's the principle. That is, by denying PA's their money, you deny that the program has any value. The big deal is whether or not the peer advising program is useful. I think it is. In fact, I was even told that it was helpful by one of my former

David Healev

you scurrying in the right direction for answers is a good idea. Peer advisors perform all The money helps pay for postage and pains kinds of tasks, no doubt, but probably the most important thing they can do is simply to be summer. So let's keep the peer advisors, let's there when needed. Being a peer advisor is pay them their pittance. It's a cheap price for like being a freshman's security blanket- in academics, if nothing else. I'm not saying that freshman are either insecure or incapablethey aren't -but if they do need help, well, it's there. Of course, peer advising may only be a plot by the administration to make their David Healey is a senior majoring in admissions catalog juicier, but I give them more credit than that. I think

So it has been decided that peer advi-After all, having someone on campus sors are a good idea, and that they should be who can answer your questions or at least send paid, even if it is with a paltry sum. Well, one hundred bucks helps make coming back to school early and staying late (as peer advisors do) seem a bit easier, and makes the training sessions (hear that?) more bearable. It helps pay for Burger King expeditions on those extra days. (Have you ever seen what they serve people when hardly anyone else is around to see? It's not always pretty to look at. Forgive me, Mom, I understand that you have to get rid of what's left in the Cookie Jar.) when the PA's write their advisees over the an invaluable program

The Student Judicial Board and the Writing Lab should note that the above article was in fact written by me. On my honor.

ISSUE: Is the peer advising program effective enough to warrant the $100 stipend paid to peer advisers?

Bob Caldwell Senior Salisbury, Md

James Plaskitt Freshman Upperville, Va Yes. The peer advisors not only The peer advisors were great in the I think the Peer Advising Program I think that the extra week we (as triant freshmen and transfers, they also provide at least some kind of an worth it '

Jennifer Vaughn Junior (peer advisor) Elkton, Md.

beginning, and really helpful. Now, was very effective, but, the fresh-freshmen) had here was wonderful. I think mine has crawled under a men didn't seem to be receptive to We got a chance to meet people and rock. As for the stipend: it's not what we had to say about distribu- to become acquainted with the tion and everything else. The campus. The peer advising group hundred dollar stipend was worth was nothing compared to the other activities during the week."

Vicky Carroll Sophomore Kingman, Arizona

William Reck Junior Geneva, Switzerland

One hundred dollars is very steep considering the few mandatory peer meetings. If the program was more structured, it would warrant one hundred dollars '

by Susan H. Stobbart

Campus Voices

scademic role model,"

Cut Back on Number of Peer Advisers

Washington College is looking to to give unsolicited advice, let alone advice manwho feel they are unable to speak to their and money.... Many would argue with that atement but when it is realized that peer Mysers are paid a hundred dollars for their Services" it is the only rational that can be ound to explain that. One hundred dollars tobably does not seem like a great deal of oney when compared to some of the other mgrams around campus but it's the little ings that add up and are the reason that the shool has to keep raising tuition. That the nices which the peer advisers perform are riormed in so many other places throughout accimpus is what makes the thought of the er advisers earning one hundred dollars

But if it's a problem of a personal aure I would just as soon go to a friend, after when asked for.

The biggest advantage of the peer adviser system is that the endless array of names and faces during orientation is broken down into small groups, the peer adviser groups. That is an important action, but one that could be carried out much simpler through assigning a random group of freshmen to a resident adviser, other than their own, the advising part can be left to the faculty adviser. The small groups would still allow the freshmen to become familiar with each other and the hundred dollars would be saved

The peer advisers could still be kept around in a more limited role. Those fresh- advisers needed.

faculty advisor or resident advisor could sign up to have a peer adviser. It would be more helpful to the students because they would be speaking to somebody that they had chosen to speak to and the college would save money because there would be much fewer peer

Ren Jacobs

And with fewer peer advisors needed the administration could be more selective as to who becomes one. Instead of taking the entire crop of prospective peer advisers they could only chose the cream of the crop and thus, those who were chosen would be more effective peer advisers and the program would be more effective and helpful to the students

Ben Jacobs is a freshman planning to major in English.

> Write Op / ed for The Elm Call ext. 321

Carrington To Speak

Former Ambassador to Senegal

by Lynn Burris Walter Carrington, former United States ambassador to Senegal, will be visiting Washington College on Tuesday, October 6, to speak on careers in the field of international affairs.

Carrington has been acquainted with Senegal since 1952 when he went there as a delegate to the World Assembly of Youth Conference after graduating from Har vard College. He then later served in Senegal from 1965-67 as Peace Corps Director. More recently, Carrington has served as director of Howard University's Department of International Affairs since its creation in 1981

The Executive Vice President of the African-American Institute in New York throughout the 1970's, he published its magazine African Report. He held various positions with the Peace Corps from 1961-71, directing programs in Sierra Leone, Tunisia, Senegal, and in Washington, D.C

Carrington served as a special assistant to the Director for Equal Employment Opportunity in 1967-69. During this time he practiced law in Boston, Massachusetts as a partner in the firm of Maples, Carrington and Rhuland. He is also notable for being at age 27 the youngest commissioner to serve on the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination.

Carrington lectures regularly on international affairs and race relations at universities in the United States, Africa, Latin America, and the Carribbean. Currently he serves on the Board of Directors for Africare, the Black Press Institute, the International Volunteer Services, and others. He also belongs to several professional associations including the Association of Black American Ambassadors, the Council of American Ambassadors, and the Council on Foreign Relations. The college's Career Development Office welcomes all who are interested in hearing Ambassador Carrington speak. He will give a lecture, followed by a group discussion on October 6, at 4:00 p.m. in the Sophie Kerr Room of Miller Library

The pie eating contest was the most popular event at greek games ... to watch

The party begins. Can drive when I drink Can drive when I krimbe Can drive when I druk. Can dring I The more you drink, the more coordination you lose That's a fact, plain and simple It's also a fact that 12 ounces of beer, 5 ounces of wine and 11/4 ounces of spirits all have the same alcohol content. And consumed in excess, all can affect you. Still, people drink too much and then go out and expect to handle a car When you drink too much, you can't handle a car You can't even handle a pen

A public service message from Will Roger's Institute

Democrats Launch

by Wendy Kloiber In the dark hole called a stude mailbox there appeared a small s of paper last Friday. The reacti the short notice received were say the least, mixed. There v some groans, some laughs and the there were the few people is slipped the scrap of paper and their books and gave it some sericonsideration. It is these few ( came to the Queen Anne Ed Lounge Tuesday night for a founding meeting of the You Democrats. It is possible that yo ago there existed a chapter of a organization at Washington of lege, but if so it faded into a existence somewhere along theli With some hard work and acid participation on the part of members this new club will surviv for years to come. At Tuesday's meeting son goals for the group were esta lished. The first priority for Young Democrats is to encoun active participation in politics and campus level. To do this the gro has invited Independents and no registered students to join the cla ter, as well as Democrats.

Secondly, the Young Den crats would like to increase politic awareness of students. If SGA fin ing is received, the club hopes bring an active member of I Democratic Party to the college speak on one of the many issi facing the voters in the upcomi year. Another idea the group hasis monthly newsletter that would it form students of events that will be occuring in the political arena est month. The Young Democrats vi also be trying to help organize debate against the Young Republic cans scheduled for sometime lateri

the year The chapter is planning of meeting once or twice a month fir discussion and planning of events The premise behind its existen will not make it popular with students, as the reception of the notice last Friday proved. Howevel the Young Democrats will finally be providing an alternative that h been missing at W.C. for too keep The group is proving that there is life outside the Republican Partyl Washington College.

Any questions about member ship or any other comments can't adressed to Wendy Kloiber in the Queen Anne apartment.

Enjoy Waterfront Dining Located at the foot of Cannon Street

> Chestertown, Md. (301) 778-3566 Credit Cards Accepted

Dr. David Newell

Newell Appointed To National Committee

Dr. J. David Newell, chair an of the philosophy department, has been appointed to the National task Force on AIDS in Emergency

AIDS(Aquired Immune Defiimey Syndrom) and the medical ofession has become an area of reasing concern as some health re workers have contracted the ease through contact with paents and some patients with the ease have had health care refused

Newell was recently chosen is a member of the task force beause of his expertise in the field of nedical ethics. He has written an ticle entitled "Conflict and Contaon: Ethics and AIDS in the Workplace" which will be included n a book to be published by the tiversity of Illinois in the near ture. He has also given lectures on AIDS for various groups including edical schools and societies as well as working with hospital ethics nmittees at the Jefferson School

Medicine in Philadelphia. The Task Force will be primarily ocemed with the education of talth professionals, protection of alth care workers, and the refusal thealth care to patients with AIDS. well stresses that there are many oblems with the treatment of IDS patients especially in emerthey situations. Many emergency trkers are volunteers and are haid to come into contact with tats who have been injured in a by that involves profuse bleeding. is almost impossible to test a patient for the AIDS virus in emer gency or Shock Trauma situation as the test takes 48 hours, and the virus can be present in the patient for up to 7 months before showing up on a

The Task Force proposes a solution to this problem by educating the emergency technicians as to the proper ways to protect themselves According to Newell, the Task Force plans to issue "authoritative bulletins on new developments in the field of AIDS as well as institute a national "AIDS hot-line." An other problem is the right to privacy of AIDS patients. When confidentiality is broken the AIDS patient risks losing insurance benefits. According to Newell, this is of primary importance. In the works is a national conference for health professionals which will continue the educating process.

The Task Force is under the juris diction of the United States Department of Health and Human Services. It is the cooperative project of two agencies: the Bureau of Health Professionals and the Bureau of Resource Development. The members of the task force are from all over the United States and include physicians; nursing administrators: members of state and national emergency medical technicians divisions; the chairman of the Maryland State Police Aviation helicopter division; and finally the chairman of the National Volunteer Fire Council. Newell is the only member of the force with specific training in medical-ethics

Used Furniture For Your College Needs Sofas, Chairs, End and Coffee Tables, Desks, Lamps and Much More.

> Crowding's Store Rt 297

Four Miles North of C-Town Worton, Md.

> 778-0389 Visa/Mastercard Accepted

Art House Due For Repairs

He suggested that a mainte nance employee inspect buildings on a regular basis to identify such problems. "We (professors in the art department) waste our time being project managers, and we're not getting paid to do that."

"The building is old and you can't expect it to look pristine, Andrews said, explaining that complaints with the building concern safety, not aesthetics.

Smoke detectors were installed this semester, though the department moved into the building in January 1975, he said. Other recent improvements include shelves to organize frames and mats and repairs on a rickety front step. A repair of a hole in the floor, however, was made by simply placing linoleum over it, and the area still sinks when walked over.

The building has served its purpose and it's worn out," said boiler plant (located next to Ferguson Hall) into a creative arts studio is planned as one phase of the College's capital facilities cam-

Andrews said the new building would allow the department to expose majors to aspects of studio art that are neglected in the present curriculum. Space limitations, as well as lack of faculty, preclude the offering of courses in lithography. figure drawing, photography and all facets of studio art in one location and place the department nearer to the rest of the campus. A sculpture garden would allow for work outside and for students from all disciplines to gather

"I don't think it matters if you're a sociology major or a business major...Having a lot of kooky art majors running around makes life more interesting. It would be a Tessem. Renovation of the old showcase building," he said.

Greek Life Enhanced By Interfraternal Council

"We the Interfraternal Coun cil being the body of jurisdiction over the member fraternities, set forth this constitution to cause closer friendship and cooperation amoung the member fraternities, so reads the preamble of the constitution of the Interfraternity Council of Washington College, an organization that just last year began to show signs of life in taking part of greek life on campus.

In April of 1980, representative members from the fraternities Kappa Alpha, Lamda Pi Delta, Phi Sigma, and Theta Chi signed the most recent version of the Constitution of the Interfraternal Council of Washington College This document serves as the basis for structure and jurisdiction of the IFC, yet up until 1986, the council existed in an almost dormant state, according to Kappa Alpha representative Chris Fascetta.

The purpose for founding such a council, which is similar to that found on any college campus hosting greek societies are listed in the Constitution. The include promoting the interests of Washington College and the fraternities represented, to insure cooperation and improve relations between fraterniies and college authorities and between the seperate fraternities, and to "discuss questions of mutual interest and to present to the fraterni ties such recommendations as the council sees fit

The council, which includes one represtative from each fraternity, also includes the Registrar, the Dean of Students, and a faculty advisor to be chosen by the frater nity members. All Members have a single vote on the council.

In addition to discussing issues facing greek organizations, the IFC serves as a judicial board to handle violations of the By-Laws of the IFC. The IFC By-Laws include regulations for Bidding, Rush, Pledging, and the College's position on Hazing.

The most recent activities of the IFC have been the planning and oganizing of last Saturday night's party following the greek games. According to Fascetta, this active role in greek life is one that can be expected to continue on the part of the IFC. Says Fascetta,"The effectiveness that the IFC showed last week was representative of the general direction of greek life on campus. I Think everyone is sick of the problems of the past and the recent cooperation is indicative of the fu-

10 Visits for $40.00

Our SunTana SunSystem quarantees you a glorious Our sun lans sunsystem guarantees you a glorious, radiant tan that you can keep all year long. A tan you achieve with soft, comfortable and SAFE U.V.A. light and without all the burning, peeling and flaking you get in natural sunlight. Our SunSystem is GUARANTEED to

The Beauty Lounge

Phone: 778-2635

come Midtown Mall
Chestertown, MD 21620
NEXUS PRODUCTS AVAILABLE
mplete Hair Care + Manicures + Sculptur today ..

In Brief

Junior Class President

Congatulations to Denise Smith who was recently elected President of the Class of 1989. With four names on the balot, 92 juniors turned out for the election

Student Election

The office of Vice President is The new facility would unite currently vacant in the junior class. In order to fill this vacancy, there will be an election on Thursday October 8. Petitions can be obtained at the Student Affairs Office. Any questions should be addressed to Sean Kennedy in East Hall, 203.

Republicans

There will be an organizational meeting of the college republicans on Thursday, October 1 in the basement of West Hall. The meeting, which begins at 7:00 pm will involve planning speakers and campaign activities for the uncoming semester. New members are always welcome

Pegasus

The supplements to last year's issue of The Pegasus are now available to all students. Any student with a hardcover edition of last year's book is welcome to pick their supplement at Talbot 223-225.. In addition, the staff has extra copies of last year's book for any interested students

Fall Bids

The sisters of Alpha Chi Omega and Zeta Tau Alpha wish to congratulate those who chose to accept their fall bids. The Alpha Chi's congatulate Reena Neilsen, Paige Osworth, Val Williams, Melisia Grimm, and Sue Taylor. The Zetas congratulate Melanie Wade and Cindy Brenton.

Chestertown, Maryland 778-3030

- . Greeting Cards
- Cosmetics
- Russell Stover Candy
- Soda

Fountain

The Hynson-Ringgold House: Recreating Colonial America

by Michele Balze At one time the Hynson-Ringgold House, then called "the Abbey", dominated Chestertown, Its rolling lawns stretched all the way fom the water to High Street. In fact, the earliest known painting of Washington College shows the college, the River House and the Hynson-Ringgold House. Libby Cater states, "The Hynson-Ringgold House was the big house around at that time odd contrast to its surroundings Flimsy, pre-fab houses have sprouted in profusion outside the house's garden walls, and what was once a stable yard is now a park surrounded by a discrete wrought iron fence. Only the gardens preserve the original surroundings of the Ringgold House Money raised by groups

Now the house serves as an

such as the Womens' League and the Friends of the Hynson-Ringgold House went to commission the Millers to create a garden specially designed to be colorful all year around. Completed in 1984, the garden is filled with plants that were popular in the eighteenth century, such as geraniums, holly, ferns and fresh herbs. Many of the plants were transplanted from gardens all over Kent County. Probably the most interesting acquisition in the garden is the gate which was bought with a donation given to the house in return for using its garden in the filming of James Michener's

Credit for the salvation of the House itself belongs to Wilber Ross Hubbard, a member Emeritus on the Washington College Board. After the house had been boarded up for many years, Hubbard, a great preservationist, rescued the house from use as a Legion Hall. When he had raised the Since 1944, the house has served as the home of the president of Washington College.

Originally, the Hynson-Ringgold House belonged to Dr. William Murray who in 1767 sold it to the Ringgolds, a wealthy merchant family in Chestertown. In 1743, not 1735 as was first thought, the house was built on land Dr. Murray had purchased from Nathanial Hynson. In 1771, the Ringgolds completed an extension that transformed the original house, which was one room deep, into the Georgian style townhouse we know today. The extension features the woodwork of William Buckland including the distinctive antler stair with its elevated yet unsupported possess its original woodwork. In 1932, the woodwork was moved to the Baltimore Museum of Art and replaced with an expert copy. Delicate garlands and festoons decorate the mantlepiece and moldings. A highlight of the Red Parlor is the upholstery which gives the room its name. Jackson Van Der Bogart speni the ten years before he died in 1984 hand needlepointing the pieces during a confining illness. He declared he would not die until he was finished his work. The impressive collection of Chinese porcelain and jade which decorates the Green Parlor also belonged to Mr. Van Der Bogart.

Only the Red Parlor does not

Since they have taken residence at the Hynson-Ringgold House, the Caters have done much to furnish the house with antiques. Before Douglass Cater became Washington College President. Daniel Z. Gibson had held the position for twenty years and antiques would hardly have survived a house filled with growing children

With the help of Bill Elder, the curator of American Decorative Arts at the Baltimore Museum of Art, Mrs.

bard donated the house to the school. house in colonial antiques. Money raised at benefits organized by the Friends of the Hynson Ringgold House, as well as private donations by benefactors such as Betty Casey. have gone toward furnishing the Red and Green Parlors and the historic dining room. All of the furnishings belong to the College and will remain in the house for future presidents to use. In addition, Mrs. Clifton Miller left money in her will for the care and upkeep of the house. Mrs. Cater hones that the house will be fully furnished by the time they leave so that the house will be ready to be opened to the public The decor of the Hynson

Ringgold House favors a mix of the Oriental imports that were popular in the eighteenth century and American crafted furniture. In the dining room a Sarapi carpet adoms the floor while the chairs are Centennial Chippendale. Oriental potFew of the pieces now in the the servants' quarters now serve house belonged to the Ringgolds, guest rooms for V.I.P.'s. but the furniture and decorations already acquired are pieces that wealthy colonial families would have owned. Bill Elder and the Caters are working to recover more of the Ringgolds possessions. A set of silver spoons that served as part of Anna Maria Ringgold's dowery are on display in the Red Parlor and copies of portraits of Thomas Ringgold and his wife hang in the hallway. The original portraits were painted by Charles Wilson Peale and belong to the Baltimore Museum of Art Although the Caters are trying to create a museum of types,

some compromises must be made to include modern fixtures. After all, the house serves as a place to live and entertain as well as hold tours While lamps and coffee tables are necessary for modern entertaining, they simply didn't exist in the eighteenth century. In the period rooms electric lamps are constructed out of the Chinese vases that were popular at that time. An oriental platter mounted in a legged frame serves as a coffee table "This is where we live." Mrs. Cater declares while gesturing to a room that was once a kitchen and then a garage for buggies. Next to the large fireplace that once served as an oven for the house rests a color. T.V. and a Nautilus machine. It is here that the dichotomy of the house becomes evident. On ascending the impressive antler staircase, we leave the historic part of the house for a modern apartment of sorts. In the President's study bookshelves have been specially designed to preserve the original woodwork beneath. Mrs. Cater explains that ways be a touch of colonial Asset additions to the house "never com- ica

President's rooms, what was in

Of course the President rooms are not part of the freque tours that go through the Hyp Ringgold house, but the tour popular nonetheless. groups interested in historic pre ation, such as Wintertur, ducted tours of important Cher town houses like the Ringgo House, but now the College is charge of all town tours and received all money earned through the lar After the transition, tours bera so popular that the school hada back and conduct only regula scheduled tours such as the Can light Walking Tour. Volum docents are specially trained conduct the tours.

ing. Betty Duvall is currently is ing for a publisher for a book sh writing on the house, and a no study was conducted on the ho by researcher Michael Bourne only is the house artistically in tant as a prime example of a Revolutionary architecture, b preserves a glimpse of the hist which Chestertown is proud. A portrait of George Wa

Interest in the house is the ington hangs in the dining room reminder that George Washing was a visitor in the Ringgoldh around the time Washington lege was founded. Connections these are what inspires restora like the Hynson-Ringgold Hou Historic houses are storehouse information about our culture history and no matter what been of Chestertown, with its Bu Kings and Drug Fairs, the come Cannon and Water Streets will

Remington Farms

by April Dean and Kathy Prenedergast For those of us at Washington College who do not have cars on campus, it is somewhat difficult to take advantage of the many sights in Chestertown and the outlying areas. It seems as if, for the majority of us, our world is only as big as our campus. One particular place that is worth borrowing a car, hailing a taxi, or even bicycling to see is Remington Farms, located nine miles west of Chestertown on Route 20. Remington is not your basic "Mom and Pop" farm. Instead, it is a 3,200 acre wildlife management demonstration area that includes 26 ponds, a visitors' center, guest houses, and hundreds of acres of forests, corn and wheat fields. Although habitat tours can be taken during daylight hours from Febru-

Farms for the sixteenth annual expert dog trainers. Hunting and Fishing Day, ary 1 to October 10, this past Satur- tion wherein labrador remi

Soutiere stated that 7,200 people groups from distant places such came from as far away as Maine for the events of the day. Visitors had the opportunity to witness the results of educated and effective land management, sharpen their shooting and fishing skills, and mingle with other outdoorsmen. The 4-H Club was there to teach .22 rifle Frostburg State College. shooting, and other qualified in structors were on hand for archery. muzzleloader, and shotgun lessons. Clinics were headed by such groups as the Maryland Tidewater Administration, the U.S. Fishing and Wildlife Service, and Ducks Unlimited. One of the most popular events of the day was the retriever demonstra- environment, too.

day was the day to be at Remington were put through their pace Soutiere mentionedtha

Assistant manager Ed frequently gives tours to col Iowa, North Carolina, and Vern There are usually two students come to Remington Farms summer to do field work for majors-this past summer i was one student from the Univerof West Virginia and one Even if you disapped hunting and are scared of wild mals, Remington Farms is a eagle nest on their premises, and geese are beginning to arrive said: "One does not need to biology major to come do English majors should know

Serving a Commitment to Excellence

probably stay there

by Jennifer L. Nicholson

"The Washington College ning Service (W.C.D.S.) is an reganization that is dedicated to toing the best and it has a proven tack record of this," says Dave Knowles, Director of Food Service and of Summer Conferences. Not oly does the W.C.D.S. take care of he boarding contract, but it also tends its responsibilities to caterrefor the college and local community, the linen package program, air anditioning services, and the Sum

Another change the Dining Service has made is that of its menu this year, its style has changed and has gone on to a computerized system with the rest of the campus. "I would like to hire a student to do desk-top publishing for the menus," savs Knowles. "We would like to make menus available to all of the students." In writing a menu, the W.C.D.S. has a registered dietician who reviews their menus. Knowles says they have a seven week menu cycle and that it is repeated four

"I love the people I work with. I like the work to do and I like the hours. It's like a big family here."

Knowles' many duties are to freet those areas. "I am fortunate to are good managers and a good aff," he adds. "I'm in the Service adustry and you are my client Washington College raduate who began cooking in the be Dining Service and its many nctions for students by stating this ear's main focus: "I want the stuent body to have confidence in what we're serving. I'd like to raise e perception level of the quality of he food we are serving them.

"I use nothing but fresh eggs nd we get approximately 450 dozen of fresh eggs in one week. I want students to understand this. We just don't buy the cheapest hing. We buy U.S.D.A. choice or igh-grade meat, hamburger patties whout fillers, and better tuna fish lan you can buy at the store," states Knowles

He also adds that 80 to 90% chemicals, foods, and paper are ought from the same company. He as a primary supplier and Knowles krys, "I believe in this method and if ere is anything I do well, I purhase well. I write the contract and e set our cost up front." Knowles to says that the salad bar is a part if this, "We needed to go on to a lew look because the students of day are different than the students yesterday or 10 or 12 years ago," says. "We have seen the particition level jump immensely for the of the salad bar. We are having prepare much more salad and we edoing a good job in the back of

Furthermore, Knowles says tal the dining service may be reideled as part of the Dining rvice's changes. He also adds Today's students will not ac-Idirty dishes and that is why last ar we spent so much money on sing our dishwashers installed special pressure pumps to tike sure the glasses are clean. wles says that the Dining Servcannot please all students but the desire is here to be everyng everyone wants us to be.

er Conferences at Washington times a year. After each cycle, it is reviewed and redeveloped over the summer. The person in charge of the menu is Mary Lorraine Sexton, the food production manager and a W.C. graduate. Her duties include making sure that the food is ordered that it is received and stored properly, that it is prepared, and served Vietnam War, Knowles talks about properly for breakfast and lunch

Two major services of the W.C.D.S. are those of catering for the college community and the local community which Knowles says "meets a need within the community and provides good, positive public relations.

Darrell Jester, who started working for the W.C.D.S. in Octo ber of 1983, as the Food Service Supervisor, is currently the Catering Manager. Jester took this position in September of 1985 "because of growing catering needs," he says Jester who is a W.C. graduate, now takes care of all catering including hiring waiters, waitresses, bartenders, and attendents. "If you're a college student and you want to work, I'll work you as long as you play by the rules of the game." Jester

For catering in the summer, Jester takes care of large conference groups and outside catering while utilizing the Pavilion. Such events include local business picnics and wedding receptions to assisting a crab feast held at the Pavilion this past summer.

For the students who work this job, Jester comments, "I have a good staff and for the students I have working for me. I don't like to call this a job. I like to call it having fun. I call it a two way street. The people I have working for me are good because they follow directions, they're personable, and they are helping me because if I don't have the personnel. I can't do an event. Students who begin this job without experience can start out by being a buffet- attendant for a few of times and then they can become waiters and waitresses. Jester says he will give all former employees a good reference and that this job gives good experience and training Hours are flexible.

event, Jester says someone only has study program to call him and then an appointment is set up in which they discuss menu selection, prices, and where and how the event will be held. Jester says, "The catering business will probably continue to grow but once we reach a certain limit, we will

In making the W.C.D.S. run correctly, everyone employed takes their part in its overall success. Under Knowles is Assistant Direcor and Director of the Student Center, DeMoss, who has been at W.C. for 10 years. According to Knowles, "Jeff is a special projects fills in where ever we need him, he's the caterer for President and Mrs. Cater, he was involved with the salad bar remodeling committee, and he makes recommendations and advises us on purchasing and menu development," Knowles says. DeMoss is a special products and events person. He goes out and talks to people person to person and is now involved with the remodeling services. Knowles adds, "I am the thinker and planner and Jeff is the

Furthermore, Knowles says that stable management is the key factor in his goal to be the best. This management includes such neonle as Sharon Crew, Mary Lorraine Sexton, Ted Legates, and the numerous other workers including cooks, line ladies, and students

Mary Lorraine Sexton, is the Food Production Manager. Sexton, who has been for three years says her job includes writing uup menus with the help of Dave Knowles. ordering food, making sure everything is ready for all fo the meals, and supervising breakfast and

Ted Legates, who has been the Part-time Dining Room Supervisor and Head Waiter for the Hynson- Ringgold House for two years, works in the evenings and on week-ends. Legates is in charge of the meals and seeing that the food is guy. He helps me do everything. He correctly prepared. He also makes sure that sanitary conditions are met, that nothing runs out, and replaces it if it does. He sees that dishes are cleaned properly and that the place is properly cleaned. This includes things being correctly stored and mopped up as well as making sure all of the lights are off when closing. When asked why Legaates enjoys his job, he replied, 'Part of the reason is still being part of the college life. I now have the priveleges of going to college functions and meeting interesting stu dents. Now I'm around the college community." Not only are the su pervisors crucial to the success of the W.C.D.S., but also all of the > other workers. Barbara Brown and Tyrone Moody are evening cooks, working for the dining service for 20 years

In having W.C. cater an dents would participate in the work- all nice. It makes for a pleasant and friendly atmosphere. Their smile goes a long way

Mary Ella Elbourn, a numbers lady for four years, makes sure that all of the I.D. cards are run through. Says Mary Ella, "Most of the children are real nice and my supervisors help me a lot. Lita Wilson who serves food on the line has been working for about three months. She sets up food and prepares the food that goes outside like fruit. Wilson comments, "It's a job and the people are alright." Willis Stanley, an employee of ten years, starts his day at six in the morning and stavs until eight at night sometimes. Stanley works with the cooks in the rotation process, does receiving work with incoming trucks, runs errands, works for the caterers, does laundry in the morning, sweeps dumpsters, mons, and sometimes takes deliver. ies to Miss Dee's and to the Student Center. Stanley says he loves his hours. "We really chip in and help each other. Dave, Jeff, and Darrell are the best bosses you could have. They really chip in and help you High school students. Mike

Johnson and Mary Connolley both work the line. Johnson, a senior who has been here seven months says, "I like the people I work with It's not a bad job either. " Connolly, a junior employed here for two years now, comments, "I love the people I work with. Llike the work that I do

Serving the evening meal is neither the beginning nor end of the Wachington College Dining

Service's service Sharon Crew, who is the and seven years, respectively. They been with W.C.D.S. for two years and worked in the Student Center tion. Crew runs the evening meals, is the personnel manager, takes care of public relations, is the training supervisor, and writes "Mom's her job is "very diverse. You never that she wishes more college stu- dren. They respect me and they're Dining Service Supervisor, has prepare and cook food which is served for dinner. Maggie Rochester and Jerome Lindsey share the four years before her current posi- duties of salad preparation, and morning cooking.

Betty Scott a waitress for ten years, sees to the students needs and making sure that they get waited on. Cookie Jar" for The Elm. Crew says She says she does most everything for the lunch hour including the know what will happen. We have a salad bar, chips, drinks, and the small staff and everyone pitches in cereal bar. Scott enjoys her job bewhich makes it easier." Crew adds cause, "I like working with the chil-and I like the hours. It's like a big family here. Everyone gets along and the bosses are easy to get along Jeff Newell, a Washington College Sophomore and W.C.D.S. employee of five years, does a little bit of everything under the job description of porter. States Newell of job, "It's an opportunity to make money turned into an opportunity to socialize." Newell concludes on a humorous note, "I enjoy improving the atmosphere of the Dining Serv-

SPORTS

The Week in Review

Field Hockey:

(Season 4-3; MAC 1-2) At home on Tuesday, the Shorewomen were routed by MAC rival W. Maryland 5-0.

W.C.'s best scoring oppor tunity came on a penalty shot by leading scorer Beth Matthews in the second period, but she was unable to beat Western Maryland's goalie, precerving their shutout

Tuesday against Albright the Shorewomen dropped their second straight for the first time this season, 1-0. The loan goal came in the second half, when Linda Anders was beaten between the legs. Albright had been

The Shorewomen are now off until October 9th, when they host Catholic University Soccer:

(Season 1-2-1; MAC 0-0) Rebounding from a pair of early-season losses, the men's team went undefeated last week defeating St. Mary's 2-1 and tying Franklin & Marshall 1-1

Against St. Mary's, Steve Attias started the scoring assisted by Frank Garlitz. The gamewinner came from Tom Bowman, from a Raul Felipa pass. John Thomas recorded eleven

Saturday, Felipa scored the sole Sho'men goal, assisted by freshman Scott Smith. Both goals came in the first half as neither team was able to score in the in the second half or in the two over-

Thomas recorded seven goals, but let the game-tying get by when a routine pass back to the goalie was intercepted by Franklin & Marshall

Next: Saturday at Swarthmon Volleyball:

(Season 6-6; MAC 2-2) Bouncing back from early season sethacks, women's volley ball scored two victories last Thursday, against Hood College 15-4, 15-8, and Marymount, 15-5 15-8. Both victories were the result of a strong team effort and consistent serving

Losing Saturday to Dickinson, 4-15, 6-15, 8-15, the Shore women recovered to split a tri match at home against Monday. soundly defeating Notre Dame College and dropping to Wilmington College

Thursday they travel to meet Johns Hopkins and Goucher.

Top scorer Tom Bowman controls the ball in a 1-1 tie against F & M. The next home game is Thursday at 3:00 against Western Man

Bumps and Head Races Are Only For Gentlemen

by Carter Boatner

Last Sunday afternoon the Men's and Women's varsity crews competed in their first race of the 1987 Fall schedule, "The Kings Head of the Schuylkill Regatta' held in King of Prussia, Philadelphia. Under ideal rowing conditions the races went smoothly.

The Washington College Men's Varsity-Eight is coached by senior Geoff Gibbons. The crew consists of team members: Rob Simms, Carter Boatner, Joe Watkins, John Albert, Greg Terry, Pat Divine, Randy Capel, stroke and captain Sean Kennedy, and coxswain Katina Smith

The boat finished the 2.5 mile (4,000 meters) race in 13:51.6, second only to the Vesper Boat Club-Eight who came in at 13:44.4. The W.C. boat held off both LaSalle and Franklin and Marshall.

The Women's Varsity Four is coached by Washington College graduate John Wagner, and its members include Laura Levin. Genie Auchincloss, Jenni Pollard, stroke April Baugher, and coxswain Pixie Walbert.

The women's boat enjoyed a larger field of competition than did the men. There were a total of nine boats in the race, from Villanova course at the same time. Each boat

Upper Merion high school. Despite their starting time, and then times the number of entrants, the Women were able to avoid being 'passed or 'humped' and held on to fourth place to finish in 17:40.4. The Villanova 'A' boat finished first with the time of 16:28.2

"Head" races, as they are called, are unique and are held traditionally in the Fall along race courses 2.5 to 4 miles in length, as opposed to the majority of the Spring races which are only 1.25 miles (2,000 meters)

Head races were first rowed in England during the 1880's, and got their name through the intention of professional oarsmen competing to be the leader of other rowers, or 'head of the pack' as it came to be known. The race was rowed with many entrants vying for the prestigious honor of being called the head of the river the race is held on At the start the boats are lined up in single in a pre-set order, presumably (and ideally) from fastest to slowest. The race begins with the first boat taking the lead and the others following at 10 second intervals. The intervals enable a great many entrants, (sometimes, as in late 19th century England up to 300 shelfs), to compete along the long

(2), F & M (2), LaSalle (3), and rows against the clock according to pieces' from Rolph's Wharfi are compared to one another to determine the winner

If you can pass or "bump" the boat ahead, chances are that you are in the lead, or at least ahead of the passed boat by 10 seconds.

stern of one shell is passed by another shell's bow, the slower boat is obligated by a sportsmans creed to move over and let the faster one pass, thus forfeiting the title of being the head. If a boat fails to yield to a faster competitor it is punishable by disqualification, and or physical abuse at the hands of other competitors upon completion of the event. Needless to say, this stiff penalty of failure to abide by the creed always insured fair racing.

I believe that this racing etiquette ensured by the creed is the origin of Crew being recognized as a gentlemanly sport At the start of the next race, the crews line up and start in the order that they finished the previous race, so it is possible for the premier oarsmen to eventually move up to the head of the race and defend his position as the 'head of the pack' Both crews prepared for last Sundays race by each morning at 6

A.M. rowing four-mile 'power

Chester River bridge (213)lir Kent to Oneen Anne's o These workouts took nearly minutes and were suffecients tioning for the 2.5 mile race. Fortunately, this past well neither of the W.C. boats in The course is narrow, and if the themselves obligated to let crews pass, and were able to in the order that they had starte There is nothing more humii to a crew than being forced that sportsmanship to be passed by other boat. If you ever have an opposed to observe a head race such al upcoming "Head of the School do! It is a spectacular sigh large field of skilled contests by at full pressure, each vyir the prestigious honor of leads pack the next year. Many races last the better part of an with up to 30 boats rowing by second intervals.

This Saturday all of the Wa ington College crews will head the "Ship Shield Regatta" whi 1.25 mile (2.000 M.) race tob on the Delaware River, in No sey. Washington College wi resume any Head races unit "Head of the Schuylkill" to b in Philadelphia on Saturday. her 24th

CHESTERTOWN, MD.

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-5 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:30-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE

SCHEELER FIELD

Rt. 213 & 201

HELP WANTED

Now accepting applications for yacht broker. Full / part time position available at Yacht Sales and Marina

Operation, offering secure, long term commitment with growing company.

Send resumes to: Yacht Sales Position

PO Box 6

Georgetown, Md. 21930

Amily Bakory and Coffee Sho

rape & Sandwic 778-2228

Just How Good Are They ?

by Phil-Tom Jackson In the middle of a downpour a ion came to my mind as I had twenty-two girls run up down a field chasing a small e ball. Just how good is this

I'm speaking about the Wash College Field Hockey team. seven freshmen on the team, or halfback Kathy Kilroy said it This is a pretty young team," et that was handed to the team in losses to Elizabethtown and em Maryland. That is strike But this young team may have ething that other teams don't ....

it's not difficult to come to nice with a 4-3 record. But lets mber one thing: this team has 14 players, some who are even to the game. A second strike

Also, as Junior halfback Sandie der commented, "The season gone pretty good so far, but we we to face some better teams That makes three strikes.

We all know what that means ttry to tell these young women though. In many of their games at should have been a handicaps turned into advantages

Freshmen Amy Tiehel, Bisset Curdy, and Donna White have a strength to the team to make orthe shortage of players. These plus the recent play of Kristy inger, Erin O'Neal, and Sta-Macnner, have made this team ar to be reaching their goal of a or better season Coach Diane Guinan has also ad help in her returning players, the Blackburn, Coulter, Kilroy, Matthews, Stephanie Milton, arole Reece. Matthews, Reece Coulter provide the scoring th. All are strong players in their

Still, coach Guinan has her k cut out for her because of her be goalies, Junior Linda Anders reshman Sarah Coste who are ing some improvements as the in the second half alone, just as it season moves on, but still occasion- was not answered when the Shore- heartbreaker to winless Albright, too. They now have more than a ally make rookie mistakes. Thus far, have I answered my land 5-0. question, "Just how good is this team?" Partially. The big part remains to be answered. It was not answered when W.C. walked over Marymount 12 to 1, scoring 9 times

The presence of W.C. leading scorer Beth Matthews throws fear into an opponent.

In fact, it's too soon to try and answer it The girls have made it to mid-season with a healthy record of 4-3 and a good shot at the playoffs. Tuesday, however, they lost a 1-0 women dropped to Western Mary- demonstrating that they still have a way to go, especially with the harder for their second-half drive. teams in the second half.

> I can say is that they are as good as women's field, to try and live down they want to be. In some places they the fact that we are just a young are about as good as they can get. In others, goaltending for example. how it turns out

The Year at a Glance

Opponent Haverford Wesley Elizabethtown Hood

Marymount 0 Western Maryland 5 Albright

> Catholic II October 9

at Johns Hopkins October 13 7 pm

> at Galludet October 15 4:30 pm

> at Widener October 17 11:30 am

Lebanon Valley October 20 4 pm

at Swarthmore October 22 4 pm

> at Goucher October 27

they are young and inexperienced and should vastly improve as the season continues

There is a lot of talent on this young team. As the season gets tougher, they should get tougher week off to get their heads straight

So off we go to never-never But from where I stand all that land, across the train tracks to the team. Stop over some time and see

Athlete of the Week ZETA TAU ALPHA

ZTA

THETA CHI Last weekend, at the annual

Greek Games the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority and Theta Chi fraternnit claimed victory, earning both Greek organizations the honor of Athlete of the Week

With success in such events a the body pass, egg toss, pie eating contest, and three-legged race, the Thetas and Zetas outdid their ri

The fun didn't end there Afterwards, to cap off Greek Weekend, there was an outdoor party featuring the "Bash." In the end, all were winners

Cross Country Missing

by Bill Beekman

Last Saturday, the Washington College cross country team failed to produce enough runners, making them unable to participate in their scheduled race against Mary Washington and Washington and Lee

The problem, according to top Sho'men runner, Rob Press, is lack of organization. SaidPress, "We sort of practice on our own and whoever shows up at races, races. It's a shame. I enjoy the sport very much." Don Chatellier is the coach of the team

Tomorrow the Sho'men plan to travel to Virginia to race Lynchburg and Hampton Sydney. "God knows how we'll race there," said Press, That is, if they end up racing at all

Raybans

OUTDOORSMAN

available

Forneys Jewelers

n the Western All Is Not

Now the excitement begins After a long and grueling major league schedule of 162 games, the playoffs begin on Tues day. It looks like the St. Louis Cardinals will hold off the late charging New York Mets and the Toronto Blue Jays will outlast the Detroit Tigers to secure the division.

It comes as no surprise that Toronto and St. Louis are on top of the Eastern Division standings These two teams both won their divisions in 1985, and after slow years last year, are about to wrap up the 1987 titles. The most interesting story can be found in the Western Divisions, where perennial doormats have risen to the top

chip shots

San Francisco Giants have won Giants put two runners on base with their first division title since 1971, two outs. Willie McCovey faced That year, the Pittsburgh Pirates won the playoff series and the World Series

Just to put this into perspective, think about the following. In 1971, the Giants roster included the following players, including three Hall of Famers; Willie Mays, Willie Bombers

Perry and Bobby Bonds. And the Series was 33 years ago, when they were in the Polo Grounds

Baseball fans remember that Series for one play. In the first Game, Vic Wertz of Cleveland hit a long drive toward the deepest cav ems of the Polo Grounds, some 460 feet from home plate. Willie Mays made, arguably, the greatest defensive play of all time. He raced back and caught the ball over his shoulder and with his back towards home plate. This play propelled the New York Giants to a four game sweep of Cleveland They did come close in 1962. That year, the New York Yankees battled the Giants to a seven game final that people still talk about. The entire series boiled down to one

With the Yankees holding on to a slim 1-0 lead in the bottom of the In the National League, the ninth of the seventh game, the Yankee ace Ralph Terry and hit a line drive that seemed destined to win the series for the Giants. Before the ball could drop, though, Yankee second baseman Bobby Richardson made a fantastic defensive play that secured the series for the Bronx last time the Giants won the World aging of Roger Craig and the trades staff and timely hitting of the of-Rosen. In 1985, the Giants suffered championship team are all there.

cess this season have been the man-unit. Add to that the solid pitching made by General Manager Al fense, and the ingredients for a through their only 100-loss season in the franchise's history. During the late stages of that season, Rosen hired Craig to turn the team around. Last year, under Craig, the Giants won eighty-three games and finished a competitive third.

"The most interesting story can be found in the Western Divisions, where perennial doormats have risen to the top."

This year, with the acquisitions of pitchers Rick Reuschel. Don Robinson, Dave Dravecky and Craig Lefferts, along with third baseman Kevin Mitchell, the Giants have charged their way to the top of the NL west. An infield comprised of Will Clark at first, Robby Thompson at second, Jose Uribe at

In the American League West, the Minnesota Twins have won their first title since 1970. That team included such greats as Harmon Killebrew, Cesar Toyer, Rod Carew. Jim Katt and Jim Perry. Unfortunately for Minnesota, that year they faced the eventual World Champion Baltimore Orioles in the playoffs.

In 1965, the Twins made their only appearance in the World Series and took the Dodgers to seven games before bowing out.

That Series was supposed to be a four game sweep for the Dodgshort, and Mitchell at third has come ers because of the superior pitching

The Twins shocked the world by defeating these ing pitchers in the first two the Series. Sandy Ko bounded to shutout the 7 both games five and seven the title for the Dodger Bla

Playing in the friend fines of the Hubert H, H Metrodome, the 1987 Tw won fifty-six games at hor dropping only twenty-five the thirty home runs of Ken Gary Gaetti, Tom Brunar Kirby Puckett, the offe guided the Twins this year With a team ERA twentieth out of twenty-si however, the pitching h disappointing except for Viola, Bert Blyleven, and le don. These pitchers will de how far the Twins go in the

After years of emph struggle, the San Francisco and Minnesota Twins have the top of their divisions prising everyone, include fans, these teams have live season that had been mire troversy

With the added end and spirit that these tea bring, this should be an ir playoff season. Let's hop not disappointed.

Running With Weights May Cause More Harm Than Good

DEAR DR. JOCK: Your colwas fine as far as it went ... but it didn't go far enough. There's more probably no. If you're asking do to running with weights than merely holding them. In fact, they should be and go back to play feeling more swung, at a minimum from full arm extension to waist height or higher. If the weights are just held station ary, there is minimum benefit and potential harm to muscles and con nective tissues. An excellent book on this is called Heavy Hands by Dr. Leonard Schwartz (Little, Brown and Co.). Please tell yout readers. -Sylvian Fribourg, M.D., Panorama City, Calif

Dr. Jock

THANK YOU, DR. FRI-BOURG, but running with weights swinging or not - has always seemed superfluous to us. If you want to run, run. If you want to walk, walk. If you want to build strength and shape your body, get involved in a serious and safe weight-training

Running and walking with weights can get in the way of your body's natural gait and rhythm True, it can tone your muscles over time, but it is NOT the most efficient

DEAR DR. JOCK: This time of year I watch a lot of football on TV and am curious about the guys who come off of the field and breath oxygen out of a tank. Why and what are they doing? -B.C., Durham, NC strength and energy?, the answer is these guys take a few deep breaths powerful and refreshed?, that's something else. Some of them undoubtably do. The real benefit may be more psychological than physiological. At least that's the conclusion that a team of researchers reported at a meeting of the American College of Sports Medicine, Let's take a closer look

In this study, twelve professional soccer players were tested on a treadmill and then given either oxygen or room air to breath from a tank. They were then retested again using either oxygen or room air

After each test-blood tests were taken to determine lactate levels in the blood. Lactic acid and carbon dioxide are removed from the bloodstream in the presence of oxy gen. High levels of both lactic acid nal Crunches whittle the waist.

DEAR B.C. If you're asking: and carbon dioxide in the blood are umn about running with weights. Is breathing oxygen a quick fix of indicators of lack of recovery from

> The results? There was no difference in the levels of lactate in the blood between the groups of athletes who breathed room air vs. those who breathed pure oxygen. Also, the athletes who breathed oxygen were not able to perform better on the second treadmill test than the athletes who breathed room

Conclusion? Breathing oxygen is only of psychological benefit, not physiological. Of course, that is an advantage. If you think that you can perform better, you probably can!

There may be one more advantage, too. Players who come to the sidelines and breath through a mask are concentrating on breathing more deeply and that, in fact, may help them recover better than players who don't focus on breathing prop-

TIP FOR THE WEEK: Diago-

of the love handles that you hate, but diagonal crunches done regularly will tone the muscles that shape the sides of your waist

Lie on your back, knees bent, left ankle resting on your right knee, arms akimbo tucked behind your head. Slightly raise your head and elbow toward your left k hold for three seconds. Wo ten times or more. Then the and bring the left elbow to knee ten times. Remeber ti deeply and naturally as youd

© 1987 by Ruba Hous

You'll never catch me off balance

OLYMPIA

Authorized Dealer SALES - SERVICE - RENTALS

GASCON'S BUSINESS MACHINES

837 High St. CHESTERTOWN, MD 778-5611

> Repair & Service On Most Makes Of Typewriters And Calculators

f Victorian Age and Villains Teas and Talks by Jennifer Harrison Return

"The Fantod", subtitled "A Gray is "a fascinating coneary perspective on a time that uch more in common, mor shically and politically, with than we would like to think,

ector Rick Davis Amlin Gray, a contempo-American playwright became ared in the manifestations of victorian Age: literature, arts, y, and the spiritualism and erism popular in the era. "He all these threads together in grange little play," explains

The play contains all the nts of a typical Victorian It is centered on a love theme en a virtuous young man at Arthur (Doug Henry), and d a free thinking young an (Emily Lott). The couple is dalong the Victorian codes of ncy by Rachel's mother Mrs vat (Gina Braden), the proper ian mother, and by the stan-Victorian vicar, Vicar Dibdin Eichelberger).

Sir Tristan Northmoor (Ryder els). Northmoor represents a the guise of temperence reth, but actually uses drugs in a ical way. This romantic hero/ al Victorian family.

Becca Jewsbury, set designer for The Fantod, is seen here painting a faux marble floor for the Victorian set.

Other characters that add Gary Clarke is the piano player in the st to the plot include Miss show. He has written the score ina Darch (Jeannette Smith) as a cluding an original operetta to be nan lady novelist, and the vil-performed by Rachel and Arthur during the play

The set, designed by Renic hero in a literary sense, becca Jewsbury, is a fourth wall concept of a conservatory/garden room. The audience looks into the room and sees nink marble floors n finds himself intruding on a pillars in Victorian green, burgandy curtains and French double doors. In addition to the speaking Jewsbury took some of her ideas

Stage manager for the play is Debbie Nahmias, assistant manager is Michele Beck, lighting designer is Charlie Wilcox and the technical directors are Alistair Paget and Steve Brody.

The Fantod runs for three nights beginning Thursday October Friday the 9th and Saturday the 10th, in Tawes Theatre at 8:00 p.m. Seating is limited and it suggested that reservations are made at extension 269. Tickets are free for

hy Jennifer Eisherg

Monday Series covering the cam-Talks", the Monday Series for this a Writer's Union event. semester begins October 5 with tea and refreshments at 4:00 p.m. followed by the lecture at 4:30 p.m., and take place at the O'Neill Liter-

dents are familiar with the Monday Series at Washington College, magazines in the nation. freshmen may wonder exactly what the Monday Series is and what it devised three years ago by students. They realized that there were professors, members of the administration, and townspeople who have particular interests outside of their professional lives, which might be of interest to students. Their pur- publishing, what each involves, and pose was to get these people to give short lectures on their special inter- perform until before Thanksgiving vacation. During the Spring semester, it begins in February and ends by Spring Break. There are about six to eight talks given each semester.

Because the Series is sponsored in part by the Writer's Union and is held at the Literary House. students who are not closely involved with the Literary House might sometimes feel inhibited from attending the lectures. The ries, explains Professor Robert Day. By the end of this day, stu- Director of the Literary House, is dents will have seen posters on the that it is sponsored in conjunction with the SGA and therefore be-Also known as "Teas and comes an all-campus event, not just

October 5 starts this semester's Series with a talk given by J. Patrick Homberger, entitled "The Art and Science of Publishing." Hornberber is the publisher of Maryland Magazine, one of the most successful state supported

On October 12, the Monday Series will feature Kate Rand Lloyd, a Woodrow Wilson Fellow, The Monday Series was speaking on "The Art and Science of Editing." Lloyd is the Editor-in-Chief of Working Woman magazine and is a noted authority on women's interests. These two talks were chosen in order to show students the difference between editing and what tasks the editor and publisher

The Monday Series is both a The Series begins for the Fall fun and educational experience. semester in early October and lasts' Everyone is invited to attend these talks, as the Series' motto states, "of subjects worthy and curious.

Campus Calendar

FRIDAY OCTOBER 2

Film Series: The Mission Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m.

Green Going: Wallace Stevens Poetry Reading Lit House, 8:00 p.m.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 4

Film Series: The Mission Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 5

Film Series: The Mission Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m.

Teas and Talks: "The Art and Science of Publishing Lit House; Tea, 4:00 p.m. Talk, 4:30 p.m.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7

Lecture: "The Woman Question. Why Have There Been No Great Women Composers? Kathy Mills, speaker Gibson Fine Arts Room 9. 4:00 p.m.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8

Drama Production: The Fantod Tawes Theatre, 8:00 p.m. Free for students

Where are the Women Composers sional music ranks, says Mills. "Although there are still very few

Where are the women composers as great as Bach, Mozart. Brahms and Ives? Did women, as well as men, compose music in medieval times, or travel the countryside of France as wandering minstrels? Why do we know the names of many women singers, but trying to bring their own works to no women composers?

These questions embrace the topic of a talk to be given by Kathy Mills, associate professor of Music at Washington College, on Wednesday October 7. Entitled "The Woman Question: Why Have There Been No Great Women Composers?," the lecture begins at 4:00 p.m. in Room 9 of Gibson Fine

The question of women creating music was first raised in a long and stormy debate around the turn of sought acceptance within profes- brought to light."

women conductors of major orchestras and few women instrumentalists in those orchestras. . . it is as composers that women have faced nearly insuperable obstacles simply the public ear. "Here at Washington College," Mills continues, "we have women studying theory and composition as we always have, but while we sail on contentedly in our own community, women composers are fighting to get works published and performed, and women conductors and instrumentalists are struggling to land legitimate positions in front of and within orchestras.

"There is literally a new world the century, as women composers of music to be discovered and

Chestertown Movie Theater

Full Metal Jacket

October 2 - 8

778-1575

Poet's Birthday

No candles will be lit this evening, but a birthday will be celebrated, as fans of the poet Wallace poetry here. Stevens gather for a reading of his poetry. Stevens was born in Pennsylvania in 1879, he died in Hartford, Connecticut in 1955. Today was editor of the Harvard Advowould have been his 108th birthday. cate, writing much of the poetry and people and places, Wallace Stevens has been compared to Walt Whitman, since these two great American poets seemed to share the borg, and Carl Van Vechten. same kind of appreciation for their went to Europe and only saw odd port to Summer (1947). His Col-instead, a mental traveler. Many who knew him were Hartford Accident and Indemnity executive. One of his startled colshould be separate from his work. and he did his best throughout his life to keep it that way. He never wrote on company time but composed while working at home in his rose garden or strolling to his office on Asylum Street. Once, when spirit that his birthday is celebrated, vited to choose a poem of his toread. Jenny Eisberg in the Elm Office bringing a literary friend into the Hartford Canoe Club for lunch, he warned him, "We don't talk about

Stevens began his literary career at Harvard, which he left without a degree in 1900. While there he A lover of Americana, of its editorials for the magazine, often printing it under a pseudonym. In his younger years he associated with Marianne Moore, Alfred Kreym-

His published works include: country. Even so, Stevens was Harmonium (1923), The Man With never a great traveler. He never the Blue Guitar (1937), and Transbits and pieces of America. He was, lected Poems was published in 1954 and was the first of his books to be succussful. He was also even surprised that he was a poet. known for his prose on poetic and Stevens was vice-president of the artistic theory, works which he often droned without inflection to aca-Company- an insurance company demic audiences, and which are better appreciated when read. Steleagues once said, "What! Wally a vens won the Bollingen and Pulitpoet?" Stevens believed that his art zer prizes, and received honorary degrees from several universities. He had no Cadillac- in fact, no car-and left only a small estate when he died. He loved living and the good things offered in life: wine, paintings, roses. It is in this

Movie Preview

Celebrated Tonight Jesuits On Mission From Go

ton College Film Series will be featuring The Mission, a 1986 film which won the Best Picture award at the 1986 Cannes Film Festival in France. The Mission will be shown in Norman James Theatre tonight. Sunday and Monday nights at 7:30

This epic, directed by Roland Joffé (The Killing Fields ), is based on the missions established by Jesuit priests for the native Indians in the jungles of South America during the 18th century. These socalled democratic utopias lasted for nore than a century until they were destroyed by the imperialist monarchies of Spain and Portugal, both of which were supported by the Roman Catholic Church. The Jesuits with the finery of poetry, in this reading called "Green Going." As Stevens wrote: "The body dies; the body's beauty lives./ So evenings die, in their green going, / A wave, interminable flowing.

The reading begins at 8:00 p.m. in the Literary House. Refreshments will be served, and all are welcome to come and listen. Wallace Stevens will make an appearance of sorts with a recording of him reading, and students are in-missions and the Indian converts tian way to oppose injustice from these two forces, who were doza, on the other hand, w more interested in the slave trade fight for the Indians. and the land than in the spiritual well-being of the Indians.

Irons) is a Jesuit missionary who others from the wider integre goes into the South American jungle the Catholic Church. It is to convert the Indians. Mendoza pragmatic film dealing with (Robert De Niro) is the slave trader, ence, and when one must delater to become a Jesuit after murdering his brother. They are ordered to close down their mission by shows relevance to the str Altamirano (Ray McAnally), the taking place both within the papel emissary, and turn the land lic Church and the rest of the ver to the Portuguese Refusing to give up their mission,

Gabriel and Mendoza fight to preserve it, each in his own way. Gab- a brutally powerful, prove riel leads the Indians in prayer, in-

The Mission raises issues of faith, justice and pos-Father Gabriel (Jeromy is about people struggling to

The Mission is power today. Tom O'Brien of Co weal states that "the end rais issue of violent resistance to way.

Fiction Contest

cepted for Playboy's 1988 College Fiction Contest, open to all regis tered undergraduate, graduate and part-time students. The writing competition is judged by the editors of Playboy magazine, and the deadline for entries is January 1, 1988. Second Prize: $500 and a Contest rules and other details are available by contacting

Tuesday and Wednesday

from 7:00 p.m. until 12:00 an

PRIZES First Prize: $3000 and pub tion in the October 1988 issue

subscription

Third Prize: a year's subscrip

PHIL'S FARM MARKET

This Week: Busch 12 pk. $3.99 plus tax

FLATLAND ROAD (301) 778-1893

MONDAY -THURSDAY, and SUNDAY 7 AM to 12 MIDNIGHT FRIDAY-SATURDAY 7 A.M. TO 1 A.M.

COLD BEER ANYTIME

- fresh coffee & donuts - pizza - hot soups - shakes - fast microwave foods - call-in sub orders

A CONVENIENCE STORE FOR ALL YOUR NEEDS HAND-DIPPED ICE CREAM-24 FLAVORS BEST SUBS IN TOWN-SUNDAES-SHAKES-PIZZA

Conveniently Located Just 1 Mile From Washington College

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Jolume 59, Number 7

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, October 9, 1987

Elm Found 'Not Responsible"in Plagiarism Charge

Charges dismissed by All Campus Board

by Tony Caligiuri

nde" in an October 5 meeting of All Campus Judiciary concern- the article the question of authorship of an editorial.

The editorial piece in quesentitled "No Alcohol Means September 11 issue of The Elm ish Mendelson, Mendelson, who s charged and acquitted of plarism, was not the author of the c. but it was written by Rob y, who gave his permission to ndelson for the use of the article. According to Andrea Kehoe, procedure to approach different mbers of the college community obtain editorial pieces for the nion/editorial section each sident of the Phi Sigma fraterto write an editorial on the alol policy. Bodner turned the er down, when, according to orial. "They seemed to view it a communal responsibility to emity's opinion was represented or-in-chief of the Elm, it is nor-

The Elm," said Kehoe Mendelson said on Tuesday, tember 8, the deadline for the mission of copy to The Elm, he d found someone else to write the or of The Elm, obtained the edi-Mendelson in East Hall that he indelson) was the author of the e according to Harrison. At the time, says Harrison, she had no rea The Washinson College Elm son to doubt Mendelson's word. found "not responsible" for a Kehoe said that Mendelson testiviolation of the Spirit of the Honor fied, on the contrary, that Harrison understood that he had not written son that Mendelson was the author of the piece, it was published in that week's issue. Said Kehoe, "When cial Stagnation" was published in the editor told me that Leigh had written the article. I interpreted this having been written by junior as negating any previous agreement to have another person write the piece. When we printed the essay with Leigh's name on it, we did indeed believe that he had written it." Although Kehoe conceded that there was doubt over who would finally submit an article, she also said that there was no doubt in her mind who wrote the piece until it was questioned by Associate Dean of Students Edward Maxcy .

After confirming with Harri-

Following publication, Keek. Kehoe asked John Bodner, hoe received a phone call from Maxcy on behalf of Alice Goodfellow, director of the writing program, who had read the editorial in The Elm after another student, Rob hoe, Mendelson offered to either Gray, had submitted the same piece te or find someone to write the to the Sophomore Writing Seminar

"When you bring a paper to mit an article in which their the Sophomore Writing Seminar, you are implying that it is your work. My concern was to make sure that my student was not plagiarizing, and I didn't think that he had, but I needed an explanation.," said Goodfellow. Goodfellow said that E. Jennifer Harrison, Features her understanding was that Gray did not want to submit the article in his al from Jeff Newell and was told name until it was revised, among other reasons. Goodfellow said that she was satisfied that the Board had

The Bach's Lunch was offered by the fine arts department. Wednesday.

Report Finds Faculty Underpaid

Statistics from twenty colleges presented at Board meeting

by Melanie Wade On October 1, the Board of Visitors and Governors convened at their monthly meeting. On the agenda was the discussion of a comparative study of 20 colleges and how Washington College ranks among them. Some of the colleges surveyed were Scripps, Vassar, Colgate, Swarthmore, Wesleyan, Lafayette, Franklin and Mrshall, Gettysburg, Bucknell, and Dickinson. One statistic that was revealed was the discrepancy of faculty salaries. Of the twenty colleges studied, Washington College faculty were the lowest paid.

Gene Hessey, senior Vice-President for Management and Finance, notes however that among those schools surveyed, Washington College was 19th in enrollment: the lowest in tuition and fees; and had the smallest endowment. According to a study published in Academe March-April, 1987, continued on page 5 Washington College is approximately 4.5% behind other IIB (Independent, Private) institutions in average faculty salary at $29,400, the national average being $30,780. Hessey states that the current objective is to catch up. The administration realizes there is a problem, and country is difficult, so the student what they want to do, the Corps is doing as much as possible to bring faculty salaries up to par with the national average. Currently there are 59 full-time faculty members at Crossroads, Junior Year Abroad, Washington College.

According to a faculty are down proportionately since there continues to be an increase at 1982 when the average salary of a this level, by 1990, Washington Washington College professor was College will be only .8% behind the somewhat above the national national average average. The problem seems to be that the school has not kept up with a second phase of fund raising, with growth. He states "The faculty's a goal of $17 million being raised. primary concern now is catching up, Of this amount 9.5 million will go to and there does seem to be some endowment and 5 million will go to improvement in that area." In 1986, faculty salaries. One faculty memthere was approximately a 7% increase in faculty salaries, which was difference in bridging the gap

The Board has decided on ber feels this will certainly make a

Ambassador Advises on International Affairs

by Adrienne DeAngelo On Tuesday afternoon the Career Development Office presented Walter Carrington, a ten year veteran of the Peace Corps and former U.S. Ambassador to Senegal, who spoke on Careers in International Affairs and answered students' questions about the field.

When asked by a student how best to get started in the field of International Affairs, Carrington stressed the importance of overseas backround. Adjustment in a foreign lege students who are unsure of who has already had overseas experience has a clear advantage.

He advocates such programs as Foreign Service, and most adamantly, the Peace Corps. In 1961, in representative on the Long-Range the wake of a successful political foreign language. To be proficient Planning Committee, the salaries career, Carrington was offered the opportunity to go abroad with the Peace Corps as its regional director Thinking he would return to his law career within two years, he accepted. Those "two years" turned into ten years of successful work in Senegal, Sierra Leone, and Tunisia. The Peace Corps, he said, "was the most exciting and interesting thing I have done." He urges all undergraduates interested in the field to take advantage of the opportunities offered through the Corps. For coloffers a sense of direction. Carrington noted if he had the chance to do it again, he would have entered the Peace Corps before law school.

The second thing that Carrington stressed is the mastery of a continued on page 5

INSIDE:

| Last re of the          | 100     |
|-------------------------|---------|
| Leadership Organization |         |
| Coffee House            | page 6  |
| WCTR                    | page 7  |
| Tennis Highlights       | page 8  |
| Kent Athletic Club      | page 9  |
| Student Publications    | page 10 |
| Concert Review          | page 11 |

The Elm On Trial

The Elm has been accused, whether in campus judicial proceedings, in letters published in this paper, or at mealtime conversations, of a variety of crimes, some more heinous than others. To ignore these complaints would be to ignore our most serious obligation, accountability to our readers. Here's the scorecard, as we see

Violating the Spirit of the Honor Code: The All-Campus Judiciary found The Elm innocent of this charge earlier this week (see news story on page 1). The publication of an essay not written by the credited author, but by another student, was the result of an apparent misunderstanding as to whether the name of the actual writer or the name of a student willing to be credited as such was being requested by a representative of The Elm.

We maintain a strict rule not to print unsigned letters, except in rare and sensitive cases, because we expect anyone who writes for us or to us to be accountable for their opinions. Given such a policy, it would be logically inconsistent to print an article under the nar of one individual knowing that it had been written by another; that would make accountability impossible.

In order to avoid future misinterpretations of our editorial practice, we intend to ask one-time contributors to sign their name to a printed copy of their work, thus affirming authorship. maintain a bond of trust that when someone offers us his name as the author of a piece of writing, that individual has indeed written it.

Biasing Headlines: Certain headlines in this paper have been inaccurate and out of context; this is due to simple human error rather than to a conspiracy to humiliate contributors

Furthermore, we do not accept responsibility for any such errors that may have occurred in previous years. Every member of the current editorial board of The Elm is new to his position, and thus can no more be accountable for the actions of former staff than can a soccer player new to this year's roster take credit or blame for last season's wins and losses

Making Asses Out of People Who Write For Us: Sometimes articles that appear in this paper do make the authors look, to use the terminology of a recent letter writer, like asses. When this happens, it's not because we had to try.

Ignoring Campus Events: The sections of this publication news, opinion, features, sports and arts - are compiled by checking regularly with administrators, professors, and students to see what's happening at WC. Sometimes, though, we miss covering certain campus events; this is assuredly not intentional. Give us a call to make sure we don't overlook your organization's activity

"Not Making a Difference:" Some complain that, though vital questions are addressed in The Elm, results are seldom obtained. As a newspaper, rather than a political action group or community service club, it is our responsibility to draw attention to significant issues. The burden of acting on those matters is one we, as students, share with every other member of the College community.

Pessimism and Negativism: A peculiarity of news, of the changes and problems that confront a community, is that it tends to be unpleasant. That is inherent in its definition. Very simply, no story exists when a day passes peacefully and uneventfully; on the other hand, there's an article just waiting to be written when a tornado strikes

The Elm is a newspaper, not a yearbook charged with the task of rekindling college memories decades from now, and as such, often covers the not-so-upbeat. Constructive criticism is vital to the progress of any community; we don't support "love it or leave it attitudes. And believe it or not, we like Washington College

Washington College Elm

| Edito                     | ors.                 |
|---------------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Kehoe         |
| News Editor               | Tony Caligiuri       |
| Features Editor           | Jennifer M. Harrison |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekman         |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor |                      |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Balze        |
| Graphis Editor            | Todd Karr            |
| Mana                      |                      |
| Managing Editor           |                      |
| Advertising Manager       |                      |
| Circulation Manager       |                      |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and exam weeks rials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed columns, com

taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the edit cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy rould by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and would by Wolated by ancelessare on many and research and the received the many control of the Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuckday to be considered office is located in that week's issue. The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Anne dormitory, Businessand editorial are 750 pm. to 1100 pm. Tuckday and 750 pm. to 950 pm. to 1100 pm. Tuckday and 750 pm. to 950 pm. to 1100 pm. Tuckday sand 750 pm. to 950 pm. to

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Elm Biased, Negative

To The Editor:

Though I don't agree with the personal attack made by Chris Fascetta, I do agree with the fact that The Elm continually uses a biased and negative viewpoint when reporting on Washington College Why can't our campus paper be more practical and all inclusive when discussing life here at our school? Life at Washington College is not the horrible experience The Elm depicts it as being

Washington College has many stimulating activities that should be reported on. Why can't The Elm make it known that our teams have won, our athletes have been honored, that the concert series is something that shouldn't be missed and that there are a variety of lectures and clubs that should not be overlooked? The Elm does cover many aspects of life here at W.C. but, it does miss out on many of the events that would be of interest to the whole campus

The Elm has a history of using critical titles and language that have been deemed unacceptable by the people it reports on Many times the people are unwilling to speak up because it will just invoke another attack. I myself wrote to The Elm last year about a satirical article that was reported on and was insulted by a title over my letter implying that I didn't know what satire was. The Elm also biases other aspects of the paper, an example of this is The Elm's failure to report on the fact that the sisters of Alpha Omicron Pi congratulate the people who took their fall bids. Last time I checked there were three

Catholic Mass

at the

Alumni House

sororities. Why do these kinds of oversights occur? If W.C. is really the closed and claustraphobic place The Elm implies it is, then why has enrollment risen in the recent past? I you transfer. happen to enjoy the small school, small town atmosphere unique to

W.C. W.C. is what you make of it. If you choose to view it as a negative growth experience and a place filled with childish students and an overbearing administration I suggest

> Anne Johnson W.C. Senior

Mom's Cookie Jar

Hope you all enjoyed Grape

Day last Wednesday. For all of you who have asked when our next food show will be, the W.C.D.S. is happy to announce that the next Food Show will be Wednesday, October way to get off this roller coaster of 14th, during the dinner meal. Just what food items will be displayed was not available at the time this article was written. Be sure and take a few minutes out of your dinner hour to sample the food items available at the show and let us know Part of my job with the Dining Service demands a good bit of reading. The other day I came across an article I would like to pass along to the young ladies in my reading audience. The article I speak of was in the Family Circle Magazine, (March 3, 1987 edition). The article dealt with hypoglycemia. Hypoclycemia, or low blood sugar, can affect otherwise healthy people - typically, young women who develope poor eating habits. When a woman starts her day with a cup of sugar-laced coffee or tea, and a sweet roll, doughnut or other sugary food, her blood sugar (glucose) level skyrockets. To clear the blood of this excess sugar, the pancreas pours out high levels of insulin, which causes glucose levels to plummet. Hunger, light-headedness, irritability and other symp toms can appear. The temptation i to reach for a quick sugar fix, to cause more sugar will temporarily ease the symptoms. But the only too-high/too-low blood sugar levels is to change your eating habits Start the day with a breakfast that includes protein and complex carbohydrates: a whole-grain certal with milk or an egg on whole-wheat toast Because these foods are metabolized slowly, your blood sugar won't be subjected to extreme fluc tuations. Don't skip any meals and be sure that your lunch and dance also contain a balance of protienard complex carbohydrates.

Look for The

A calendar of the Dining Service October special dinners is available in the main dining room for your convenience. Additional weekly menus are also available. 9 you can't find them, contact Mrs.

There are still positions available on the serving line and it the dishroom on weekends for 116 student interested in making son! extra spending money. If you are interested in employment, see the supervisor on duty or contact Mrs Crew for more details.

That's it.

Write Op/Ed For The Elm

Next Week's Issue

Does Washington College Need A Faculty Committee

Athletics?

Call Ext. 321

Alcohol Supplement In Next Week's Issue of The Elm

Sundays, 5:30 pm Alcohol Awareness Week Oct 18 - 23

Honor Infractions Lessen Value of Degree

Honor Code is answered by many students with "so what?" There is quite a case to be made for "so what?" The fact is there are not that many infractions. Academic dishonesty is not a rampant disease on campus as it may he at large institutions, where classes are too large for exams to be properly proctored, and professors see too many papers to know if the sme one has passed their eyes before. This is Washington College, tenth oldest in the nation, and we, the student body, are generally a decent, honest bunch looking to broaden our horizons. Academic dishonesty is confined wafew members of our community, and even then, it is usually; in one of those one-hundred level distribution courses that isn't pertinent wasn't as it is. If the Honor Code were a set taking such a stand. Indeed, the number of "so of laws along the lines of "don't drive faster than 55 m.p.h." and could be evaluated solely on the basis of how often it was obeyed or disobeyed, I believe it would be rated above most of the statutes in most of the states. Yet I see the Honor Code as something more than state of mind in which academic dishonesty is a taken-for-granted attitude on campus that simply not to be tolerated. Nearly everyone incoming freshmen cannot help but adopt, has witnessed at some point in his or her and the fact that its seriousness, is even an career here a student engaged in academic issue worth of the space shows that it is far Ken Winkler is a junior majoring in philodishonesty. How many people have cared from reaching this status.

enough to report the culprit? Perhaps it has I would heartily agree with this per- happened, but in my two-plus years here I spective if the nature of the Honor Code have never heard of even one case of a student

Ken Winkler

whats" on this issue shows that students have The Honor Code is intended to foster a little regard for the Honor Code. It should be

We need to care about our Honor Code, I'm certain that by now this article has begun to read like some wild romantic ideal, but there is a very practical reason why we can no longer tolerate any Honor Code infractions. When a students leaves this school with a degree obtained through dishonest means, or even a record that reflects an unjustly elevated grade-point average, it has lessened the value of each and every Washington College degree, including, fellow students, the one that you will hopefully possess one day. It may not lessen the value placed on it, but it certainly lessens the value that it deserves.

sophy and minoring in music.

ISSUE: How seriously do Washington College students view the Honor Code?

I think a majority of students take I don't think it's taken as seriously

Reth Karukas Freshman Bel Alr, Maryland I think that the Honor Code is really take it seriously is up to the about breaking it.

Adam Matus Junior Richmond, Virginia

something that must be done at the Honor Code very seriously, as the professors and the administra-

every school, but whether people whiel others wouldn't think twice tion would like it to be taken, but I believe it's almost impossible to Elizabeth Usuka Senior Norristown, Pennsylvania

Lica Titue Sophomore Dover, Delaware

smaller penalties

Sophomore Bel Air, Maryland

Those aspects of the Honor Code What Honor Code? If the Honor that result in the most serious of Code were taken seriously, then penalties for breaking them tend to they wouldn't have to ask questions be adhered to better than those of like this irdividual himself Campus Voices

by Susan H. Stobbart

Many Overlook Academic, Social Violations

have it strictly enforced.

The most recent controversy in existeace at Washington College seems to surfound academic dishonesty and negligent social behaviors. Is this really a pressing issue among college students? I don't think so! Possibly the reason why we aren't at odds here tvolves from our lack of motivation in arguing the point. At this point in time, the major question consists of more important social issues like getting 80 different colored wristbands in the Coffeehouse.

There are important implications involving the honor code and its effectiveness. Simply stated, one facet of the honor code centers around academic dishonesty. On pages 15-16 of the college handbook, you'll a grocery list of vague policies which Trust be followed because the college "cannot Olerate academic dishonesty." These politits do not establish a completely refined standard of academic conduct. I think the sudents should understand them more thortughly, so I'll bring a few examples to mind. students cannot be involved in "the use of crib notes, prepared blue books, or OTHER TYPES OF UNAUTHORIZED MATE-RIAL," What can be cited as "unauthorized aterial"? Well it could be shoes that, when school.

wet, will display formerly invisible written information (put their prior to the exam). It could well be in the form of miniature tape recorders placed in the eraser end of your pencil. (There may be other forms supporting the administration's paranoia)

Mike Jenkens

Another example states: "Impeding the academic process of other students; this includes, for example unauthorized removal OF MISPLACEMENT OF LIBRARY MA-TERIALS ... " When was the last time you lost a Macintosh in the library?

The most inexplainable concept included in the academic code states, "ALL OTHER deliberate attempts to violate the SPIRIT OF THE HONOR CODE." Are you kidding? The committee must have run out of deviant violations obtained and implemented by students at Washington College. Will the administration devise new rules during the year? The "spirit" must refer to a ghost or dead honor code coming back to haunt the you really care? Apathy maintains our disinwe just don't want to get involved.

Case in point, I wonder what the ratio ment. of WC students follow the "moral obligations to inform the proper authorities of any infrac- about on this campus." Like the rest, I don't tion witnessed by individual students," should a difficult situation arise. For example, how can it be justified that an 800 pound vending machine be destroyed without anyone realizing it. Well maybe the dorm was asleep or the music was too loud. At any rate, somebody ate a lot of junk food that night.

The fact that people can't take responsibility in difficult situations is overwhelming. Although I'm not pushing for the development of "Narcs -r- Us," it would be nice to see someone concerned about the future of this campus. The basic question comes to mind, "Big deal, I didn't say anything -why am I the one required to report an incident?

Above all, the biggest copout centers around unreported academic cheating. Some of you aren't "lucky" enough to encounter someone plagiarizing or cheating on an exam. Mike Jenkens is a sophomore.

Social standards of conduct should be, I have; one day you too will pissed off because but are not, deemed important by many stu- someone ruined the curve in your Psych dents. This is a major problem on campus - Do course. What is the right thing to do? - report this person or look the other way? Many will terest in college events and issues; most times be quick in support of looking the other way - it's much easier and requires no involve-

> The honor system is not highly thought lose sleep over these policies. But at least I understand the reasons these policies were implemented - to protect our right to a quality education and establish respected precedents governing the safety of our social freedoms. Students are not entirely at fault; the policy's interpretations need to be refined as well. These rules seem to suggest there is no room for human error. Students are people too and we are by no means perfect; if the academic honor code is vague, it too becomes imperfect. However, students should also be aware of these honor codes and if not actively getting involved, at least respect their existence. Barring redundance, I hereby admit this article (not including the title) was written by me-on my honor.

Hearings Opened

by Brenda Conner

Last year, much debate surrounded the campus issue of Elm representation in Student Conduct Council (SCC) hearings; the debate was tenatively resolved by allowing a representative into hearings. During the summer, however, an automey for Washington College, in coordination with the Federal Department of Education, informed the College that the SCC and the Elm could be held liable for revealing information that is contained in a student's closed, personal file, and as disciplinary records are a part of that file, they may not be published. Until further, detailed information was made available, the Student Conduct Council and Conduct Screening Board Chairs, Brenda Conner and Rachel Smith, respectively, were instructed to maintain closed hearings. Recently, Smith and Conner spoke to the attorney to establish the position of the Student Judiciary regarding the Students' Rights to Privacy Act (Buckley Amendment). It was determined that no written communications from any member of the Student Judiciary The program is a joint effort may be shared with The Elm; written documents are part of the student's records and, therfore, closed. SCC hearings, however, may be open to the college community, including a representative of The Elm; verbal testimony given during the hearing and official, verstatements made by the SCC Chairman after the hearing may be reported and printed in The Elm Both SCC deliberations and CSB meetings shall remain closed. The process may be put into motion by the report of an incident from Security Office, Student Affairs Office, or any member of the college community. Incidents associated with a student's conduct are referred to the CSB, while other incidents are referred to appropriate authorities such as law enforcement agencies or counseling services.

When an incident is reported to the Chairman of the CSB, she sends the Chief Investigator, Matt Keller, to do a preliminary investigation; the material he assembles in then presented to the Screening Board. Smith presides over the meeting; at this time, the voting members of the CSB ( a Student Dean, a faculty member, and two students) determine if sufficient evidence is present to warrent a case and, if so, to which judicial body it should be sent - the Student Conduct Council, the All Campus Judiciary or the Student Affairs Office . The Screening Board does not determine responsibility (guilt or innocence); it is simply the steering committee to decide which appro priate branch will determine re sponsibility. Furthermore, the CSB does not press charges; it decides which charges are appropriate for the incident in question. Any charges which are brought are done so in the name of Washington College since the incident involves ar alleged violation of conduct against the entire college community Occasionally, however, individuals may press charges against other individuals, but these cases are rare The CSB refers cases involing academic matters or alleged violations of the honor code to the All Campus Judiciary which i chaired by Dean Elizabeth Baerard composed of four faculty member and five students (the only votice members), Deans of Students, and SGA Vice-President, Perry Finns If the CSB determines that legit mate grounds for complaint exist the ACI also bears appeals from the Student Conduct Council. Since most issues involve questions of student conduct/beharior, the majority of the cases passed on by the CSB are handled by the Student Conduct Council. Prior to the hearing itself, an investigator concludes his investigation into the case and presents a final report to the SCC Chairman. Five voting countil members sit on the case, hear the testimony, and render the decision Student Ombudsman, Mark Freder ick, attends all hearings in order protect both the rights of the partying question and the integrity of the system. The Faculty Adviser for the SCC is Kathy Wagner.

The Debate Club Held its first meeting this week in the basement of West Hall

Debate Club Makes Plans For Third Year

by Kim Harb

The Washington College Debating Club is off and running for the third straight year, and the goal this year is to get as much of the campus involved as possible. Past debates have included the issues of abortion and protectionism, and this year promises to continue the tradition of tackling controversial topics.

There are two events scheduled for this semester. On Thursday. October 29, members of the club will debate the issue of morality in politics, focusing on the private lives of public figures. This addresses concerns raised by the recent problems with presidential candidates. The debate will be open be the judge.

On Tuesday, November 17, the club will sponsor a debate between the Washington College Young Democrats and the College Republicans. This debate will focus on where the budgeted money should go, toward social programs or defense? Debate Club members will prepare the two clubs

Members of the club are hoping this will encourage more clubs on campus to get involved in debating, possibly making the debates a regular occurence

The club itself has been reorganized this semester, with an executive committee to create a more cohesive organization. The meetings are open to all, andparticipation to the public, and the audience will from anyone in the College community is welcome.

Student Internships

by Tony Caligiuri Applications are presently being accepted for those students interested in participating in the Maryland General Assembly Internship program.

between Washington College and the offices of both the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Delegates in Maryland. It allows students to gain first hand knowledge of the legislative process in both houses of Maryland state politics. Students spend two days each week at the State House in Annapolis working for a particular state legislator during the entire session, from January to mid April. Students will also meet regularly on campus in a seminar reading assignments and completeing writen

Although a particular major is not required, a background in political science is, with Political Science 311 recomended. Other requirements include a grade point average of at least 3.0.

Students interested in details about the program and /or an application should contact proffesor Edward Weissman in 12 Ferguson Hall, ext. 326.

Ironstone Cafe

236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30-9:00 Closed Sundays & Mondays

Raybans

OUTDOORSMAN

available

Forneys Jewelers

778-1966

Stam Drug Co. 215 High Street Chestertown, Maryland

> · Greeting Cards Cosmetics

778-3030

Russell

Stover Candy · Soda

Fountain

Elm Acquitted

continued from page 1 made a fair decision, and added, "I hearings were reasonable explanations. It seemed to be a series of misunderstandings and misjudge ments that occurred under the pressure of a deadline for both parties."

The Case was referred to the All-Campus Judiciary by the Conduct Screening Board. The question "broke the Spirit of the Honor Code" by "knowingly publishing an article under one name when it was written by another individual," ac-Screening Board Chairman Rachel Smith. The letter was circulated to

"We are very pleased that the board understood that The Elm was not responsible for the incident," said Kehoe, who continued, "I bebetween the Elm representative and appeals cases from the SCC.

Mr. Mendelson." Kehoe further expressed her agreement with the thought both arguments during the outcome of Mendelson's case, pointing out that she did not feel an act of plagarism occurred.

Mendelson did not wish to comment on the incident or the outcome of the case, yet gave verbal permission to The Elm to use his name in a news article

Presently, reports Kehoe, at hand upon the filing of formal the editorial staff of The Elm will charges was whether or not The Elm attempt in the future to determine without question the authorship of contributing writers, but adds Kehoe, "A bond of trust exists, and I don't think it's my responsibility to cording to a letter from Conduct second guess the honesty of our

The All-Campus Judiciary The Elm and to the Board of Publi- Board is a judicial hearing board made up of the Dean of the Coollege, four faculty members, and five student representatives. This board hears referrals from the Conduct Screening Board of the Student lieve that it was a misunderstanding Conduct Council (SCC) as well as

Student Leadership Organization by Tony Caligiuri

The recently formed Student

Leadership Organization held its first meeting last Tuesday in Hynson Lounge to discuss athletic facilities and programs at Washing-

The Student Leadership Organization, formed this year by Student Government President Richard MacKnight, is intended "to give the administration a direct view of student opinions on specific concerns," said MacKnight. The organization will meet twice each semester on a different topic, inviting involved students, faculty administration, and other interested students to discuss the problems, acomplishments, and needed improvements to different programs and aspects of student life at W.C.

The topic of each meeting will be determined by the executive board of the SGA. MacKnight acknowledged that there is presently a regular "leadership dinner" conducted by the President's office, but MacKnight saw a need for a more over campus concerns

plying a serious lack of communication between students and administration, said, "I think there's a definite need [for the Student Leadership Organization]. In last weeks Board of Visitors and Governors Knight said, "We are simply conmeeting, discussion is abstract compared to actual student life, while they are trying to enhance it." MacKnight characterized the reception of the idea on the part of the administration as "cautiously optimistic", but later added after the specialized forum for discussion meeting, that the faculty and administration were very receptive. In MacKnight, while not im- addition MacKnight pointed out that due to the nature of the program, not everyone will take interest in every meeting since the topics will change each time

Of the organization, Mactinuing the effort to upgrade student participation. With this, we are provided with an opportunity to refine our communication with the administration and give a sharper point of view on the issues brought

Faculty Salaries

continued from page 1

Hessey also stresses that part-time positions vary greatly from institution to institution, and depend almost entirely on the resources of the college. Because Chestertown is an isolated area, many part-time professors are brought in from places as far away as the Western Shore and other outlying regions. One parttime lecturer comments on the whole situation, stating that "the study is well grounded" and no one is really happy with the situation. but are hoping the proposed solutions will help in rectifying this situ-

There has also been some difficulty in hiring new professors. Hessey states that "it is difficult to recruit because of the lack of competitiveness of salaries." There are hopes of improving this situation by raising the average salary offered but it is felt that as the emphasis on increasing salaries for education in general continues, it will become even harder for small institutions to keep up. Hessey states that "In this area it is essential that Washington College improve its competitive

> Anyone interested in writing news articles for The Elm should contact Tony Caligiuri. ext. 321.

Carrington Lecture

continued from page 1

standing its culture. In a field such whole new generation of people, in a foreign language, said Carrington, is to have a significant leg up in the International Relations field. *Become proficient in two or three languages...you're way ahead of the advantage of all the College has to game," added Carrington. He believes understanding the language of a country is imperative to under-as International Relations, it is difficult to pinpoint specific actions to take in order to become successful. Carrington urges students to take the practical experiences that they had overseas would come back and begin to take jobs in American business, government, and other places and help to turn around a lot of the who, inspired by the idealism and way s in which we think about deal-He hopes to "develop a ing with foreign countries."

Two great ways to cruise through the semester.

The hand on the left is poised on what could be the most essential part of your education.

A Macintosh* computer

And the hand on the right is gripping pure, simple, unadulterated fun

A'Honda Scooter. One we're giving away

All you have to do for a chance to drive it away is visit your campus computer center and fill out an entry form. While you're there, take a Macintosh for a test drive

Because Macintosh can help you write term papers, categorize elements of the periodic table, plot the rise and fall of pork-hell

prices, compile computer code, and talk to other computers And the first 250 people on campus who get behind a mouse, so to speak, will receive a free Apple* memo board.

So head over to your campus computer center today. And ask about our Student Financing Program

Who knows? You may soon find yourself cruising a little farther than you expected

. Test drive a Macintosh. You may ride away on a Honda Scooter.

Enter September 8 - October 16

Washington College Bookstore

form neversion upth network improvement complex constitutes on medicals. Occine familiable, "9 words of the mandel per pure pure which is in explaint which was eligible to me Odds of management depends on the constitute of the c

The Pet Project That Laid an Egg

by Todd Karr

The other day, I went to my mailbox with all the fervor and devotion that most students hold for this daily ritual. As usual, the mail room was crowded, and littered with green and pruple flyers, screaming in Macintoshed headlines about potentially foring campus activities. I finally won my way through a group of letter-swapping. gum-chewing, gossiping girls and leafed through my mail. The green and purple flyers were there, just as I, had suspected, but there was something else. It was a large, plain white envelope, extremely thick, and stamped with that exceedingly officious-looking college letterhead. Well, you can just imagine the excitement I felt in having recieved such an envelope. It was almost real mail! The envelope was quickly torn asunder by my now-trembling hands, and inside I found five stapled pages of a "Sophomore Writing Seminar

Kind of anti-climactic isn'tit? But not really. You see, the Sophomore Writing Seminar is a taken by an active administration, writing an integral part of the made you like it?" Washington College experience An admirable and worthwhile goal for which to strive. But somewhere along the line of development, the gilding which made the Sophomore Writing Seminar look so good on paper became dull and tarnished when it was given the breath of life. Let us then dive into the realm of the hypothetical for a proceedings of a typical seminar passive constructions everywhere, conversation had shifted to an owner. So-and-so reads the noisses

X, proceeds to select some lucky individual to read his/her masterpiece. "So-and-so," she says in an encouraging voice, would you be so kind as to read your essay to the class?"

replies, So-and-so stuttering, "Well, it's not really an essay, it's kind of like a letter to The Elm, but not really, 'cause I'm not going to submit it.

"Oh," says Madam X. So-and-so begins to read with energy and enthusiasm: "Blah blah, blah, blah, blah, blah, blah, (These works are always so

After So-and-so had finished. Madam X attempts to embark on an exciting and energetic class discussion. "Any reactions?"

Now is the crucial moment. Everyone knows that the less that is said in response, then the less time the seminar will take Moving on that principle, everyone comments inanely, "I liked it."

This only infuriates Madam X, who is struggling to rather important conceptual step make the class a learning experience, so she pursues the one of whose goals is to make discourse further: "But why? What

> "There are no run-on sentences," someone ventures. This is a rarity indeed, and so when this occurs it is greatly admired. "Good answer, good answer," says someone in approval.

Then Such-a-one enters this pointed and intense discussion. offering some remarks in good faith. "I think this article, or whatever, needs a major overhaul. There are every other word is misspelled, it entirely different level. An comments with avid interest, noting

After the distribution of jumps from point to point without intelligent one several Actioned works of squeetic forgetal transmonts, not to memorial literature, the seminar tutor, Madam that the points that are made are Such-a-one what could be done to After this, So-and-so carefully folds several Xeroxed works of student logical transitions, not to mention basically ineffectual because of the help the article, or whatever it is. He them and places them in a notebook, limited vocabulary. My immigrant Russian grandmother knows more English." Such-a-one is a bright a-one, and Such-a-one smiles back, relief: "Only five more classes to competent writer who sees his rather smugly. But we all know that attend."

position in the seminar as a joke, there's no such thing as animosity in offers the best solution: "Burn it." So-and-so glares at Such-the care with which the smiley faces In reply, Madam X asks on one of the pages were crafted where they will rot until the end of the semester. He breathes a sigh of

Well, there's no need to

There is nothing he could learn in constructive criticism. this situation, so he uses these sessions to subtly ridicule those discourse and heads off a potentially such-a-one

Everyone shifts uneasily, groaning inwardly. If Such-a-one hadn't spoken up, then perhaps Madam X would have moved on to the next paper.

Madam X closes the others in the seminar who are ugly scene by asking "Any other earnestly trying to improve their responses?" Everyone chews their writing skills. Every seminar has gum and distractedly plays with their papers. "Well, then pass your paper with your comments on them to So-and-so."

Thinking "One paper down and four to go," everyone But now the returns the work to its rightful spend any more time in our hypothetical seminar, for the reality of this situation has been illustrated quite clearly. The Sophomore Writing Seminar is in sore need of a "major overhaul," to use the words of Such-a-one, but whether or not the administration will ac constructively upon their perproject remains to be seen.

(If I were a sophomore, I could have used this article for one the sessions.)

The Coffee House: Brewing Since 1981

by Jodi Peebles

into a place on campus known as the conversation and dancing or an heads as a result," stated Mr. Jeff atmosphere—a place to relax after Student Center. The room was occassional pool game before the Demoss, director of the Student decorated with one coke machine, pool table was damaged and had to Union (otherwise known as "Dad"), stage was built for new band two ping-pong tables and an be removed. As you can see, the Mr. Demoss described it as a untuned piano. The only bright spot "wasteland" (as it was called then), in thes cave-like dwelling came was not a popular spot for students from the silver steel doors of the to enjoy.

The "wasteland" of the seventies has become a frequent hang out for Wahington College Students of the eighties.

"The beer was over-

In the beginning, mixers flowing then, the Student Center

The Elm, Pegasus, etc. and that never-ending wall of mailboxes.

In 1980 the big "changeover" occured. The Student Center of long ago would now be known as "The Coffee House", a much cozier name for a more pleasant place to be

As a team, the students and Administration (along with an $80,000 donation from the College) worked and struggled over new plans, rules and regulations for the up and coming "new spot" on campus

Jeff Demoss, together with Sharon Crew (former Assistant Director of the Coffee House), Dave Knowles (Director of Food Services House" what it is today. In 1981 occassion, students have been seen

Washington College could walk was a gathering of friends for and bottles were broken on people's comfortable college student this will notify the server of beer the an un-nerving day of classes. A attractions and an arcade was put in "dreary place filled with as an entertainment center organization offices, such as: SGA, consisting of video games, a pool table and various pin ball machines. AT.V. lounge was added, creating a separate, homelike atmosphere for students to escape their studies for an hour or two. A new bar had been placed to the right of the room where students could find jobs or become a customer to the soft drinks, and sandwiches served. Alcohol has become quite a factor in determining the business flow and student attraction of the Washington College Coffee House. Jeff Demoss stated that alcohol (beer) consumption is regulated strictly to those students of legal age. It used to be that seniors would purchase beer for a freshman, but since the "C-House has become a and decorator of the C-House), and much calmer place in which to Jean Spence (present Assistant) dwell, such instances have not collaborated to make "The Coffee occured. Now, on special

In 1970, a student of were held in the Student Center. It was run by students, fights broke out decorations were placed to create a wearing a colorful plastic bracel. which one is not. Cooperation from all students has been remarkable under the new regulations

"Student input has been the foundation and has been an outstanding factor in the fine upholding standards of The Coffet House, stated Jeff Demoss. He couldn't seem to stress enough just how student participation and backing have made the difference between failure and success. The behind the scenes influence is made uup of working Washington College students. "The C-House services are so highly regarded by Mr. Demoss and the administrative team, that a $500.00 scholarship is given to the best employee regards to his/her working ability to serve others as well as up-holding his/her academic standards of W.C

The "New Student Center"is a place for relaxation, laughing and good times. A place where we can all be ourselves and forget the work for just a little while WCTR:

Yes, Of Course AM Radio Still Exists

by Michele Volansky

If one were to tune the radio to 1530 AM (yes, AM radio still exists) between sunrise and sunset. would find WCTP Chestertown's own radio station.

Mark Smith, disc jockey and especially some of the older ones. director of the news. These four, According to Link, "The music that and weather to medical tips.

The station was established on Flatland Road (on the way to in WCTR bring up Washington Rock Hall) in 1963 and since then College is perhaps one of the most along with several others, bring to we play probably has been heard Chestertown everything from news around the dorms at Washington College."

The fact that those involved

Delaware

Subsequently, the format caters to this need for community that it can extend its broadcasts to information by giving local news fulltime, instead of the sunrise to and weather every hour.

involved in making the public aware affiliation WCTR has with its of area happenings - such as Rock dominant station WCKY in Hall's Fourth of July parade and the Cincinnati, there are problems with upcoming Drug and Alcohol interference. As Taylor explained, Awareness Week (October 21-28), "We hear stations from During the latter, WCTR plans Washington, Baltimore, and interviews and reports in the public Philadelphia and cannot get a clear interest regarding drug and alcohol channel frequency yet for a fulltime broadcasts all of Washington such as WCTR College's home lacrosse games. Acting in the interest of sports, have all had vast experience in the WCTR recently purchased a radio field, yet all wear many hats at satellite receiver which allows for WCTR. All put in to help make the the broadcasts of the University of station a success. Taylor himself Maryland's home football games on has been in the field of radio for Saturdays and the National Football thirty-five years, starting as an League's game of the day on announcer and worked his way up to his present station as owner.

Another service the station offers is the snow closings and the wanted to be in radio, took a class in emergency broadcasting system's broadcasting at the Kent County "beep". For example, during last High School's night adult program. winter's snow storms, WCTR (The high school has its own radio gained special authorization from station, WKHS, which is affiliated the FCC (Federal Communications with WCTR). He joked around one Commission) to begin broadcasting night after volunteering to hours earlier in order to give the announce a local telethon to then information on weather and school part-time job. As he said, "The next closings.

said, "the voice of the area" and is part-time and gradually moved up to responsible for broadcasting program director. The station is an instructions, even if after the regular entry-level job, but when asked broadcasting hours, in the event of about the; possibility of moving to an emergency. With all these another, larger radio station, Link services, WCTR has become the replied, "I don't know. I like it here. station that, according to a recent I like the area." survey, 4500 listeners tune to for have taken over, has been slowly even going as far as offering changing. Along with the purchase Washington College students and of the satellite receiver, the station professors a chance to work at the inside is being remodelled and station or to develop a program modernized. There is, at present, especially for the college. only one studio. However, WCTR opportunity is there," David Taylor is in the process of making another stated, "it is just a matter of room into a studio for interviews organizing something." and in-the-station recordings, which gives the station even more staff seems bright. As Taylor opportunities to bring the area to summed up, "We survive because many more people.

Another change the Taylors hope to see, possibly in February, be some medium from which the theturnover of the reception of news rural public may become aware of from the CNN network to NBC. As the daily events happening in the David Taylor stated, "NBC offers area. (The broadcasting area covers many services and programs which Kent and Queen Anne's counties or could be beneficial to the area. NBC from the Bay Bridge to the has the rights to the 1988 Seoul Sassafrass River and east to the Olympics and aids in our side State line.) format as a sports station. WCTR also looks to the day sunset hours, as it is now. However, The station is heavily with FCC regulations and the station. However, there will always

In addition, the station be a need for even a daylight station

Mr. Taylor and his associates

Link, who from childhood

up-to-the-minute general manager of WCTR about a Monday morning, I was in training WCTR is, as Nancy Landing at WCTR." From that, he began

The area plays a key role in the success of WCTR. It serves the The station, since the Taylors community to the best of its ability,

The future under the present we provide the service."

WCTR Staff: Bringing the news, weather, sports and emergency broadcasts to Chestertown, and the surrounding area the Chestertown, the station is has had three previous owners, important reasons why the station is hall, but filled with some of the including the Taylors, who so special. WCTR is, as David Ost interesting people in the radio purchased it in January of this year. Taylor states, "unique and different disiness. Included is David Taylor, Broadcasting at the time of the because we cater to the local Owner of the station along with purchase was music of the Big Band community." his wife; Nancy Landing, assistant era. Since then, the Taylors and comments the state of the s Mky and program director, and "Lite Adult Contemporary Hits", newspaperandtherefore, there must

He

Advertise in The Elm

Contact Mariella Ruiz

Ext. 321

OLD WHARF INN

Enjoy Waterfront Dining Located at the foot of Cannon Street

> Chestertown, Md. (301) 778-3566 Credit Cards Accepted

Amory Bakory

SPORTS

Shoremen Review

(Season: 2-3-2; MAC 0-1)

The Sho'men captured a 3-1 victory against the Flying Dutchmen of Lebanon Valley College. Team leader in scoring Tom Bowman scored unassisted, with other tallis coming from Frank Garlitz assisted by Bowman, and Steve Attias, with help from Scott Beeler

Saturday, however, the team was shutout in their first MAC contest, 2-0 at Swarthmore. They partially rebounded in a sloppy 2-2 tie Tuesday, which one player said "We had no right even be close. We should have lost 8-0."

Next: home against Albright Saturday at 1:30.

Volleyball

(Season: 6-9; MAC 0-2)

Remaining busy, the Shorewomen lost a three hour marathon against Catholic University 13-15,

Later, competing in a trimatch against Del Tech Stanton and Bergen CC, the W.C. women split, beating Bergen 15-4, 15-9 and drop ping to Del Tech, 5-15, 6-15, 8-15.

Today and tomorrow the Shorewomen will host the Washington College Invitational, where they will compete with Galludet. Salisbury State, Goucher, Shenan doah, and Shephard College. Play starts at 6pm

Cross Country

(Season: 0-6)

Shore runners were outmanned losing 42-15 to Lynchburg and 45-15 to East Carolina. Wenesdays math against Loyola College was cancelled

Saturday, the Sho'men hope to compete away against Drew and Widener Universities

Sports Calendar

October

Field Hockey vs.

Catholic U 4:00 pm, Women's field

Volleyball W.C. Invitational 6:00 pm, C ain Gym

Soccer vs.

Albright 1:30 pm, Kibler Field

Cross Country at Dickenson Invitational

Soccer at Ursinus 3:00 pm

Across the tracks and out of the limelight, for now, Sho'men lax prepares for perhaps another trip to the NCAA Division III championship

Tennis Teams Start Strong

Men Still Undefeated by Fred Wyman

The Washington College mens In Lynchburg, Virginia, the tennis team has continued where it left of last spring - winning So far this fall the Shoremen have racked up lopsided wins over Haverford College, Johns Hopkins, Against MAC rival Haverford,

W.C.'s top six singles players, Larry Gewer, Rich Phoebus, Scott Read, David Marshall Peter Maller, and Jason Hill, were straight set victors. Taking two-time All-American Aleiandro Hernandez's spot at #1singles player, Gewer downed Ford's top man, Bruce Bergue, 6-2,6-1. Freshman Scott Read tripped Yokoyama 6-2, 7-5, while veterans Rich Phoebus, David Marshall, and Pete Maller defeated Marc Linden 6-1, 6-2, Mike Cha, 6-3, 6-1, and Dave Kidd, 6-0, 6-1 respectively Another freshman, Jason Hill, posted his third victory of the season, walloping Nathan Patton 6-1, Outside of the top 6, Bob Shaw rallied to nip Doug Kaufman, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4. Vince Maximo bested Dan Kim, 6-0, 7-5, and Rawson Lizars whipped Doug Johnson 6-2, 6-2.

following their conquest at Haverford, the Shore netmen travalled to Baltimore and blanked another MAC foe, Johns Hopkins, 9-0. Phoebus, Maller, Marshall, and Bill Shaw led Washington to their second win of the fall as the Soremen buried thee homestanding Blue

Filling in for Gewer at #1, Rich Phoebus whipped Ryu Iuai 6-2, 6-0. and Emily Bishop pulled off 5-7, 6-

Scott Read struggled against Jason Shapley but still won in straight sets 6-2, 7-5, Marshall, Maller, and Shaw breezed past their opponents in straight sets, 6-0, 6-2, 6-1, 6-0, and 6-1, 6-2, respectively. In the only three set match of the afternoon, Vince Maximo edged Larry Shanet 6-3, 1-6, 6-3.

The Shoremen capped the week with a convincing 9-0 sweep against the Navy J.V. in Annapolis. Playing #1 again, Phoebus was brilliant in defeating Paul Olin 6-3, 6-3. With Scott Read moved down to #4 in the lineup, Marshall and Maller moved up. Marshall was impressive in defeating Martin Calbreath 6-1. 6-3, while Maller took Gavin Fife 6-3.6-1, read settled after a shaky start feated Jason Hill destroyed Matt Hermstedt 6-3 6-4 In other singles matches freshmen Andre Dries topped Ray Pearson 6-2, 7-6 and Jim Lim, another freshman, sqeaked by Doug Car-penter 6-4, 4-6, 7-5.

to cruise 6-3, 6-0, Remaining unde-

Women Surprise Navv

It was a first and hopefully not a last. Holly Bramble's young women's tennis team defeated the United States Naval Academy for the first time ever in Shorewomen tennis history, 6-3.

The Shorewomen held a 4-2 advantage after singles. Lisane Monforton cruised past Heidi Manley 6-2, 6-2, but the three other victories were nailbiters. Rallying from one set down, Mimi Young

2, 6-2 and 4-6, 6-0, 6-4 wins respec tively. And trailing 2-4 in the final set, Lindsay Tanton took the final four games to pull out a 6-4, 2-6, 6 4 victory over Navy's Amy Hodges After Navy's #3 doubles team cut W.C.'s margin to 4-3, history was made when Bishop and Meg Wheatley defeated Cherly Beddick and Maley in an intense match, 7-6, 6-4. Monforton and Young added "icing to the cake," upsetting Trove Cricket and Rae Ryerson 3-6.6-3, 7-the Middies a milestone, but it also raised the lady netters record to 2-1. Earlier in the week, Washington bowed to Big East power Villanova 9-0 and rebounded in Chestertown, punishing Mt. Vernon in a 8-0 vic-

Sig Volleyball Sunday afternoon the Phi

Sigma Kappa bi-annual volleyball tournament will be held in back of East Hall. The tournament is open for teams consisting of six people. The teams must be co-ed, consisting of at least two people of each sex. The entry fee is $10, and all interested participants should see the president of the Sigs, John Bodnar, in East 203. This year's award to the winners will be a gift certificate to be awarded upon the completion of

The Phi Sigma Volleyball Tournament, a long-running tradition, will run for most of Sunday afternoon and ensures a good time for participants and spectators alike. Last semester's champions are the Theta Chi fraternity, and this year they are out to retain their title.

Crew Regatta Canceled

by Carter Boatner

Last weekend's Regatta scholuled for the Men's and Women' crews in New Jersey was cantele due to a large number of scratche

The women's coach John Wagner was informed of the canto lation by race officials late last Fr day evening. News of the cancele Not only was the triumphs over race dissapointmened by all test

This means that the crew vi not have an opportunity to compo for three weeks. This lack of racing experience is a setback, which me be compensated for by hard with both on and off of the water in the weeks to follow

The men's varsity boat is plan ning to travel up to the Charles Riv in Boston to observe crews comp ing in the prestigious "Head of I Charles Regatta'

The race will take place of Sunday, October 18th. The "He of the Charles Regatta" is red nized as the largest single day of ing event in the World, and display an average of over 30 trants in each race, nearly 1. entrants all totaled. The Washi ton College rowers will be lodge coxswain's Katina Smith's ho which is 30 minutes outside Katina is also trying to proce the use of a boat, possibly in Harvard boathouse, to provide opportunity for the crew to reci some additional practice time? instruction.

Slenderize in Style at the Kent Athletic Club

Beginning this fall the Kent pacity, and for top cardiovascular arhletic Club will see two changes fitness. regarding its aerobic program. In the past only club members were remitted to use the club's aerobic program; however; this month that policy changes. The second new addition to the club is another aerobic instructor.

For a fee of $2.00 to $3.50 per enjoy the aerobic facilities at KAC. past summer. In addition, Wendy Snow, a the club

the Kent County Parks and Recreaion Department last year.

called Slenderize. It was developed states. by her mother, Faye Snow, an aerobics instructor in Cumberland, and down, and stretch cool down. Using his program plus a modified diet, Faye Snow lost 103 pounds. This vogram not only shapes the body ndhelps the user to lose weight, but nuscles groups to full exercise ca- Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday

In addition to teaching aerobics, Wendy Snow is a member of the USA Prime Aerobic Dance Team. She has competed in the Potomac Valley Regional Aerobic Dance Championships in Washington, DC, as well as the National Aerobic Dance Championships last class, non-members will be able to year and San Antonio, Texas this

The Slenderize program is an member of AFFA and an ACS Cer- addition to the aerobic program at tified Professional Aerobic Instruc- the club led by instructor Effi Gretor, will be teaching classes daily at gory, a teacher in the field for approximately seven years. She began as an instructor for the YMCA in Snow has been instructing Towson and at the Cristi Modeling perobics for two years at Aerobic school in Greece before she moved City in Cumberland, Md., and for to the KAC in Chestertown. Her school in Greece before she moved dance background consists of ballet. modern and jazz which she has stud-The program Snow teaches is ied both in Europe and here in the

Gregory and Snow will be consists of all-over body toning, teaching classes for all ages, levels pretching, low impact aerobics, and sizes. There will be a special high impact aerobics, aerobic cool children's class offered Tuesdays and Thursdays at 4:00, and a beginner aerobic class at 6:15 for those just starting out in exercise. A stretch class will be offered Monday and Wednesday mornings at 9:00 also works all of the body's major and there will be high impact classes mornings. Evening classes will be and 7:00 Tuesday and Wednesday. space 778-3148, or stop by at 800 rid of flab forever.

The Kent Athletic Club can help you shed unwanted pounds.

at 5:15 on Monday and Wednesday tered, so call now and reserve your

All classes must be pre-regis- High Street. The first visit is free. Take advantage now, and get

Skiing This Winter Requires Conditioning Now

DEAR READERS: Planng a ski vacation this year? Great. Sking is an exciting, exhilarating stort...if you're prepared. If you're ot, look out. You're an injury looking to happen

If you're going downhill skiing this year, NOW is the time to sart getting ready. Downhill skiing is not a fitness sport. (We'll talk tout cross-country skiing in a fuire column). You have to be in tage before you hit the slopes, or he slopes will hit you. And hurt ou. If you beging your preseason ouditioning program NOW, we gurantee you'll have more fun, re control and fewer injuries. Here are a few tips

REMEMBER, YOU ARE ESPONSIBLE. The majority of faccidents are cause by skier error not hazards on the slope, not lty equipment. The source of the tolem is often fatigue. When i re tired, you use poor judgment.

Need A Job?

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yacht and Country Club

$4.00 an hour

778-6765

remember to have fun!

You ski out of control. You take legs straight, so you need to develop you can. You may be surprised how lift up with your leg straight. Your foolish risks. The best way to build strength in specific positions recardiovascular fitness all year long, there are many simple functional congratulations. If not, it's never exercises you can do on your own. too late to begin. Choose one of the For instance: classic conditioning exercises running, racewalking, cycling, stairs is an excellent leg conditioner swimming, etc. and commit your- for skiing. self to a 30-minute workout, at least 3-4 times a week. Don't try and up onto a 24-inch high box or stable make up for lost time by excercising chair. Make sure you fully extend every day for an hour. You'll burn your knee each time. Build up to 25 out and /or hurt yourself. Don't times or more, three times a week. forget to warm up and cool down before and after you execise. And great exercise for skiers who want to

SKIING SAFER. Don't count on back against the wall and slide down running or cycling to give you all the until your hips and knees aare bent at leg strength you need for skiing. right angles. Then rise up on your Very little skiing is done with the tiptoes. Hold that position as long as endurance and fight fatigue is to be quired by skiing — primarily the in condition before you ski. — semi-squat position. If you have FITNESS FIRST, SKI access to weight machines to build LATER. If you work on your your quadriceps, use them. If not,

- Walking up and down

Try step-ups. Simply step

The 90-90 wall-sit is a build leg strength and improve form and control. Stand with your feet STRONG LEGS MAKE about 18 inches from the wall. Lean and lift by bending your knee to a quickly your body will want to give hip abductor muscles (muscles that up...butholdit...and try and increase lift your leg sideways) can be your time five to ten seconds every strengthened that way, too, by lying on one side and lifting the other leg WEIGHT BOOTS CAN straight up. Again, repeat eight to HELP. You can strengthen your ten times quads at home with a weight boot AGILITY IS IMPORTANT, (available at most sporting goods TOO. Place a 12 to 18-inch high shops). Lie on your back, keep your stack of books on the floor and jump leg straight, and lift as much weight sideways back and forth over it. as you can eight times. Stay with Build up to 25 times or more. It's not that amount until you can lift it 12 easy, but when you hit the slopes, times, then add five to ten pounds. you'll feel a big difference in your Then, do the same thing with your ability to manuever back and forth, knee bent 30 degrees and 45 de- over and around obstacles.

SUMMARY: Start getting ready for skiing NOW. Build leg For your hamstrings (poste-strength (especially the quads) and rior thigh muscles), lie face down work on agility and flexibility. As weeks go by, we'll suggest other ski 90-degree angle and bringing it exercises to help you condition the back down again. Use the same mind as well as the body. Building formula of 8 and 12 repetitions. up your body is important but so is Stay face down to work on your learning to RELAX and CONCENgluteal (buttock) muscles. This time. TRATE

CHECK US OUT

tormal gowns

CINDERELLA

THE FORMAL LOOK YOU'RE AFTER

778-2860

Located in Scotties Shoe Store

High Street Chestertown

ŒWORK |||||

778-6940

High Street, Chestertown Bicycle Repair

Ross, Peugeot Bridgestone

Skateboards Barracuda Goggles Kriptonite Locks Bicycling Shorts

ARTS

Writer's Union Funds Student Publications form of writing ranging from prose etry, is designed to appeal to a wish

Obtaining funding from the Writers' Union in order to publish a magazine is a reasonably uncomplicated process. One must simply submit a letter of proposal detailing the idea for a magazine to the executive board, which chooses whether or not to fund the venture. Some of the considerations for sponsorship are how clearly defined the idea is, as well as the reputation of the editor

But, as Professor Robert Day says, the criteria are not engraved in stone. "This fund is for people who have a wild idea and the audacity to ask for money.

Splinters, edited by Kelly Lamoree and Bill Beckman, is one of the publications making its debut. Lamoree describes the magazine as "primarily, but not purely" satirical, which will divert from the norm by combining style as well as sub stance: "We want to wake people up and get them upset. It's good for them; it gets their blood pressure going, it gets their blood vessels working and expanding, it gets them

Beekman expresses an interest in creating another diversion related to Splinters: "We're hoping to start a 'splinter' group that will meet to discuss our writing in gen-

Splinters is accepting submissions until October 15 of almost any Campus

Erin Murphy and David Healey co-edit the Writer's Floor publication, A Stream Upon Which Houses Are Built to come out lication, A Stream

Calendar

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 9

Film Series: Round Midnight Norman James, 7:30 p.m.

Drama Production: The Fantod Tawes Theatre, 8:00 p.m.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 10

Drama Production: The Fantod

Tawes Theatre, 8:00 p.m.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 11 Film Series: Round Midnight Norman James, 7:30 p.m.

Welcome Reception: Woodrow Wilson Fellow: KateRand Lloyd Literary House, 5-7 p.m.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 12

Film Series: Round Midnight Norman James, 7:30 p.m.

"The Art and Science of Editing Kate Rand Lloyd; Lit. House; Tea. 4 p.m. Talk, 4:30 p.m.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 13 "The Trouble is, The Future Just Isn't What It Used To Be"

Kate Rand Lloyd; Hysnon 8 p.m WEDNESDAY, OCT. 14

"Ethics in Journaism" Kate Rand Lloyd; Talk 4:30 p.m., Alumni

Arts Update

Lloyd Gives Talk

"The Art and Science of at-Large of Working Woman Editing" will be the topic of discus- magazine, and is a noted authority ture is held at the O'Neill Literary Magazine Editors House. Tea is at 4:00 p.m. and the talk is at 4:30 p.m.

Woodrow Wilson Fellow, will be iting and publishing a magazine. giving the talk. Lloyd is the Editor- All are invited to attend.

sion for the Monday Series' Teas on women's interests. She is also a and Talks on October 12. The lec-member of the American Society of Lloyd's lecture will distin-

Kate Rand Lloyd, visiting guish the difference between ed-

League of Women Voters To Sponsor Forum

by Ben Jacobs

On Wednesday, October 14 the League of Women Voters of Kent County will present a forum on Human Needs. The forum will be held in William Smith Hall at 7:15

Addressed will be problems surrounding jobs and housing in the area. After hearing overviews on housing in Kent County by Dr. Davy McCall, and jobs by Dick Goodall, both members of the Washington College faculty, the forum plans to break down into discussion groups. Following the discussion groups the forum will reconvene and each group will summarize the main points it covered. The League of Women Voters hopes to prepare a report identifying problems in the Kent County area and to give possible solutions which will be sent to the State Legislature and poetry to essays and vignettes, audience. According to Hebert, the as well as cartoons. "We want troublemaking people who write,"

The Forum is open to the public. Anybody interested should contact the League of Women Voters of Kent County.

Go. Magazine is a seasonal publication edited by Neal Boulton in collaboration with Bob Haralambakis. Boulton describes the magazine as one which conveys general issues in "different disciplines and subjects," such as music, architecture, fitness, and a department called "Looking In," which may feature some form of prose or poetic tone of the magazine varies from satirical to serious, depending on the material submitted. He admits to a problem when it comes to material Usually no one submits work have to grab people and beg them to write. There's a problem on campus, I think, with people submitting things The MacIntosh PageMaker program as a method of layout has recently become the standard with the newspaper publications on campus. Its popularity is spreading

"We want to wake people up and get them upset. want trouble-making people write."

Wicomico has its own publication. Called A Stream Upon Which Houses Are Built, the magazine is edited by David Healey and Erin Murphy. "The idea is to make it a Murphy. fine arts magazine including theater pieces, poetry, short stories, artwork, and reviews," Healey says.

After a break this semester, Dean Hebert will resume publication of Fallout Shelter. The magazine, which features prose and po-

This year, the Writers' hall in as all of the editors of the magazine funded this year thus far have open for the program in order to form the publications. "It's much easi than hand layouts," according to

> The fund for publishing magazines this year has yet to be depleted Interested potential editors shou submit a letter of proposal outline their ideas to the Writers' Union Board for consideration.

Tour Kent County

sponsored by the Kent County His- the many interesting stops torical Trust will enable students to experience three centuries of Kent. Tickets are $10.00 and will be sold The tour includes 18th, 19th, and in front of Town Hall. Transports 20th century homes and churches tion is also available for those wh throughout Kent County, and three stops at Turner's Creek Historical For further information, call 77 Park. The home of Katherine Hep- 0924

This Saturday a special tour burn, Shepherd's Delight, is one of

The tour begins at 10:00 an make reservations before Saturday

Fiction Contest Information

Fifth Annual Short Story Contest First prize is $500 and publi The English Department of aboldt State University is spon- cation in HSU's literary j soring the Raymond Carver Short Toyon. Second prize will be $19 Story Contest. Deadline for the contest is November 2, 1987. There is an ntry fee of $5.00 and previously ublished or accepted for publicaion submissions will not be acrented

For more information con cerning manuscript requirement contact Jenny Eisberg in the El Office Tuesday and Wednes nights between 7 p.m. and 12 pm or in Reid 100A

National College Poetry Contes

The American Collegiate oets Anthology, International ublications, is sponsoring the Naonal College Poetry Contest for he Fall Concours 1987. The contest s open to all college and university udents desiring to have their poetry anthologized.

Cash prizes will go to the top ve poems: first place, $100; sec and place, $50; third place, $25;

fourth place, $15; and fifth place $10. Awards of free printing ALL accepted manuscripts in a popular anthology, American Co legiate Poets.

Deadline is October 31. R more information, see Jenny B berg in the Elm Office Tuesday Wednesday nights, 7 p.m. p.s. a.m. or in Reid 100A

Floyd Concert Echoes in Philadelphia

Several weekends ago at John F. Kennedy stadium in Philadelphia, I saw what was for many Pink Floyd's long awaited return to the U.S. from a six year absence. However, this tour was tainted, for it was to be performed with one of the founding members absent. Guitarist Rodger Waters absence was caused by increasing tension within the band. During their last album before The Wall tour in 1981, Waters' presence was a constant hinderance to the production efforts of the band. The majority of The Wall was produced without all of the members present in the studio. Each member produced his piece, and after each had completed his part, it was mixed together primarily by Rodger Waters himself. The album was a smash hit, appealing largely to the junior high school and high school crowds.

The album contained several songs dedicated to Syd Barrett, who was forced to leave the band because he was not able to keep his psychadelic jugernaut on track. Barrett is the man primarily responsible for creating the bands 'other worldly' style of music. Pink Floyd's early hit recordings, "See Emily Play" and "Interstellar Overdrive" both appeared on Pink Floyd's first album "Piper At The Gales Of Dawn" (1967) and were written and produced by Barrett.

Once Hollywood received permission to produce a movie based on the music from The Wall it created what was soon to be a box still millions more world wide into the ranks of Pink Floyd's 'fan club. Hollywood also put emphasis on the theme of the receding human spirit which self destructs and ultimately drops out of the human race altogether. This turned me off and drew me away from the band's following two albums. I still, however, rocked on with the band's earlier music The demand for Pink Floyd to tour was outstanding, yet Rodger Waters was a primary obstacle in the band's plans. He always remained the only band member opposed to touring, and in 1981 this was no exception. Although he and the band were able to compromise on its demands and a tour was planned.

there were only to be three shows in the U.S: New York, Chicago, and

Los Angeles The primary reason for this was the extent to which the band went in producing a stage show: When the world tour opened at London's Earl's Court, the extravaganza cost $2 million to produce. and re-established the band's pre eminence as the leader in concert shows. The upcoming Philadelphia show was advertised as "The con cert by which all others shall be judged", and in my opinion it lived up to its expectations I had reservations about shelling out $20 plus dollars for the show; in the back of my mind I wondered if the absence of Rodger Waters, their premier guitarist would detract from the band's performance

These reservations were shortlived when I recalled seeing was fabulous, and played many of Pink Floyd's original hits before an overwhelmingly approving crowd. That, and the fact that Pink Floyd is quite well known for its outstanding light shows provided ample motivation for me

With this in mind I was prepared to wait in line overnight at a D.C. ticket outlet to ensure that I They obviously did not disapprove received good seats for the J.F.K. of Waters' absence.

ow. I was not alone, thank God, perform a show with another band at have ever seen. The stage extended D.C.'s DAR Constitution Hall. He nearly 50 feet off the ground and was loaded with lights. On the backdrop was a large screen which received lasers from the sides of the stadium and also doubled as a video

> The stadium blacked out when the band came on stage at 8:15 p.m. and the crowd reacted with an overwhelming show of approval

The band began their first set

. .the opening notes to "One of These Days" rang out into the Stadium. .

for I enjoyed the company of several other 'Floyd Heads', several of whom saw Pink Floyd perform in the early Seventies

When the show date arrived I packed up and headed to Philadelphia with five friends who were equally anticipating the return of the premier band to the U.S. As our car approached the stadium turnoff we were stopped cold in our tracks: the turnoff was backed up for hundreds of yards and the place was packed with fans. At the same time the winds started to blow and dark clouds moved in. These clouds created a nice 'ceiling' over the stadium. Once inside the parking lot I was certain that my assumptions would prove correct for there was an electric vibrance in the air. Fans came from all over the East coast: I saw a school bus packed with people from Connecticut. I knew that soon I would be experiencing one of the greatest concerts of my life

The absence of Roger Waters was constantly brought up. There was a large crowd of individuals who chose to boycott the band's concert to show disapproval of the band performing without the original guitarist. Heft all of that behind me as I made my way into the stadium

The sight that confronted me was stunning. Before me arose the which lasted for one hour and fifteen minutes, and was comprised solely of material from their new album entitled, A Momentary Lapse Of Reason I must confess to my readers that, in my opinion, this album is not on par with some of the band's previously released material. from the Seventies. The material from this album seems to me to carry on many of the same ominous themes that were first introduced in

The Wall At one point the video screen showed a man rowing along a river, and he suddenly met his untimely death by drowning in the water. His boat, however, continued to float on ahead without him and the musicontinued its eerie drones. This sight, and the accompanying sounds did somewhat disturb my peace of mind. I soon overcame all of this as the show moved on to more positive sights and sounds. I was impressed with the quality of sound, and found myself thoroughly enjoying the music I did not care much for previ-As the first set ended people could be seen leaving the stadium, and this spurred David Gilmour to come out on stage and express his gratitude for the crowd's support Those who stayed were more than

The second set began about 15 minutes later and the crowd erupted in a frenzy as the opening notes to "One Of These Days" rang out into the stadium. David Gilmour took a seat on this tune as it continued in its entirety for a stunning 18 minutes. I, along with the majority of the crowd, heard the beginning of what we all so longed to hear, the Floyd classics.

The second set was comprised entirely of the tunes that I consider to be Pink Floyd's standard. The band continued to play other hits such as "Money", "Time", "Wish You Were Here", "Welcome To The Machine", and "Have a Cigar." Each tune was accompanied by powerful video images of coins, and clocks falling off into space. When the hit "Comfortably Numb" opened up, the crowd drowned out the lyrics of David Gilmour and replaced them with its own collectively voluminous voice

When the band left the stage it appeared that they were going to cut the second set short at about 45 minutes. However, this time deficit was easily compensated for in the encore, which opened with one of my favorites, "Echoes." The encore was concluded with another of my favorites, "Shine On You Crazy Diamond." This tune was performed suffering no absence of its original guitarist, and enhanced by a superb sax

Heft the show certain that the controversy over Roger Waters' absence is a waste of breath. I have a recording of a 1973 Pink Floyd concert at the Hollywood Bowl in California and, in my opinion they were not "on" like they were the night I saw them in Philadelphia.

Pink Floyd is playing four shows at the Capital Center in Landover, Md. on October 19 - 22 (Monday through Thursday). When I last checked, the final two shows were not sold out. If you have been holding out because of Roger Waters' absense, do not be foolish. In the opinion of this writer, the Pink Floyd show remains "The concert by which all others shall be judged."

impressed with the band's second Movie Preview

American Jazz in Paris This weekend, the Washing- trayal of Turner. Newsweek says only the story of a jazz artist, it is on College Film Series will present Bertrand Travernier's acclaimed film Round Midnight.

The film is based on the true ory of Bud Powell, a self-exiled American jazz musician living in Paris during the late 1950's. It shows his relationship with Lester Young, an American admirer who net Powell in Paris and eventually brought him back to the United

Jazz saxophonist and lumiary Dexter Gordon stars as Dale Turner, the expatriate musician Though Gordon is a trained musian, not an actor, he received accodes from the critics for his por-screen with his crumbling hipster grandeur.

French actor François Cluzet plays Francis, Turner's admirer They meet in Paris in 1959 and become friends, or rather, Francis becomes Turner's nurse through several periods of self-destructive alcoholic binges. Turner is the epitome of the tortured artist; tortured and rejected not by others, but by Still, what makes this movie markable is not its plot but its music. Herbie Hancock won an Oscar for his work on the movie's Sunday and Monday nights at 7:30 soundtrack. Round Midnight is not p.m. Admission is $1.00.

that Gordon "totally dominates the story of jazz art. Critic David Aller wrote, "The musical sessions aren just interludes, they're the heart and soul of the movie

In fact, the movie has been compared to a musical composition itself. Newsweek says, "Tavemica is composing his own ballad, bluesy, nocturnal tribute to the gal lantry of the bygone be-bop musi cians." Nevertheless, people who are not well-aquainted with jazz, as well as those who are, will still find much to enjoy in Round Midnight The film will be shown in Norman James Theatre on Friday

Pink Floyd Washes Back Without

Welcome to the Eighties, kids. Gas is cheap and plentiful, Mustangs no longer look like Pintos, and the surest sign that these are the Eighties is the new record from Pink Floyd, A Momentary Lapse of Rea-

Everybody remembers Pink Floyd. Their last album was 1983's The Final Cut. After four years and a lengthy court battle, the band has returned without the screaming apocalyptic prophesies of Roger Waters, who unsuccess-Waters. fully sued the other band members, says, "It's a difference of opinion between myself, Dave Gilmour, and Nick Mason. I feel that Pink Floyd was a band, and we did some very good work together, and it's over, and we should go our seperate ways and do whatever we want to. But the name should be retired," (The Baltimore Sun, Aug. 28, 1987).

Even without Waters to write the lyrics, the record is definitely Pink Floyd. Gilmour provides a powerful guitar backbone, and his voice is softer than Waters' maniacal shricking. Many will recognize his as the soft, somewhat breathy voice from 1973's Dark Side of the Moon.. Gilmour isn't quite the lyricist Waters is, but he does a fair job on the album: "One world, it's a battleground/ One world and they smash it down/ One world ...

The newest release from Pink Floyd, A Momentary Lapse of Reason, is available on Columbia Records.

Only Gilmour and Mason are they look smug! The fourth member start all over again. I went from of the band, Rick Wright, is listed playing 75,000 capacity stadiums with the other studio musicians hired by the band. The reason they look so smug is because they know this album will attract attention.

released two solo albums since 1978, and have toured in the last

"After spending so many years in pictured on the album, and, boy do Pink Floyd, I found it a real drag to > with Pink Floyd to 3,000 seaters as David Gilmour," (Rock Express, No. 113, 1987). The new album takes an anti-

Both Waters and Gilmour have war stance, as Pink Floyd has done ever since "Corporal Clegg" on their second album, A Saucerful of four years. As Gilmour puts it, Secrets. One thing that stands out on the album and grabs the listener, almost as much as Gilmour's bluesbased guitar, is the silence on the album. The huge orchestras used to punctuate the background when Waters was in the band are gone. This is Pink Floyd stripped to the bare bones of rock and roll, and it

Pink Floyd has never really been a band to dance to (not even the compilation album A Collection of Great Dance Songs was very danceable) and most of A Momentary Lapse of Reason is somewhat illsuited to the dance floor. However, this is great music to pop in the tape deck when you want to pull out onto Route 301 and stomp on the petal. As the strong drum beat pulsates and the soulful guitar laments a world pushed to the edge in "One Slip" or Yet Another Movie," you will forget how fast you are going.

A Momentary Lapse of Reason also contains experimental songs, using sampling and electronic effects. With a synthesizer, the band can create the effect of a shakuhachi and echoing whistle-like tone in "Signs of Life." In "A New Machine" the music gives in totally to the silence, and Gilmour sings alone, with no percussion, his synthesized voice mirroring him: "I have always been here/ I have always looked out from behind these eyes/ It feels like more than lifetime/ Feels like more than a life.

There is an overall feeling of tension throughout the album. It has been four years, and the band mem. bers are now in their forties. There have been court battles and tours of small halls. That tension shows, as well as the tension of trying to estab. lish a base for future records without Roger Waters

It is a listenable record, full of lively rhythms and interesting thoughts. The emotion behind the music comes out, and it is a good foundation for Floyd to build on. A Momtary Lapse of Reason lacks the mad vision that created The Wall but in many ways this works to the band's favor. The music is more accessable without Waters' tire some wailings about his childhood Even Waters, in this summer Radio K.A.O.S., has mellowed abit It is doubtful that all of the band members will ever get back to gether, though.

For now, Pink Floyd has made record that is thought provoking and emotional, without the ecces tricities associated with Pink Flord It is a mature album that can b cranked up or played softly, while studying or relaxing. So buy atank ful of gas before the price goes up cruise out onto the highway wil Floyd in the tape deck, and enjoyth Eighties before they're gone

Chestertown Movie Theater

October 9 - 15

or Fri. Sun. 7 8 9 p. co. Back To The Beach 778-1575

"Whoa! . . . Wrong room."

The unfamiliar faces on campus Oct. 16th will be those alumni that have accepted our challenge to return to classes. Please take a minute to is yourselves and to direct anyone that appears lost. Thanks. -Alumni Affairs.

Monday

7:30 p.m.

$1 Admission, Students / Faculty / Staff

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 8

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, October 16, 1987

Success Reflected In Board's Decision

Capital Campaign Moves Into Phase II

dollar goal by one million dollars. the College Board of Trustees last week approved phase II of President Douglas Cater's Capital Campaign for Excellence, extending the goal 17.4 million dollars, over the next 2 years for a total of 43.8 million dol-

The second phase, which provides funds for several new renovation/construction projects and unexpetted expenses from phase I projets, dictates a large portion of funds nised for student and faculty en-

Included in the budgeted facilities to be supported by the funds are: a 2.5 million dollar athletic, allweather field house; 700,000 dollars in renovations to athletic facilities and fields: 200,000 dollars in renovations to Ferguson faculty office building; 500,000 dollars in renovations to Hodson Hall; one million dollars to the renovation of Miller Library; and 500,000 dollars to the renovation of William Smith Hall. In addition, 350,000 dollars will be provided for the computeriration of the card catalog in Miller Library

Three additional endowment funds will be established with accumulated capital from the campaign. A faculty endowment for the enhancement of its benefits and salanes of 5 million dollars will be established as well as an endowment of 3.5 million dollars for students and 600,000 dollars for the Miller

In addition to new facilities and endowments, a percentage of

INSIDE:

| Letters        | . 0 |
|----------------|-----|
| Rodi G         |     |
| Radio Stationp | . 4 |
| Interviewp     | ×   |
| nee            |     |
| Off the Cuffp  | . 6 |
| Alcohol Issuep |     |
| Contrastep.    |     |
| Securityp.     | 11  |
| NHL Preview.p. | 30  |
| Vor. 111       | 70  |
| Vega Albump.   | 14  |
| Cartoonp.      |     |
| - оби          |     |
|                |     |

the phase II funds will cover unex After exceeding a 26.4 million pected expenses from the phase I projects. 303,136 dollars will go to the on-going construction and renovation of the science center while 300,000 more will go to the conversion of the old boiler plant into a Creative Arts Center, President Cater and David Wheelan, vice president for development, explained that several of the construction costs were underestimated in the early planning.

One statistic in conducting such a large scale campaign is the actual cost of the operation. According to Wheelan, the percentage of income generated that goes back into the effort itself in this campaign is less than six percent. This is a low figure, according to Wheelan, who said that a factor of 20-40 percent was not uncommon in profitseeking efforts of comparative size

Phase I of the campaign began in 1984 with the approval of the Board to launch a national campaign to raise 26.4 million dollars to pay for several capital projects, including the construction of the Alonzo Decker Jr. Science Center, the renovation and expansion of Bunting Hall, the conversion of the Boiler Plant into a creative arts studio, and the construction of a student resource center on the northwest side of campus. The co-chairmen of the committee have been Alonzo Decker, chairman of such campaigns as a 100 million dollar capital campaign for Johns Hookins University in Baltimore, and James Price. George Wills serves as the vice-chair of the campaign. Cater met with Decker in the planning stages of the campaign after Decker expressed his desire to end his work in capital fundraising. Cater managed to convince Decker to become involved for only one year, yet Decker is now in his fourth year as co-chairman of the campaign.

"I feel greatly cheered by the Board's enthusiasm," said Cater of the approval of phase II. He feels that the Board's vote reflected the success of phase I, a success which he credits to a number of efforts.

'Phase I was not according to the book," said Wheelan, who explained that contrary to normal capital campaigns, The Development Office first concentrated its efforts nation wide before settling the focus of its efforts on the local area

Wheelan also credited Cater with his approach in expressing the Kids, don't try this at home. Only professionals and WC's John Thomas are qualified.

Committee on Athletics Proposed

standing of what is expected from student athletes and collegiate athletic programs the NCAA has set down guidelines for the establishment of F;aculty Athletic Committees. Geoff Miller, neewly appointed Director of Athletics, has proposed to the Washington College faculty a plan for instituting just such a committee here. The role of collegiate athletics and its relationship to academics has aroused heated debate throughout the coun-According to the NCAA FAR Handbook the Faculty Athletic Committee is, "To represent faculty concerns for the institutions conduct of its intercollegiate athletics program." Miller states that most other institutions have such committees and that it is important that one he established at Washington College in order to promote the idea of college athletics and academics working hand in hand. The committee will consist of faculty and student representatives, as well as the Athletic Director serving on an ex-officio basis. The committee will serve many functions, primarily revieewing the goals of the athletic department and offering reccomendations which will promote the academic interests as well

Miller plans to initiate a system of self-study. He feels that it is a good time to take a look aat the College's athletic program and the Faculty Committee will help in rec-athletes are, and provide recom- students' performance both in the mendations for improvement. In order to gain a better under- Miller says "having the Faculty Committee involved in the selfstudy will give it more credibility and throughness." He also hopes students' involvement will supply the study with a general idea of student reaction, and therefore give more of a concensus to the decisions

The things which will be of significance to the committee will include: breaking down of stereotypes of athletics and athletes at

Washington College; monitoring Sophie's Choice by Tony Caligiuri

On October 28-29, Pulitzer Prize winning author William Styron will be visiting Washington College to speak to faculty and students and will present a reading of excerpts from his most recent novel. Although Styron is most noted for Sophie's Choice (1979) and Confessions of Nat Turner (1967), he is also author of several other works including Lie Down in Darkness (1951), The Long March (1957), Set This House on Fire (1960), and This Ouiet Dust (1982). In addition, Styron wrote In the Clap Shack, a three act play first produced in 1972 and he has contributed to Esquire and The New York as the extra-curricular interests of Review of Books.

After graduating from Duke University in 1947, Styron worked as an associate editor for McGraw-Hill Book Company. Since establishing himself as a writer, he has also become an honorary consultant ognizing what the needs of student in American Letters to the Library college relations office.

classroom and on the playing field making sure eligibility rules are conformed to; and finally evaluating the curriculum of the Physical Education Department: Dean of Students, Elizabeth Baer, says that faculty reception has "in general been very enthusiastic. Most faculty members are in agreement that it is a good idea." She adds "the committee will be valuable in helping make it possible for students to be good in both the classroom and on the playing field." continued on page 4

Author to Visit

of Congress and a fellow of Silliman College and Yale University.

In the past thirty years, Styron has gained an impressive list of literary honors and awards. In 1952, he received honors from the Ameri can Academy of Arts and Letters Prix de Rome for Lie Down in Darkness. In 1968, he received the Pulitzer Prize followed by the Howells Medal of the American Academy of Arts and Letters in 1970, both for The Confessions of Nat Turner. For his work on Sophie's Choice . Styron received the American Book Award and a nomination for the National Book Critics Circle Award in 1980.

While on Campus, Styron will visit classes and be available for participation in several student forums. The highlight of his visit will be a "reading" of excerpts of his material on Thursday, October 29 at 7:30 pm in the Norman James Theater. For more details, contact the

OPINION

Editorial

A Toast To Awareness

In seeing publicity for the upcoming Alcohol Awareness Week, some students joked that they are aware of alcohol, and they like it. Certainly, drinking can enhance an evening, and is a highly visible aspect of college life.

Too often, however, the negative side of alcohol consumption surfaces: fighting, vandalism, drunk driving, even alcoholism. All jokes aside, we must not forget that everyone in the Washington College community - students in particular - are vital to this effort to promote responsible drinking.

Students have been the key to much of the improvement in curbing the alcohol-related fighting that plagued the campus the last year; vandalism, another consequence of overdrinking, is still with us, but appears to be less frequent. Peer pressure, in its most positive form, seems to have driven home the message that it just isn't cool to trash bathrooms.

Student initiative will also be needed to form a campus Alcoholics Anonymous (A.A.) group. This summer the President's Office received a call from an A.A. member in the community passing along the concerns of a Washington College student - a veteran of a rehabilitation program and a confirmed, though recovering, alcoholic - regarding the low numbers of young people at local A.A. meetings

The answer to this lack of peer support is to launch regular A.A. sessions at the College, where there are more young adults than anywhere else in Kent County. Given the size of this institution, it may be difficult to find enough admitted alcoholics, though there are certainly students here with the disease, to start such a group. This possibly could be alleviated by combining A.A. and Al-Anon meetings.

Drunk driving is yet another concern. The idea to keep Miss Dee's open on nights that a band is scheduled in the Coffee House, and the snackbar staff's willingness to do so, is certain commendable. Still, parties that are held outside of the Student Center spawn dozens of students fresh from drinking sprees and faced with the temptation to drive to Smiley's to satiate late-night hunger attacks. Without snackbar hours on those nights, many will yield to their hunger and

We're not suggesting that the snackbar stay open every night a party is scheduled anywhere on campus; the current extension of hours is well appreciated. But some other campus group - perhaps the Student Government Association - might want to take up Dr. Walter Roemer's idea to organize a roster of drivers who would pledge to stay sober a few weekend nights a semester to take their peers on such excursions

It's just a matter of watching out for each other.

Washington College Elm

| Editor                    | comment was not be well |
|---------------------------|-------------------------|
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Kehoe            |
| News Editor               | Tony Caligiuri          |
| Features Editor           | Jennifer M. Harrison    |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekma             |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Jenny Eisber            |
| Photography Editor        |                         |
| Graphis Editor            | Todd Karı               |
| Manage                    |                         |
| Managing Editor           |                         |
| Advertising Manager       | Mariella Ruiz           |
| Circulation Manager       | William Faust           |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the except

Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed columns, con taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editor cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those this are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments.

Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the Limitectures soow over so reas an ancience any and evening prone numbers in the eventthat clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boxes at the cellior fall office or in the Dining Hail, or malted 60 The Elm. Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters become the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be considered for publication in that week's issue.

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Ann-dormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

SOMETHING IS AMISS NOW NORMALLY I'M NOT ONE IN THE KITCHENS OF TO COMPLAIN, BUT WHEN THEY THIS PLACE. PERHAPS BEGIN TO SERVE STRANGE CHUNKY WE COULD USE THEM ORANGE HASHBROWN POTATOES ON FOR PAPER WEIGHTS .. A REGULAR DAILY BASIS ..

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dean's Letter Contrived

To The Editor:

As a senior, I am not only ensconced in the regular work of classes and other college-related activities, but also the burden of fulfilling the requirements of senior obligation. I have no problem with this. Dean Baer, however, believes

Dean Baer is concerned for the well-being of Washington College students. She should be; that is part of her job as Dean of the College. She takes her job seriously, a positive quality and one that I am happy our dean possesses. In fact, Dean Baer takes her job so seriously, is so concerned for students, that she even wrote a letter to all of seniors' parents. Dean Baer sent copies to seniors as well, to ensure us that she is not going behind anyone's back. She lays it all out in the open. Another outstanding quality to have in a dean. My aren't we lucky

That the letter is contrived proves that it is absurd and impru dent. In addressing "Senior Parents." not parents of seniors, but aged parents, Dean Baer refers to their sons and daughters as "your student." My parents have never referred to me as their student. I am their son. This attempt at formal sincerity is ludicrous. Last year, she referred to graduating seniors as children (i.e. "your child"). Thank God she revised the letter.

The second sentence: "Our intent in this letter is to inform you of your student's academic responsibilities this year so that you might election simply should not have offer special support and encouragement to your senior during this time of challenge." Here, Dean Baer refers to graduating seniors, when writing to parents, as "your senior." I can not decide which is worse. These awkward, miserable references demonstrate that Dean Baer has overstepped her bounds in writing this letter.

But she doesn't realize this; she persists in her role as family counselor (i.e. Dean of the College) she urges parents to give "special support...during this time of challenge (our "most difficult and most presume to know what I need and then express this need to my parents but to my parents as well. She then describes to parents what the senior obligation involves, and how, in general steps, students paragraphs, she writes: "Let me hasten to assure you that the great majority of students do successfully complete the Senior Obligation and experience a good and successful year at Washington College." comforting note.

Dean Baer concludes: you have any questions, please feel free to contact your son or daughter's adviser or Assistant Dean Lucille Sansing, who will be happy to speak with you." But do not ask your son or daughter, they are too busy trying to maintain their internal equilibrium to answer any questions. Besides, deans and advisers can speak better for their seniors anyway. Sincerely.

Michael Rudin English

Elections Apology

To The Editor:

This is a very poignant and mbarrassing article to write. However it has to be written. The article is in reference to the Queen Anne's supplemental election which took place on the thirteenth of October. As it is prescribed in the Constitution, only two Senators are to represent Queen Anne dorm. The

It is tough to pin the blame on anyone in particular, therefore the

Need A Job?

taken place

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yacht and Country Club $4.00 an hour 778-6765 rewarding year")." For the Dean to president, vice-president and the elections chairman all accept responsibility for this fiasco. The is condescending, not only to me, election was the result of miscommunication between all three persons and it is regrettable. On behalf of the SGA and ourselves in particular, we wish to fulfill this requirement. After three express our deepest regrets for the trouble we caused the candidates (Heather Jones, Lilli Turgut and Beth Karukas). We thank them for showing concern and taking time out to run. We can only reward their efforts with an apology

T. KARR

Regretfully Richard MacKnight. Jr. SGA President Perry Finney SGA Vice-president Sean Kennedy Elections Chairman

Apology To Floyd Fans

To The Editor:

I wish to at this time apologize for an error I made, and clear up any confusion that may have occured on the part of those who read my article in last week's Elm entitled, "Floyd Echoes In Philadelphia"

In the article I erroneously stated that the absent band member Roger Waters played guitar, and that David Gilmour played bass. This was a careless error on my part, for exactly the opposite is true. once again apologize to the ardeal Pink Floyd fans whom I may have offended

On a more positive note I wish to thank those of you who read my article, and later complimented personally and also those of you who corrected my error

Carter Boatnet

Letters continued on page3

The Elm will not be published next week dueto Fall Weekend.

Committee Would Link Field and Classroom

conversations with Dean Baer, I was surprised to find that there was no recent history of a faculty athletics representative or faculty mmittee involvement with athletics at Washington College. This is a common notel at other institutions. However, when one considers the strong reputation of integniy established by my predecessor Ed Athey, hen it becomes easier to understand why this as not been necessary in the past. In effect, Mr. Athey served as both the director and the faculty representative Why then, you might ask, do you want in see the development of a Faculty Athletic Committee? The answer, I'm afraid, is not hat complex. Put aside the fact that this kind of a committee is one that I'm familiar with and comfortable working with from my expeence at other institutions. Instead, let's Director's position here, and in subsequent College, the students, the faculty, and the Athletic Department in the long run.

A great deal has been written in recent years in reaction to the corruption and NCAA rules violations that seem to pop up with entirely too much regularity in the newspapers and TV media. In response to concerns about these problems, the NCAA has encouraged the involvement of faculty athletics who serve on the committee. I would prefer representatives in the athletic program to "represent faculty concerns for the institution's conduct of its intercollegiate athletics program" (Pg. 5, NCAA Faculty Athletics Representative's Handbook), The committee can provide a link between the classroom and the playing field or arena. Ultimately, it can provide the department with faculty input and provide another means for institutional control of athletics. In more specific terms, the Faculty ments of four faculty members, one from each divi-schedules sion and one at large. In addition, I've recommended that there be three students ment in conducting the NCAA required self that we have one male and one female who have varsity team experience. I would anticipate the committee handling the following responsibilities:

Geoff

1. Provide counsel to the director in

2. Monitor the academic progress of athletes to identify problems if there are any.

what makes up one's liberal arts education Geoff Miller is the Athletic Director of here at the College.

Miller

policy decisions.

3. Assist the director in certifying eligibility of athletes per NCAA require-

Washington College.

5. Assist the president and the depart-

We plan on conducting the self study in the next few months. This may bring about recommendations for change in our department. Considering the fact that I am new to Washington College, I feel that the FAC will be tremendously valuable to me in this process. I am also hopeful that the FAC will help to facilitate communication between the faculty and the department, in this process

cementing the understanding that what we do in athletics is but another vital segment of study of athletics every five years

ISSUE: Does Washington College need a faculty committee on athletics?

Steve "Goose" Goss Senior Annapolis, Md. ould do more damage than good

Amy Vansant Sophomore Cape Hatteras, North Carolina I believe that a faculty committee "Sports are extremely important for morale. We should have a commitcause of their lack of expertise, tee to help increase our athletic ind they would mix their academic programs and athletic supporters."

Sean Armstrong Junior Savanah, Georgia "Sports are an integral part of colle- "Actually, I think they should have "Sure, committees are always giate life. If the faculty would like to form a committee to help strengthen the sports programs, I say, more

Senior Baltimore, Md. a jewelry committee, in which they useful." could appoint me head of all jewelry sales on campus. Remember, this week only - sales on gold, silver, and diamonds "

Freshman Philadelphia, Pa.

by Susan H. Stobbart

terests with the sport itself." Campus Voices

Committee Glut Obscures Real Issues

power to them

So, Washington College is planning classes. These faculty members probably first meeting of the 1987-88 academic year. hiring of a new athletic director, Geoffrey filler, the College is taking new steps to of other quality of athletics here. Even ough these steps are necessary, I would ague that the College does not need to create new faculty committee to monitor athletics.

The issues facing the athletic departnow and in the future will be ones that bey are best prepared to deal with. I would same that an English professor would not be ofamiliar with the problems that the athletic partment does not need a faculty committee thelp it make decisions. I feel that a faculty mittee would only muddle the issues and take it more difficult for the athletic departnent to get things done. The problems facing ac athletic department are best solved by the cople within that department.

It should also be noted that most fac-

Arian Ravanbakhsh

would be able to get volunteers to serve on this committee. Since that is the case, they would have to assign people to serve on this committee. It is a safe bet to assume that the athletic department would want faculty members who partment has to deal with. The athletic are interested in athletics to serve on this committee, as opposed to a faculty member being assigned to fill that committee.

Another thing that should be noted is the attention, or lack thereof, the faculty gives the smaller committees. Sure the College does have some very important and necessary faculty committees. But some committees a should also be noted that most facyou make a safe probably on other commit:

whole. Take for example the Board of Publiland materials required for the example and are also teaching a full schedule of caisons. Last week, the committee held its l such an event. The success of this event also her committee to look into timely issues could not afford the additional constraints on When the meeting started, the chairman and I heing the College. Right now, the focus their time that another committee would cre-were the only two people who took the time to ms to be on the athletic department. With ate. Also, I do not think that the College attend this meeting. (To my knowledge, there are four faculty members on this committee.) I do not mean to embarrass the faculty members on that committee

The current glut of committees on this campus create a situation in which some of the important issues are overlooked or simply not discussed. Until Washington College can get its current committees in order, it should not be looking to create new ones to solve problems that are not of immediate concern

Arian Ravanbakhsh is a junior poli sci major.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR Volleyball Tournament relies heavily on the participation of Wash-

A Success

To The Editor: I would like to extend my gratitude to the Washington College Athletic and Maintenance Departments and to all of the participants and spectators of last weeks volleyball tournament on behalf of the Phi Sigma Kappa

Last weekend it was again time to prepare the semi-annual tournament. semester preparation involves the cooperation of the two departments for the supplies

ington College students We also appreciated the participation of the eight teams and the numerous students who turned out to watch. Campus organizations cannot carry out events such as the volleyball tournament and be successful without help and support of this type from the school and its students. If all ampus events were carried out with this level of cooperation and enthusiasm, we all would enjoy a greater level of fun and success in conjunction with student activities

John Rodnar President, Phi Sigma Kappa

In Brief

Trick-or-Treat

Students interested in diributing candy to local childre luring the Washington College Trick-or-Treating Hour from 5:4 7:15 on Saturday, October : hould contact Andrea Kehoe i Reid 100B (ext. 321). Sign u theers will also be posted on the bulletin boards of each dormitor allway this weekend

The doors of those who sign ip by October 29 will be marke with an orange paper pumpkin o other Halloween symbol. Res lents are also encouraged to deco ate hallways Approximately 200 commi nity children participate in this an nual event first organized by Susa DePasquale ('87) three years ago

Journalism Contest

irst, second and third place wit ers to be selected in each category rizes: First place winner in each ategory receives $20 check ar ward certificate. Second and thir lace winners in each category re eive certificates only Eligibility: Contest open to a tudent enrolled full or part-time a Washington College during th 986-'87 academic year. nust have been published durin he 1986-87 academic year Rules: Each contest may enter i othree samples of his/her writing of hotography in each category. Co may enter directly or b ominated

Deadline: November 2, 1987. A entries due to Mr. Robert Day D'Neill Literary House. Winne will be announced early secon mester at an awards presentation

> Invone interested in writing news articles for The Elm should contact Tony Caligiuri, ext. 321.

by Rachel Smith

The students at Washington College have the right to expect that they will be able to understand their judicial process. After all, it is their system. The source students should be able to turn to, i.e. The Student Handbook, is sometimes unclear. Therefore, the chairmen of the stu dent judicial boards, in cooperation with the Elm staff, will run a weekly feature addressing disciplinary issues or clarifing the "gray-areas" in

The Handbook These areas often have very simple procedures, based on common sense and precedence, which are not explicitly spelled out in the handbook

One of the aspects most unclear in the Handbook is the appeals process. The appeals process, as it appears in the handbook, can be confusing and open to interpreta tion, to say the least. Basically the process runs as follows: the party in question, unhappy with a decision

Student Conduct of the Council(SCC), files for an appeal with the Conduct Screening Board.

The Screening Board's job is to "decide who has the responsibility for the adjudication of each matter in question" (p. 28 Sect B of the Handbook), including the determination of grounds for the appeal. The complaint must be based on an alleged error in the procedures followed (i.e. the tape recorder being turned off during proceedings, a violation of the statute of limitations, and consideration of circuminces irrelevant to the case at hand). Determination of grounds is not a judgment on the decision of the SCC; it is, simply, an analysis of whether or not there are legitimate grounds for complaint. If there are legitimate grounds for complaint then the case is turned over to the All Campus Judiciary for further re-

Our judiciary system is continually being fine-tuned. This process should never completely stop because if it does the system will become rigid. This year what may be a "matter of interpretation" will, next year, be explicitly defined in the Handhook

Judicial Notes WC To Hit The Air Waves

by Greg Hay

Richard MacKnight, presi dent of the Student Government Association (SGA), has been making a serious effort to bring about a student-organized and operated radio station on the Washington College campus

MacKnight says,"The radio station would enhance communication between students, faculty, and the community as well as providing a new social facet to the college.

There are still many aspects of this project that remain unresolved. A signal search is now in progress in California, the national center for organizing a fixed signal position on the radio dial, headed by Richard W. Burden. If a station should develop on this campus, Burden will handle all national FCC

If an FM dial location cannot be found, the only other alternative for a campus radio station is to establish a carrier current. This service would enable campus access to the station through the campus electrical system. However, it would not be transmitted by frequency therefore limiting its distance

Regardless of whether an FM dial location can be found or not, all matters would fall into the hands of Mr. Crompton, the Chief Executive Officer of LPB Inc., founded in 1960 in Frazer, Pennsylvania. This company deals specifically in the manufacturing and application of specialized technologies limited to area AM broadcasting. Crompton would establish the radio station on campus, supplying and installing the equipment According to MacKnight, the cost of a one hundred watt radio station would cost approximately $50,000. No location on campus has yet been considered.

THE HABECK-ZAITZ & ASSO. CIATES FOOD SHOW seemed in strictly to the campus perimeter.

be a real success, last Wednesday evening. Thanks to all the students who participated and filled out the surveys. Its your imput that helps us determine the types of food we serve in the Dining Hall. Next Wednesday, the W.C.D.S. will spotlight DINNER WITH JEFF DE MOSS". The evening's menu will feature Shrimp Stir Fry, Mesquije Beef Ribs, Teriyaki Chicken and Eggplant Parmesan. As of this writing, three more college students have signed up to work for the W.C.D.S., in either the dishroom or on the serving line. This brings the total of college student employees working during the various meals to twelve. I would hope before the semester is over that more of the student body will sign up. If you are interested, contact Mrs. Crew or the Supervisor on Duty

Just a reminder, the last meal before fall break will be lunch on Thrusday. The first meal upon your return will breakfast on Monday.

Well, that's it for this week Enjoy your fall break!!!!! MOM

Capital Campaign Successful alumni on record, at least fifty per-

continued from page 1 needs of W.C. "It's clear that the President has articulated a vision for the college. Josiah Bunting, President of Hampden Sidney College and a member of the Board of Visitors and Governors, in 1983 at the launch of the campaign credited Cater with "an extrodinary record of success in fundraising: perhaps one not matched by any new president of any small college anywhere. Mr. Cater seems able to conjure money from the earth

According to Cater and Wheelan, phase II will follow in the foot steps of phase I with a few directional changes. Wheelan de scribed it as an agressive, grassroots effort which will focus more on alumni and local friends of the college. He said that although Washington College is already ranked 26 in the nation for the amount of money donated each year by alumni, the college is going to be increasingly dependent on alumni to provide funds for capital gifts, those projects that fall outside of the annually budgeted operating costs. According to Wheelan, of the 6,800 ine blood sports."

cent donate to the college annually. Wheelan hopes to see that already impressive statistic go up to sixty percent in the near future. In addition, the campaign will focus more on the local area for support. "We have an enormous number of relatively wealthy people on the Eastern Shore, I don't know where we'd find a greater concentration of them and I think all we've got to do is get to them and excite them and say look, we've got something here, let's make more out of it. I think it can be done." said Decker in 1983 at the beginning of the campaign 'We're excited," said Wheelan about the mood of the development office in the face of a 17 million dollar challange "This is something we've wanted to do for some time," he added.

'I know how many doors we have to go through," said Cater, who added. "We won't pretend it's easy...there are many a weary mile to get there. I've been willing to get right out there." He characterized fundraising as "the last of the genu-

New Committee continued from page 1

The committee will; tackle several pressing issues. One which stands out is the eligibility of studen athletes on Academic Probation According to Miller "there are no rules yet; however this will proba bly be one of the first issues raised. Also to be discussed is the overall performance of athletes. Millersay that if one were to take any 40-50 students at random they would find the same academic problems and achievements that are found on any one athletic team. He hopes to do away with stereotypes about the academic performances of student

Baer is also in agreement and says "often those students who work hard in a sport are further motivaated to work harder in class. Coaches will also be held account able for both the academic and athletic achievements and failures of their athletes.

The Faculty Athletic Committee is as yet a proposal, and will be voted on by the faculty in November Currently the faculty nominating committee, headed by Garry Clarke is deciding on nominees to fill the faculty positions. At the November Faculty meeting it will be decided the number of student represent tives to be chosen and these positions will be filled by the Studen Academic Board later in the fall or in the spring.

In conjunction Miller has established an Athletic Advisory Council on which representitives of each athletic team and the cheerleaders voice their concerns to the Athletic Director. Miller also has tentitive plans to begin an Intramural Advisory Council to gauge student interest in intramurals.

A Message from Gascon's Business Machines

Don't drink, but if you drink ... Don't drive

CHESTERTOWN, MD

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-5 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:30-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD

778-1214

Rt. 213 & 201

ADOPTION

Happily married couple wish to adopt white infant. We will give love, warmth, security. We can help you with medical and legal expenses.

Please call Sue and Ray, collect, 301-567-7967

CHECK US OUT formal gowns for

rental or sale CINDERELLA

THE FORMAL LOOK YOU'RE AFTER

is at Located in Scotties 778-2860 Shoe Store

High Street Chestertown

Interview with Ambassador Carrington

week at Washington College, visitine classes and lecturing on interthe American Ambassador to Senegsl during the Carter Administragon and he served for ten years in years as Regional Director for Af-

Here are some excerps from

Role of Ambassador: The general tuties of an embassador are to be the president's representative in a foreign country and represent the interests of the United States...

shout what is going on in the counry, how the people in the country view the United States, and how we ando things to change that percepion, to improve our relations with the country, and to try to assist sue where there might have been essions between United States and negal is an issue like South Afhink, it is difficult being an embasador of anywhere in Africa..

I think that the Constructive on the beginning because it bases s whole legitimacy upon our abilbrought about change on the part of ers have broken with the governagional affairs. He was formerly South Africa nor did it win us any friends in the rest of Africa who saw our policy as one being an apologist neighboring countries like Zambia toward the South Africans, of prothe Peace Corps in Africa, his last tecting their interests...this has the African National Council, the at interview with ELM editor Bill policy has been especially danger- calling for round table discussions ous in alienating us from black which will lead to a different kind of South African youth who tend to be the most militant in pushing for change in the system, and whereas I can remember when during the Carter Administration that the What you try to do is give as American embassy was often seen been for sanctions. occurate of a picture to Washington as a place of refuge by the South No longer. Now they shun the Ambassador, Ed Perkins.

South Africans are losing faith in the South Africa: I guess that the one United States, in the West in general, and turning their backs on have failed or succeeded is the Affirmative Action: It is necessary doctrine which they see associated wrong test because it is looking at with the United States, like capitalin although in the Carter Adminism and free enterprise, because sution far less than now when, I they see these as strictly being linked with the South African government...They think that this come out and strongly opposes administration is the most pro- aparthied and puts strong pressures have spent this week here, in lookngagement policy, as it has been South African that they've seen so upon the South African government alled, has been a failure almost they've just about given up on the to sit down and negotiate with the United States, which I think in the black leadership in the country

But, generally, the black

And what it did, it neither a lot of white businessmen and othment and, in spite of the government successful so the celebration has ban against doing so, have gone to ended and we've got a lot of civil gration and in which opportunities and Senegal to meet with leaders of undermined our whole African pol- ANC. So you are getting a movement, you are getting more and had the education and the skill and Besides South Africa, the more white voices in that country the training to take advantage of political arrangement, calling for a way to help those who do not have the doors are opened, come in, the release of Nelson Mandela and the skills, who do not have the eduothers who are now in jail there. I don't think that a lot of this would have happened as quickly had it not a new administrations which will have gone on for years.

(N)ow Reagan has just an-Africans who were being attacked. nounced that after one year these fare and all of these stigmas of povsanctions are a failure although one American Embassy, although year is too short of a time to make things are changing with our new that decision, number one, and number two, the sanctions of the lenge of the civil rights movement, past were very mild anyway and, to try to end poverty in this nation, three, I think the test which he is using as to whether the sanctions the one which has gone on before. the South African government as if and that there be a strengthened they are the only actors in the seat.

ing rights, public accomodation cause humans have to change....to rights, and others. These have been try to affirmatively bring about a rights legislation on the books

What has happened is that that legislation has helped mostly pen by itself. It takes affirmative the middle class, mostly those who these new opportunities.

What is needed now is to find cation, who form the great bulk of the poor in this country, to be able to find a way out of that problem so that we do not create in this country a permanent underclass where welerty are visited upon us in one generation unto the next

I think that's the great chaland that's a much harder task than really want to do in life and have a that civil rights advances continue affirmative action program in order I think that it is going to take to try to change situations which

ing at the situation just down here on the Eastern Shore which always in the sixties had a reputation of being a policy friendly toward the there has been a significant move- movement was to get legislation to takes quite a while for patterns to throw them.

society in which there is true inte are opened up to minorities.

And I think that doesn't hapaction, an affirmative reaching out, because people had perceptions of institutions and places. If the doors have been shut for years and then somebody suddenly just says that people aren't going to believe it unless they begin to see real manifestations, real examples, to show that they in fact have been opened. Peace Corps: It is without question the foreign policy initiative most highly regarded overseas .. something that I urge all students graduating college to do before they go over to graduate school, to have this experience. I think it helps you to understand more of what you real satisfaction of having really made an accomiplishment

American Dream: I would like to see the United States be once again regarded by people around the world as a country that really believes in Democracy and does not I have been interested as I use that term as an excuse just to be anti-Soviet, anti-Communist; to have Democracy have a positive meaning; to assist other countries in their development in a positive way; long run is going to do us great harm. Pressures: We've got to no longer almost as bad as Mississippi. This and to stop meddling in the affairs of whichange South Africa by adopt- Sanctions: What has happened give the South Africans dip-very town of Chestertown, from other countries by trying to over-

OPEN HOUSE!

1st 300 Customers Receive A Free Gift From Us

Free Gift Wrap

Free UPS Mailing With Purchase

Fri. - 3 to 8 Sat. - 10 to 3

> FRI. 9 - 9

&

Sat.

Oct.

23 & 24

Free Monograms With Purchase of PJ's, Shirts, Jackets or Sweaters

Free Alterations With Purchase (Men's or Women's)

> Door Prize Given Fri. & Sat.

This is a great time to get a jump on your holiday shopping — Inventory is full, service is at its best. If nothing else, just look around for gift ideas for that special man or lady in your life.

LAY-A-WAY AND GIFT CERTIFICATES ALSO AVAILABLE

Brambles

335 HIGH STREET DOWNTOWN CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620 778-6090

Questing for a Cause?

by Kelly Lamoree

It's been refreshing to note the high spirits and energies that have been channeled to make WC a better place this year. Already, within thesefew short weeks (or so it seems) there has been such a panoply of petitions, letters to the Editor, protests and other such indicators that it seems that people are sitting up and taking notice; better, they're taking notice and doing things about issues they feel uncomfortable with.

One of the more bothy contested topics was Saturday mail. After an evening spent in gentle relaxation, the first thing that most people look forward to doing when they wake on Saturday is going to the mailroom. A veritable stampede sometimes occurs, and the riots and brawls that occur on Saturday morning when waiting is involved in the Quest of Mail are ugly sights indeed, though nothing compared to the heartbreak suffered by most people when they open their box and see it (once again) empty. And think of the heartbreak suffered by those who do recieve mail, but upsetting mail which ruins their whole weekend, not only wrecking their personal lives but infringing upon their academic careers as well. Perhaps the group who supports the opening of the mailroom on Saturdays fail to realize that the college is actually trying to spare them additional sorrow and unhappi-

The strangest causes have been espoused this semseter: talk has been heard of a coalition supporting the removal of all electricity from campus; this group feels that it would encourage the survival instincts of students, as well as providing a more authentic atmosphere in which to learn. Another group wants all seniors to "adopt" a freshman. to sort of take them in hand and show them the ropes. Widespread interest has been noticed among freshman, who feel that having a legal adult watching out for their welfare would be just the thing they need to feel welcome here aggravation. Very few people are aware of just how long it takes or how hard it is to do this, for reasons discussed later. Yet the Yearbook is one of the most talked about issues on campus, one of the few things that most people agree upon.

Commonly heard comments: They should get someone who knows how to take pictures. They should cover more events. The text is inane. It's too thin. It's poorly laid-out.

"They come and come, groups of them ... glee barely hidden as they eagerly reach for their yearbooks...Then the meetings begin."

Every year the same interest groups and psuedo-clubs form, and some of them are as part of the WC experience as May Day or the Birthday Ball. One of these groups is the Charter Yearbook Staff. For the uninformed, Washington College has a Yearbook called the Pegasus.

The Pegasus is published every year, with a supplement. The actual Yearbook, a College publication, is put together during the fall semester, Christmas Break, and the work continues until the first part of February. Events not covered go in the Supplement.

The majority of the photos are taken done by the staff; the entire operation takes a gether lot of time, a lot of work and even more

Too many pictures of the same things or same people...The list is endless, literally,

There is a special organization devoted to the Betterment Of the Yearbook; the Charter Yearbook Staff. This group takes upon itself the awesome responsibilty of scouring the Yearbook, from cover to cover, discovering every single flaw (or what they percieve as flaws) and discussing for hours, really, how it should have been done. What is truly awesome about the charter yearbook staff is that they recieve no funding, have long, long, meetings, receive relatively little hoopla, and they do all of this with little or by the Yearbook staff. All text and layout is knowledge about how a yearbook is put to-

The Charter Yearbook Staff has a membership about 80 times larger than that other staff. They have had reason to convene once again lately, with the distribution of the 1987 Spring Supplement, which details Spring sports, Birthday Ball, and Greek organizations. Lack of funds can cause omission of some of the above, as can apathy on the

As for the Charter Yearbook Staff, their jobs begin when the other staff's ends (Actually the Official staff's work never ends; events are covered right up to the last minute of graduation, the Supplement is done by the Editor in the summer) They come and come, groups of them, to the suite, glee barely hidden as they eagerly reach for their yearbooks or supplements. Then, the meetings part of the organizations.

Most of the campus is involved in this phase of the Yearbook. They spend hours on it. They know it inside and out. It is the Hot Topic of the Week. Yet none of them except, perhaps for three or four people on the Official Yearbook Staff-attend the meetings. Perhaps by now you, the reader, are a bit confused: how can all of these people be so devoted to the Yearbook and vet be so de-

They are Charter Members of the Yearbook Staff. They lie dormant until the Supplements and the actual Pegasus come out, then they go to work. Their job is to find the flaws and talk about them endlessly, Everything from layout to photography to text, these Charter Members are even more important than the Staff, or even the Editor for unlike the staff or the Editor, they know Everything yet never once have worked to the book. They must be applauded for their

This year's Official yearbook staff should meet with the charter staff to find our how to correct all of those glaring flaws Where though? The Pegasus office, former and traditionally in Minta Martin basement was not restored to them when the dom opened. They now operate from a suite it Talbot, certainly ideal circumstances. A right; so go to Miss Dee's. Its not like on would need Norman James Theatre to fit th Official Pegasus staff, since there are about four of them. Refreshments and fancy cater ing are really out of the question unless th charter members wish to provide them, sino the budget for yearbook just covers publish ing expenses and the most minimal of sale

Since the scurrilous actions of a state member several years ago, the Pegasus ha been saddled with a large debt which the have been unable to restitute; there are afters more important things for the Board of Publi cations to do with the monies. How mu more wonderful it looks for the Board if the an advertise for more people to publish mass zines of plant poetry and glossy sugar mag zines of little substance and even less men what's a debt? Certainly, if someone steal your car you should deny yourself a car for ever thereafter; giving money to the indiger is so much more beneficial

By now you are no doubt struck wife we for these beings, these Charter member of the Yearbook Staff, and wonder how you can join their hallowed ranks. It is the media's task to inform, so we shall inform

How to become a Charter Membero the Yearbook Staff: Simple. Do what you'd now. (Nothing)

(For those who are time-conscious though, one might consider actually joining the Official yearbook staff. It takes much less time than to be a charter member, but there are hazards. Meeting deadlines with the nos minimal of staff, learning new skills such as developing film at 4 a.m., and having to put to with the charter members can be a tad bit irritating. After all, if you had actually worked on the yearbook, you could legit mately criticize it. Then, in April, the thil would be gone.)

Of course, for the truly ambitive members of the Charter Yearbook staff, of could apply for funds and start your own. But then, you too would be subject to your chuts staff, and there might be a chain reaction the could end up causing tidal waves and boll UFOs down from the stratosphere. Mo people shy away from the idea of doing pub lications because of the daunting prospect the Charter Staff. Once one has experience it, one truly knows what a slap in the face

Andre Bakery OLD WHARF INN and Coffee Shop

Donuts, French Loaves & Halian Breads
Rolls, Ples, Cookies,
Special Occasion Cakes @ Order Breakfust 5 A.M.-11 A.M nch - Soups & Sandwicks Kent Plaza, Chestertown 778-2228 Non-6at, 5 A.M.-5 P.H Sanday 5 A.M.-2 P.M.

Enjoy Waterfront Dining Located at the foot of Cannon Street Chestertown, Md.

(301) 778-3566 Credit Cards Accepted

Charlie Laura

Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists A & P Parking Lot Chestertown, Maryland 21620

778-4771

SPECIAL ELM SUPPLEMENT

ALCOHOL AWARENESS

ALCOHOL AWARENESS WEEK OCTOBER 19 - 23

College Years Not Too Soon For Alcoholism

Alcohol is as much a symbol of college life as bluebooks or highlighting pens, but that doesn't mean that some students don't find the challenge of social drinking too much to

According to Dr. Walter Roemer of the Counseling Center, a small number of Washington College students are in the early stages of alcoholism. "I've dealt with a few who ned intense help," he said, adding that he believes there are many more here with problems who he has not seen.

He also voiced concern over the alcohol consumption of students at the College in general, saying that he had the personal impression that drinking is heavy. "I'm alarmed at the excesses that I've heard about," he said "I don't like the image that this is a party school." Admitting that the college years are a heavy drinking period in the lives of most people, Roemer said that "testing the limits" of alcohol tolerance is normal: "(In college) a lot of people are beginning to learn how to drink, how to socialize, how not to do stupid

The key to whether such exploratory behavior will lead to alcoholism is whether a pattern develops. "If you have to get drunk to sex, that's a problem. It's the compulsive aspect to it that's scary and self-destructive," he said. The following are typical signs of beginning alcoholism. -Out of control drinking

"(This occurs) when you intend to have only a few (drinks), and end up drunk," explained Roemer -Alcohol interferes with any major aspect of life

Drinking problems frequently affect grades, studying, comprehension of subject natter, relationships, personal growth, and learning how to deal with anxiety and frustra-

- Blackouts

Memory lapses spanning hours of the evening, and not simply passing out, consti-He ablackout, a typical sign of early alcoholim. Often, the individual will awaken somewhere and not know how they got there. Said Roemer, "The first blackout can be a terrifying absolutely terrifying. They don't know if bey did anything wrong or offended any-

An aggressive person might become depressed and extremely emotional, while a decile, friendly person might become hostile and showoff through reckless driving and following:

The window crack'd from side to side: Vandalism is a frequent consequence of problem drinking. This year, however, no alcohol-related fights have occurred at Washington College. "I think we did learn some lessons from last year," said Maureen Kelley McIntire, Dean of Students fighting, Roemer explained. "Alcohol is of the most aggressive drugs we have.

This sign includes a refusal to deal with the alcohol and the natural consequences of drinking behavior. The drinker tends to externalize the problem - blaming authority figures and family members

If left untreated, this progressive dis- sober, one day at a time," he said. ease naturally results in a jail sentence, insanity or premature death, most likely in a car accident, said Roemer. Treatment usually consists of counseling and self-help through such programs as Alcoholics Anonymous, in which groups of recovering alcoholics meet to share experiences. "A.A. is probably the most effective method to help people stay

Washington College's Counseling Center, located in the basement of William Smith Hall, will help students evaluate their drinking practices. Roemer emphasized that all sessions are confidential and non-judgemental: "We're here to help." Appointments can be scheduled by calling extension 289.

WCTR 1530 AM Talk Shows

Kelly: Sheriff's Department.

The WCTR 1530 AM Talk Shows for Drug/Alcohol Abuse Prevention week are 6:30 p.s

scheduled for October 19 through 23, 5:30 to ith a five minute break at 6:00 for the news. The Reverend Glenn Catley of the First United Methodist Church will host the programs. The guest panelists will be the

Tuesday, October 20 Delpha Wright, The Whitsitt Center;

Monday, October 19

Sisk, District Court. Wednesday, October 21

Keith Richardson, Drug and Abuse and member of ToughLove; Christopher Marty Stetson, Chief of Police; Ser- Schanno, Washington College student and geant Bill Bright, State Police; Sergeant Will co-coordinator (with Doug Wantling) of WC's Alcohol Awareness Week.

> Thursday, October 22 Dr. Walter Roemer, psychologist; Dr.

Clavin Offer, Program Coordinator for Drug John, Arrabel, family physician; Ed Baker, and Alcohol Abuse for Publick House; Judge member of Chesapeake College's health and physical education department.

Friday, October 23

Judge Boyer, Circuit Court; Fred Program of Wicomico County Health Depart- Price, State's Attorney; John Cambardella, ment; Judy Bates, Psychiatric nurse, mother Juvenile Services

> If You Hit The Bottle, Don't Hit The Road

Call For Treatment

A.F. Whitsitt Alcoholism Rehabilitation Center

P.O. Box 229, Scheeler Road Chestertown, Md. 21620 (301) 778 - 6404

Publick House Drug / Alcohol Abuse Program

> 100 Morg Neck Road Chestertown, Md. 21620 (301) 778 - 2616

How Much Do You Know About Drinking?

Campuses around the nation during the school year are preparing for the fourth annual 1. Don't drive at National Collegiate Alcohol tailgate party or happy hour is a key measure of how much stu-road.

know this simple but crucial for- you're there. Solid food like cheese mula: The most common servings can slow down the alcohol of beer (12 ounces), wine (5 ounces) absorption rate. If you're throwing and distilled spirits (1 1/4 ounces) a party, serve lots of munchies and contain equal amounts of alcohol. plenty of mixers.

dents know about alcohol consump-

Why is passing the E.A.T. and being part of National Colle- drinking more than you can handle giate Alcohol Awaareness Week so and don't pressure your friends to ;important? To be responsible, keep up with you. Everyone has an everyone needs to know facts, not individual tolerance. Let your myths about alcohol.

Far too many accidents are caused by young people who get Cocktails should contain no more behind the wheel of a car thinking than 1 1/4 ounces of distilled spirits. "I'm fine. I only had a few beers." Such misinformation is all to often ounce serving and a typical serving deadly. Maybe that's why 50% of of beer is 12 ounces. If you're all driving fatalities are caused by mixing your own drink use a shot drunk drivers. And why two-thirds glass to measure the liquor. of all those arrested for DWI "just had a few beers."

1. Don't drive after your next Awaareness Week (October 19-25), whether you've had beer, wine or making ready to test young people distilled spirits. One American dies on their knowledge of alcohol. How in an alcohol-relaated traffic acci-responsible are college students dent every 35 minutes. Better walk about drinking? Passing the an extra mile or spend the night at a Equivalence Aptitude Test (E.A.T.) friend's than risk taking lives on the 2. Eadt something - never drink on an empty stomach. Eat To pass the E.A.T. you must before you go to a party, eat while

> 3. Don't be pushed into friends pace themselves

> 4. Keep a watchful eye: Wine is commonly no more than a 5

5. Know yourself and your mood. If you rarely drink, chugging These common sense college a few beers will affect you faster survival tips may also save lives than it would affect someone who is

Enforcement of Maryland's 21 year old drinking age tightened in the Coffee House with the advent of wristbands for those who have reached legal statu-accustomed to drinking. Your yourself by switching from liquor to depress you further.

dangerous myths about alcohol: Myth #1. You can pace you up if you're drunk. Wrong make you a wet drunk.

mood can also influence the way beer or wine. Wrong, You consume you react to a drink. If you're de- the same amount of alcohol - and pressed over a test, drinking will can get just as drunk - from common servings of beer, wine, and Here are some common and liquor

Myth #2. Coffee can sober again. Coffee may wake you up, but it won't sober you up. If you drink one too many and then have a cup of coffee and drive, you are just a wideawake drunk behind the wheel Also, taking a cold shower won't do the trick either. That's only going to

Washington College Alcohol Awareness Week, Fall 1987

Saturday

October 17 Student teams will be participating in the Kent County "Get Fit, Not Lit" 10K run at 10:00 am. The Student Alcohol Awareness Committee (SAAC) will be serving non-alcoholic mocktails at the Homecoming dance.

October 18 President Cater will be a guest bartender at the Mocktail Party in the Newtowne Pub. Dr. Bonnie Michaelson and Mark S., a student at WC will be holding a discussion on alcoholism and date rape in the Talbot lounge at 7:30 pm.

Monday

A kick-off dinner will be held in Hynson Lounge at 6:00 pm for members of the administration, faculty, student body, and guests from Chestertown. Speakers will include Mr. James McMarty, a local banker, Mr. Chip McLeod, a reporter for the Pilot, and President Cater. (by invitation only)

Tuesday

October 20 A Washington, D.C. based AA group comprised mainly of college students will be holding an open meeting in Queen Anne Lounge at 7:30 pm.

Wednesday

October 21 Chief Stetson of the Chestertown Police, Jerry Roderick of Campus Security, and Mark Frederick of the SCC will be speaking in the Coffee House at 7:30 pm. Discussion will focus on how these organizations will when a campus party becomes out of control.

Thursday

October 22 Representatives from the Drama Department will be putting on an alcohol skit for the students of Kent County High School.

Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk

Moderation Is The Key

As more and more places crackdown on the purchase and consumption of alcoholic beverages, one of the most commonly cited reasons is the behavior of people under the influence. Yet, the answer to the problem of controlling drunken people is not to make it impossible to obtain alcohol, but to learn that to drink is a privilege and that if you overdo it, the privilege will be taken away from you.

There has not been a weekend yet that I have not seen at least fifteen people so drunk that even such a simple task as walking did not come with extreme difficulty. Sure, it was pretty amusing to watch them stagger around the campus, but the next morning, as I waded through the mess left by them I was pretty disgusted

When you think about it, there is really little reason for getting drunk. After all, is the feeling of lying on your bed and feeling as if the bed is spinning faster than earth revolves really that great? No, not really. So why do so many students love to get drunk?

If bed spins aren't the reason that people love to get drunk, what The feeling of losing control over one's body should not be that great of a release to warrant the feeling of losing lunch that quickly follows the bed spins. Besides those reasons for getting drunk, which I feel hardly qualify as legitimate, there really are none drunkeness, "It was an accident. I didn't realize how quickly I would get drunk", is pretty good. But only after the first time you get drunk.

After the second time you should realize how much it takes to get yourself drunk. Yet, If there are no reasons for getting drunk, why is it so common to see drunken people? Peer pressure is one of the most commmonly cited reasons for drunkenness, and with good reason. Think of all the times you have been pressured "into doing shots" or playing quarters. Occasionally giving into such pressure is normal. But if you are getting drunk at every party you go to, perhaps you ough to take a look at yourself and think about why you are getting drunk so

Although the majority of Washington College students probably don't get drunk at every party that they go to, a great deal do. Part of the reason for this is quite possibly the relative lack of nonalcoholic beverages at most allcampus events. If other beverages were available possibly fewer students would be getting drunk

There really is no choice but to put pressure on the adminstration to crack down on alcohol when drunken students are chasing traffic along Route 213. Students being seen publicly drunk are an embarrassment to the school and the town. Of course drinking is going to be frowned upon by the administration if it is seen by every passerby that the College ignores Maryland state laws and allows minors to drink blatantly.

If we make life easy for the The often heard excuse for administration by drinking resposibly and in moderation, the administration won't be so quick to tum off the taps. And that would make all of us happy.

A Drink, Is A Drink, Is A Drink

Can you separate myths and beer as it is with liquor nformation about drinking the facts? On this test, read party and want to pace yourself: opening. Then choose the or endings you think most puly complete each state-Check the answers to see how on were - or how wrong. 1. Typical servings of wine, and liquor: a) contain the same volume b) vary in alcohol content;

() are equal in alcohol Answer: Typical servings amounts of alcohol (c). A few and serving of a 12-ounce ces of liquor, all contain the amount of pure alcohol: 0.5

s. This is Alcohol Equiva-Adrink, is a drink, is a drink. mer what you drink 2. Switching drinks the evening will: a) affect you more strongly aying with one type of

b) have no effect on your Alcohol Content: t) guarantee you'll feel he next morning. Answer: Switching won't wur Blood Alcohol ent (b). med at the same pace, and ing typical servings, switching; your alcohol intake retmay happen, not necessarily stof the alcohol, but because mix of non-alcoholic ingrediof alcohol: a) drink more slowly; b) eat something substane) snack while you drink Answer: Drinking slowly, beforehand, and snacking drink all slow down the of alcohol (a,b, and c). All three are responsible o drink at a party. On the ge, the body needs about one to "burn off" any typical whether wine, beer, or liq-So pace yourself accord-The best retardant to the ion of alcohol into your tream is to eat something tial - preferably food ofst and protein — 15 or 20 is before you drink. Food tion of alcohol. one people think that wine er are foods. Actually, their al value is too small to Eating solid food is just as in when you drink wine or mach will slow the body

Advertise

The Elm

Call Mariella Ruiz, 778-9870

4. If you're going to a

a) drink only liquor; b) moderate the amount you drink;

c) drink only beer or wine Answer: To pace yourself, moderate the amount you drink (b).

liquor, alcohol requires no digestive too much to drink, the best processing. Moments after your solution is to: first sip, alcohol passes through the walls of the stomach and small intestine ge, beer, and liquor contain directly into the bloodstream.. In a your next one more moments, it reaches the brain. go out for some fresh air. tercan of beer, a 5-ounce glass If you take several drinks in one p. and a drink containing I 1/ hour, for example, you'll quickly feel the effects and your Blood Then eat something (a). Alcohol Content will rise above the acceptable level glass of beer, wine or liquor. Thus, never drink fast to catch up when you join a party late. And remem-

"quick ones" of liquor 5. If you think you've had

a) stop drinking and eat something:

b) wait 30 minutes before c) drink black coffee and Answer: If you think

u've drunk too much, stop.

Blood Alcohol Content is a enough time; neither coffee nor about 114 calories, a bottle of regudirect correlation of the amount of fresh air can speed the process. So lar beer about 148, and 1 1/4 ounces alcohol you consume, whether it's a the best thing to do is to drink waater or milk and eat something substantial-and wait it out. Above all. don't attempt to drive: if you want ber, it's just as important not to to go home, get someone reliable to dessert. "chug-a-lug" three beers in quick take you. And next time, remember succession as it is to avoid three to pace yourself.

6. If you're trying to lose a few pounds, or like to watch your weight generally, the best approach to drinking is:

a) swithchg from beer to

b) switch from liquor to c) count your calories.

Answer: If you're watching your weight, count your calories (c).

According to the U.S. De-Only time will solve the partment of Agriculture's measure, problem. A 30-minute wait isn't a five ounce glass of wine contains of spirits, 88 calories. Whatever you choose to drink, the recommended procedure is to trade off the calories with those in a food item such as a Calories from alcohol supply no nutrients except energy. Studies show, however, that this energy, "under conditions of moderate drinking...is essentially the same as that derived from other 7. Labels on beer, wine and liquor:

a) describe the alcohol "proof" of the beverage b) list the alcohol content as a percentage of total volume;

c) vary in the kind of information they give you. Answer: Labels on beer. wine and liquor vary in what they tell you (c).

Don't let your glasses blur your vision.

Whether a glass holds 12 ounces of beer, 5 ounces of wine, or 11/4 ounces of spirits, the alcohol content is the same. It's important to know this because the size and shape of the glass can give people a distorted impression of how much alcohol they're actually drinking.

So when you're out to share some cheer with friends, remember how much alcohol is in your glass and that drinking sensibly lets you hold things in focus

Always keep safe driving within your sight.

A public service message from Will Roger's Institute

PHIL'S FARM MARKET

FLATLAND ROAD (301) 778-1893

MONDAY -THURSDAY, and SUNDAY 7 AM to 12 MIDNIGHT FRIDAY-SATURDAY 7 A.M. TO 1 A.M.

COLD BEER ANYTIME

SOON: Liquor and Wine at Cost

- fresh coffee & donuts - pizza - hot soups - shakes - fast microwave foods - call-in sub orders

A CONVENIENCE STORE FOR ALL YOUR NEEDS HAND-DIPPED ICE CREAM-24 FLAVORS BEST SUBS IN TOWN-SUNDAES-SHAKES-PIZZA

Conveniently Located Just I Mile From Washington College

Don't Drink and Drive

Draining the Pacific With A Teacup

You stand outside your and through glazed eyes, you the world spin around, a moff bottle almost empty in hand. You have no fear bee no one has approached you at this condition yet, except for who share your state. Soon, though, paranoia through your swimming head outside doors; 250 fire on campus are under 21. The major- none of the officers voiced dissatis- guards, however. The choices are two men are the security guards who What does "strictly" mean? happen to be on duty at the time, and if they may seem grossly outnumbered, they were doubly so before the addition of more guards two weeks ago

So how do these men who sibly

Security: enforcing policy to make students responsible and three bright badges, and masses? anot decide which one is real which two are hallucinations.

is arbitrary and violators ber the obeyers."Empty that teacup." e they/he repeat(s), so you put th of the bottle to your lips, ply it down your throat.

The man in front of you in when you are sober all you tobably remember of him is security guard" and all he er be to you is an inconven-

Little do many students id on Friday and Saturday could be Joe Gladu, a math or he may be Earl Taylor, formerly a jailor at Kent against the world."

lightmare unfolds before your carry flashlights and keys as their three swirling brown uni- only weapons control unruly

Patience.

The four security guards of them says, "empty that interviewed cited human relations as the most important factor in their You are in trouble, but you jobs. To fight every problem ento busted, because you are in countered on campus, particularly land; a land where the drink- alchohol violations, Gladu likened to "trying to drain the Pacific with a

Help shortage is not security's only problem, though, and probably not their biggest, either. The giant problem is: a guard hably escort you back home, cannot confidently tell someone that they are violating the alchohol policy, because that "violator" can reply, if his wits are still with him, "What exactly IS the alchohol policy?° If the answer is "you are the same man who they try underage" the student may laugh, point to three hundred people milling about on Kent House's porch, nce leacher at a local middle and he may say, "they are underage and drunk, too. Arrest us all. HA! W.C. dining service worker HA! HA!" And if security tries to do sent employee in General so, they have to fight a majority and franagement ,or Len Th- as Gladu says, "It is not security

According to Student Presently, two men must Handbook print, "Any abuse of asible on weekend nights drinking on this campus or disre-$ 104 acres; 36 buildings gard for the law will be dealt with fire alarm systems; 3000 strictly." The majority of students extinguishers; millions of dollars ity of students also may be found faction with their jobs. worth of goods to be stolen; and 800 intoxicated on weekend nights. No

> At orientation, freshmen were informed that, yes, they will be able to drink so long as they are not caught, and that they will not be

So far this year, the difference between handbook and reality has been harmless, as security dimajor incidents have occured this more problems.

He attributes the relative here to help." peace to "student awareness". Aloversee as many as twelve regis- way, the force will be doubled. tered parties not to mention the Administrative director 'nicer environment here" than at the cooperative. The manpower shortpolice station, though eighty hour

Joe Gladu cited his teachcaught so long as they acted respon- ing experience as a great help in relating to the large numbers he encounters at W.C.

not enforcing regulations or locking ing violations occur. "Policy makes rector Gerald Roderick cites no doors or being a policeman. Instead, effectively dealing with people is year, though he had "anticipated paramount, because he wants "most of rules to point to that does not people to understand that security is require the arrest and prosecution of

So who is here to help though one or two men may have to security? If Gerald Roderick has his enemies to the W.C. population, but

The fate of the security their jobs easier. numerous informal gatherings, system does not rest on the security up to the school administration and the student government, who, mostly intoxicated students. These one has been arrested yet this year. Gerald Roderick said he enjoyed a Gladu states, have not been overly age was brought to their attention workweeks are not uncommon for and more help has been added, but not the doubling that would put two guards on every shift.

The unenforcable alchohol policy discrepancy has not, and probably will not be touched as Half the battle, he says, is long as no controversial or damagpeople responsible" says Thompson. He hopes for a practical set more than half the student body.

The security guards are not still they must find friends to make

WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Alumni Fall Weekend

Friday, October 16th

8:00 - 5:00 Alumni House Open

8:30 - 4:20 Back to School: Can you recall Heisenberg's Uncertainty Principle? Recognize Iambic Pentameter? Do you remember Pizzaburgers? For those that accept the challenge, schedules of classes and topics to be discussed will be mailed in advance. The cafeteria menu will Seventh Annual Athletic Hall of Fame Dinner and Induction: Cocktail reception (cash bar) to be followed by dinner in Hynson Lounge. Reservations are requested in advance ($15 per person) but tickets may be purchased at the door. All are welcome.

Saturday, October 17th

6:00

10:00

9:00 - 4:00 Alumni House Open

9:30 Registration and Eye-Openers: Coffee and Bloody Marys by the tennis courts. Sign up to participate in alumni athletic events, tour the "Rogue's Gallery" (a collage of old and new sports photos) and pick up your Fall Weekend T-shirt.

Alumni Tennis

Alumni Basaball

Picnic Lunch: Five-foot subs will be sliced under the tent by the gym. 11:30 - 1:30 $5 per person includes subs, chips, sodas and dessert. Beer and wine cash har

Alumni Lacrosse Game: Odd vs. Even years

Alumni Crew: Fun races to be organized at the Boat House

4:00 - 6:00 Open and Raw Bars on the Chester River: Oysters, clams, fried chicken wings... at the Hynson Boating Pavilion. $10 per person.

9:00 SGA Homecoming Dance: Pay at the door to Hodson Hall.

October 16th and 17th, 1987

Shoremen Review

Field Hockey

(Season: 5-3; MAC: 1-2) In a major upset, the Shore women upset nationally ranked Catholic University 2-1 demonstrating how far the women have come in a short time.

Scoring for WC were Carole Reece and Erin O'neal, both in the second half.

Next: Saturday, away at Widener Soccer

(Season: 3-4-2; MAC: 0-1) Goalie John Thomas (front page) valiently made twelve saves but the WC offense never got going as they were outshot 20-6 in a losing cause Thursaday against Western Maryland, 2-0.

Rebounding Saturday, the Sho'men tamed the Albright Lions, 4-1. Led by a three goal effort by Scott Beeler, with two assists from scoring leader Tom Bowman and another from Steve Attias, the Sho'men pulled to within a game of .500. Alan Lerch scored the other goal, Tomorrow at Haverford

Volleyball:

(Scason: 10-12; MAC: 1-2) Continuing to improve, the Shorewomen won three of five matches at the Washington College Invitational last week.

The women finished third for the tournament, behind champion Galludet, whom they lost to 10-15, 5-15, and runner-up Salisbury State, who gave there otehr defeat, 11-15, 7-15.

The Shorewomen finished ahead of and beat Shephard College, 15-11, 7-15, 15-11, Gocher College, 15-2, 15-4, and Shenandoah College, 15-11, 15-7 This weekend they travel to Washington, D.C. to compete in the Galludet Tournament. Cross Country

(Season: 0-8; MAC: 0-2) Wednesday, because of insufficient numbers of runners, the Sho'men failed for second time this year to compete in a sched-

They did compete Saturday, however, dropping to MAC competitors Drew University, 48-15, and Widener University, 50-15. The top finisher for WC was freshman Rob Press

Awake before dawn every morning, Crew hopes that their efforts pay off at the Head of the Schuylkill, October 24 in Philadelphia

Gewer Dominates Eastern Regions Leads WC to Second Place Finish at Prestigious Tournament

by Fred Wyman

Sophomore All-American Larry Gewer gained the singles final and teamed with freshman Scott Read to win the doubles title at the Eastern Region Tennis Championships held at Swarthmore College

Sunday The tournament sponsored by Rolex is second in prestige to only the National Championships which are played during the Spring. The top Division II and III players from the northeast participate in the three Gewer reached the championship match of the 64 man draw by upsetting top seeded and nationally ranked (3rd in Division III) Joachim nmer of Rochester University, 6-2, 7-6, in the semifinals.

Using pinpoint passing shots and a strong serve (1 ace, 6 service winners), Gewer took advantage of two service breaks to win the first set. In the second set both All-Americans held serve, forcing a tiehreaker

A service winner, a topspin lob, a great approach shot and incredible down-the-line passing shot gave Gewer a quick 4-0 lead in the breaker," which he eventually took from the ECAC champion and top seed. 7-0, for the match minutes rest, Gewer fought valli- Millersville's Roland Kennedy and antly against the hard hitting 2nd seed Mark Billone of Bloomsburg University. However, the Division II All-Americian was too powerful for the fatigued WC netman. Billone captured the coveted title, winning 6.4 6-2

the first time, Gewer and Read

In doubles, playing together for

Can Gewer lead us to National Champi-served notice that they will be a the three years that they have partandem did not lose a set en route to the finals. Following wins over Playing the finals with only 20 Kevin Glassford, 6-2, 6-2, and power Swarthmore was third.

Jim Besterling, 6-1, 6-4, Gewer and Read knocked off seeded teams in the quarter and semifinals. The WC duo edged Bates College's Paul Gastonguay and Brad Easterbrock, 6-4, 6-4, in the quarters. Gastonguay and Easterbrook were seeded fifth.

In the semifinals Gewer and Read upended the tourney's top seeded team. Roly Lamy and Lance Milner of Bloomsburg University, 6-1, 7-5. It was not until the finals that the Shore netmen lost a set. The upset-minded and unseeded team of Dane Gilbert and Matt Ouigley. also of Bloomsburg, took the match to three sets before falling to the eventual champions, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2,

Aside from Gewer's outstanding performance, as a team the Shoremen had there best showing in serious contender for the Division ticipated in the tournament, Wash-III national title. The lefty-righty ington finished runner-up to defending champion Bloomsburg University, picked to finish sixth in Bloomsburg's Jay Pheasent and Division II. Perennial Division III

> PIP'S DISCOUNT LIQUORS INC. KENT PLAZA

CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620

Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk

Triple Crown Weekend

by Bill Beekman

OK, so the Volleyball didn't win their tournament Nevertheless, the Sho and Shorewomen complete most successful weekend of the thus far, when the Volleyball Hockey, and Soccer teams all tered important wins.

Field Hockey pulled the gest coup, upsetting nine ranked Catholic University last Saturday. The key was it fense, which allowed only shots on net.

For the offense, Carole F scored on a corner pass from Mattews and Erin O'neal com the game-winner. Both goals in the second half.

Completing the triple of weekend, Volleyball won the five games, including one a favored Goucher, to finish the the Washington College tional won by Galludet. And si stormed Albright, behind as triple, a hat trick by forward?

All and all, it was a veryst ful weekend for WC sports.

Sports Calendar

October

Volleyball at Galludet College Tornament

Field Hockey at Widener 11:30 am

Soccer at Haverford 1:30 pm

Field Hockey vs. Lebanon Valley 4:00 pm, Women's fi

Soccer at Widener

3:00 pm

Volleyball tri-make Haverford St. Mary's 7:00 pm, Cain Gyn

Field Hockey at Swarthmore 4:00 pm

Reminder: Alcoholic Beverage are not permitted WC athletic even

Telephone 778-0123

Contact Geoff Miller Ext. 232

WANTED:

Runners for men's cross country team

for remainder of season

Join 4 dedicated young men on the team

xcitement and Flyers Will Prevail

My Arian D. Ravanakhsh

Lace up those skates. those sticks. Hockey seaupon us again Every year, just as baseball is ig down, the fastest team in the world begins. This year ses to be one of the most excitrecent memory. Some teams changed their players. Some have changed coaches the only thing that can be said ssurance is that parity has

hip shots

From last season, I recall the triumphantly around North-Coliseum after winning their Stanley Cup in the last four Jako remember thinking that son's playoffs were some of st exciting games I had ever Against the odds, the Phila-Flyers gave the Oilers seven dclose games that made one er just who would win the veted championship in all of One playoff game stands out all the rest Game Seven, New York Isvs. Washington Capitals. Division Semifinals. They pa 2-2 tie after the regulation nutes of play. I think to that the game will be over he first ten minutes of overay, just as is the pattern in NHL playoff games. Was I These two teams just would it. The game dragged on and nl one just had to wonder if would ever be a winner. At the morning, after 68 minovertime play (to get an idea, ne started at 7:30 and ended 0, in a mostly non-stop sport), er forward Pat LaFontaine ing shot that bounced off of star and behind Capital der Bob Mason. Islanders 2: Washington eliminated. tions.

Anybody who experienced all of that game will remember it for as long as they live. On top of the incredible playoff season last year, Team Canada won the Canada Cup in September by defeating the Soviet Union in a three game set. Those games were considered by many in Canada as the most exciting International games ever played. Two stretched into overtime; all were decided by a mere goal

With this recent background, hit the National Hockey it is obvious as to why the hockey fans in North America are looking ahead to the NHL season that promises to be full of excitement. Here's what to look forward to dominant team over the past five years has been the Edmonton Oilers. The strengths on this team dominate all of the other teams in that diviof the Edmonton Oilers sion. Wayne Gretzky is the greatest player ever in the history of the sport. He alone wins twenty games for the Oilers. Grant Fuhr has proven that he is one of the most underrated goaltenders in the game

> The list of Oiler strengths is endless. It is not difficult to see why they are the dominant team in the league. But they have had their problems. Paul Coffey, the team's star defenseman is holding out. From the team that won the Stanley Cup last year; Randy Gregg, Kent Nilsson, Randy Gregg and Andy Moog have all not returned to the team. Stars Mark Messier and Mike Krushelnyski have sat out all of training camp, only to return to the team just as the season began. Despite all of these problems, Edmonton should be able to repeat as winners of the Smythe division.

This is not to suggest that they will have an easy go at it. Winnipeg and Calgary have added to already solid teams in an effort to overtake the Oilers. The race for the division title will be an interesting one. Winnipeg and Calgary do not have the depth needed to overtake the Oilers. Look for the perennial doormats Los Angeles and Vancouver to maintain their losing tradi-

Campbell Conference, the Norris Division always provides interesting, though often losing, hockey. All of the teams - Chicago, Detroit, Minnnesota, St. Louis, and Toronto - are equally matched and have very similar styles of play. If there is a favorite in this division it might be the Detroit Red Wings, who lost the title on the last day of the season last April. Do not overlook the Minnesota North Stars, however, who have hired 1980 United States Olympic Coach Herb Brooks. He is sure to fire up a team that struggled Moving east, the Adams In the Smythe Division, the Division always promises a struggle. Boston, Buffalo, Hartford, Montreal and Quebec have rivalries that are as old as the sport. Led by a strong front office, the Hartford Whalers will win the division by edging out the perennial favorites, the Montreal Canadiens.

to its worst finish in ten years la

Hartford is just the strongest team in the division. Led by Ron Francis, Sylvain Turgeon, Kevin Dineen, and Ray Ferraro this team is young and solid. Great goaltending from Mike Luit should make the Whalers strong favorites to repeat in the Adams

The most interesting division is the Patrick Division. Home to the New York Islanders, New York Rangers, New Jersey Devils, Pittsburgh Penguins, Philadelphia Flyers, and the Washington Capitals, these teams compete competitively all season long

If Washington avoids its yearly slow start, they should battle Philadelphia all season long for first place. These teams represent the elite in the division and in the sport (outside of Edmonton). New York will battle New York for third. Finally Pittsburgh, led by superstar Mario Lemieux, should keep things interesting. I hate to say it, but the Flyers should be able to win the to 5-1

In the playoffs, this just might be the year for the Flyers to Bishop also conwin it all, but only time will tell. One thing is absolute: it will be an excit-team scoring. Aling year for all hockey fans.

Athlete of the Week

Beeler did just that, achieving a "hat trick" in the Sho'mens 4-1 win over Albright. One of his scoring shots was a header over the Albright keeper's head. Beeler is a senior English major ver easy. But last Saturday Scott from Westminster, Maryland. Last year he studied at Manchester College at Oxford University On his achievement, Beeler said that it was a team effort. "I had the easy job in scoring. My teammates had the harder job in making such nice passes. When you get the ball in front of the net, it's easy to score. It's getting the ball in front of the net that's the hard part."

Scott Beeler

Young Captures Catholic Title

by Fred Wyman Freshman Mimi Young won her first intercollegiate tennis title Saturday at Catholic University. Young defeated Kelsey Shivereck of Sweet Briar College, 6-4, 5-7, 7-6, to capture the Catholic University Invitational #1 singles championship. Her triumph paced the Shorewomen to a third place reach the #2 doubles final. finish in the two day event. Sweet Brian took the Champion ship, edging host Catholic Univer-

In the first round Young rolled easily, defeating Tracey Watson of Christopher Newport College, and then rallied to oust Catholic's Dana Dowd of Catholic 1-6, 6-3, 7-5, to reach the finals. The victories improved Young's fall record

Lindsay Tanton and Emily tributed to WC's though Tanton dropped her first round match on Friday, she won two important consolation matches before dropping to Gretchen Geitner of Catholic in the consolation finals.

Bishop, continuing to play aggressively yet with poise, reached the finals of the #2 singles flight and also teamed with Meg Wheatley to

Freshman Mimi Young, 5-1, has sparked the Women's Tennis team this year. Saturday at Catholic Univetsity, she won het first intercollegiate tournament

KEEP YOUR SUMMER TAN WITH OUR SUNTANA SUN SYSTEM

at

EMILY HAIRDRESSER

Rt. 213 across from Bowling Lanes

Complete line of REDKEN & PAUL MITCHELL Full Service Salon

Don't Drink and Drive

Call 778-2686

Stam Drug Co.

215 High Street Chestertown. Maryland

778-3030

- · Greeting Cards
- Cosmetics
- Russell Stover
- Candy • Soda Fountain

Styron t

His Worl

William Styron, best-g

Among the acti-

Recently, Styron's wa

Read Fro

award-winning author, will

Washington College Wech

October 28, and will stay us planned for the author of such as Sophie's Choice, The C sions of Nat Turner and The March, is a reception at the Li

House on Wednesday, and an appeared in such publication

Esquire, and he will read for newest work. Styron is a ma

American fiction, whose wa

been made into films and app

in the most reputable litera ate, but accessible. He is write while being intelligent, is a standable to most of the pop

Everyone is encouraged to

Dr. Davy McCall, speaker

Literary House; Tea, 4:00pi

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 26

Lecture: People in Power.

Gary Ruchwarger, speaker

Hynson Lounge, 7:30 p.m.

these functions

Talk, 4:30 p.m.

His style is not only pa views and magazines.

on Thursday.

Mona Lisa Is a Hooker

George, is a tough-talking, shorttempered mobster who takes his day nights at 7:30 p.m. manhood seriously. Beneath his really a softie

The movie deals with George's odd relationship with Simone, a hooker he describes as a "black tart." His mob assignment is advertising executive, discovers to drive Simone to her various highpaying jobs. At first, George is cool and sarcastic with Simone, but she's a streetwise, hardened woman who's heard it all before and is unimpresed with Gearge's manner and mode of dress

George eventually falls in love with Simone and her combination of bluntness and elegance. He clarifies his feelings to his friend Thomas, who says, "I thought you said she was a tart." George replies, "She is, but she's also a lady.

George embarks on what he regards as his quest when Simone asks him to find Cathy, a teenage prostitute who was her only friend in the days when she still walked the

Vincent Canby of the New York Times writes, "It's as smooth and distinctive as the old Nat (King) Cole recording of the song. . . It's also got high style."

The film stars Bob Haskins as George, Cathy Tyson as Simone, Michael Caine as Mortwell, the directed by Neil Jordan seedy London. Its main character, James Theatre beginning Friday, October 16, and Sunday and Mon-steel exterior, however, George is 25, 26 and 27, Men will be shown. Directed and written by Doris Dorrie, Men is in German with English

Men opens when Julius, an that his wife, Paula, is having an affair with Stefan, a mindless, softhearted man who still lives in the 1960's. When Stefan advertises a room for rent, Julius (who's been tailing Stefan furtively) takes it. Thus begins Dorrie's comedy of male bonding and sexual competition. Julius dismisses Stefan as a nothing, telling him, vou're lifeless, weak, boring, a failure." But, of course, this "failure" has lured Julius' wife away. Working on the theory that if you can't beat them, persuade them, Julius plots to win his wife back by making Stefan into a businessman

"Men snaps right along, abounding in lively incidents and wicked little jabs at men's stock attitudes about women," Walter Goodman writes

Men stars Heiner Lauterbach Julius Armbrust, Uwe Ochsenknecht as Stefan Lachner. and Ulrika Kriener as Paula

Both Mona Lisa and Men are chief of a band of pimps, and Robbie part of the Washington College Coltrane as Thomas. Mona Lisa is Film Series. Admission is $1.00 for

Arts Update

Get ready for a satirical night There will be a very short presenta-

Champagne and chocolate cake will be served during the reading. Every one is welcome to come has increased on campus during the another's work, or simply to come

Literary Editors Announced

The Writer's Union's has student Submissions to Broadsides announced this year's editors for its can be made through the Broadsides two longest running publications, mailbox in the Literary House or by Broadsides and The Washington sending them through campus mail College Review

The editor-in-chief of the Broadsides comes out every

2 weeks, with each Broadsides Orient/Far East. Projected issue featuring the poem of a particular date is mid-January

Campus Calendar

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 16

Film Series: Mona I.Isa Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m.

Satire Reading: "Satire in Cham pagne" Lit House, 7:00 p.m.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 17

SGA Homecoming Dance

Monday Series: Impressions From a Visit to China

Campus Paperback Bestsellers

Red Storm Rising, by Tom Clancy (Berkley, $4.95.) Russians plan a major assault on the West.

Wanderlust, by Danielle Steet (Dell, $4.95.) Romance of a young woman's world-wide advent

A Matter of Honor, by Jeffrey Archer (Pocket, $4.95.) International thnils and Intriques.

Act of Will, by Barbara Taylor Bradford (Bantam, $4.95). The lives of ambitious women spanning three generations

Hollywood Husbands, by Jackie Collins. [Pocket $4.95.] Ni York model's encounters with Los Angeles' most dynamic m

New & Recommended

th Killing Time, by Kinky Friedman. (Berkley, $3.50.) se is found holding pink roses. Suspects are as strange as and the detective is a country singer named Kinky Friedman

It, by Stephen King, (NAL/Signet, $4.95.) Childhood horrors haunt six men and women who lived in a Maine town. The Road Less Traveled, by Scott Peck. (Touchstone, $8.95.) Psychological and spiritual inspiration by a psychiatrist.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBES William James Forum

The Religious Roots of the O titution

Dr. Colin Williams, speaker MONDAY, OCTOBER M

Film Series: Men

Norman James Theatre, 7:30

Monday Series: The Indist Sources of a Game Called la

Karen Smith, speaker Literary House Tea, 4:00 p.m., Talk, 4:30 pl

TUESDAY, OCTOBER

Film Series: Men Norman James Theatre, 13

WEDNESDAY, OCTORS

Sophie Kerr Lecture Series

Michel Foucault Paul Bove, speaker Sophie Kerr Room, 8:00 pa THURSDAY, OCTOBER!

Reading: William Styron Norman James Theatre, 7:30

Reading in Satire

at the Literary House, for tonight at 7:00 p.m. Kelly Lamoree will be hosting "Satire in Champagne," a reading of satire. The reading will be held in the Grotto (basement) of the Literary House. This reading will be "reflect-The following week, October ing the growing interest in satire that and share his work of satire, or read day October 30.

explains Lamoree, and listen.

tion on what satire is: the definition of satire will be read, afterwards a light discussion is to be held, questions answered.

to Jennifer Harrison

The editors of the WCR for the year will be senior Michael

Murphy and Alison Auber. The

WCR is currently soliciting work;

submit poetry, fiction, book reviews, artwork to Kathy Wagner in the O'Neill Literary House. The deadline is Friday November 20.

The focus for the first issue is on the Broadsides series for this year is sophomore Jennifer Harrison. Har- Rudin, and sophomores Erin rison was a freshman editor last year. The two freshman editors will be Susan Di Leo and Tim Madison. They will work until mid-February, when two new freshman editors will

> Band: The Deal Hodson Hall, 9:00 p.m. $6.00 per person

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 18

Film Series: Mona Lisa Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Grassroots Democracy in No.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 19

Film Series: Mona Lisa Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m.

Standing, Suzanne Vega's latest album revivew folk music s it with today's popular music. It is available on A&M

Vega Updates Folk Music

Suzanne Vega's Solitude Standing, is extraordinary enough for her to memory/ As long as you were still after it has already been hailed a stand out from the crowd, and she alive.' success and has also found a popular stands well on her own. niche on the album charts, makes it and be willing to buy her music.

Despite the relatively poor wrong direction. sales of Vega's debut album, A&M star. They achieved their goal.

Solitude Standing is a sucsong that has become known even better that Vega's name.

So A&M achieved its pur- fied version of folk music. pose, which is to make money. In person and the image are very much

Vega is a mysterious looking ways thoughtful and intriguing. woman, resembling very much the typical folk balladeer of the Sixties. more interesting compositions: "If the innovative to become common-She writes thought provoking lyr-difficult to distinguish between the longer standing on her own. Joined malist narrative of the a capella album and its hype. Before Vega's by the glitzy-sounding Vega Band, latest was released, there was an the sound of the music on this newer "Solitude Standing", the sensitivity onslaught of publicity that aimed to album is very much more of a group make the public know Vega's name sound than on the first. Unfortunately, that may be a step in the Solitude Standing sounds as Records was certain that her if it has been too well polished, too lyrics, however, is the most successpseudo-folk music was the perfect skillfully produced. The lushness of ful single. "Luka" is a cliched tale of vehicle on which to build a new pop some of the pop/folk songs is at odds Vega would be more at home, and well of culture pertaining to the iscess in every musical sense of the probably more powerful an artist, if sue. Instead, the song is boring; the word. It has maintained a strong she stayed closer to her roots. The message has already been said bestatus on the album charts. It is minumal sound of American folk hailed by critics as an intriguing, in- would also benefit Vega's voice, novative album, both musically and which is sometimes too flat and lyrically, and the album yields a hit dull, especially on such songs as music it is said to be signifying. It is "Luka" and "Solitude Standing."

the middle of all this plotting was when her music seems too fake, is the person behind the image, her lyrics. She is truly an accom-Suzanne Vega. In this case, how- plished poet; she strings words tounasuming, but they evoke a response from the listener that is al-

you were to kill me now right here/

Reviewing an album such as esting on this album as on her first, And I would burn myself into your

The lyrical portrait of the With this album she is no inner city in "Ironbound", the mini-"Tom's Diner", the metaphor of of "Language", as well as most of the other songs, are some of the finest examples of poetry in popular music today.

The least successful set of an abused child. Vega adds nothing with what vibrant folk should be. of interest to the already established fore just as well or better

Solitude Standing is the most notable in the revival of the folk going to be hard for Vega is to What Vega is offering is a Yuppi- continue releasing music that meets the same modicum of excellence; What always redeems Vega her odd combination of pop and folk music can only go so far before it returns to one of the original genres.

Though this album will ever, it may be true to say that the gether that are simple and probably remain one of Vega's significant albums, the next one will be more significant; if she continues in the same way, she can only burn "In the Eye" is one of her herself out. It doesn't take long for place

hestertown Movie Theater

Stakeout Oct. 16 - 22

778-1575

iter faces on campus Oct. 16th will be those alumni that have a challenge to return to classes. Please take a minute to introduce and to discover the control of the contro and to direct anyone that appears lost. Thanks. -Alumni Affairs.

BOB HOSKINS · ACADEMY AWARD NOMINEE · BEST ACTOR

NORMAN ARREST AND THE COLOR "THE ROOM" THE ROOMS "THING LIGHT AND THE COLOR "THE COLOR " STERREN WIDERY " MARIOX CASSAVETIC ... NET JIROM ......

R HESTRICTED ST

THEATER.

7:30 p.m.

Friday Sunday

Monday

WILLIAM STYRON IS COMING

Lie Down In Darkness 1951 The Long March 1953 Set This House On Fire 1960 The Confessions of Nat Turner 1967 In The Clap Shack 1973 Sophie's Choice 1979

This Quiet Dust 1982

American Academy of Arts and Letters Prix de Rome, 1952 Pulitzer Prize, 1968 American Academy of Arts and Letters Howell's Medal, 1970 American Book Award, 1980

"A Reading" October 29, 1987 Norman James Theatre 8:00 p.m.

WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Chestertown, MD 21620

U. S. Post PAID
Non-Profit
Chestertow
Permith

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 9

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, October 30, 1987

Cater Testifies before Congressional Panel

Argues against Board of Education findings

By Tony Caligiuri

en involvoled in an ongoing pubdiscation and the merits of higher mo major newspapers and testineny before a Congressional louse sub-committee on Higher

thich charged that colleges are "not anett said. "increases in financial if in recent years have enabled olleges and universities to blitherly ise their tuitions, confident that deral loan subsidies would help shion the increase In a March 16 New York

ted?", Cater asks, "Why are we ashing the accumulations of our red!" Using Washington College

acase study, Cater points out that ion is determined after all other uces of income for the college are esidered. These sources of intte do not include Guaranteed

ods the GSL program by pointing that it provides a better opportu-

by to receive a high quality educadespite financial limitations of lestudents. He finds more fault og in the collection methods

loyed by the government than

The House sub-committee

asse of the attention raised by a

Animent of Education report

tltd "Estimating the Cost of a actor's Degree: An Institu-alCost Analysis" by Dr. Duc-Le teld hearings to investigate ristollege costs. The congresalpanel invited Chester E. Finn, last secretary of education for each and improvement; four ther knowledgeable guests.

During the hearings, Finn eded that his department's has clearly stated methologi-limitations and data con-

lo Secretary Bennett:

In response to a New York straints," yet made the observation times editorial by national Secre- that, "one reason for the staggerary of Education William J. Ben- ingly high default rate on federally ell, president Douglas Cater has guaranteed student loans may be that some students arrive on campus ic debate over the cost of a college and find that they aren't getting value for their money; and accorddication involving editorials in ingly they may feel less obligated to repay those who advanced them tuition money."

Cater, although not able to On February 18, 1987, Ben- hear the complete testimony of the stwrote a New York Times edito- other invited college presidents. understood that president Bowen of Princeton University was in agreesterfunded, but are unaccountable ment with Cater's remarks while the dunderproductive," In addition, president of York College, also present, charged college administrations with the task of cutting costs "to the bone". In the face of this charge Cater responded by questioning the quality of a college with operations cut down to the bare minimum, "We've got a budget mes editorial by Cater entitled committee that monitors us every tight budget" said Cater who added, "If I had to cut a great wack out of costs at Washington College, I don't know where I would do it. Salaries for both faculty and for maintenance workers not adequate. We don't live a very plush life here.' Cater said that the hearing udent Loans (GSL). Cater de- did give college presidents a chance to respond to the charges by Bennett, something that, according to Cater, Bennett did not do in his investigation. "Bennett doesn't believe in speaking to college presidents, he believes in lecturing them. He thinks it's his job to tell us how to

In general, Cater charged post-secondary education, in part that the investigation of the Department of Education was "not only unreadable, but somewhat mystifying" and added that in his opinion most of the invited guests as well as the panel did not clearly understand the point of the investigation. He said that in addition, a piece such as Bennett's estimating the cost of a Bachelor's degree was not credible because it is impossible to compare to presidents, including Cater; degrees obtained from the diverse types of college and universities.

> In his original response in the Times to Bennett's editorial, Cater invited government officials to re-first

Students Caught the last hint of summer this week with a few days of warm weather.

Dean Baer Plans Trip To Europe

by Marie Ensor

Elizabeth Baer, Dean of the United States on November 28 College will be visiting Furope in November. Dean Baer will visit Manchester College, Oxford to meet with junior study abroad students. "I want to make sure Washington College students are getting the best experience possible at Manchester," commented Dean

Washington College has had a long standing association with Manchester College since 1960. By this special arrangement, Washington college has the opportunity of sending several junior students each year to Manchester College, Oxford. Students abroad study British history, English literature, music, politics, or philosophy and religion. Lectures, libraries, athletic facilities, and student societies in the University of Oxford are open for study abroad studen

This will be Dean Baer's first visit to Europe. She will be leaving on November 8 and returning to the will be attending lectures and meeting with her counterpart at Manchof the study abroad program. Dean Baer will also visit the 6 Washington College study abroad students. Mona Brinkley, Thea Isabella Bournazian, Thomas Conaty, IV, Bruce Danner, Harvey Hammer II, and Ann Hoyt are this year's study abroad students attending Manchester College

After visiting Oxford, Dean Baer will travel to Scotland where she will visit St. Andrews College. Her goal is to set up a formal study abroad program with St. Andrew. They have definitely shown interest in working with Washington College to esstablish a program," added Dean Baer.

Dean Baer will then travel down to France, where she will be attending the European Council of Paris. The purpose of this confer-While in Europe, Dean Baer ence is to meet with guidance counselors and headmasters of secondary schools in Europe. This will ester College to discuss the progress aide in the recruitment proocess for Washington College

"The focuses of the Dean's office is to review, expand, augment the Junior Year Abroad Program, ' commented Dean Baer. The Dean is about the study abroad program. "I never had the chance to study in a foreign country; I believe it would have been a very beneficial opportunity," Said Dean Baer.

Courses like history of art, history of music, and foreign languages will better prepare students

In recent years, Washington College students have studied for

Registration System Changes

Course registration for the second semester will take a twist this year. Instead of waiting in line at the Registrar's office to have schedule cards entered in the computer, students will go to an "arena, with all faculty members present, to sign up directly with each depart-

The arena registration proposal was passed by the faculty at its October meeting. Time and place of the arena will be set by Dean Elizabeth Baer and Registrar David Butters: students will be admitted by class, with upperclassmen going

Registration for the freshman class this fall, held using the arena system, was term "fast and efficient" by Butters. He cited the advantage of face-to-face negogiations between students and professors, which frequently results in faculty overriding enrollment limits to allow a few additional students who need a certain course in. "In the arena everyone's there and little problems can be taken care of," he said, pointing out that freshman registration was completed in about Butters said the arena does place an administrative burden on said. continued on page 4

an hour and a half

Performance Arts Class.....p.4 Kitty Knight ..... p.6 Weekend Section.....p.7 Crew Race.....p.10 Album Review..p.11 Campus Calender.....p. 12 Editorial

Sense And Censorship

WC's grapevine has it that The Collegian, The Elm's monthly magazine, has been censored. We'd like to put this rumor to rest.

The issue of The Collegian that readers will see distributed on campus today contains no editorial changes made by anyone other than the editor of that publication. Any story to the contrary no doubt stems from the fact that the monthly is funded in part by the Admissions Office

The Collegian's printing costs are met by advertising revenues and by a $150 stipend from Admissions per issue, giving that office the right to send copies to prospective students. If the Admissions Office mails out the October edition, they might choose to replace an article in which a former WC student details her reasons for transferring with one published earlier in which a freshman describes her reasons for enrolling here

This alteration would occur, if indeed it does occur, only in those particular versions of The Collegian mailed to prospective students - not in the magazines distributed around campus. Editorial control remains in the hands of the editor

As a branch of The Elm, the monthly depends on the newspaper for equipment and to cover any expenses it does meet with advertising monies and with the stipend, though the two publications retain separate staffs and separate editorial policies. The Collegian's financial arrangement with the Admissions Office is made necessary because the magazine itself is not officially funded by the College.

Desktop publishing has freed The Collegian from the scrutiny of typesetters who refused to print phrases they found offensive, such as "get laid," as was the case last semester. The Elm objected to the censorship then, and would again, if such an attempt were made Stories that the magazine has been censored are just that - stories.

Journalism Contest

Entries for the O'NeiH Literary House journalism contest are due to Professor Robert Day next Monday, November 2. All work in six judging categories - news, editorial, features, arts / entertainment, sports and photography - published during the 1986-87 academic year is eligible. The contest is open to any student enrolled full or part time at Washington College last year.

First, second and third place winners will be selected in each category by apanel of professional journalists to be selected by Day. Winners will be announced at an awards ceremony to be held early in the second semester

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Trees Or Teachers?

To The Editor:

Every once in a while you see something that really makes you wonder, this happened to me the other day when I was reading The Elm. It seems as though that out of thirty comparative institutions, W.C. ranks dead last in teacher pay What is one to gather from this? That the school does not care about what quality of faculty it hires? That the school is cheap? That the cost of living is low on the Eastern Shore? I think, to some extent, that all of these can be gathered.

The problem is only exacerbated when account is taken of the cosmetic rejuvenation that is occuring on the campus. Trees and walking trails do not a campus make, rather it is the quality of teachers and students that is what makes a college. Without the invisible hand of financial motivation to you've had two enthusiastic lecturattract the caliber of educator which we require and demand, the school is doomed to academic mediocrity. The root of the problem seems to arise from a misplacement of priorities in administrative decision making. The school needs to become concerned with academics not aesthetics. If the school is to realize its purpose, then it must reevaluate the strategic planning which has brought us here, and will lead us into the future. The decision is clear: TREES OR TEACHERS. Sincerely,

Coley

Perry Finney

Communist Brainwash

To The Editor:

a brainwash, I know I can rely upon the Chestertown Brain Laundry for

Only Mid-October, and

ers already, expounding upon to wonders of Comandante Orters "democracry" in Nicaragua. democratic because everyone h longs to groups, just like in ever Communist country.

Why, Gary Ruchware informed us, in a town the size Chestertown, there would be sing hundreds and hudnreds of "elecofficials." There would be 58 of cials just in charge of the 58 outdo spigots, from which the government allows water to flow from times

And I see that the Sparie CLub was drafted or "persuaded" provide laborious translations Dr. Premo's collection of proj ganda posters. Any Communication "literacy program" features to copying of propaganda texts.

Will speakers with of Any time I feel in need of rpoints of view be invited? Total the question is to answer it. Not this instituttion. They would hat have you become confused!

BABYSITTER NEEDEL

Transportation necessary

2 young children

Yours trul Dr. Susan L. M. Hud

Washington College Elm

| Editors                      |            |
|------------------------------|------------|
| Editor-in-chief              | irea Keho  |
| News Editor                  | v Caliglus |
| Features Editor Jennifer M   | . Harriso  |
| Sports Editor                | Beekma     |
| Arts/Entertainment EditorJer | ny Eisber  |
| Photography EditorMi         | chele Bali |
| Graphics Editor              | Todd Ka    |
| Managers                     |            |
| Managing Editor              | athy Jewe  |
| Advertising Manager          | riella Rui |
| Circulation Manager          | liam Faus  |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and

Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed columns, commen-taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editor cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments. Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mailed c'o The Elm, Washington College, Chaustran Mickey in the Johns Hall, or make to our set and Washington College, Chaustran Mickey in Jake 1 and 1

Send Letters c/o The Elm

Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists A & P Parking Lot sterrown Maryland 21620

Laura

Audra

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-5

Charlie

HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:30-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD

778-1222 Rt. 213 & 291

riday nights 6:30-10 pl call WC ext 441 HELP WANTED

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly home! Write: P.O. Box 17, Clark, NJ 07066

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM xcellent income! Details, sen elf-addressed, stamped envelo VEST, Box 5877, Hillside, NJ

> Amily Bakory and Coffee Shop Sast 5 & M. 116.M

o Soups & Se or Plaza, Ches 778-2228 Non-Sat. 5 A M .5 P.I Sunday 5 A.M. 2 P.M

Serve Award Winning Salad

frivolous paper millionaires have been w can the poverty stricken parents of sing W.C. administration can save money cut dorevent a necessary tuition hike

A. Save recyclable aluminum beer fine They are worth money and that money ich will make more money.

the alcohol policy perform "community serv- ning salad bars and serve only award winning spend. Issue economical school uniforms and ice" on campus. This free labor (slaves) can salad. ened to a new concept: poverty. At the replace the paid labor of the cafeteria employ me time, however, the W.C. administration ees and maintenance crews. Also, since no ratens to increase next year's tuition. So one wants to do community service, they will think twice before throwing bottles and recyiled rich children continue to support their clable cans into the hall. A clean hall needs no spring's lifestyle? Simple. Prevent the cleaning and the labor saved in Kent House tion hike. Here is how a stingy yet enter- cleanup alone could facilitate a large tuition

C. 3 for $5 and a $25 pregnancy

D. Feed the powers-that-be the same be used to start a school liquor store food that is fed to the powers-that-aren't. E. Sell all stoves, ovens, and fryers

B. Make everyone caught violating in the kitchen and invest in more award win-

F. Erect a toll gate at the cross walk

Rob Thompson

and charge drivers $2 per axle to drive through.

G. Toll toilets and showers and water fountains too

H. Put preppies to good use. Make them confiscate students' clothes in return. These clothes may be resold to students through the school store at a %25 markup, I. Tap W.C's literary brain powers, make them write a menu that will satisfy 700 people every night. (Coffee and butter cook-

J. Tell those landscapers to stop digging up and replanting all the shrubs all the time. They grow just fine without human intervention.

Rob Thompson is a freshman

ISSUE: If you were a Washington College administrator, how would you cut expenses?

Sarah Rittmeyer Freshman Cundy's Harbor, Maine If I was an administrator, 1 would suggest a reevaluation of the college's expenses, and a budget revision '

Chris Martin Sophomore Wilmington, Delaware "I don't think any cuts should be made. Just reapportion the funds we have already."

Stephanie Ward Sophomore Salisbury, Md. "For one thing, there'd be no new bread bar, and they could have more fund raisers. It's not really that they should raise extra money, what they need to do is channel the money into necessary expenses.

Dan Feiner Junior Boston, Mass. "I think they should tax beer."

Ed Hoxter Senior Grasonville, Maryland "I would try to have more fund raising drives."

ampus Voices

by Susan H. Stobbart

Sell Three - For - A - Quarter, Use Cheap Paper

As a small liberal arts college, Washing-College is faced with the challenge of hining the highest possible standards for number of students. Despite continelempts to keep the college at a low think that there are many expenses hich WC could cut back. Listed here are ew suggestions.

1. Cut back on the amount of junk mail placed into each individual students' Standing knee deep in Film Series s week after week makes one wonder at lust how in touch the administration is expenditures

2. Regulate the amount of free samples of ices aspirin, thermometers, throat losengers, etc., that are carried out of the Health Service daily ries; keep it at a lower temperature in order have seen several small student pharmacies cheaper) supplied by WC's infirmary.

Lvnn Burris

3. Maintain more strict regulations and a-quarter

4. Better regulation of heat in dormitoby students who don't need them. I personally that students do not have to open windows (thus wasting energy) to avoid third degree

> 5. Stop spending extra money to print published articles by the administration on glossy, expensive paper when regular xerox paper works just as well (and is much

6. Change "three-for-free" to "three-forlogos on all of the dining hall's sugar packets and napkins. By the third week of October I would hope people know where they are 8. Get rid of the green jello.

9. Is it necessary for all correspondence from Bunting Hall to be printed on heavy white woven paper, rather than ordinary typing paper used by other departments?

10. Turn off the lights in Bill Smith at night. I don't think that there are enough students studying into the early morning hours to warrant keeping the building lit up brighter than an oil refinery.

records on materials copied at Central Serv- 7. Stop printing Washington College Lynn Burris is a junior poli sci major

President Douglas Cater

Cater Testifies On Study

continued from page 1

view the books and finances of Washington College. In response, Bruce M. Cames, Deputy Under Secretary of Education invited Cater to participate in a "Congressionally mandated study that the Department of Education is conducting to examine the factors leading to increasing higher education costs," In a letter on October 12, Cater ac cented his offer.

Cater says that his editorials and rebuttals on the subject of college costs are not invoked by anger

Dean's Trip

continued from page 1 academic credit in Spain, France Germany, Italy, and the United

Dean Baer will be working with Lucille Sansing, Assistant

Dean on further establishing the * study abroad program The next study abroad meet ing will be November 6, 3:00-4:30 in the student lounge. Freshmen and sophomores are encouraged to attend. Last year study abroad students and faculty will be guests at the meeting aspirations. Would Cater vote for him if he were indeed aspiring to run for public office? Says Cater, Probably not. any individual have credited his actions to political interested in writting news for the Elm should contact Tony Caligiuri at 778-5489 or

Stam

Drug Co.

778-2800, ext. 321

Among the course offerings for next semester is an interdisciplinary honors course in performance The 400 level English/art/ drama class will be taught by Pro fessors Kathy Wagner, Tex Andrews, and Rick Davis. This isn't drama, art or literature, but something in and of itself," said Wagner, explaining that the course will attempt to give a definition of performance art. "It's a new genre, a phenomenon that's gained recognition as a genre with its own peculiar forms

The seminar will begin by tracing the history of performance art from primitive cultures to the present, with emphasis on the twentieth century. Videos and speakers will supplement the course, and Professor Kathy Mills is tentatively set to guest lecture on the genre's musical element

Wagner said this course is to by M. Fragomesi not a first and pointed out that Williams College presently has a performance-artist-in-residence: Even the Ivy League colleges are but by amusement. Not only does Cater admit to enjoying this type of public debate, but he also points out that it educates the public on the When asked why Bennett chose post-secondary education as a focus for public scrutiny and debate. Cater could only answer that others exploring the whole issue of performance art." The genre's role in academia is "shaky," Andrews said. "The jury is definitely still out on whether this is meaningful stuff or outright garbage. On the other hand, it raises questions about traditional disciplines and therefore the study is appropriate." From a theoretical standpoint in the visual arts. he explained, the genre raises such Senior Charlie Wilcox, organizer of "Phoebe's", takes a rest on "George and Martha", mascots of Tawes basement from which the group got its name.

Performance Art Class Offered

issues as "what constitutes art? The class will also provide a forum for intellectual interaction among those in the fine arts.

"We'd like to get the literary students talking to the art students and the art students talking to the drama students," said Wagner, explaining that the separation between the O'Neill Literary House, McAlpin Art Studio and Tawes Theater sometimes hinders that

As with all honors offerings, enrollment requires a grade point average of 3.0 or above or permission of one of the instructors. Andrews emphasized that a background in at least one of the represented disciplines would be neces-

'It's going to be a tricky course; there are no easy answers here," he said, "It's not like a foundations course in any area where it's 'two plus two equals four,' ' red is color ' It's no cakewalk.

Grades will be based on three reviews (critical analyses five to seven pages in length) of performance pieces and a ten to fifteen page paper or an original performance piece. Class participation will also be required. "Silent types should stay away," said Andrews

The seminar will meet weekly - from 4:30 to 7:30 each Monday, with a dinner break. The anticipated enrollment is approxi-

Registration

continued from page 1
Butters conceded that find ing a time when no faculty are in class but that does not conflict with the meal schedules in the dinin hall, an area large enough for the arena, may be difficult. Another possible location is Cain Gymns. sium, but the increased traffic dan. ages the playing floor and tables are not readily available there. In the future, however, the arena can planned in the College's master schedule

While he expects "mechanical" problems this year, Butters said the process will become more effe cient. "I'm convinced that this will be the best way to go," he said.

Additionally, Butters sail that, based on what he has hear from faculty who participated is previous arenas, the system allow the opportunity for socializing "Apparently, it was almost a pany atmosphere."

SCC Case

by Tony Caligiuri

Three students were found not responsible for violation of the alcohol policy and party registration proceedure for a complaint filed by WC security following a party in East Hall on October 3 In the case Washington College versus John Bodnar, David Sammataro, and Ben Hinkel or October 20, the three were brought up on charges when a WC securit officer found eleven kegs of beering the basement during a party in East Hall for which only seven were registered. During the hearing, fix defense explained that two keg were purchased for an upcoming volleyball tournament. They of plained that the other two kegs which were never tapped, were considered to be on reserve. Roll Simms, who served as a representative for the defense, charged that fit party registration form was vauge and that"reserving" kegs was I common and accepted practice for campus parties

It was the opinion of the Student Conduct Council that although eleven kegs were purchasol. only seven were served in acomdance with the party registration form. Therefore, the three parties question were found "not responsible". The council recognized that the defense had a "legitimate coaplaint" in the vaugeness of the part

Encore

Men and Womens Clothing Everything from "Tiedve" to Silks Winter coats and Costumes

314 Park Row

778-1266

Open Mon.-Sat. 10:00-5:00 Come See Ust

From Washington, D.C.

live at the Newtowne Pub Friday, October 30

9:30 p.m. featuring originals,

Dead, Little Feat and Classics

778-1984

Stover

Candy

Fountain

• Soda

Ironstone Cafe

236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30-9:00 lored Sundays & Mondays

CHECK US OUT

formal gowns for rental or sale

CINDERELLA

THE FORMAL LOOK YOU'RE AFTER

is at Located in

Scotties 778-2860 Shoe Store

Chestertown

High Street

Washington College's annual Intra-dormatory Trick-or-treating hour will be held from 5:45-7:15 tommorow night.

SGA Club Funding

The following clubs received funding from the Student Government Association for the fall semester. Out of $8035 requested by twenty different clubs, $6105 were alloted.

Newman Club: $100 College Republicans: $150 French Club: $250 German Club: $250 Debating Club: $100 Christian Fellowship: $80 G.O. Magazine: $350 Art Appreciation: $250 Writers Union: $750 Alcohol Awareness Committee: $100 Helpline: $150 Amnesty International: $400 Young Democrats: $150 International Relations Club: $500 Spanish Club: $300 William James Forum: $1500 Bridge and Cards: $100 Phi Sigma Tau: $100 Pheobe's: $175

In addition to the club funding allotments, the S.G.A. reported a total loss on the homecoming party near three hundred dollars in The Elm

Advertise

Call Mariella Ruiz, 778-9870

Catholic Mass

at the

Alumni House

Sundays, 5:30 pm

Raybans

OLYMPIA

Authorized Dealer

SALES - SERVICE - RENTALS

GASCON'S BUSINESS MACHINES 837 High St.

CHESTERTOWN, MD

778-5611

Repair & Service On Most Makes Of Typewriters

And Calculators

available

Forneys Jewelers 106 Cross St.

778-1966

Chestertown

Austin Carpet

778-4656 Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620

Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

KEEP YOUR SUMMER TAN WITH OUR SUNTANA SUN SYSTEM

EMILY HAIRDRESSER

Rt. 213 across from Bowling Lanes

Complete line of REDKEN & PAUL MITCHELL Full Service Salon

Call 778-2686

Submit poetry and short prose

Broadsides

c/o Jennifer Harrison campus mail

Kitty Knight House:

Not Always in a Sleepy Town

by Todd Karr

On the southern bank of the Sassafrass River lies the tiny village of Georgetown. To the north, across the river, lies the even tinier village of Fredericktown. The villages are nothing more than a collection of brick and stone houses, along with a scattering of barns. A peaceful little section of the young republic.

On this bright May morning, however, the peace of the tiny river community has been shattered. A frenzy of hysteria and fear has gripped the inhabitants of Georgetown and Fredericktown, for the rhythm of war drums has reached their ears

British ships are plying the Northern Chesapeake Bay, and a detachment of British soldiers from one of these ships is moving up the Sassafrass River, seeking to burn the tiny

The British are coming to Georgetown

A few brave men of Kent County have banded together, putting their hunting muskets towards the defence of their homes, but they are not enough, after all they are pitting themselves against professional soldiers. As the British longboats draw confidently closer, a few musket shots ring out in the morning air, then the resolve of the men breaks, and they

The citizens of the towns have been warned. They gather what currency they have, take their silver candlesticks and other easily carried valuables out of their homes and resign their houses to fate. They leave the town, seeking a place to hide until the British plunderers have done their work. Then, perhaps, they can begin to rebuild what is sure to

But not Miss Kitty Knight.

Whatever the reasons Miss Kitty Knight possesses for her bravery none could find out. Some might call it foolishness. Still others would call it heroism

But whatever those motivations. Miss Knight has decided. She will stay in Georgetown, in her house, and she will wait for the British to come backdrop of blue sky and as they prepare to ignite the house, Miss Kitty Knight appears in the window, her hand in the 1870's, waving a fluttering white handkerchief.

The British have landed now. Boat burn me with it."

In 1987, Kitty Knight House lies overlooking the Sassafrass River where boats glide peacefully, as guests dine and lodge in the inn's spacious dining rooms and bedrooms, safe from British invasion.

the order to vacate her home, for it was destined to join the flames of the neighboring houses. Her proud eyes flashing, and her remarkable youth and beauty catching the sunlight, Miss Kitty Knight defiantly replies, Sassafrass River, and the addition of a third "I shall not leave; if you burn this house, you

One of the soldiers gives Miss Knight the order to vacate her home, for it was destined to join the flames of the neighboring houses ... Miss Kitty Knight defiantly replies, 'I shall not leave; if you burn this house, you burn me with it.""

Miss Kitty Knight lived in the house back entrance, because it is situated behint They reach the home of Kitty Knight, she had saved (one of the only two buildings that survived the British raid) until her death

The house was then bought by 'Toddy' One of the soldiers gives Miss Knight Woodall and his family in conjuction with the house next to it

> of restorations on the two buildings, which included the addition of a front porch facing the floor, both on the northern side of the two the southern house, beyond which is the ba

Ownership of the property then passed to Dr. Hall and his family in the early 1930's. His son is currently the owner of the Georgetown Yacht Basin, a marina on the Sassafrass river, right below the Kitty Knight

Mrs. Hall was the first to start the idea of public involvement with the house. At first it served as a hunting lodge, then later, in the 1940's as a full-fledged restaurant and inn. It was the Halls who joined the two houses together to provide more room for guests. Since then, the house has undergone several owners and many additions.

In 1964, the owner at that time, Mr. Robert Jester, added on the northern house what now serves as the main dining room, and now does. on the southern house, he added a bar-

The current owner of the Kitty Knight House Inn, Mr. Corri Dohn, has added a spacious outside porch which surrounds the dining room and overlooks the Sassafrass. He is also conducting renovations of some of the rooms inside, painting and remodeling, as well as the installation of newer and more modern restrooms this past year.

As you walk in through the front entrance of the Inn-which is actually to the

the building, near the upper level parking lot-you are greeted with a long corridor newly remodeled. The floor here is beauti fully preserved hardwood, as it is throughou much of the building.

This corridor lies between the two In 1925, Woodall's son began a series original homes, and when you approach the end of the corridor, a passage branches off # both the left and the right. The Kitty Knigh House itself lies to the left, and to the right lie and lounge Past an antique living room, down: little half-staircase, is another antique cham ber, decorated with old black-and-white pho tographs

Behind this room is the reservation desk and stairs leading up to the second and third floors of the original building, which consists of guest rooms, with the dining rooms beyond

Tucked away in a corner of the origi nal building is the kitchen, where the Inn fine food is prepared.

Kitty Knight House Inn is a unique place, possessing an atmosphere of history and comfort, and a sense that Kitty Knigh would have wanted her house to thrive as i

This article is indebted to The Histor of Kent County by Fred G. Usilton, to Mr Corri Dohn, and to the people of Kitty Knigh House Inn.

Interested in the history of Kent County? Let The Elm know about it. Reply to Fear tures care of The Elm. student mail.

after boat disgorges uniformed soldiers, armed and ready for their work. The last few citizens flee their homes and a deadly silence fills the town With slow and metered precision, the soldiers march up the empty main street, stop at every house, and search each one for valuables that were left behind. And after each house has been examined carefully, the soldiers set a torch to it, and leave the houses to who is risking her life to save her house, and the roaring of flames

So they move through the little town, stopping, looting, burning, and moving upwards towards the crest of a hill, toward two brick homes which stand out starkly against a business of the War of 1812

Miss Knight's defiance is quickly re ported to the commanding officer, who is still below, watching the town burn. He makes the climb to the top of the hill and gives his command in person to Miss Knight. Again she refuses, repeating with a smile her coura

The commanding officer is struck with admiration for this young American woman in response, he orders that her house and the house next to it be spared the torch.

The rest of the town lies in ashes. The British retreat to their ship, and return to the

Why Be Any Old Ghost.....

tennifer M. Harrison

lipes for entertainment at ngion College. It gives colof the most interesting cele-

First of all the student body is chore quite nicely. the opportunity to exchange maive role of the trick-orfor the generous position of home, it is time to find a costume. oranswerer. The well pracfer you give them candy.

Being a beneficent treat disen the door to the children rewary but still say "trick or ere is a world of possibili-fangs coupled with a hissing voice Halloween brings a world of that says "go ahead and trick me" and then fades off into cackling laughter are fun, but mild compared idents the chance to pretend to the parental hysteria when you mething different than what drop an apple or candy separated on normal weekends in from its safety sealed wrapper into own. Parties, poetry read- the extended goodie bag. Scaring visits from the trick-or- them will make them think twice of Chestertown add variety about soaping your car windows, or toilet papering your hall, after all students here will take care of this After the little trick-or-treaters have been safely taken

Too old to fit into the clever plastic orus of "trick or treat" is now costumes that line the shelves of the by your "now choose just local Rite Aid, college students age A Halloween away from forced to reflect for hours on how to trings the advantage of not make an original costume. If you to guess what child hides closely observe the costumes of the hich costume; these are not children, perhaps you will come den who occupied years of across a brilliant one. Ideas abound chool babysitting, they'll in Saturday morning cartoons: Pee Wee Herman is easy enough for the well-dressed young man equipped trings great joy to the college with a little hair spray and dippityeven under the premise that do, a Transformer can be imitated idren should work for their by any run of- the- mill contortion-6. This of course, goes hand ist, and Smurfs, though trite, are with a dark hallway, Bach's simple if you buy a pot of blue paint the T.V. Guide re-runs will make breathe, too. and Fugue in D Minor (or and a little white hat. If none of these kiny Puppy), burning black interest you, reach back into the and a creaking door. Once television of your childhood: remember Planet of the Apes and you adore (or don't adore), attempt-Speed Racer? Those apes were just ing to resemble objects in your humans with extra hair; and Speed w further traumatizing their Racer just wore a helmet and a rac- become a dinner from the Dining go into public. Feeling self-satisfied compliment when someone spills the decision much easier. Closer to home, there is always the option for dressing up like people on campus room, or gluing food on yourself to a bowl of spaghetti-0's), it is time to enough. Be sure to consider it a old ghost when you can be a ghost should take up as little room as Godiva's husband), it is important with personality? Glancing through possible, other people have to to put it on display. This is easily your costume and the tedious task of the other jovial celebrants of the licking every reinforcement left on holiday. Of course no other particiearth and pasting them to your skin pant in this festival will have the (thereby transforming yourself into same costume, if you're clever abanight. Painted faces and ing jumper. Or what about Caspar Hall. Just keep in mind if you're with the cleverness of your plumage beer on you.

achieved; just pay to be crushed into After hours of reflection on the dark basement of East Hall with

Short Guide to Fun Things to Do on a Weekend

by Dean Hebert

received Sunday evening at

LOnthe weekends, students to the Dining Hall to find it dark and W.C. security. (long pause) No one trial "welcome back" stu- rity. If you're in need of a laugh or BEEP," I hear a rumor that the two, just call them after six p.m. on school is hiring LL Cool J to write a dinner time as they wandered over a Friday. "Hello, you've reached rap message for security's phone the phrowing data, A parmpty.

Is in right now, but if you'll leave the pool target over Fall

2. Another great weekend your name and number we'll send early lowed Angled you'ffl) past time is locking your keys in somebody around late next week to the W.C.D.S. menu. What a your room and trying to find secutive fill you'll not good a stander of REPE. These a numer that the is in right now, but if you'll leave Hope it's not an emergency/ But if all the trees and call if "beautificayou leave your name of the sound of tion." Let's all get chain saws and the been/ We'll check it out in about join in the carnage befo;re the trees a week!

3. A third solution to boredom (for the creative) is . . . GET but there's that big elm tree in the DRUNK! Drinking can solve all way. . your problems, really. Especially if you break things while you're drunk

4. For those of you disinclined to drink, there's the fun of mark where the new building will getting up early (say, about 7 a.m.?) go? and blaring your stereo. When people with hangovers gravitate to your room, just yell, "Hey, it's not quiet hours!"

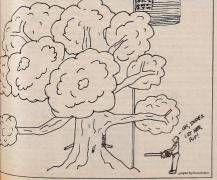

5. If you live in Queen Annes/Caroline, you can play "BREAKDOWN ROULETTE." What will go wrong this week? Will the toilets overflow into the first floor rooms again? Will there be sewage spewing across the pavement again, or a leaky pipe in the bathroom wall, or a wood flat for a sidewalk? Or will maintenance break the phone line again? (At this think of entertaining things to do. point it is fair to say that the phone company should be blamed for that, for putting their wires right on top of a water pipe. Address your complaints to : Ma Bell, c/o C&P, Rtc. 291, Chestertown, MD)

'You've just reached security/ on a weekend, though, is to cut down are gone. It would be nice to be able to see the Buntagon from East Hall.

> 7. What weekend would be complete without going over between the theatre and the art house and moving those red stakes that

8. If you have lots of time, you can look for a parking space on campus. Send your complaints to Jerry "I don't have any trouble finding a place to part because my space is reserved." Roderick. If you don't have much time, just park illegally, preferably blocking people in.

Bear in mind that these are only suggestions, and that anyone bright enough to be accepted to this college is bright enough to think of hundreds of ways to entertain themselves over a weekend. When you write them down and send them to the President's Office. Swamp him with letters! Or better yet, call the president's office. . . extension

SPORTS

Shoremen Review

Field Hockey:

Season(final):8-6; MAC 2-4 Travelling to John's Hopkin's University the Tuesday before fall break, the Shore women dropped a 6-1 decision. The lone we scorer was junior

Beth Matthews Bouncing backtwo days later, Washington shut out Gal Judet 5-0. Freshman Kristy Schiminger tallied twice as did Carrie Blackburn, Sandy Coulter finished out thew Shore women scoring. Matthews added two assist to her team high point totals. Carol Reece also added an

Saturday the Shorewomen won by defalut, as opponent Widener failed to schedule officials for the game

Tuesday, however, the women lost 3-1 to 17th ranked Lebanon Valley College. Matthews recorded the only WC score, on a penalty shot in the second half. Goalie Linda Anders recorded 13 saves in the losing effort. Thursday produces the same results, another 3-1 loss, this time to MAC rival Swarthmore. Reece scored the only goal.

In the final game of the regular season, the Shorewomen assured an above .500 decision capturing a 1-0 victory over Gocher College to finish the season at 8.6

Soccer:

Season: 3-7-1; MAC 0-3-1

Tom Bowman, assisted by Ben Crabbs, scored the only goal for the Sho'men in a 2-1 loss to Ursinus. A penanlty kick provided Ursinus' margin of victory.

At Widener on the 21st of the month, the Sho'men managed a 1-1 tie. Scott Beeler booted the only goal for WC, assisted by Bowman. John Thomas had eight saves And Wednesday the men dropped to Galludet 5-2, to drop

Next: John's Hopkins, Saturday at 1:30. Kibler Field.

Volleyball:

Season: 11-17; MAC 1-3 Illness swept the Shore women Volleyball club recently as seven women were unavailable in a loss to Western Maryland, 8-15, 9-15, 1-15,

At the Galludet Tournament, the Shorewomen were swept, losing to Galludet, 7-15, 7 15, Methodist Colleg, 15-13, 1-15, 7-15, and Bridgewater College, 1-15, 2-15.

Wednesday, they women partially recuperated, dropping to Haverford, 4-15, 15-2, 1-15 and defeating St.Mary's, 15-4, 15-8. Next: CWAC Tournament this

Tourney May Salvage Soccer Season

Going into the final two weeks of this year's soccer season the only way to describe the season is disappointing. Overall, the team has three wins, three ties, and seven losses. What are the reasons for such a performance?

Well, the first and most important reason is the teams inability to score. Said one team member, "You can't win when you score one goal a game." The team has scored only sixteen goals in twelve games. Tom Bowman and Scott Beeler account for 75 percent of the goals, with five and four goals respectively.

This year also is one in which a number of freshmen have come to the team. This is good for the future but, according to senior co-captain Todd Emmons, gives the team "talent but inexperience." Frank Garlitz, Larry Kilroy, Scott Smith, Ben Crabbs, and Don Steele are all freshmen who have started games for the Sho'men this year

One problem that co-captain Tom Bowman noticed is that there is not much competition withion the school for the team. He feels that some people "coast and don't push themselves and are still starting.

Another thing which Coach Tom Bowman mentioned was that there is a missing "Intangible." Said Bowman: "We have the talent and the desire is not there all the time Although the season has been a disappointment, there have been a number of bright spots. As co-captain Frank Davis, the only other four-year player besides Emmons, says this "is very likeable team.It has been a lot of fun.

There have been some players who have had great seasons. Junior Alan Lerch has had a great year at Sweeper. Freshman Scott Smith has also had an outstanding year, play-were all in agreement in their praise for sophmore goalkeeper John Thomas, "John has been a bright spot throughout the year," said coach

Bowman. One other player who is arning rave reviews from the coach is Scott Beeler. "Right now he is the rest of the competition. If the team teams MVP," commented coach

The three captains and coach disappointing year, a strong showing in next week's Maryland State Tournament could salvage the season, With Mt. St. Mary's and John's Hopkins (at W.C. tomorrow) probably going on to the NCAA's, the Sho'men look "even up" with the pulls together and gets hot, a good tourney is not out of the question Leading scoring Tommy Bowman is a rare source of scoring punch for the Sho'men, who have suffered from inexperience and lack of desire.

The pending Maryland State Tournament could turn that around,

W.C. Crew Meets RoughWater The final race of the day was

by Carter Boatner

Men's and Women's crew last weekend rowed in The Head of the Schuylkill Regatta against a large and strong field of competitors on the Schuylkill River in Philadel-

This regatta is another large event which takes place in the rowing capital of the U.S. Each year the race attracts many of the same crews which compete in the Head of the

Unfortunately, the Schuylkill is not the most favorable river on which to row. The river is often subject to crosswinds which make it difficult for the crews to compete up to their top level of ability. This was the case with last wekend's races.

The Schuylkill River contrasted sharply with the mild conditions encountered during the previous weeks' practices on the Chester River. At home on the Chester the crews row on smooth waters with for rowing long water workouts, but fails to give the crews experience with rowing in rough waters. This is time of 14:17.8.

the only drawback to the calm waters on the Chester River.

The women's novice A boat, coming off a convincing win the week earlier, rowed another strong race to finish 7th out of 13, beating both University of Pennsylvannia crews entered into the race. Although the wind and choppy waters were definate factors, according to coxswain Erin Freely, the novices "rowed well in the face of adverse conditions." The crew showed improvement over the past week's performance

CREW NOTES

The Men's novice eight rowed their first race of the season last weekend. The crew rowed at a 28 through the entire race, and passed two boats to end up 22nd out of 26 boats with the time of 17:48.4. The boat beat crews from the University of North Carolina, Temple, and two from Lafayette. The University of Pennsylvannia was the winner in the the Men's Open Eights race in which both the W.C. Varsity and Junior Varsity boats competed together. The J.V. crew maintained its position well, and was not passed by any other boats. The crew crossed the finish line in the time of 16:49.6, beating a George Washington University crew, a Brown University crew, and a Villanova boat to end up 40th out of 46 boats... The Varsity crew fared somewhat better. The boat started in 25th place, and managed to pull ahead of the other G.W.U. crew to cross the line in the time of 15:21.1, to end up 22nd out of 46.

The crew maintained a high stroke rate for the body of the race (around a 30), but as coxswain Katina Smith remarked, "The (stroke) rate was high but the pressure remained regardless of the high rate. Maintaining a high rate and strong pressure was something we previously had difficulty achieving in the previous weeks"

W.C. ended up a mere three one-hundredths of a second back

The Year at a Glance

Sho'mer

Catholic I Muhlenburg

> St. Mary's Franklin & Marshall

Lebanon Valley

Swarthmore

Salisbury Staet

Western Maryland

Albright Direinne

Haverford

Widener

Galludet John's Hopkins Oct. 31.

1:30 pm, Kibler Field Del Val Nov. 3,

3:00, Kibler Field Maryland State

Tournamnet

C-Town liquor 8 Deli

FEATURING: HOMEMADE HOT SOUN

WASHINGTO AVE CHESTERTOWN, N 21620

778-2988

from the University of Vir Charlottesville. Considera size of the student body # U.V.A. has to draw from of to that of W.C., this race st one of the most competitive by W.C. against the larger Di 1 schools

In crew there is no form sion of the schools based of student bodies, and amore entrants in the race W.C. sented the school with the student body.

chieving Means More Than Scoring

by Phil-Tom Jackson

As the season comes to a close ook over the goals that coach key team. Passing over the first I stopped to study Number which explains how each

Starting from the bottom, each hese young women have some act for the abilities and inabiliof others, they show pride in nselves, self-esteem, a positive image (outside of eating), team k, and finally Confidence.

Now you may be asking, why p and study over point Number P. Because this weekend the Women's field Hockey team els to Washington D.C. to play the Women's College Field key Association selection tourent. And to this writer and what teammate, they will have each deep down inside themes to accomplish Numbers en and Eight, seven being havkurplayers selected to compete SEFHA tournament and havme chosen to advance to the mal tournament

But Number Eight is even more cult having at least one player e Regional All-American ng team and young program as may go for it

ment and has an even better acc of having a number of play-selected to compete in the HA tournament. I'm not sure the tournament, and Catholic Uni-that they have had. by Phil-Tom Jackson season yet. The team will meet jury ola and Towson State Colleges, Division I schools, plus top-ten supported by two tile Atlantic Conference rival

Head coach for the team's three Whelan holds muls, Dennis Berry has directed a tiple records from dy progressing program that lighlighted by placing 12th in year's MAC Championships. 14 slow start, the team over-20.6 start to finish 4-6. The on was not only highlighted by hhird place finish in the Mary- MAC Championship in the 100 State Championships

This year's team has 13 swimincluding four seniors, Karen on, Anne Johnson, Sheri Dullished multiple individual rec-

Stretching for success, Shorewomen come up short against Lebanon Valley in a 3-1 loss. Things got better, though, leading to the victory bell celebration below left.
which of the Sho'women will go for versity, who are still hot under the s An All-American would be a in the tournament, but I know that them earlier in the year, all in early accomplishment for such a the way these ladies think, they all round action

But first they have to slip by a Washington College has a good number of teams. This weekend, that her team can give Trinity and the of doing very well at the Washington will face Trinity, the Catholic a run for their money and

Coach Diane Guinan believes

host of this year's tournament, stick it to Gerogetown with the kind Gerogetown University, a school of team work that has helped the that has given WC trouble before in Shorewomen to the kind of season the chance to be selected to compete collar after the Shorewomen upset Six, that the team will finish with a .500+ record for the season. They did that with a 8-6 season, which Catholic University.

This team has comes a long way in three years, from club status just two years ago to this year's successes. Still they have some work to do, like this weekend, Good luck ladies. And congradulations

Recuperated Shorewomen Volleyball Face Bigger Challenge

by Phil-Tom Jackson

The biggest problem in team sports is injuries. A lesser one is illness, but the Washington College Women's Volleyball team has had more trouble with the second than

What promised to be a great season has only been good. Until today. With all colds and flus out of the way, the volley Shorewomen are ready to show their stuff and face their biggest tournament of the sea-

In the top spot of one bracket, the Sho'women will be facing teams that know just how good they are All have been defeated by the Volley-women doing the season. All except one, Gallaudet. Hopes are high as the Sho'women prepares to give it their all this weekend in Washington, D.C.

This year's hard work comes Which brings us up to Number down to this weekend. Not really but try to tell these ladies that, Everyone is healthy and injury free and, barring any tragedies tonight, ncludes a win over 19th ranked they should get off to a good start in

> The tournament will be held at Gallaudet University Friday and Saturday. And if the ladies are luck, they will get a second chance at Gallaudet in the last game of the

C Swimmers Anticipate Continued Success

Whelan, how-In their third season, the Wash- ever, may already be m College Women's Swim out of the water bewill face their most competi- cause of a knee in-The seniors are juniors, Elizabeth Rexton, who like last year. Joining Korton Korton had a on last year's successes. good season last year for the Shorewomen, placing second in the 50 Streamer and Victoria Vahos. meter backstroke at the Maryland finish in the MAC, but also State Championship and 11th at the > meter backstorke. The rest of the team includes returning sophomores Kathy Carlson. Vicky Carroll, Dana Loy and Kris and Liz Whelan, who last year Winschel. Carlson, Winschel and Carroll also hold records in many events. Adding some power to the Rexton is Jennifer A strong, balanced team prepares to improve team are Freshmen Samantha

Coach Berry will have help this year from assistant coach Diane Klein. Klein was named as the new aquatic director at Washington College, replacing Brian Bishop who team moved to Trenton State rience she learned while at the University of Texas, which is nationally reknowned for its aquatic program mage for the team, but it still counts Championships.

Athletes of the Week

field hockey

While Athlete of the Week is generally an award for individuals, this week it goes to a team that has payed as an individual.

The most successful team this fall, the WC field hockey team has ovecome inexperience, youth, and a shortage of playersto finish 8-6 on the season

Field Hockey was established at WC three years ago and last year matured from a club sport to varsity status This year, they matured even more, into winners.

This weekend the team will Klein brings with her the expe- travel to Dickinson College for the swimmers as MAC place-finishers. MAC Relays, Coach Berry stated year we hope to move into the top ten of the MAC and place several We also hope to qualify Jennifer that "the relays are more of a scri- Korten for the NCAA Division III

Bronwyn Fry, CTC Patty Mowell Virginia Allen Judie Willock trille Representative/ Harriet Gearhart s · Steamship • Railroad • Hotels

OLD WHARF INN

Enjoy Waterfront Dining Located at the foot of Cannon Street

> Chestertown, Md. (301) 778-3566 Credit Cards Accented

Need A Job?

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yacht and Country Club $4,00 an hour

778-6765

Come On Baby, Wave the Homer Hank

by Arian D. Rayanbakhsh

After 162 regular season games and 12 post-season games, the Minnesota Twins reign supreme as the 1988 World Series Champions

Back in March, when everyone is an expert, all of the people who make predictions had the Twins finishing no higher than fourth in the American League West. They were 150-1 longshots to capture the Series, and most considered that an overestimate

Now the Twins have the last laugh. For a franchise that last won a World Series when Calvin Coolidge was President (while the team was also in the Nation's Capital). this year has been a huge surprise. When the last out was recorded on Sunday evening, the Twins brought the World Series Championship to the Minneapolis-St. Paul area for the first time Now is the time for baseball fans to remember and discuss the seven games that constituted this year's World Series. One of the biggest complaints about the Twins is the fact that the team won only 85 games during the regular season. percentage for a champion in the defense. Brooks Robinson, Mark history of the sport.

Another complaint is that basehall played in the Metrodome is not the same game that Abner Doubleday laid out in the tiny town of Cooperstown, New York

When you look at the Twins 1987 campaign, one statistic leaps out: all year they have consistently been able to win at home. The Twins have adapted their team to fit the idosyncratic nature of baseball under the Dome.

This is not a new concept Teams have always designed their teams around their park. The New York Yankees have fashioned their lineup around a left-handed power hitter who can exploit the short right field porch in Yankee Stadium. Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Mickey Mantle. Roger Maris, Reggie Jackson, and Don Mattingly all fit this mold. The success of the Yankees has always relied on these hit-

During the Earl Weaver era in Baltimore, he would have the grounds crew doctor the infield in Memorial Stadium. Weaver felt that making the infield quicker

Belanger, Luis Aparicio, Davey Johnson and Bob Grich all had the great defensive abilities that became a trademark for the Oriole teams of the late sixties and early seventies Another great example of this syndrome is the St. Louis Cardinals who challenged the Twins during the Series. The current Cardinals, who play in the cavernous Busch Stadium, emphasize speed and defense over hitting home runs. Vince Coleman, Willie McGee, Ozzie Smith, and Tom Herr all fit this mold. These players get on base by hitting singles that shoot through the Super-turf infield. Then they infield at uncatchable speeds The 1987 version of the St. Louis Cardinals did get some power from the bat of Jack Clark. But he was the only one who hit more than ten home runs on the entire team Compare that to the Baltimore Orioles, who finished next to last and had eight players hitting more than another single bounding through the ten home runs On the other hand, the Twins

With a huge hefty bag in right and hockey-like plexiglass in left, the Matrodome has always been a launching pad for home runs. Like the Orioles, the Twins also had eight players hitting more than ten home runs. These differences in style between Minnesota and St. Louis were extremely evident during the World

For the first time in the history of baseball, home teams won every game of the World Series. Minnesota took the first two games played in the Dome. After that, St. Louis won the three games in Busch The Series concluded with the Twins taking games six and seven, again played in the Dome. proceed to steal second and score on All season long, the Twins won at home and struggled away from the Dome. This advantage, which has been dubbed the "Dome factor" was crucial to Twin success. The World Series illustrates this Dome factor. In the four games played in the Dome, the Minnesota Twins hit for a .329 average and scored thirtythree runs. Balance that with the three games played in St. Louis, where Minnesota only hit .184 and scored a total of five runs. What is continue to be a factor in the the Twins out of the Dome struggle. If this was last we the National League hosy Seven, we would be now the Cardinals the champio baseball world.

chip shot

What should be oh is that the Twins de title of World Series Cha Under the leadership of Tre the youngest manager to Series since John McGrawi Minnesota won all of the in games. Their style of play fectly suited for the Dome teams have always done if have built a team that can w the environment the Dee

And yes, baseball in the is real baseball. There are u outs per inning and three sa mean you're out. Since this tion is in place, the Twin

This is by far the lowest winning would benefit his team's skills on emphasized power hitting this year. clearly evident is that when you take can League pennant chase Excitement Flows at Head of the Charle

For many of the top oarsmen in the nation, the first cool winds of winter mean more than the addition of sweatsuits and cold weather ap parell in preparation for the long hours of cold weather workouts Instead many of these athletes hegin preparing for the most prestig ous single day rowing event in the World. This event, which draws rowing enthusiasts from all over the nation is the Head of the Charles Regatta, and is annually hosted by the Cambridge Boat Club on the Cambridge, Massachusetts side of the Charles River.

Among this years enthusiasts were myself and 14 others from Washington College. The trek started on a Friday afternoon and ended up at the home of Katina Smith, located on the Andover Academy campus, in Andover, Massachusetts. From here we were just 30 miles outside of where it was all going to take place in one memorable afternoon

The city of Cambridge was packed with what was obviously a rowing crowd. There were many people selling regatta shirts up and down the streets. These were not the official shirts, but very impressive none the less. Half the group I was with chose to visit the nearby shops, but I had other things on my mind. I made my way through the crowded streets to view the Charles River and observe crews practicing on the race course. Everywhere I went I heard snatches of conversations regarding the next day's event

I overheard one crew, a lightweight boat from Dartmouth, discussing the chances they had of defeating their biggest rival on the intimidated them was the the "Crimson" eight from Harvard University. Their hatred for this crew was all too. apparent as they spoke with one another about that perenially tough "Havord" Lightweights had earlier ventured to the Harvard boothouse that morning and met several of the lightweights. The report to his teamates only fueled the flame. From his impression these "Havord" Lightweights were typically like their predecessors: skillful rowers, mentally and physically tough, and extremely confident about winning. The Dartmouth coxswain said he had maintained his composure well through all of this and upon leaving uttered the remark, "We'll see you boys tomor row". The lightweight race would be one to watch for sure

Among the other races I was going to have my eye on was the Championship Doubles. The previous years race was won by the "Yale Old Fellows", and this year they were going to lead the pack in an attempt to defend their top standing This boat is considered by many including myself, to be one of the top Olympic contenders attempting to gain a berth on the U.S. team in the 1988 summer games

The final race of the day scheduled was the championship Eights, and it promised to be another contest well worth watching. In this event the defending national champions from the University of Wisconsin were up against the defending "Head of the Charles" title holders from Ridley College in Canada.

Fortunately, Sunday morning's eather forecast calling for rain and cold winds was wrong. There were many spectators on the banks for it clear blue skies. The water conditions were all one could ask for nearly smooth with no winds. The resistance of the water was all the oarsmen had to contend with in their effort to complete the course in as The coxswain spoke of how he little time as possible. This years event attracted some 220,000 people, and 3,500 rowers from all four corners of the U.S. and parts of Canada I situated myself on the banks of the Charles as the boats began to negotiate the difficult three mile course which consisted of five turns It was fascinating to sit on the banks surrounded by others who shared the same enthusiasm for rowing. Nearly everyone watching the races had at one time rowed in competition before, and the common bond we shared lifted all of the age, generation, and origin barriers common among large groups

I met one gentleman named Bill tho had the distinguished honor of having rowed in the inaugral Head of the Charles regatta back in 1964. Although having retired from career upon completion of his undergraduate studies in the mid-sixties, he had kept up with the sport for more than twenty years and had a vast amount of knowledge to show for it. What struck me most about meeting Bill was that, although he had rowed his competitive cereer a generation earlier than myself, we were capable of speaking to one another on the same level about this fairly compli cated sport. We related to each other personal experiences in our ordeal as parsmen which were very

One is the nature of Head races where one is not certain of the finish ntil all of the official times are in All afternoon I, along with the oth similar

rowed the best races and won. It was the mile and one-half walk to the official results bulletin that would confirm our guesses, or prove them wrong

I was not off by much. That brash Dartmouth coxswain was not entirely wrong when he told the Harvard crew, "We'll see you boys tomorrow", because he did see the Crimson once - but that was only at the start. The Harvard "lights" rowed well beating, all other collegiate crews and managed an overall strong third place while the Dartmouth crew ended up a disappoint ing distant ten places back, 13th overall. I later had an opportunity to speak with the Harvard Lightweight coach. What I found most interesting was that Harvard had been on the water for only three weeks, and that Dartmouth along with many of the other lightweight crews had been on the water for nearly eight! Through the day, the races only got better. I will go out on a limb right now, and you can mark my words: the "Yale Old Fellows" will be in Scoul in 1988. The double rowed an outstanding race, winning by an overwhelming margin of victory. What they must do now is stay healthy through the winter and maintain their condition

Camps will open in the spring for all oarsmen who wish to make the Olympic team. Several boats will be selected consisting of oars men at the camp, and their will be a race among the camp boats and all other boats who want to represent the U.S. at the summer games. The winner of this race will be the U.S.

representation at Scoul in '88. The "Yale Old Fellows" have an advantage because they have following day. The crew that so was a mild day in the mid 70's with ers on the bank, deliberated on who been rowing together well for sev-will gain a berth on the team Their disadvantage. rests in their age. They ar vears older than the other who are competing against a spot on the Olympic team. theless, in this case age and ence override youthfull vi hunger.

The final event of the to the Championship Eights trants in this race were all o ing representations of North can rowing. The first boat was the perrenial powerbox dley, from Canada, follo Penn A.C., the Naval Act Yale, Rutgers, the Univer Wisconcin, Harvard,...theli on forever. Ridley was my for this race. They were ou all black aparrell and oars, o ing nicely against a bright boat. The rowers stroke powerful, smooth, and clear all of the other crews I had day. They were a picture of integral part of a winning It is obvious that thes not waste their time while! to defend their title, for remain the "Head of the The Canadian crew wonth pionship Eight race just 9 off the course record man 1982 by the U.S. Naval A and grace exemplifying

riage of power and skill with

I walked away from i with many exiting mem mind. Among them the bri mouth crew, Bill, and the and graceful Canadien cre look for these crews at Head of the Charles. In time I will keep my cyc "Yale Old Fellows" and th pic hopes.

Springsteen Rides Through The Tunnel of Love

by Meg Murray and Chris Collins

The new album by Bruce ingsteen, Tunnel of Love, is aly different from The Boss of This new venture by Springen seems too deeply rooted in

People looking for the etcl" Bruce, searching for the ning of life and all its flaws as in n to Run or Darkness on the e of Town, will be surprised to that Springsteen's ideals have ared. Now he is writing about ething which is very familiar to The subject matter has reand to the basics - LOVE But ingsteen manages to present the erial in a fresh new way, as if he esperiencing love for the first the three of us, you, me, and all that and having all the experiences stuff we're so scared of."

aheart many times broken. e but bright "Ain't Got You." ingsteen's wailing vocals sing of money and fame mean nothing him without love in his life, a rage to model Julianne Phillips, vious influence throughout the

in the Rest" where Bruce taunts lwer by claiming "if your rough ready for love, honey I'm her than the rest." He seems to iging of his experiences in e, having the fullest of confite in making the relatioinship

"All That Heaven Will Alrepresents Springsteen's ing of age" or realistic outlook ife and love. In "Born to Run", alls Wendy he wants to know if is wild and real; here he invites "we'll make it through you ble) somehow, and fill this with all the love, all that a will allow

"Spare Parts", a rough and ng cut, portrays the life of a ng girl and her decision whether wa or not to drown her baby. une is hard, backed with a fil harmonica played by vetmes Woods; the music builds urgent vocals by Springsteen song, "Reminicent of Seeds", med live on stage, seems to be slowth of the seeds of despair in the dying Sunbelt.

"Catious Man" sounds like it is on the 1982 release Neia, for it is starkly accompanied 1 guitar while singing of a man has the words "love" and "fear" odon his knuckles. The fate of his lover could be compared a could have happened to the in in Born in the USA 's

Walk Like a Man" seems to ffering of peace and dedicahis parenats. This is a strikdifferent view than in The s"Independence Day" where to his father "nothing we can say can change anything now." relationship: "We've given each Today Springsteen says "I've other some hard lessons lately, but grown from the seeds that you've we ain't learning... one step up two sown. . . trying to walk like a man.'

The title track begins with a screams of its riders in the back- background adds to this true to life nionships and the realities of ground. The mood and atmosphere are very much like that of one of the piers located off the Jersey shore that support the rides and arcades that Springsteen has frequently used in his songs. But not since "Sandy" from The Wild, the Innocent and the E Street Shuffle, has he so brilliantly captured the essence and reality of one of his subject matters as he has peated on the last song "Valentine's in "Tunnel of Love." The imagery is used to compare the ride in the fun house to the ride of love and relationships: "the lights go out it's just

"Two Faces", a soft and mel-The album begins with the low song, is accompanied by guitar, organ and wood block percussion. It depicts a man and the two sides of himself that he duels with, claiming "One that laughs, one cries, one says ne stemming from his recent Hello, one says Goodbye." The premise is similar to Billy Joel's "The Stranger."

The single "Brilliant Dis-Next is the flirty "Tougher guise" is musically similar to ence on this album, clear on every Springsteen's previous first releases, "Hungry Heart" and "Dancing In the Dark", and whether intentional or not, it grabs the Top 40 the song is clearly deeper as he asks his lover "What are you really like? What do you really want? Is that you baby, or just a brilliant disguise?" Here Springsteen seems to his "Sure Thing,

> Step Up" helps make it one of the taking the ride of his life with a best tracks on the album. All of the surprise around every corner, daring instruments are played by Spring-

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 30

Concert Series: Todor Pelev.

Gibson Fine Arts Center, 8 p.m.

Film Series: Night of the Living

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m.

Norman James Theatre, 4:00 p.m.

Film Series: Night of the Living

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 2

Dead and Dawn of the Dead

Dead and Dawn of the Dead

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 1

Early Music Consort

steps back." The song is dedicated to the constant cycle of problems funky guitar riff, the clacking of a conquered, then faced. The hauntrollercoaster's wheels and the ing echoes of Patty Scialfa in the picture of an honest love "When You're Alone" is a more familiar Springsteen tune, whose chorus is slightly monotonous. This also, curiously, is the only track including saxophonist, Clarence Clemmons. Bruce is scared of being alone now that he has found someone, a theme re-

This song seems to be a message to his wife as the waltzy bass backs Springsteen's vocals which are rather personal and conversation-like, not throaty or wailing: his

Tunnel of Love is a daring and real album which is too quickly judged to be like Nebraska. The differences is that Nebraska portrays a real and bleak picture of Springsteen's fantasies, where Tunnel of Love offers usually soft and flowing images of reality.

Marriage is the definate influ song, yet some may misunderstand labeling this album depressing or finding signs of a marriage in trouble. But the truth is (sorry girls) this man is obviously and hope lessly in love. This is strengthened by Springsteen's ability to look at his love realistically, even if it is not

Artistically this album is a be surprised to find a darker side to giant step ahead, yet it still needs some filling in of the outline he has The country flavor in "One produced. Bruce Springsteen is us to climb aboard and with him steen, which adds to the intimacy of take the inevitable journey through the struggle he goes through in his the tunnel of love

Campus Film Series: Night of the Living Dead and Dawn of the Dead Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Calendar

Monday Series: The Tax Reform Act of 1986: Implications for You and Me Michael Malone, speaker Tea, 4:00 p.m. Talk, 4:30 p.m.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 3

Sophie Kerr Lecture Series. Kate Simon, speaker Sophie Kerr Room, 8:00 p.m.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEM -RER 4 Sophie Kerr Lecture Series:

"Literary Theory Today" Jonathan Culler, speaker Sophie Kerr Room, 8:00 p.m.

Campus Christian Fellowship

1st Floor Lounge, Caroline 9:30 p.m

BRUCE SPRINGSTEEN

NEL

Bruce Springsteen goes back to the basics with his new albun Tunnel of Love. Springsteen's album is available on Columbia

Arts Update

Renaissance Music Revived

by Susan Di Leo

The Washington College Music department will give a con cert of Early Music on November 1 in Norman James Theatre at 4:00 p.m. The Early Music Consort is comprised of instrumental and vocal compositions focusing on the Renaissance and Baroque periods, from 1500 to 1750. The selection of composers ranges from the unusual to the well-known, including instru- Purcell as "Buzzy." This instrumentals by Merulo, Des Prez, ment, he says, "is interesting for-Maschera, and Praetorius, as well as vocal compositions by Byrd and

The instrumental section of the consort consists mostly of tenor. bass, alto and soprano recorders. Also included is a curious instrument called a cornamuse, a popular instrument of the period. The cornamuse is a capped, double-reeded woodwind which produces a sound described by Director Amzie D. continued on page 12

PHOEBE'S

Info and membership drive meeting

Monday, November 2 6:30 p.m. Phoebe's (basement of Fine Arts)

> $3 to join Open to all

ENTERTAINMENT

Phoebe's Club Caters to Fine Arts

by Kevin Holland

On Monday night at 6:00 p.m., Phoebe's Club will meet in Phoebe's Theatre in the basement of Tawes Theatre to discuss their plans for the rest of this semester and for the second semester. This new organization is designed for students who are interested in the arts, both on and off campus, "Phoebe's Club is a club that wants everyone to

continued from page 11

some students (to play) because it's not the sort of thing you see every-includes French chansons, or songs, of anonymous origin; canzonas,

which developed from the chanson.

by Merulo and Maschera; dances from Terpsichore by Praetorius; and be featured are Mary Deem and Tim

Rohs on tenor recorder; Mary

DeMoss on alto recorder and so-comamuse and soprano recorder.

pieces, by William Byrd. They were

The instrumentalists who will

a canon by Des Prez

The program of instrumentals

Chester River," president Charlie anything. Wilcox said.

According to Wilcox, the purnose of Phoebe's Club is to help support trips off-campus to various arts- related events, as well as support, fund and produce student work here on campus. Though the emphasis of the club is on the theatre. Wilcox noted that they would be the main vocal form of the 17th Chorale century Renaissance. compositions from the 18th century Baroque period by Bach will also be

The sopranos in the Early Music Vocal Consort are Marti Dyer, Kathleen McGuigan, Katherine Prendergast, and Melanie Wade; singing alto are Kathleen Bennet, Melissa Clarke, Deanna Houle, and Amy Tidball; tenors are Christopher Brower, Andrew Caporoso, Christopher Martin, and John Sell, and Carl Schaller III.

prano recorder; Diana Holden on soprano recorder; Jan Hartley or The soloists who will perform The Vocal Consort includes motets, unaccompanied vocal erine Prendergast, with Garry formed as a guest soloist with or-

Clarke directing know that the arts exist beyond "willing to listen to anybody doing get help from the school commu-

The club is also open to sugpestions about what off-campus trips are being offered by the College. Last week, Phoebe's Club helped sponsor a trip to Center Stage for a performance of Hamlet. If any student knows of a theatrical, musical or other arts-related event he or she would like to attend. Phoebe's Club may be willing to help subsidize a trip. All trips are open to all

"We feel that there is currently a renaissance going on in the arts at if we get self-motivated, we might down nity. So we're getting self-motivated," Wilcox said. "This is a liberal arts school, and we're liberals doing art. The club is funded in part by the SGA and they also plan to raise funds on their own through various fund-raisers during the course of the year. Membership dues are $3.00. and membership is open to all college students

"We don't make any huge demands on anyone," Wilcox continued, "and we don't ask for too much from anyone. But if you're Washington College. We hope that interested in any arts at all, come on the Baltimore Mus Competition's Professir

Pelev attracted the an and sponsorship on the D Yale Gordon Trust last spri he performed in Baltimo Duncan of the Evening San Pelev's interpretation of Bartok's sonata for solo Bartok asks a single viole duce the polyphony of R invention of Beethoven a sound of Debussy. Sound ous? Pelev brought it all a anlomb last night. By the knew you'd witnessed a force."

Subsequently, the Trus tape of Pelev's work to Was College for Garry Clarke's eration, Clarke's opinion was that "he was really qui tastic and wonderful violing Included in Pelev's for this evening are the ! Sonata, which Clarke re-"one of Beethoven's best tions, a wonderful sonata and piano," a sonata in A3 Franck, a nineteenth cent poser, "Chaconne" by Vitali, and "Tzigane" by Ravel. Clinton Adams will accompaniment on piani Tickets for single at are $7.00 for adults, childr

Violinist Tonight Performs

Tonight at 8:00 p.m. in the White; and singing bass are Don Gibson Fine Arts Center's Tawes Diefendorf, David Hartner, Michael Theatre, the Washington College Concert Series will present a performance by Todor Pelev, a Bulgarto harpsicord accompaniment are ian violinist who has been attracting Christopher Brower, Kathleen Ben- international attention and acclaim

tional Symphony Orchestra at the Kennedy Center. Pelev emigrated to the United States in 1983, and has since studied at the Julliard School and at the Eastman School of Music. He has won a number of musical competinet, Christopher Martin, and Kath- for nearly a decade. Pelev has per- tions, among them the 1985 National Symphony Orchestra's 18 free, For more inform chestras across Bulgaria and the Young Soloists Competition and

Chestertown Movie Theater

778-1575

HALLOWEEN DOUBLE FEATURE

Night of the Living Dead

Dawn of the Dead

1 hour 40 minutes

2 hours 20 minutes

If Night of the Living Dead is now considered the horror film which started the modern gore tradition In regirn or the Dwing Deab is now considered the horror film which started the modern gore tradeon. Dawn of the Deab drings it to a climary set to be supposed. George Romer's xho cut likings, the most popular in the genre, deserve the dublous honor of having given birth to films like Hallowseen and Nightmare on Ein Street. Newsweek called Romero's first film is trunchorror classic, "and Roger Ebert said of the new one," Dawn of the Dead is one of the best horror films even made—and one of the most

Norman James Theater

Friday * Sunday * Monday

Students, faculty and staff - $1 admission

All others - $2

Washington College Elm

Volume 59, Number 10

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, November 6, 1987

Board Committee Dicusses Campus Life

Student Reps Fail To Attend Meeting

by Melanie Wade Student Affairs nmittee of the Board of Visitors Governors has this year begun note a more active role in helping students in their life outside of

According to Chairman tay Wood, "The purpose of the mittee is to be a pipeline of mmunication between students the Board." Wood, who is a ed the Board." ent graduate of Washington Colee, is enthusiastic about the ttee and seems to be in time in the students situations. The mittee, which is a standing mittee of the Board of Visitors of Governors, is composed of neen members of the Board, in dition, five students chosen by the dent Government Association. member of the faculty, and the to deans are invited to attend the tings and represent the student dy and faculty. The student replatives for this year are Chip iley, Neal Boulton, Frank egan Jr., Ken Winkler, David aley; the faculty representative is nas Pahon

On October 26, members of ommittee met in order to invescare some complaints which had ten voiced by students. The com-

ley amendment on the student judicial system. Brian Kehoe, the legal representitive of the board, provided information on this topic

Wood stated that overall the Committee did not find the food disagreeable and they believe that a stiff alcohol policy is needed in order to curb the abuse of alcohol on campus. Nonetheless they were upset by the severe overcrowding of dorms and plan to recommend to the Board that something be done soon to improve the living situations in the dorms." said Wood. She feels that it is essential for students to have lounges in which to study and socialize. She believes that the recommendations of the committee will be taken seriously into account

In the future the committee would like to become more visible on campus. According to Wood, "They would very much like to establish hours in which students car come and discuss problems and voice their opinions. Wood and Board Member

Claire Ingersoll plan to begin eating in the Dining Hall at lunch time to hopefully become aware of student's needs by talking to them during lunch. The committee wel-

Senior chem major Laura Kerbin demonstates acid-based reactions in the lobby of Dunning Hall to celebrate National Chemistry Day.

They would very much like to establish hours in which students could come and discuss problems and voice their opinions."

ints included the quality of food he dining hall, the new alcohol er-crowding of dorms

Five representatives of the and were present; However Ment representatives were not ent and only one provided an

Matt Keller, RA from the on floor of Kent House, attended well as Brenda Conner and Ra-Smith, representatives from the Ment Conduct Council. nbers ate dinner in the cafeteria, insome time in the Coffee House then were taken on a tour of

Among topics discussed the ramifications of the Buck comes input on anything that has to do with student life on campus. disy in the Coffee House, and the Wood noted the absense of a woman on the committee, and would like women to add their imput.

Keller stated that the ond was disappointed because the committee receives a large amount of input; however, it "needs to do something concrete to show students that the recommendations they make are taken seriously and the committee is effective." says

> If students are interested in meeting with Mrs. Wood or members of the committee on an informal basis they should contact Student Affairs to arrange for an appointment.

Spilich Researches Memory Defects

searchers has devised a drug which improves the memory in senile and dementing patients, and extends the useful life of senile dementia victims by as long as two years. Encephaabol (also Pyritinol) has been found to increase blood flow to the central cerebral hemispheres affected by senile delemia, and improve memory by as much as 20 George J. Spilich, chairman of the Phycology at Washington College, is one of the member of this team of physicians and biomedical researchers examining the effects of the nontropics drugs for specific, disease related dementia. Though the agents are of no help in the severly demented, they do enhance cognition and memory in patients less debilitated. The drugs appear to protect memory from futher deterioration, rather than restore it to predemential leverls. They are not available on the U.S. market, but are being studied in clinical trials throughout the coun-relatively new nootropic drug, sig- reported significant side effects.

nificantly improves memory performance in patients with Alzheimer's disease, and may also be effective in patients with multiinfarct dementia. In a ten week trial period in a Yogoslav nursing home, 52 patients were treated with either pyritinol or placebo. The effects were measured by using a new test of cognitive impairment, the Contextual Effects upon Test Memory, which appears to be a more valid and reliable measurement of comprehension that the more common geriatric rating scales and neurologic tests, Spilich says.

Using this test, Spilich and his fellow researchers found that senile dementia patients who were taking pyritinol recalled significantly more than those taking placebo-recalling more than they had before the study began and more than they had in either the placebo or baseline trials. Patients suffering from multi-infarct dementia exhib ited improvement in the free recall and recognition while on the drug, although the advantage over placebo and baseline trials was not Spilich says that pyritinol, a significant, None of the patients

Arena Registration Scheduled

by Andrea Kehoe Course registration for the spring semester will be held on Sunday, November 22 at 2:00 p.m. in the rear of Cain Gymnasium. The arena, which requires that all professors are present and grouped by department to allow for direct signup for classes, was scheduled by the faculty at last Monday night's meet-

Students will be admitted to the arena by class, in descending order of seniority. Those rising to the next class by the end of the semester will be allowed to register with that

Upperclassmen unable to attend the arena with their class will be admitted with classes below them. Also, late registration will be conducted in the Registrar's Office Continuing Education students will register with the freshmen or after Advising will occur Tuesday, November 10: no classes will be held that day. Students must have their program cards to register. Further details about the arena such as the specific time set for each class to sign up for courses - will be announced in a letter to students.

"I think once everyone goes through it once they'll like it." said David Butters, Registrar.

Inside... Interview with William Styron..p5 Tennis.....p6 Field Hockey.....p6

Cohen Reading.p7 Movie Preview..p7

Tuesday, Nov. 10: Advising Day

Editorial

Death, Taxes, And Writing Seminars

As predictable as the Birthday Ball or May Day is the annual inquiry as to the worth of the Sophomore Writing Seminar (SWS). Last month, the Dean's office surveyed junior and senior seminar veterans asking whether they feel the program had improved their writing and what recommendations, if any, they have for change, Unfortunately, any decisions about the seminar's future must be made from the results of fewer than 70 responses, as a large number of past participants failed to return the questionnaires. Despite what would seem to be a lack of concern on the part of students, we hope that the administration will have the insight to consider that the Sophomore Writing Seminar is indeed a continuing controversy. Complaints about the occasional necessity of producing work specifically for the seminar, the difficulty of critiquing work from an unfamiliar discipline in an unfamiliar form, and the lack of valuable comments from peers are as frequent as the mealtime moaning over orange-brown potatoes.

Certainly, the improvement of writing skill is a worthy goal, Were Voluntary but this program fails to do that. Perhaps one of most significant absurdities of the seminar is that one does not fail for poor writing but for poor attendance. The outcome of this is that some of the finest writers in the College, because their participation lags due to the amount of time they spend on academic, journalistic and creative writing, fail, or come close to failing, the seminar. Ironically, the time required to attend the sessions takes such students away from their poetry and prose.

The Student Academic Board recently released a statement on the seminars that deserves serious attention. Given the complaints about the current SWS, they propose instead to require sophomores to visit the writing lab, which was recognized as invaluable to the academic program, a specific number of times during the year, the frequency to be determined by the College.

Under such a scheme, no additional burden is imposed on those who are already enthusiastic users of the writing lab, while those who have not previously sought the help of the tutors will be exposed to the program. Students can schedule their visits to fit their needs; those who have few papers to write for classes can revise letters for summer jobs or study abroad as necessary throughout the year.

This eliminates the problems created by "invented" work when due dates for papers do not conform to the biweekly seminar schedule and frees the tutors to meet with students who genuinely need and want assistance. Moreover, it does not require English majors to try to find something to say about a psych lab report when they have no idea what the format should be.

Perhaps death and taxes are inevitable, but the Sophomore Writing Seminar, and the proposed junior seminar, are not.

Washington College Elm

| Edite                     |                |
|---------------------------|----------------|
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Kehoe   |
| News Editor               | Tony Caligiuri |
| Features Editor           |                |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekman   |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Jenny Eisberg  |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Balze  |
| Graphics Editor           | Todd Kar       |
| Mana                      |                |
| Managing Editor           |                |
| Advertising Manager       | Mariella Ruiz  |
|                           |                |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and am weeks.

Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed colu taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editor cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that cannot arways putting every factor received and some must be shortened. I note that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and department. major. Facility and surf members should notice their positions and oppartments. Lund istates to doll work or less and include day and overlap plane numbers in the the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mainted of Tac Erg, of Washington College, Chestertown, Marjand 21620. Letters become the professor for The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be considered for publication in his week's fossur.

The Eim's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Anne lorunitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

E-22222 THERE'S A NEW THREAT IN THE CAPETERIA ... MORE HORRIFYING THAN THE SALAD BAR. MORE INSIDIOUS THAN THE CHUNKY ORANGE-BROWN OVEN-ROASTED POTATOES .... IT'S THE STUDENT-SLAYING GREEN DIVIDERS!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Translations To the Editor:

Members of the Spanish

Club who participated in the transla tion of the posters on Nicaragua did so on a voluntary basis. Our reason for assisting in this project was a love of the Spanish language and an interest in other cultures, not for any political reason or belief.

As students in a liberal arts college, I hope that we will always be given the opportunity to read about and to hear many points of view, allowing us to form our own opinions. Isn't this one of our basic freedoms as Americans?

As one of the translators, and typist for this effort, I learned a great deal about Nicaragua, her people, and her problems. But more importantly, it was a learning experience for us all. And - that is why we are Very truly yours. Mary Ellen Larrimore, 86 Vice President, Spanish Club P.S. For those who have not seen the posters, they are on exhibit, with translation, in Miller Library.

Lectures Allow Differing Viewpoints

I normally refrain from commenting on the viewpoints expressed in letters to the editor. However, I cannot allow Susan Huck's charges in the October 30 sue to go unchallenged.

To the Editor:

Ms. Huck's reference to my "collection of propaganda posters" on Nicaragua does not bother me. What does concern me is her accusation that speakers with "other points of view" from those expressed by Mr. Ruchwarger and myself have not been invited to Washington College.

Ms. Huck would have us believe that Adis Vila, Constantin Menges, Robert Duemling, and

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM! Excellent income! Details, send self-addressed, stamped envelope WEST, Box 5877, Hillside, NJ have spoken passionately at Washington College in support of the Reagan administration's policy toward Nicaragua, never set foot on campus

Come on, Susan. because YOU weren't here doesn't mean their lectures never happened. Your letter displays the same problem as the current administration's characterization of Nicaragua - willful distortion of

> Sincerely. Daniel L. Premo

Parking Problems

I am writing in regard to the parking problem being experienced on campus recently. The problem, put quite simply, is that there are not nough parking spaces on campus for the existing number of cars. As we all know, enrollment has been on the increase for the last couple of years and this year's student population is the largest in the history of the college. Well, that's fine, but just as in the cases of housing, academic facilities, and dining hall space, the options for parking need to be increased commensurately. With a greater number of students, there should, logically, be a greater number of cars. Statistically, this must be the case since the availability of parking spaces seems to be the lowest I have seen in my three years here. And I know I am not the only student to voice this observation three floor dormitory, and the area designated to us for parking our vehicles is an unlined space that contains, legally, about seven cars maximum. So we park in the Reid parking lot or the Minta Martin lot. Of course, this displacement merely aggravates the problem for those residents, but what are we supposed to do? Some students have been parking in the hospital lot, but recently they have been warned about,

HELP WANTED

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at

home! Write: P.O. Box 17.

Clark, NJ 07066

I live in Caroline House, a

Harris Whitheck Sr., all of whom and threatened with, the towing

As I see it, there are tw major problems and one miso problem stemming from the lacks parking spaces. First of all, it is hassle for students. We, as colleg students, have other things to wee about and do than parking our car We have been advised to park in Bi Smith but I don't think that should be necessary. If this were a large university I could see it, but it small college, students' cars should be more accessible than that h inclement weather or when one ha luggage or other parcels, parking close to one's residence should be considered a luxury or a mirade but a given fact that can be rele upon consistently

Secondly, there is the issued parking tickets. Parking illegally wrong but until proper facilities provided, it is unfair for studen who do put out the effort to find legal space and finally, in frustrain and anger, park illegally, to be charged for doing so. It is obvious that security has an obligation it carry out their duties, but underth given conditions, those tickets at on the administrations' heads.

Finally, with such over crowding, there is a lot of potential for minor fenderbenders and scrapes. Luckily, there seems to have been little, if any, incidences this as yet, but there are literal accidents waiting to happen allow campus. Anyone could easily his five cars driving through some our parking lots. I can't count it number of times I've had to juit centimeters while squeezing to tween two, or more, cars in carro

There will soon be a peak circulating requesting that the po tential addition of parking areas investigated and acted upon. [10] students to sign this petition once the petition is in the President hands, I urge him to give this math his immediate attention. Sarah Marin

BABYSITTER NEEDEL Transportation necessary

2 young children Friday nights 6:30-10 pm call WC ext 441

Writing Seminar Is A Farce

If success is measured by meeting that no matter how well a person writes, he can always improve his skills. To that end, the classes. Nice idea. Rather neat.

Regardless of its basic concept, the geminar is a ridiculous and insulting endeavor. The idea of a required seminar is not only unproductive to those competent enough to compose prose thhat is grammatically corret and well-organized, but it is also useless practice. When I sat in the seminar, I neceived no significant instruction from my rules of grammar I stated about a submission a the first meeting: Commas should be pendent clauses, and verbs should agree with who should be responsible for improving his goals, then the sophomore writing seminar is their subjects. No one stirred. My instructor's failure. The seminar is based on the concept response: "Very observant." I kept quiet after

The seminar instructors plan to help purpose goal of the seminar is to aid students students with writing for classes, and not helpful to be in a seminar with others of equal to teach, as part of its curriculum, grammar ules, however, cannot be planned with strict regularity. Seminar leaders encourage students to plan ahead, which is ludicrous; it cannot always be done. A student can plan his own time (or he shouldn't be in college in the first place) but not to the point of producing some work on a paper every other Monday for required interferences such as the seminar.

The solution to this circus already exinstructor, Mrs. Alice Goodfellow, or the ists: The writing lab. The writing lab is not other students. Also, I recall two specific only the appropriate solution, but also the appropriate degree to which the College should respond to students seeking help with Haced before conjunctions introducing inderegarding the seminar ask one question in particular that is disconcerting: Would it be college. It simply is not the College's purpose

Michael Rudin

tempt to discover flaws to be rectified, and revolves to the original concept: all writers that the seminar, itself, is a flaw in a liberal arts can improve themselves. That is true, but the design, this question is untenable because it proper course for a student with the desire to perpetuates thoughts on the seminar's continuation. The sophomore writing seminar (i.e. his peers or the writing lab), not for the operates outside of the liberal arts perspec- College to establish involuntary aid, such as tive. How would students be divided into the sophomore writing seminar, which, for all groups of similar abilities? By some objective practical purposes, is a farce, michael Rudin is a senior English major.

A test to determine a student's writing ability? If a student cannot organize his The surveys that have been circulated thoughts and present them in an intelligent manner, then he should not be enrolled in and composition skills, nor should it be. The writing lab exists for this purpose.

To subject the entire student population to a bogus composition requirement to reach students who lack refined writing skills Aside from the fact that surveys at- is not only wrong, but also ineffective. Which better himself is to seek out others to help him

ISSUE: How effective is the Sophomore Writing Seminar?

Steve Attias Sophomore Lutherville, Md.

Carter Boatner Innior Arlington, Va

Beth Jarrett Sophomore Baltimore, Md.

Pamela Denney Sophomore Dover, Delaware

Dave Johnson Sophomore Queenstown, Md.

Thelieve the Sophomore Writing "The Sophomore Writing Seminar" "For the most part, I think it's bene. "I think the initial intent of the writ-"Not very." Writing is a personal Seminar is a waste of time. I think it is a good idea, however, I found it ficial because several critics are ing seminar was to improve the thing. A class of nine or ten just isn't would be more beneficial for stu- effective only when I had outside always better than one. However, I composing ability of the second deas to use the writing lab as time writing assignments to work on and do find it annoying that I have to get year students, but no one really geared to in depth review or interpretation. One on one like the writup at 8:00 A.M. for a class that I am takes it seriously. They attend the ing lab is the only way I've gotten not receiving adequate credit for." seminar because they have to." anything accomplished.'

tine in class sessions." Campus Voices

by Susan H. Stobbart

Participants Determine Effectiveness

Writing Program in a catch-22 position. If we aswer, "very effective," we're ignoring a Room Elm article and pretending student inplaints don't exist. If we reply, "not at all fective," we deny the validity of the semias and call into question our own work. The ruh lies, as it frequently does, in the more abiguous world where answers are not back or white, but complex, multi-hued agg, difficult to pin down.

The question, how effective are be seminars, immediately raises more: which ninar, at what time, on what day? You see, e answer to the first depends on the answers the others because the effectiveness of the onnarisn't constant or uniform. Some days tee a student wants to recycle a paper that's beaty been submitted to a course, and anthas no idea what to present to the group the group, and you have the makings of—dare ase his courses demand little or no writwe say it?—an ineffective seminar session. and a third has a paper due soon but has Noff starting it, while still another dashes smething, anything... well, you get the sincerely wants help with a paper that chal-struggle is all to the good.

Image Seminars? Such a question places the early in the morning or at the end of a long day; stir in a liberal mixture of personalities, the student who's as silent as a Trappist monk, another who's convinced his work far excels his peers', the third who'd rather walk naked down High Street than expose his writing to submits an autobiographical essay required one described above take place on our cam for study abroad, and still another brings a pus. They're not pipe dreams, though admitrevision incorporating suggestions from a previous session, then "effective" seems too mild a word to describe what takes place. Bodies hunch over the papers, eyes scan from line to line, lips move, trying to catch the rhythm and sound of alternatives to what's been written. As one student ventures a suggestion, then another, the sparks begin to fly, question giving rise to question, response triggering response. Nothing too grand or too small escapes attention: "But what's the point you're trying to make?" or "Do commas come inside or outside quotation marks?" energy flows, and the sum of that energy is greater than its parts. That's why no individual writing conference, no matter how valuable, can ever capture the dynamics of a seminar. The experience is intense and even exhausting, but the students leave knowing more about writing than when they came: that writers struggle to make meaning. Some encouraging, constructive help in that tedly they're rarer than the first scenario. We've experienced both extremes and all the gradations between the two. We know that seminars are hard work for no academic credit and depend on the students' willingness to give and receive honest response to writing they've a stake in. Ultimately we know what should be transparently obvious: the Sophomore Seminars are as effective as the participants make them.

> Alice Goodfellow. Gerry Fisher and Gail Tubbs

Alice Goodfellow, Gerry Fisher, and Gail Tubbs are tutors in the Writing Lab.

Fascism is efficient throwing up isn't. DON'T DO IT, little Mike and Toddy.

We love you, The Guardian Witches

Briefly...

Freshman Elections

Freshman class elections will be held on Tuesday, November 10 in front of the dining hall during lunch and dinner hours. Petitions are available for the offices of president, vice-president, secretary, and and treasurer in the Student Affairs Office. The deadline for the submission of petitions is Monday, November 9.

Chess Club

The O'Neill Literary House is sponsoring a new Washington College Chess Club. Interested Students met to discuss organizational plans for the year yesterday in the Lit. House. Among the topics discussed were the the stucture of a club, the purchase of supplies, and the organization of a tournament. The club is opened to any interested

Simon Reading

Kate Simon, author of two autobiographical works, Bronx Primitive and A Wider World , gave a reading at Washington College on Tuesday, November 3, in the Sophie Kerr Room of the Miller Library. Simon, who was sponsored by the Sophie Kerr Lecture Series, has written extensively on her travels through Mexico and Europe. She is probably most noted for her work New York Places and Pleasures

Dr. George Spilich of the Psychology Department; see article, page 1

If you would like to write

news for the

Elm. contact

Tony Caligiuri

778-5489

Tenure Awarded

who retired as Washington's direct

MOM's Cookie Jar

naid for by the W.C. dining service

On behalf of the Dining Service Staff, I would like to extend congratulations to the Dining Service "Employee of the Month", Jerome Lindsey. Keep up the good work Jerome!!

It was brought to my attention, at a recent S.G.A. Food Service Committee meeting, that certain students are not bussing their trays at lunch or dinner. Also, certain groups are regularly leaving food on the floor under and around their tables. Bussing tables is a rule of the dining hall, and if you are caught not clearing your dishes and trays, you could be fined. Food fights are another NO NO! This practice will not be tolerated. So, please make life easier for all of us, BUS YOUR TABLES and NO MORE FOOD Next Wednesday, November 11th, the Dining Service is planning a "Roarin '20's Dinner". The menu will feature Hot Wings, Pork Patties, Mini Egg Rolls, Tiny Quiche, Steamed Mussels, assorted sliced and cold salads.

The student's Traditional Thanksgiving Dinner will be held Wednesday, November 18th. Be sure to pick-up your reservation form from the numbers lady, fill it out and return it to the numbers lady by the end of the dinner meal Friday. November 13th. Your reservation form must include reservations for parties of four or eight people and the seating time.

There will be a pre-dinner reception in the Student Center beginni at 3:30 P.M. Reserved seating to dinner will begin at 4:30 PM Those who do not make reserva tions will be seated last (at approximately 6:30 P.M.). One other this

YOU MUST BRING YOUR ID CARD to be admitted for dinner

As in previous years, the S.G.A is sponsoring the "Give-a-Birth program, affording students a opportunity to donate their Thanks giving turkeys to the Kent Count Department of Social Service which will be distributed to people less fortunate than ourselves. R every eight students who done their turkey, a turkey will be given a needy family. Just remember receive credit for the "Give-a-Bird program, you must attend the dis

A special THANK YOU toth members of the S.G.A. Food Sen ice Committee for all their efforts planning for the Thanksgiving Di

Hopefully the student body wi ing Dinner a great success.

That's all for this week. Remen ber, if anyone has any comments suggestions, put them on the sa gestion board in the main dirin room or contact the Supervisor Duty Until .MOM week...

Elizabeth Baer, Dean of the College, announced at last Monday's faculty meeting that the Board of Visitors of Governors has endorsed the awarding of tenure to Professors Juan Lin, physics, and Terry Scout, business management The Board also awarded Ed Athey, tor of athletics last semester, with emeritus status

> Store Fully Stocked For Christmas

SHOP EARLY

BRAMBLE'S

Traditional Clothing For Men and Women

335 High St. Chestertown, MD 21620 778-6090

OUTDOORSMAN

available

Forneys Jewelers

778-1966

Chestertown

Chestertown Centreville Representative/ Harriet Gearh Airlines • Steamship • Railroad • Hotels Tours • Car Rental • Travel Insurance

liam Styron:

During William Styron's pose you could say had historical beginning on Wednesday, overtones, but I'm not a historical ker 28, he visited with many novelist. I just happened to, at one ats to discuss his life and catime, to focus on a matter which was sawriter. Since English is one historical. I did that for obvious largest majors, and writing reasons. I was interested in the withe board is highly stressed at subject, and had for many years mington College, interest when I was younger, in my twenties, with was younger, in my twenties, the professional level is great. ery as a subject and with Nat Turner svisit began with a luncheon in particular. I collected informadby faculty and students. This he author the chance to meet rally with students, and to chat them about shared interests. continued meeting with stuna history class and creative g classes. His visit culminapublic reading of a novel-

College, he met with mem-Wege Review staffs.

od in history and another very important, but that even more and Sophie's Choice, I sup-important, almost, is the degree that time and then finally in the early 60's decided to write about Nat Turner and did. Several years later the book was published. What turned out to be the most useful thing you learned in col-

I think learning how to write or learning how to read, both. I think to Before Styron left Wash- be a writer, you have to read a lot and I more or less got involved in the The Elm and The Washing- habit of reading in college and kept on through my life, so I would say that would be the most important fid you become a historical single factor. I also took a creative writing course at Duke, and that was In not a historical novelist, I very valuable. The two together wrote one novel that was were essential. I think that college is

Influencing Future Writers

you can dispense with college... There have been writers such as Faulkner who never went to college. He took a few courses at Old Miss and dropped out, what he claimed he did was learn how to read. I'm not trying to minimize the importance of college what I am is that essential to the whole thing is reading. What was the creative writing course like? Well, it was tough. I had a professor named Blackburn who I became very fond of and very friendly with and he was a man of great sensitivity and great forcefulness and sympathy and also great encouragement He encouraged me to write and he was partially responsible for my becoming a writer

How do you feel that your own writing has changed since you began writing?

Well, I'm not really sure. I don't think it's changed a great deal. I think your personality is fairly well fixed by the time you're, I'm guessing, ... twenty-five, it's probably by that time you're set into a mold pretty much as a writer by that time; and my first novel was published when I was twenty-six, I finished it when I was twenty-five, it's a work which I think still has strengths, I know it's still very much in print, people still read it, and therefore I don't feel that there's been. Obviously changes of ideas and philosophies and all that, but my style has more or less remained the same

Did you write for any publications when you were in college; any journalistic or literary magazines?

Yes. I wrote for the newspaper and the literary magazine. I went to school at Davidson College, which I went to in North Carolina, before I went to Duke and I was rather closely involved with the literary magazine there and then when I got to Duke I was also involved with the literary magazine, at Duke, and so it was part of my development. Did you meet any favorite or famous authors while you were at college who maybe influenced you in your writing?

I was saying. At that time I read alot should be expected to be. You can and that was the point I was trying to hope that more people read than do, make earlier; ... there was a lot of I think always, but I don't think that reading I absorbed and again I would be foolish to try to catalogue them, because I was just reading everything from Elizabethans; to the Greeks, to the 19th century, to the Russian poets, to the 20th century American writers to the, you know, everything. I don't mean I read every single thing, but I read a great deal and that was very impor-

How does it make you feel knowing that we as prospective writers look up to you and that we are going to read your work and it's going to influence our writing? Well, I think that would make me feel good. That's why people write isn't it? I think it's a myth and not honest when authors and writers say they write for themselves, they don't care who reads it. I don't think that's honest. I think you write in order to be read by people and when you're able to influence people through your writing it's a very important and gratifying thing, so I'm happy to have that happen. I mean if I felt for instance, in this stage of my career that all of my writing had just gone down the drain, no one read it, I would feel very unhappy. I would have wished I had become a Pontiac dealer or something. But you know I have pretty good evidence that my work is widely read, and not only in colleges, but you know, in the whole world. I mean one of the things that most Americans, I think because we're so far away from the rest of the world, forget is that our writing is read all across the world, Europe, Asia, and so on. And some of us, myself included, most of our income comes from foreign countries where there are constant translations, and this is a very gratifying sort of thing to have happen. What do you think about the state of reading in the country now? Do you think reading has become an elitist sort of thing?

I think reading has always been an Well, of course I had tremendous elitist [activity]. I think [it is] in any input from other writers. I didn't culture. It's never been the occupa

...elitist really means much. Recause I think it's always been elitist. When I say elitist I mean a tiny fraction of the population. We live in a country, however of 225 million, we should have more readers. but we do have a fairly large, fragmented, small minority of very passionate readers; maybe 2 or 3 or 4% of that, but that's the way it's always been and always will be. I don't know if I'd be happy being read by the same people who enjoy Love Boat. You know, I'd be embarassed by the fact. There's no possible way to cross over. You can't expect the entire population to be people who read . . . Ernest Hemingway, so I think one can always hope for more readers and hope that education allows it to happen. But, since that's not really possible, you just hope for the best and are happy with the people you have.

Do you consider yourself an intellectual?

I don't really know what intellectual means. I suppose, I've never been able to properly work that question out because I don't think the word intellectual is properly defined I think every writer partakes of some degree to be an intellectual. I don't consider myself a pure intellectual, I suppose.

Unfortunately, William Styron's schedule did not allow him to go on in any further detail about his career. He concluded his visit with a luncheon at Professor Robert Day's home and returned to his work. He leaves us to wonder what influence his novels will have on the young writers of Washington College. Will these writers be affected by his words, both on paper and in speech? And will those same writers influence the novelists of tomor-

This interview was conducted by Jennifer M. Harrison, Alison K. Auber and Andrea Kehoe

KEEP YOUR SUMMER TAN WITH OUR SUNTANA SUN SYSTEM

at

EMILY HAIRDRESSER

Rt. 213 across from Bowling Lanes

Complete line of EDKEN & PAUL MITCHELL Full Service Salon

Call 778-2686

Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30-9:00 Closed Sundays & Holidays

Stam Drug Co. 215 High Street

Chestertown, Maryland 778-3030

- · Greeting Cards
- Cosmetics • Russell Stover
- Candy • Soda Fountain

SPORTS

Shoremen Review

Field Hockey

(Season: 9-7; MAC: 2-4)

Saturday, the W.C. women closed out a successful season with a win and a loss at the Washington (DC) Colleges Field Hockey Association Tournament.

The women won easily in their first game, 6-1 over Trinity College. Beth Matthews had two goals and three assists, bringing her team-leading total points for the season to 25 (14G, 11A). Carole Reece scored two goals and two assists, while Erin O'Neal and Sandy Coulter scored a goal each.

Catholic University, whom the women upset earlier in the year, defeated W.C. in the second game, 2-1. The lone scorer for the Shorewomen was O'Neal. Linda Anders and Sarah Coste played well in goal, keeping the women close despite being outshot 37-18. As of the latest ranking, the Shorewomen were ranked 11th in the region.

(Season: 3-8-3: MAC 0-4-1)

The men hung tough against MAC opponent John's Hopkins on Saturday, but again lacked scoring punch, losing 1-0 and managing only three shots. John Thomas was again good in goal, recording ten saves (Season: 14-20; MAC: 1-4) Last Wednesday, the women dropped a pair, losing to Franklin & Marshall, 12-15, 15-0. 3-15, 9-15, and Del Tech Stanton Community College, 0-15, 3-15.

At the Chesapeake Women's Athletic Conference (CWAC) tourney, the Shorewomen managed a second place finish among the five participants.

By beating St. Mary's, 15-3, 15-10, and Marymount, 15-10, 15-8, on Friday, and then Goucher College, 15-7, 7-15, 15-8, on Saturday, they gained the championship match against Galludet, which they dropped, 5-15, 5-15. Debbie Cohn was named All-Conference Player in the Tournament

Cross Country:

(Season: 0-10; MAC: 0-4) The men dropped their final two races of the season Saturday in Westminster, MD, where they lost to Western Maryland College, 34-21. and Lebanon Valley College, 44-15. Sean Ireton was the top finisher with a time of 30:40. All season long lack of participants plagued the Shoremen, causing several forfeitures.

Swimming:

(Season: 0-0, MAC 0-0) The women surprised some people at the MAC relays, finishing third in the 200 Freestyle Relay and fourth in the Medley Relay.

A team record of 1:55.59 was set in the 200 Freestyle, breaking the old record of 1:56.84 established at last year's MAC championships. Swimming in the race were Liz Whelan, Vicky Carroll. Samantha Streamer, and Cathy Carlson In the 300 Butterfly Relay Streamer, a freshman, set a new record in the 100 Butterfly, with a time of 1:17.86, almost two seconds better than the old record.

The 200 Medley relay team of Jenny Korten, Whelan, Carroll and Carlson finished fourth with a time of 2:15:30.

Other competing schools included Dickenson, Elizabethtown, Western Maryland, Scranton, and Ursinus.

Basketball:

Although the regular season remains two weeks away, the men gave an in-service/demonstration of their skills to young at the Benedictine School in Ridgely on Wednesday night.

Said Coach Finnegan: "This is something that we wanted to do for these kids. Many of them enjoy the sport, and by strengthening their technical skills they can learn to take great pride in their accomplishments

Young, WC Gain National

Attention by Fred Wyman

First year Coach Holly Bramble's recruiting efforts are already paying dividends as evidenced by her team's performance at the Eastern Regional Small College Tennis Championships held at Trenton State University last week-

Last year the W.C. netters finished dead last at the East's most elite tournament. This year the team of Mimi Young, Lisane Monforton, Emily Bishop, Lindsay Tanton, and Meg Wheatley placed sixth out of nineteen teams. Every member of the team won at least one match in the tournament that features the top Division II and III players in the northeast Freshman Mimi Young, continuing from her earlier successes. paced the Shorewomen winning three matches and advancing to the quarterfinals of the three day event.

Young defeated Barb Kouvel of Mount St. Mary's, Army's Ellen Dexter, and unset Skidmore All-American Heidi Heusner before bowing to Sara Hurst of Connecticut College, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5, in the quarterfinals

The victories should place Young in the national rankings, a first for Washington College Women's Tennis.

Run For Turkeys

Saturday, November 14th at 2:00p.m., a five mile run will take place to benifit area families at Thanksgiving time.

Dubbed the "Turkey Trot." teams will consist of four members, two male and two female, with a least one student and one faculty or staff mamber Registration: Nov 9-11, 11:30-

I p.m in the Dining Hall.

WC Saves the Best For La Eight Selected For SEFHA Tourney

by Phil-Tom Jackson

Last week I wrote about the some goals that may have so goals that coach Diane Guinan set impossible. Well, the W.C. for this year's Women's Field Hockey Team did achieveous goal last weekend. Hockey team. Earlier in the season I Goal Number Seven was wrote that this same team would be as good as they wanted to be. Well What a difference a year the Shorewomen put both ideas together last Saturday and not only

> At the Washington Area Colleges Tournament, the Shorewomen defeated Trinity, 6-1, to move into the semi-finals against Catholic University. This set the stage for finding out what really happened to Catholic in Never Never land during the season, when > the Shorewomen upset them, 2-1. When the final whistle sounded, the truth was clear to everyone. Although Catholic came out on top 2-1, it was Catholic who heads were hanging. W.C. played their best game of the season. Catholic found scoring against W.C. hard, with very few opportunities to score. And when they did, the other teams could see a look of relief in Catholic's faces. When the game was over Catholic knew that facing Georgetown would be easier than the game they had just finished.

I don't know and I'm sure that the W.C. players are not really sure what came over them, but what did came at the right time. Next season these ladies will remember Halloween of '87, when they decided to play better than they were able to all That's all for this week, catch you.... Oh sorry ladies! I almost forgot. Wait one minute .... Oh yes, here it is. Students of W.C. read this: Extra, Extra, W.C. Field Hockey Scores Big Dag (oops) Eight

Now people just one more remembering lesson, then class is dismissed. Last week I wrote about you next season. And good ing four players selected to on in the SEFHA tournament We their four in. And five. And st. two more after that. That's isn't it. It was eight back a outplayed themselves, but raised a number of eyebrows at the same grade, at least.

"Never mind last year Tom, write the story!"

"Yes Amy!" That was Amy Tichel with team captains Beth Man and Kathy Kilroy was select the team. Joining them are ( Reece, Stephanie Milton E Schiminger, Donna White Linda Anders. Matthews, h

Carrie Blackburn, & Coulter, Stacey Maenner, & McCurdy, Erin O'Neal, and Coste, who along with Ander Trnity and Catholic scoringui points, declined to go for set because of other committee As a team, the Shorey achieved their first winnings 9-7 defeated a nationally team, and defeated their first team. They scored 38 goals pared to 17 last year. They assist, compared to 2 last year they ranked 11th in the Soul region, the first time they have been ranked. These are big at ments over the past two sa when their reconds were 3-91 6 respectively.

The W.C. eight will play weekend at Goucher Colla Towson, where they go for sweep and achieve goal N Eight: one player selected

Nationals, and an All-Amen Thanks for the ride lade

Amity Bakery and Coffee Shop

Donuts, French Loaves & Italian Breads Rolls, Pies, Cookies, cial Occasion Cakes On Order. Breakfast 5 A.M.-11 A.M. Lunch - Soups & Sandwiches Kent Plaza, Chestertown 778-2228

Mon.-Sat. 5 A.M.-S P.M Sunday 5 A M . 2 P M

Colev Charlie Laura

Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists A & P Parking Lot Chestertown, Maryland 21620

open Monday - Saturday

CHESTERTOWN, MD.

phone 778-4771

Need A Job?

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yacht and Country Club $4.00 an hour 778-6765

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS

Br. 213 & 201

Beat The Christmas

Start Your Shopping Early At

THE FINISHING TOUCH

Many gifts, decorative door brass mats, music boxes, and items, stuffed animals much, much more!

> Fine Framing and Artist's Materials (In Stock or To Order)

311 High Street, Chestertown 778-5292

'If We Leave A Reading

will consist of a collection food.

en's short fiction from SUNY at Buffalo in He is teaching at Washington ear as a replacement for Pro-Thomas Cousineau, who is batical. He previously taught ng up in the Catskills - they

On Monday, November 9, short stories Cohen plans to read, og Assistant Professor David "The Three Ugly Jews Go to Bufwill present a reading, en- falo: A Memoir with Jokes," which "If We Leave Now...", as part was previously published in The Monday Series at the O'Neill Uncommon Reader (the only publiy House at 4:30 p.m. Preced- cation, Cohen said, that he likes to admit to), deals with these memo-

Cohen received his B.A. the reading, Cohen said, "I realized there's a lot more possibility in the Oswego State University in that that is a recurrent theme in my and went on to receive an writing - not eating, though that's way I write." Cohen likes looking in Creative Writing from recurrent as well - but the idea of at the narrator and what he is doing, can University, an M.A. in leaving, motion, being away from the State University of home." Another story is about a Another story is about a York at Buffalo, and expects a twelve-year-old boy who runs away finds

'I write almost all my stories in the first person," Cohen said even though they are not, with the exception of "The Three Ugly Jews Go to Buffalo," necessarily autobio-

After writing a paper on served at 4:00 p.m. The ries and these odd trips in search of Albert Camus, Cohen began writing in the first person, rather than After deciding what to call the third person. "I realized that first person narrative, at least the or thinks he is doing, and finding more than the narrator himself

Movie Preview

Rapists Attacked By Female Cyclist

and edited by New York filmaker Lizzie Borden. The film is set in activity of an unusual nature. futuristic American society ten years after a socialist revolution.

The film introduces a number of radical feminist ideas with an underlying sense of humor. Borden's tale is one of a femaledominated society in which women hold the best jobs, and swarms of female bicyclists prey upon wouldbe rapists, much to the chagrin of

Janet Maslin of the New York Times describes the film as "a series

de force produced, directed, provised-sounding political discu sions that finally crupts into terroris

> Born in Flames stars Hone as Honey (Phoenix radio), Adel Bertel as Isabel (Radio Regazza Jeanne Saatterfield as Adelaide Norris, and Flo Kennedy as Zelia

The film is part of the Wash ington College Film Series and will be shown at the Norman James Theatre on November 6, 8, and 9 at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $1.00 fo students, faculty and staff, $2.00 for graduate student at SUNY and Friendship" will be the topic of areas in which issues of values are Guy grew up in Adanta, Georgia. the November program of Wash-The reading is entitled "If we ington College's William James row...," according to Cohen, Forum on Thursday evening, Noke. When he was asked to title vember 12. Dr. Fred Guy, chairman sting, he told them to use that of the Department of History and liwas a phrase used by Cohen Philosophy at the University of is friends while they were Baltimore, will be the speaker.

Trust and Betrayal in Friendship

The William James Forum of depart at two o'clock in the Washington College, now in its 25th conducting in collaboration with ing for some distant town, year, is a student organization which hey would get something to sponsors talks and discussions of "Trust and Betrayal in Love ethics, politics, religion, and other involved.

Love and friendship - and the nature of trust and betrayal have been discussed by philosopherss and theologians for thousands of years. Dr. Guy's talk on these subjects will reflect re- sity of Georgia. searches that he has been recently

Born in North Carolina, Dr. Studying with the aid of a basketball scholarship, he received his B.A. from Auburn University in Alabama, where he majored in philosophy. He later earned his M.A. and

Ph. D. in philosophy at the Univer-Coming to the University of students in his own courses at Balti- Baltimore in 1972, Dr. Guy has since served as acting dean and ber Department of History and Government in 1977. The University of Baltimore enrolls 6,000 undergraduates and 1,000 law students. The average age of students at the University is 26.

The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. in the Hynson Lounge. All are cordially invited to attend without charge and participate in discus-

Chestertown Movie Theater

The Pickup Artist

778-1575

OLD WHARF INN

TOF CANNON ST STERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

BORN IN FLAMES

November 9, 1987 1 hour 30 mi

New York film maker Lizzie Borden's (Working Girls) cináma vérité drama is an engaging futurist them became it is mader them accounts i proving certify onema wind drawn as an engaging flustra-tion of the province of the p

Norman James Theater Friday * Sunday * Monday

Students, faculty and staff - $1 admission

All others - $2

FIRST ANNUAL WASHINGTON COLLEGE

TURKEY TROT

5 Mile Run

Saturday, November 14, 1987

2:00 p.m. at Kibler Field

Individual and Team Competition

Teams must be made up of 5 people and include the following:

2 males

2 females

At least 1 student

At least 1 faculty / staff member or spouse

Individual competition will have male and female categories

Prizes to the top finishers

lst, 2nd & 3rd place finishers in each category will receive <sup>†,$</sup> Ist place finishers in each category will receive a turkey to be donated to a needy family

Registration tables will be set up in the Dining Hall Nov. 9 -11 , 11:30 - 1:00 p.m.

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 11

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, November 13, 1987

Charged with

by Tony Caligiuri Three freshman females

Mary A. Gurney, Amy L.

Student Initiates Activities Supplement

by Marie Ensor Rob Caldwell, a junior major-ng in American Studies believes no the Pegasus yearbook is lack ng in athletics and social life covere. He is taking action by working to the publication of a 35-40 page agazine on photographic memo nes as they happen and as they exist

The Pegasus leaves gaps in college life at Washington College. the structure of the Pegasus is domed. This is partly because of the apathy of the Student Body. I hink I can generate the support we ned. Everyone seems to think this would be a fresh positive voice on ampus," commented Caldwell Ideally the first issue of The Backpage, Caldwell's publication, editor and my goal is to try to obtain would come out before Christmas break, but realistically it looks

The Backpage would only ost one or two dollars, and only a mited quantity would be available tnce a semester. Caldwell is being the past," says Ravanbakhsh. ssisted by Tom Andrews, Chris Drexler, Billy Long, and Sal Bardo with photography and publication. By advertising and selling individual pictures to students Caldwell plans to fund The Backpage. Caldwell also accepts contribu-

Arian Rayanhakheh has been tditor in chief of the Pegasus for the past two years. His staff this year tonsists of freshmen Renee King and Christy McDowell, sophonores Kathy Carlson and Mike lohnson, and juniors Regina Pepper Pegasus. Yes, there are some amand Tim Rohs.

As far as Caldwell's new publication, Arian views the sitution openly, "We're not losing any Naff members, we are doing the best differently," comments Arian. we can with what we have. One hird of the '87-88 yearbook is al-realy completed," says Rava-

Arian admits that problems comes from the student activities Edexist with the Pegasus last year. A picture of a streaking May Day Pericipant on the cover of the supplement created controversy. There were financial problems involving large debt and the Pegasus had a saff of two people.

while intoxicated to a local liquor store. While there, the three wrote onowballs flew high as temperatures dropped drastically during the season's first snowfall.

State House Bound Students serve in the Maryland General Assembly

hy I von Rurris

"This is my second year as some continuity and forget what happened three years ago when three yearbooks ('84,'85, and '86)

came out in one year. But now we sororities, and graduation.

Caldwell had come to me with his ideas and experience for the bivalent and mixed feelings, it's sort of a slap in the face, but I can't oppose him from doing it, I just believe it should have been handled

the Pegasus is still below Arian's expectations, for what it should be.

The Pegasus funding basically pseudo-yearbook, let him do it, more power to him. The competition is healthy, and if it's not, it's just a bunch of hot air," concluded

fee which everyone pays

As it stands now, funding for

"If he wants to publish a

Ten Washington College are always thinking towards the students were recently selected to future while chronically looking at serve as legislative assistants as part of an internship program offered The supplement, which each year through the Maryland comes out erach year in September, General Assembly.

is still available. If anyone is inter-This program, which became ested, supplements may be picked popular during the late sixties and up in Talbot 223. It covers events early seventies, enables interested occuring from mid-February students to participate in the through May, including the Birthlegislative process of Maryland to day Ball, spring sports, fratemities, gain a better understanding of the Legislature and get first hand "Instead of starting someexperience in the political processes thing totally new, I think it would have been more appropriate if Bob of government Washington College gives eight credits (amounting to two fullcredit courses) for participation in the program. Students travel to Annapolis each Tuesday and Thursday, starting with the opening of session in January through its close in April, and work with a senator or delegate they have chosen. Students perform such duties as researching bills for their senator or delegate, doing constituent work, drafting bills, and performing other assorted tasks that are required of them Faculty member Dr. Edward Weissman is the director of the internship program for the Maryland General Assembly at WC. He said that an internship is an invaluable experience, and that "it really makes people grow up." Students not only gain a wealth of new knowledge from their intern experiences, but also "discover how things we teach in class have a passing resemblance to reality.

The ten students who applied and were accepted into the program are: juniors Chad Bentley, Mike Bourjaily, Lynn Burris, Bob Caldwell, Christina Fischer, Greg Johnson, Mariella Ruiz, and Rachel Smith: senior Brenda Conner, and sophomore Karen Reisinger. According to Weissman, students are chosen on the basis of their GPA. writing skills, class, and basic academic qualifications, as well as their interest in and committment to the program. Although many more juniors usually participate in the program, it is open to sophomores and seniors as well who fufill the basic requirements. Also, more Political Science majors serve as interns than students from other majors, although Weissman stresses that the program is not open just to Political Science students. This year alone, two Business Management majors, two American Studies majors and an International Studies student have been accepted as interns. Weissman states, "In the future I would like to see even more

Chad Bentley, a Business Management major, and member of the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity, as well as the Investment Club, German Club, Crew team and this year's junior class treasurer, looks diversity in the program through participation of students from Physics to Music."

things really operate; They see the forward to working in Annapolis in the spring. Says Bentley, "I think it will offer me a chance to be exposed to more than soley the business field...I would like to gain experience and insight in the realm of politics as well."

continued on page 4

Greg Johnson, also a Business Management major, member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity and the Investment Club, wants to get an insider's view as to who influences the types of policies that are made in the legislature. He adds. "I'd like to gain some experience outside of the college and to hopefully see how my business background will fit into a possible political future."

Political Science major Rachel Smith, is an RA for Reid Hall and she chairs the Conduct Screening Board. As a Political Science major, Smith says she hopes to use the internship to "help me find out where I'm going with my thesis". She also believes that internships "give you something classes just can't give you". She adds, "I hope I acquire skills to help me get a look at the reality behind the scenes of the state government."

Brenda Conner is the only senior participating in the internship program next semester. She is a Political Science major, a peer adviser and heads the Student Conduct Council. Conner is looking forward to working in the Assembly to add some "variety" to

Insiode:

Goose Hunting.....p.6 Government Inspector ... p.11

Editorial

Take The Turkey Challenge

Sometimes it seems as though there is much to complain about little to be thankful for. Residents of the Hill Dorms must stoically endure cold showers while nature lovers must watch mums and mulch replace gingko trees.

Nonetheless, as College students, we live as in a Platonic unreality, most of us immune from the actuality of financial hardship Those from blueblood - or rather, blue-chip - backgrounds may have taken a loss in past weeks from precarious Wall Street, but the majority here, even financial aid recipients, live in middle-class comfort

Fortunately, students for whom impoverishment simply means they charged one sweatshirt too many in the bookstore have the opportunity to help out those who must truly sacrifice as the holidays approach. With the traditional Thanksgiving dinner scheduled for next Wednesday, the Dining Service has once again allowed boarding students the option of donating turkeys to the Department of Social Services to distribute to needy local families.

This donation is an easy enough act of charity considering that every student, save vegetarians and those not fond of fowl, will eat turkey when they go home for Thanksgiving. Such a gesture also improves community relations. While Chestertown is a welcoming, friendly place, the crosswalk remains a source of contention, prompting locals even to write the Kent County News to complain of the inconvenience. Perhaps we can best defend our right to cross safely by doing something for the people here.

An incidental word of praise must go to the S.G.A. Food Service Committee for recognizing that diners who do donate their turkey should not be penalized for their generosity. This year, unlike last, all students, and certainly those sans turkey, will be served by volunteer waiters.

The dining service will accept reservations up to Monday; sign un sheets are available from the numbers lady. So gather up a group of three or seven friends and give away that bird.

> Anyone interested in writing news for The Elm should contact Tony Caligiuri, 778-5489

> > Send Letters to the Editor c / o Andrea Kehoe. campus mail

Washington College Elm

|                           | STATUTE PROPERTY.    |
|---------------------------|----------------------|
|                           | Editors              |
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Keho          |
| News Editor               | Tony Caligiur        |
| Features Editor           | Jennifer M. Harrison |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekma          |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Jenny Eisber         |
| Dhotomanhy Editor         | Michele Balz         |
| Graphics Editor           | Todd Kar             |
|                           | Manager              |
| Managing Editor           |                      |
| Advertising Manager       | Erin Hodge-William   |
| Circulation Manager       | Wittiam Faus         |
|                           |                      |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vac-

Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed colu taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editors cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or malled c/o The Elm, Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters become the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be considered for publication in that week's issue.

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Anne dormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Fake I.D. Could Result In Prosecution

To the Editor:

Warning: It has been brought to my attention that the use of false identification in the Coffee House is being dealt with severely. Not only does it jeopardize our privilege of drinking on campus, but students caught with a false I.D. will be turned over to the Chestertown police and prosecuted. A concerned student,

Dan Feiner Junior

Priorities Need Re-evaluation

To the Editor:

It has come to my attention that the Administration of this college is considering additional renovations in the dining lounge.

While this enormous expenditure is still under consideration, I would like to ask whether it is necessary. I know that many students are displeased with the new salad bar, and although the flowers on the front lawn are very nice, I fear that the Administration badly needs to re-evaluate its priorities. The art denartment needs funding; the biology department needs many microscopes and other equipment; the modern language department could use expansion...I am sure the list goes on and on.

If more suggestions are needed, I certainly have some to offer. Perhaps a college-funded weekend van that makes daily trips to Washington and Annapolis for the benefit of students without cars on campus would be a good idea. Perhaps students on scholarships might be allowed to use these monies to study abroad. Perhaps students wishing to take music lessons could do so without the expense of

HELP WANTED TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17, Clark, NJ 07066

dents (i.e., additional parking spaces, renovation of Kent House) might be answered. I understand that certain monies are earmarked for certain projects. However, I am also certain that any true benefactor of the college would like to see his contribution used in the most efficient and effective manner possible. In short, as a concerned student. I beseech the Administration to use any added funds wisely: to further academic programs at home and abroad, and NOT to buy chairs for the dining hall.

Tamara Braunstein

Heat A Luxury In Hill Dorms

Editor's Note: The following is an open letter sent to Clint Baer, director of Planning and Special Projects, and William Coleman, superintendent of Buildings and Grounds.

To the Editor:

The subject of which I write is one you have undoubtedly heard much about, yet after weeks of complaints and requests, the situation only worsens. When requesting residence in one of the "Hill dorms", I realized I would be sacrificing the luxury of carpeted hallways, more modern facilities, and freshly painted rooms, yet there are some problems which seem to be allowed to "slip by" in the Hill dorms just because of their age. The most frustrating situation is the problems with heat and hot water.

It has been joked about, satirized, and seriously brought to the attention of maintenance, yet we still get no relief. It seems the residents of the Hill dorms have two options: ridiculously high room temperatures and hot water or unbearably cold room temperatures

PART TIME - HOME

MAILING PROGRAM!

excellent income! Details, send self-addressed, stamped envelop WEST, Box 5877, Hillside, NJ

7205

having to pay additional costs each and no hot water. Either way (and semester. Perhaps several well- it is never constant) the existing taken points on the part of the stu- conditions make life in East Middle, and West Hall terribly uscomfortable.

It seems ridiculous to hear dorm to the point that it is too up comfortable to work in your room On any given day a passerby can see twenty or thirty fans in the windows of the Hill dorms trying to cool in rooms. It must seem strange to visiting alumni and parents when the college continually raises the acnual cost for a room when thousand of dollars are spent heating domst unbearable temperatures, forcin students to use even more electricit to cool those rooms.

On the other end of the spec trum, it is difficult to expect a sto dent to excell in academic pursuit when living in an unheated domin days at a time. For five days las week, residents of middle hall she had 8:30 classes were left withte hot water in the morning, each day being told by maintenance that he water "should be available by It morrow

Students should not have study elsewhere because the dom are too hot or too cold, nor should they have to walk across campus seven-thirty in the morning search of a dorm with hot was Maybe the students of the F dorms should trek down to Hynson-Ringgold house for 2 shower on those cold mornings. return, I would invite members the administration to spend a w in the Hill dorms. This would be some constructive attention to subject

This situation is not one should have to be dealt with of permanent basis in any dorm. For annual cost of $3,540, I would consider heat a luxury Tony Caligir

NOTICE

Parking is not permitted in the by the Computer Center from speed bump to Campus Av This is a fire lane

EMPLOYMENT

HOMEMAKERS WANTED TOP PAY! C.I. 121 24th A N.W. Suite 222 Norman, Okly homa 73069

Use Existing Funds More Prudently

Government Association for the first time. One of the first things I noticed was the large mount of money that was given to the S.G.A. bran annual budget. I had a problem with this fr two reasons: one, I could not believe that will fall to the level of past administrations. te school would trust students with sums of his proportion, and two, I did not feel that the that current funds are being used properly G.A. was giving the students their money's before doling out additional funds.

over control over the amount or money that student activities fee. All students are S.G.A. possesses, the temptation to mis- charged to attend the majority of S.G.A. so-

but in my opinion the school should make sure wardrobe and present themselves with a cash bonus at the end of the spring semester. This is not to say that this year's executive board

Earlier this year I was elected Dorm use this money exists. Past members of the cial functions. Even then S.G.A. money must events include senate-faculty mixers and hir-Schalor and became involved in the Student S.G.A. executive board have used money often be used to cover losses when these from the budget to extend their bookstore events fail to be profitable. The S.G.A. states that they need more money to completely fund campus clubs. This money would exist Currently, I do not feel that the service in the current budget if efforts were made to When a select group of people are provided by the S.G.A. justifies the allotted break even on social functions and eliminate the allocation of money on events the student Sean Kennedy, a junior philosophy major, body does not choose to support. These is the dorm senator for East Hall.

Sean Kennedy

ing bands for herbal tea night in the coffee house. If such events were eliminated, students would not have to pay a higher student activities fee.

The job of the Student Government Association is to serve the students. As a member of the S.G.A. I feel that we could provide this service with the money we currently have. In the wake of rising tuition costs the students of Washington College deserve a fair deal

ISSUE: Should the student activities fee be raised $15.00, as the S.G.A. senate recently endorsed?

Freshman Easton-on-the-Hill, England

tey make money the old fashioned right?"

Senior McLean, Virginia

g. Instead of just getting the weevils without homes and lem-

Raymond S Crown Junior Annapolis, Maryland

Camille Dickerson Essex, Maryland

Peter T Johnson Sophomore Rochester, New York

stelld be more active in fund rais- with this matter when there are bollcampus take advantage of the activities available to them anyway. Almey from students, why don't mings committing suicide left and though, if the activities were improved, I'm sure students would concern." gladly pay the extra increase for a more visible and active S.G.A.

publications and I don't feel that the poor quality of publications is due to increase in this fee might help to lack of funding, but rather to lack of enhance the range and caliber of

16. The S.G.A. and other groups "Is it necessary to concern oneself "No, I don't think students on this "No. Activities fee goes towards "The funding of student activities is an important part of campus life. An organizations at Washington College."

Campus Voices

vay - Earn It!"

by Susan H. Stobbart

Hike Would Benefit Clubs, Social Life

are seen the tuition steadily increase, and it very likely that it will continue to rise. ation, along with improving standards at to College, are contributing factors to the e. However, the SGA's portion of the lident Activities Fee, which is included in be bintion we pay each semester, has rekintd at $15 for the better part of the last Perhaps previous administrators hught the Student Activities Fee was imune to inflation.

Activities Fee at $15, and full-time undergraduates at 830 makes the budget of the Student Government Association $12,450

Richard MacKnight

Fifty percent of this budget is allocated to dorsement of the senate shows a perspective clubs and organizations, leaving the other of the students and how they might contribute

The S.G.A.'s allocation of the Student fifty percent for Student Activities during the

The senate recently endorsed a proposal to increase the Student Activities Fee by $15, thereby allowing more money for clubs and improving the quality of the social life. It was the consensus of the senate that this increase probably would not send one's parents into a rage at payment time. This ento improving the standards of the college by bettering the quality of student life. This would be a tuition increase we might be able

I believe the $15 increase would create more opportunities for students in many ways, and with this in mind I know of no reasons for not increasing the fee. The ensuing enhancement of one's college career would be the inevitable result of the increase Senior Richard MacKnight, a philosophy major, is the president of the S.G.A.

Dance Coffeehouse Sat. Nov. 14 9:00 - 1:00

Sponsored by Amnesty International

Library Van Schedule

Sat. Nov. 21 9:00 a.m. departure University of Delaware Call Ext. 391 for reservations

Minimum of 5 people must sign up by the Thursday before scheduled date for the trip to take place

Foreign Language Poetry Reading

Wednesday, Nov. 18 8:00 p.m. O'Neill Literary House

Smith Honored

Senator Mathias Recognizes Judge

Society will pay tribute to the honorable Marvin H. Smith, Federalsburg's retired Judge of Maryland's highest court, at the Federalsburg VFW on Friday, Charles McC. Mathias, Jr. will be the keynote speaker at the event, which organizers hope will be a yearly event with a duel purpose: to recognize outstanding Caroline County citizens, and to raise scholarship funds for local students. A 1937 graduate of Washington College in Chestertown Judge Smith has designated his alma mater to receive the scholarship money. Washington College will use the money to assist a Caroline County student attending the College

President Douglass Cater also will be on hand during the testimonial

Judge Smith was born in Federalsburg in 1916, and attended in 1968, a post from which he retired Caroline County public schools. After his graduation from Washing-

The Caroline Honorarium ton College in 1937, he earned a law degree from the University of Mary land in 1941. He served with the U.S. Army Counter Intelligence Corps from 1941 until 1945.

After the war, he established a law practice in Caroline County, and became active in civic affairs. Judge Smith is a Mason, a Rotarian, and a member of the American Legion. He has devoted 20 years to the Boy Scouts as a member of the Executive Board of Del-Mar-Va Council Boy Scouts of

Smith is a past member of the Caroline County Board of Education, serving as its president in 1952-53, and was a member of the Commission to Revise the Criminal Law of Maryland in 1952. He served as Assistant Attorney General from 1953 until 1955, was Washington College chairman of the Trustees of Client's Security Trust Fund from 1966-68. and was a delegate to the Constitutional Convention in 1967-68 Smith was appointed to Maryland's highest court, the Court of Appeals,

Student Conduct Council Case

and signed one stolen check for approximately $65.00 for the purchase of food, cigarettes, and liquor. All three are age eighteen. The second stolen check was said to be destoyed by the responsible party, according

After consulting an attorney the following day, the three went back to the liquor store with a written explanation and $70,00 in cash. Zaring canceled payment on the check, refusing to accept cash from the party in question. Through a second hand source, Brenda Conner. Chairperson of the SCC. learned of the situation and reported

After a 45 minute deliberation, the council found the three responsible as charged and explained the punishment. Each one must pay a $75,00 fine in addition to being placed placed on social and disiplinary probation. For driving while intoxicated the three also had their parking privleges revoked. Social probation involves beeing bared from entering the coffee house and the inability to pledge a greek organization. Disiplinary probation is considered the final step before suspention.

Zaring pointed out that in another situation involving a false fire alarm, two students were automatically suspended, yet in a federal offense such as forgery, the punishment was less severe. Desnite this Conner supported the decision of the Council. Conner, in her role as chairperson, is a non-voting member of the SCC

Zaring had the option, but chose not to report the incident to the local authorities

Student Conduct Council cases, which are now open to the general public, have recently been held in the basement of West Hall or in Smith Hall room 30

Accounting to Bennett

Reprinted from The Washington Post

Education Secretary Donnatt and his damuties show sime of premature battle fatigue. Assistant Secretary Chester Finn (Washington Post, October 20) accuses me of creating a villain of his boss "in one op-ed piece after another" including my "latest salvo" carried in The Post on October 7. He questions why I am so "agitated." The facts: I have written only twice: once in reply to Bennett's New York Times article last February entitled "Our Greedy Colleghes," and the second time in The Post responding to Finn's testimony before the House Higher Education Subcommittee where he echoed Bennett's claim that our colleges are "underproductive and unaccountable." The Assistant Secretary reminds me of the town complains if you appear a mite riled. Finn explains the cause for agitation of "Cater and his colleagues in private higher education," by declaring: "What they cannot abide is the possibility that the true cost of a bachelor's degree in a private college - and it's the cost to the institution we are referring to, not the price charged the tuition-paying consumer - may actually exceed that of a similar degree from a public institution." He concedes that American higher education is " a swell source of upward mobility underaccountable and underproductive - damed right."

his staff has published a research document entitled: "Estimating the Cost of a Bachelor's degree: An Institutional Cost Analysis." Despite what he now admits are methodological limitations and data constraints," it purports to round excessive costs among the private colleges that contribute to higher tuitions. This "pioneering study" ignores similar scholarly research conducted in at least two states which contradict its finding. But it seeks to sustain Secretary Bennett's accusation last February that "if anything, increases in financial aid in recent years have enabled colleges and universities our modest endowment. blithely to raise their tuitions, confident that Federal subsidies would help cushion the increase." Bennett quoted approvingly his allegation at Harvard's 350th anniversary ceremony that "too many students fail to receive the education they deserve" and declares "Stanford University's vague justification for increased charges - 'new knowledge is inherently more expensive' - only underscores the lack of focus and purpose at some of our nation's most prestigious universities." We get nowhere by lumping all of higher education into a single econometric model designed to measure performance and productivity. Secretary Bennett fails to recognize three rather bully who spits in your eye and then distinct groupings among the independent undergraduate institutions. A sizeable number charge below $5,000 in tuition, serve a limited geographic constituency, and carry on a hard scrabble struggle for survival. A comparative few - the ivys and the blue chips - charge $12,000 and unward. Bennett attended one and directs his ire against them. Indeed, they do recall JFK's homily that life is unfair, for they enjoy the biggest endowments, the highest annual giving, and the longest lines of freshman applicants. People who drive Cadillacs and Mercedes don't quibble over price tags. To their credit, most of these elite colleges devote ever larger sums to student Thus he makes clear why aid to avoid becoming havens for

By far the larger middle tier charge tuitions ranging between $7,000 and 10,000 and some of us get listed as "Best Buys in College Education." At Washington College, we are devoutly cost and price conscious. A three-member committee of our Board monitors monthly income and outgo to stay within budget. Each year, we set ever higher goals for annual donations by alums and friends to cover at least one of three dollars in operating costs.

We squeeze the optimum return on Solicitation of special grants and gifts pay for the major capital come of refurbishing historic buildings and erecting new science labs. Only after we have made thes calculations do we set tuition for the Douglass Cater

Why am I agitated? After experience in the LBJ White House as midwife for legislative programs to extend higher education to many more Americans, I foresee dangerin Mr. Bennett's promiscuous shooting from the hip at the private institutions. We thrive amid lusty criticisms. But we do not need a political overlord who instructs us on values and productivity. We are far more accountable - to our students, truetees, and patrons - than he appears Noting my Congressional testimony, Bennetts's deputy. Bruce Carnes, has now requested Washington College to participate as a case study for the Department's investigation of cost control strategies. My initial response has been to send him a five-year review presented to our Board of Trustees in early October. in 1982, Cambridge Associates of Boston, Independent analysts conducted an intensive financial examination of the College and projected unmanageable deficits by 1987 unless we undertook ten urgent correctives including tuition increases. Adopting this regimen, I was able to report to trustees a balanced budget for fiscal 1987 as well as a condition of "financial equilibrium.

My reply to Deputy Undersecretary Carnes offered to be helpful to his endeavor and concluded: "I do not hold a high degree of confidence that your boss is interested in getting at the financial predicament of higher education. Otherwise, why would be deliver his harsh verdicts before he makes a serious effort at inquiry?

Douglass Cater is the President of Washington College

available

Forneys Jewelers

KEEP YOUR SUMMER TAN WITH OUR SUNTANA SUN SYSTEM

EMILY HAIRDRESSER

Rt. 213 across from Bowling Lanes

Complete line of REDKEN & PAUL MITCHELL Full Service Salon

Call 778-2686

Stam Drug Co. 215 High Street

Chestertown Maryland 778-3030

> . Greeting Cards

Cosmetics

 Russell Stover

Candy • Soda

Fountain

In Brief:

Pan-Hel Tea

pm, the ZTA, AXΩ, and AOπ fall Pan Hel Tea, an indication for ne beginning of Rush.

orted a successful turnout

Foundation

Funds

Computing

Foundation of Ohio has given a

$50,000 grant to Washington College in support of the College's

Three years ago, the College established an innovative computing program which now serves as a model for small colleges.

Faculty and students were provided with Apple Macintosh machines to treate a campus-wide network of personal computers. The network inects the microcomputers to tach other and to a mainframe omputer. The computers are used n virtually every aspect of the academic computing program.

The William Bingham

angus.

critics joined to hold the annual

On Tuesday evening at 8:00

A sometimes common sight to many library computer users. See article below

Computing Complications by Tony Caliguri In addition to problems with

The Miller Library staff reported that many students are experiencing problems with the updated Macintosh Plus computer systems by failing to follow the instructions of proper and legal software use

Students who borrow disks personal disk, the student is inshman and transfer students from the library to use with their serested in learn more about Greek own disks are experiencing most of lie for women at Washington the trouble. Problems occur when College were urged to attend this old system folders and the outdated Each sorority presented Macwrite 2.0 programs are used in temselves and set up displays of conjunction with the new Macwrite middles, scrapbooks, and other 4.5 programs and updated system paraphernalia. The sororities refolders, according to Director of the Miller Library, William Tubbs. A solution to the problem is for students to bring their documents to the library on system free disks, or disks with documents only. He says that it is easier to recover document disks than programs on a system trying to be a police force or provide a moral opinion." Resident Missing: Foul Play Considered by Tony Caliginri list after disappearing earlier in the ance."

George was last seen by Gerald Roderick, Director of Security, during the first week of the fall nester. At that time, Roderick did not observe any suspicious behavior on the part of George. "He was just hanging around," said Roderick.

College curriculum -- writing labs, Employees of the Miller ness management simulations, latistical analysis -- as well as for Library denied any knowlege of his faculty research and college addisappearance despite past accusannistration. Last spring the Coltions of George's assault on Library plants last year.

the hosted a conference on "Com-puting in the Liberal Arts," spon-During an attempted telephone interview, executives of both the Sealtest and Cloverleaf corporations would not confirm or deny reports of George's description circulating on the side of milk cartons through the nation.

When confronted with the public humiliation and ridicule which George undoubtedly faced after his burglery attempt in the College Bookstore last spring, Roderick said, "He [George] probably Former Washington College left on his own free will. The securesident and unofficial mascot rity department will in no way take George the Catis still on the missing responsibility for his disappear-incompatible, outdated systems,

students are finding that the library has made it nearly impossible to copy copyrighted software. In an attempt to "drag" a copyrighted program such as Macpaint or Macwrite

4.5 from a Miller Library disk to a formed on the computer screen that they are attempting to violate the law and the honor code. An attempt by the student to replace the program on the original disk will fail.

allowing the library to monitor

"repeat offenders" in such situations. Students can still copy personal files saved on the library copying, we have a responsibility to preserve the law." said Tubbs. "The problem is diminishing, we are not

"We want to discourage

Annapolis Internship Program

continued from page 1

her Political Science background. Coming from Western Maryland. she also hopes to be able to work with a delegate from her hometown in order to be aware of the problems, such as the economic "depression" that has developed in that area, and policies that are currently big issues in Maryland

Monte Bourjaily, also a Political Science major, is president of the college Young Republicans and a member of the Debate club. He looks forward to working in Annapolis for its "long term importance and educational value". He also says, "I want to learn more about the differences between the state and federal government....I'm also looking forward to making friends

Sophomore Karen Reisinger, a member of Alpha Omicron Pie and a volunteer at the Upper Shore Mental Health Center will also be an intern next semester. She plans to spend her junior year abroad, and thinks it will be a great experience to also have the opportunity to work as an intern this year.

An American Studies major Chris Fischer is a clerk for the Conduct Screening Board and the Student Conduct Council. She spent last summer working as an intern in Washington, D.C. in the Personnel Management Office, and plans to work there again this summer. Fischer states, "the workings of the federal government are much different those at the state level...I would like to have a better understanding of state government and also use this opportunity to sharpen my writing skills and meet many new people.

Also an American Studies major, Bob Caldwell is a member of the Lambda Pie Delta fratemity, an RA, a member of the task force on alcohol awareness and business editor of a new yearbook supplement. He looks forward to the internship, and is interested in getting "micro-cosmic look at the many ways in which both political and business leaders must interact on a daily basis

The only International Studies major participating in the program this year, Mariella Ruiz, is president of the Spanish club, a member of the Student Conduct Council, and a Dorm Senator for Caroline House. She is happy to have the opportunity to serve as an intern in the spring. Although her major deals mainly with the realm of international affairs. Ruiz states. "Since the International Studies department does not provide an adequate internship program for its majors, I feel compelled to take advantage of the opportunity and benefits offered in the Maryland General Assembly internship pro-

The program is designed to help students in their formulation of future career goals, as well as to teach them invaluable information on how the government functions. Dr. Weissman says that he is really pleased with this year's group of interns and looks forward to working with them as they learn more about Maryland state politics. As Ruiz states, "Internships which are an important part of the college experience should not be taken for granted, on the contrary they should be taken advantage of.

Washington College Dance Program presents Dance On Film

THE PIRATE starring Gene Kelly & Judy Garland Mon. Dec. 2 6:00 p.m. C-house

DEBATE

SHOULD HALF OF THE UNITED STATE'S BUDGETARY MONEY WHICH IS CURRENTLY BEING SPENT ON DEFENSE, BE USED FOR SOCIAL PROGRAMS WITH IN THE U.S.?

Come and participate in a discussion between:

Dan Feiner Erin Hodge-Williams

John Saras

Steve Bruchey Chris Hansen

Rob Press

- Tuesday, November 17 -

7:00 p.m. Hynson Lounge

ored jointly with Apple, Inc.

The William Bingham foundaion supported those initial efforts, adhas now offered additional supzn, upgrade its computer facilities.

on for further expansion of the ademic computing program. The College plans to computerize the anpus library's card catalog sys-

Goose Hunting: Disturbing Trends

Goose hunting plays a significant role in the economy of Kent County. The hunters pump money into the restaurants. motels and other establishments, such as sporting goods stores which supply their needs in the way of shotgun shells, licences make a significant addition to their regular income by taking out hunting parties.

Unfortunately, there are a few disturbing trends observable in the fall goose hunting season of Kent County during the past beginning to arrive in large numbers in Kent County. Perhaps they were attracted to the abundance of horse corn, the leftovers of modern combines. Perhaps they just got tired of flying the extra distance. At any rate, geese started showing up in large numbers and wintered on the Eastern Shore instead of migrating all the way to North Carolina.

In the early 1970's, waterfowl populations became quite significant in Kent County. Hunting pressure was only moderate, and there were plenty of open fields where no one hunted. This leant to the making of fine

Between 1975 and 1980, the goose population increased further, though it seems that the duck population in the county had dropped. What was surprising was the dramatically increased hunting pressure. The number of guides and guiding outfits increased significantly. Advertising in such magazines as Field & Stream and Sports Afield became commonplace.

Land could not be found cheaply, if at all. Significant amounts of money were needed to rent land for goose hunting rights, and guides raised their rates. This affected the average hunter, forcing him to pay for the service of such a guide, for this, though expensive, was better than to try to pool a number of economically unreliable hunters together to rent out a couple hundred acres of land.

In the 1980's, hunting has almost reached a saturation point. It seems everyone is a goose guide, every field has a goose pit. But where are the geese going to land?

With the exception of a few sanctuary ponds provided by the larger guide services, the geese are forced to feed at night, or leave the county entirely. Delaware has picked up a significant population of geese that previously bipassed the area. This is at the expense of the Maryland Eastern Shore

Early in the 1980's, the goose hunt. ing season was dropped back to mid-October largely due to pressure from guiding services Some weekends, it was warm enough to hung in a tee-shirt. The birds had barely landed after a long flight from upper-Canada, and were being shot, already. There was simply no time to fodder upon Maryland corn. These geese weree not even edible.

In 1987, many geese now winter in parts of Pennsylvania and Delaware because of mild winters and lower hunting pressures In Kent County, guiding services are numerous, practically every field has a blind in it.

Hunters and guides take shots at geese they would not have considered ten years ago, increasing the chance of crippling, Shy busting is the rule, not the excention

This forces geese to be very wary and guides to be more crafty with elaborate blinds and decoys. The days are gone when hunting success came with homemade silhon ette decoys, these have been replaced with geese stuffed by a taxidermist.

Kent County is killing the goose that laid the golden egg. Hunting pressure is simply too high, and the number of geese has decreased significantly in the past five years However, the season has been pushed into November which could stop this downward trend. Perhaps a few poor hunting years would eliminate some of the hunting pressures and increase the number of fields where

Even though hunting pressure is excessive and the number of geese have decreased, through certain guiding services great Kent County hunting can be found. However, it is important that the hunting pressure declines. Five years from now, the geese may get fed up with their reception in this area. For the sake of the local economy, and waterfowl hunting on the Eastern Shore something must be done, but the handwriting is on the wall for the decline of goose hunting in Kent County.

Hunters prepare for the opening of goose hunting season in Kent County, which begins

Is There Anything for Maintenance to Do? (Besides Chopping Down Trees, That Is?)

by J.M. Harrison

A few weeks ago in an editorial letter, a student questioned which was more "TREES OR TEACHERS?" Apparently teachers were chosen, since all around campus there are gaps and stumps where trees once stood. Of course, it's all in the master plan to build the college campus into a more beautiful place to learn, but it seems the maintenance department could be engaged more fruitfully.

1. The library should be painted, during the 4. day and between classes. The smell of fresh paint enhances the quality of the classroom. Fumes tend to bring out the best in everyone, and can lead to new heights in learning. Unless, of course, the professor is allergic to fresh paint and passes out.

in the buildings where gourmet meals can be Finish hacking up the bushes between Caroline House and the Literary House.

must be worn to allow studying: turn it down requirements of the College cooked on the radiators.

Build a bridge across Lake Reid in preparation for monsoon season in Chestertown. Or help the swim team move to the lake's distant shore. Or build bleachers around it, and have skating competitions in the winter. garage doesn't need a ceiling either.

campus by sucking up leaves into little carts. 6. Disconnect the water systems of the Hill 9. Plant more mums around campus. Put Once collected, the leaves should be saved, dorms from the Dining Hall. In casual camand mixed with the wood from the trees that pus surveys, competition between the bathhave already been toppled. We must make rooms of these dorms and the W.C.D.S. dishwasher has given one a definite-advantage sure there is enough mulch to fulfill the mulch over the other. Dishes get hot showers, students don't. Sometimes these residents would 3. Turn the heat up in the dorms where mittens like to shower while meals are being served.

> Flatten the brick sidewalks. This will prevent injury when stumbling about in the dark, though it would probably be easier to put in lights. Then, at least, the cracks can be seen and stepped over.

8. Build a parking garage next to Reid Hall. After all, the College has all that nice fresh lumber just waiting to be used. It would only take as long as renovations on Reid, after all a them in barrels outside every door, between windows, in the middle of every field, in the lobby of Tawes, the halls of Bill Smith. Every space unoccupied should be filled with mums

10. Become an alarm clock for the students. Randomly selecting from the dormitorits, visit at least one a morning (the earlier the better) and drill holes in things. Students should not be allowed to sleep past 8:00.

If worse comes to worse, and there is noth ing for maintenance to do, then go ahead and cut down more trees. Just don't touch any ginko, catulpa, oak or maple trees. Of course this leaves the elm. Cut it down and leave th: stump. The lumber from the tree could be used to build a pavilion around the stump, and we could have dances in the field, and join hands around the stump on May Day.

2. Unmask the beautiful greenery of the

Cuddling, Rumors and Romance at W.C.

by Kelly Lamoree

Cold, cold nights are upon and many a heart will be turning othoughts of a cuddle over cocoa in the snack bar. Many legendary mmances have evolved from humble beginnings, and one never knows just when That Magic Moment will occur. Why, it could be as your eyes meet when you pause at the crosswalk to look for cars; it could be as your hands collide as you both reach for the carrot sticks in the salad bar; it could even be during that one class of the year that happens to be less than enthralling, as you shift in your seat, as your pen rolls off of your desk and far beyond your reach. Grimacing, you squirm and try to pick it up, only to look up and see an entrancing stranger, Romantic Interest. smiling, pen in hand.

It is no surprise then, with an atmosphere rife with possibilities hat so many romances do occur. Of course, there are those of you who as you read that phrase exdaim,"Ha! What kind of drug is she on?" Well, perhaps Cupid's arrow has not yet found a home in your heart. Read on.] Some of them have a lifespan of minutes, some years, Some seem destined to happen, others are completely unexpected. This courtship process takes a long time, or a short time off the cuff depending on the people involved. Occasionally, but by no means always, it is interesting to watch the process. So, to help the Gentle Reader in his/her education, excerpts from: Courtship: A Watcher's Guide-A User's Manual. Note, I am not Dr. Ruth, nor am I Xaviera Hollander, just a simple country lass who observes things.

Romance is a strange creatrewherever it goes, and at W.C. is is especially strange. People often meet in dark places while dodging beer, or while networking at a recepote. This is not Romantic. Of tourse, one has to work with what one has. First of all is the pursuit, tourtship, chase or hunt, prowl or whitever. Frat parties, meals, thisses are all places where this CCUrs. How formal it gets depends upon the pursuer; some people think longing gaze is a clear enough adication of their intentions, while thets conduct an in depth study of he person's history, interviewing frends, aquaintances and former 3rade school teachers, after which tey analyze the date, talk to person's best friend who will talk to the pursued. There are many, many

After the moment of Recognition, when you and that special someone realize that you want to be more than just strangers, you settle into a another stage, going to dinner together, going to the movies, all very very causal. Then laughing a little more around each other. This stage of awkwardness is sometimes skipped, for those lucky enough to have found someone truly in sync with them. Watch one of them when they are listening to the other speak If they don't listen, there's a clue that something is wrong, but generally they will. Often a rather bemused stare and half-smile denotes

The next stage, is one that I call Ditch or Switch. Ditching: you find that this person is of no interest you, or you to them, and you go your separate ways. Switching: the next stage. You switch from Friends to more than Friends

If a couple is seen arriving together at breakfast, and if there is reason to believe that they have been courting, it is not illogical to assume that they have progressed on a further plane in their relationship. Telltale signs include a lot of little touching, a number of little smiles (usually more so on the part of the girl unless the guy is endearingly shy) and usually there is just something that makes aquaintainces and courtship-watchers look at one another, nod and murmur, "Ah-ha." Thic however is not behavior that is to be encouraged, for it leads to a very important part of courting, one of the hazards that eveyone must face as soon as one is linked with someone-Rumours.

Rumours are ugly nasty little things that almost everyone loves to hear. They are three-quarters conjecture, and one eighth fact. The remaining eighth is a wild element, and can be anything from imagination to malice, to wishful thinking or any combination therof. Some people like to have rumours spread about them, while others like to do the spreading. Gossip is the AIDs virus of a relationship, and at any given time there is an epidemic In whatever capacity, rumors are a very popular past-time, especially at meals and parties. Some people abstain from gossiping altogether, and other people go through their lives without ever having one rumour about them. These people are either incredibly discreet or incredi-

Susan--

Arts and black got you in, welcome to a life of sin. Congratulations on your new status. Initiation details later.

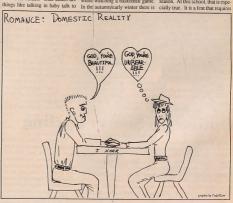

the E. S.'s

happen. They can continue to act like normal people, or they can become what everyone who isn't does Cute Antics. Cute antics are your loved one and a brandy is a hot to do that for long. great activity, close to sledding and eating a meal of prime rib and your goal, is the most difficult part part of a couple detest, a Couple who chocolate mousse (in Quebéc city) of Romance, no matter what the while watching a basketball game. season. At this school, that is espe-

After this stage of becom- fact that it feels like it is summer, one can scamper about in seducing a couple, a variety of things can Cozying up before a fireplace with tively skimpy attire, but it still too

Staying together, if that is a

each other, staring at one another, pouting, doing things like bringing one's inamorata breakfast everyday, doing their ironing, tying their shoes, washing their cars, and so on. They hold hands and all of that sort of thing all the time. Prolonged exposure to cute antics can cause brain death

Then there is the established couple. These are sets of people, who look strange when the other is absent and one is never sure why. They have been going out for years and if they are Greek-oriented, have probably had something to do with that mysterious process called lavalierring. These people are treated as a set and in each of their rooms are pictures of the other, alone and with occupant.

We are lucky now because it is late autumn, early winter, the best time for Romance. Snowball fights, wistful walks as your feelings have changed like the leaves or your heart melts like the snow. It's not too cold usually, or too hot, unless you're in a dorm where the fact that you can tell its winter by the is acceptable. Sure, in the summer is, the mystery of guessing what is beneath all of those scarves, coats, hats and so on. And mystery is an integral part of Romance. Mystery and elegant clothes. If you're welldressed, all the time, you cannot fail to impress your potential love object, and it is never easier to dress well than in the winter. Layer provides awesome opportunties for Appeal Dressing.

spring is for wimps! It's too easy to they start slander campaigns and feel all lovey-gooey when it's gordeavors. Worst of all is rumor and geous out and the sap is rising or falling or whatever it does, when the gossip, mentioned previously birds are chirping and all of that There are few sins not caused by Hallmark stuff that the flesh is so negected or frustrated love. weak about. Summer is even worse, because summer means sweat and ferocious flirtations and sly glances. sweat is not in most cases Romantic. It is what life is for. Escape if you Most cases. Sweat because it's 101 have to, but always remember that degrees and 100% humidity is not there is someone out there for every Romantic sweat. Sweat because body. It's for you to find them, you're working out or because you ignore them, or run away fast in the are so paralzyed with love at the other direction. No comment about seasons don't matter, except for the sight "your Man" or "your Woman" the best option.

also the great mystique which sur- patience, hard work, endurance, rounds a potential love object, that ingenuity and occasionally a secret service/CIA; many people find that the college atmophere is impossible and so prefer to have someone far away. Breaking up is really easy to do here; living with it is not so easy. Seeing one's former Love of Life across the salad bar (espeically if they are a 'former' not by your choice) can be a harrowing experience indeed. for the spurned or neglected amour, there is little help Some would argue that but time. People deal with breaking Spring is best. As far as Romance, up in different ways. They accept it; engage in other such creative en-

So for now, enjoy your

YES, tonight

the return of THE WIEDEATER bar from Hell in three-D with Dolby stereo

don't drink alone, drink with the elite

Torn between two lovers, experiencing back pain in the dining hall, are your hands cold? We're watching.

Secretly speculating, Rumors R Us

SPORTS Tennis Ranked

Second in Nation

Gewer and Read in Top 45

When the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Associations released its 1988 pre-season national ranking Sunday. Washington College's men's tennis team was voted the second best in the nation among Division III collegiate competitors. Last year's Division III runner-up Washington & Lee University commands the top spot. The Univer sity of California-Santa Cruz, the team the Shoremen beat for third place in the National Tournament, is ranked third

Due to heavy losses at graduation, defending national champion Kalamazoo College fell to fourth. Claremont College, another team

Washington College defeated in the Nationals, is ranked fifth, followed by archrival Swarthmore College. Rochester University, Principia College, University of California-Sandn Diego, and Gustavus Adolphus round out the top ten.

In the individual rankings, Washington College placed two players in the top 45 in singles, and possesses the number two ranked doubles tandem Rolex finalist Larry Gewer is ranked tenth in singles while Read is 41st. As a team, Gewer and Read are ranked second in the nation in Division III works your upper body as well as doubles partner freshman Scott

MD Tourney A Success

by Don Steele

After a rather disappointing season the Washington College soccer team again came through at tournament time. The team again finished second at the Maryland State Small College Tournament, losing a replay of last year's final to Mt. St. Mary's, 3-0.

The team played even up with the "Mount" and at times had the upperhand, but eventually their gas ran out and Mt. St. Marv's scored three goals.

In reaching the finals the team beat Salisbury in a 1-0 game. The team was paced by Scott Beeler's goal. The player that won the game for the Shoremen was John Thomas. The acrobatic goalie made countless point blank saves.

The team finishes at 5-9-3.

Options to Snowy Cycling

I really got into bicycling this past summer. I road 3-5 times a week, anywhere from 45 minutes in the morning, before work, to an all day excursion of 40 miles or more. With winter weather coming - my area gets a fair amount of ice and snow - I know I can't continue this routine. What can I do to stay fit? S.D. Madison, Wis.

Dear S.D.: Cycling is a great fitness sport, but you're right, when snow hits the mad it's time to switch gears. What can you do to stay in bicycling shape? Plenty. INDOOR CONSIDER

TRAINING. There are two ways to keep up your pedaling indoors. One is to invest in a top-quality exercycle, one that's strong and stable, with smooth front flywheel action and a reliable tension control. The better ones cost upwards of $250, but if you cheap out and get a shaky model, you'll be sorry

A more sophisticated way to keep up your training (using your own bike and mimicking the usual bent-over riding posture) is to buy rollers for your bike or buy a wind trainer. There are several good trainers on the market but the most common style requires you to remove the front wheel of your bike, attach the fork directly to the trainer, and lock it into place. Shop around for one that suits you - comfortable, quiet, easy to use - and be sure to test-drive it before you buy Wind trainers range in price from $80 to $200. Rollers which do not offer resistance and require a sense of balance, cost about $150 to $300.

LOOK FOR ALTERNA-TIVE SPORTS. Running or race walking are two good alternatives to cycling. They both work your major leg muscles and help you maintain your endurance. If you choose running, be careful not to overdo it. Your body is not used to all of the pounding and pressure and you'll hurt yourself if you try to run too far, too fast Another good alternative to cycling is cross-country skiing. It your lower body, plus it's an excilirating way to enjoy the wonders of winter. If you work at it regularly, you'll probably come back to cycling next spring with considerably more strength and endurance. Rollerskiing is another smart way to stay in shape for cycling. The skis look like rollers skates for centipedes and the striding technique is very much like cross-country skiing

MOUNTAIN BIKES PRO-VIDE PEAK EXPERIENCES. Lightweight 10-speeds don't mix with rough winter weather, but those all-terrain mountain bikes do. The fatter tires give you better traction and the upright riding style gives you more control. You may not want to ride off-road five times a week, but these bike are good for all-day weekend rides and will help you keep your riding muscles strong and ready for better weather ahead.

I'm a male, 15 years old, and a member of my high school track team. In the winter, I run at the local YMCA for practice. I've been seeing some guys from the local college track team, and they wear nylon runnig shorts. I decided to buy some and get away from the usual cotton shorts and support. I felt very comfortable and free running in the nylon shorts, but I began to get an ache in my testicles. Is it the nylon shorts? J.A., Buffalo, N.Y.

Dear J.A. Nylon shorts are designed with one thing in mind to look stylish and sexy. They don't give a lot of support, as you've already learned. Forget style. Go for comfort and support. A good athletic supporter of jock strap is necessary for almost any kind of athletic endeavor. Try wearing a jock under the nylon shorts. If you don't like the way that it looks, go back to the soft, lightweight cotton shorts.

Ithough the Sho'men struggled throughout the season, such as in this loss against John's Hopkins, they again regrouped at the Mary land Small College Tournament, finishing as the runner-up to Mount St. Mary's for the second year in a row. Overall, the men finished at 5

OLD WHARF INN ON THE CHESTER RIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD, 21620

301-778-3568

by

Athlete of the Week

Jon Wickwire A sophomore, Jon Wickwir defeated freshman Dan Pratt to wit the Coffee House Pool tourname last Tuesday. The original field of thirty-six whittled down to two over the week in the elimination event, culminating in Wickwire's and Pratt's best of three championship

The men split the first two games, then the sophomore grabbed a three ball lead in the deciding game, which he calmly held while chewing on his Copenhagen

Wickwire's prize is a stick ar chance to participate in the ACU-I pocket billiards championship.

Complete Hair Care 10 Visits for $40.00 $75.00 unlimited until March 15

Our SunTana SunSystem guarantees you a glorious, Our Sun iana Sunsystem guarantees you a glonous, radiant tan that you can keep all year long. A tan you achieve with soft, comfortable and SAFE U.V.A. light and without all the burning, peeling and flaking you get in natural sunlight. Our SunSystem is GUARANTEED tan anyone who tans in the sun...while you relax in col

We'd like to tell you more about this exciting new way to tan. A single visit will convince you

The Beauty Lounge Callus come

Phone: 778-2635

Midtown Mall
Chestertown, MD 21620 to NEXUS PRODUCTS AVAILABLE
mplete Hair Care • Manicures • Sculptured Nails

today ..

Experience Yields Net Gain

This year the Washington College basketball team looks set to continue its winning tradition. The mam only graduated one player last year and has eleven people returning from last year's 18-8 squad. that record should be improved experience Another important aspect shout this team is that the nucleus of he squad are juniors and sophochance to grow together over the pected to compete for playing time. rest two years.

will be in good shape. Junior co-Wilson, have been called upon to lead this year's campaign. Bauer led the team in scoring and reboundnd also was selected first team in te Middle Atlantic Conference.

This year's forward line looks set. Along with Bauer the shooting and three point shooting. kam returns Steve Brody and Charng last year, suffered an off season "In order to have a great season the shilizer to the team.

hand injury but should be back for team will have to be hungry e the start of the season. Johnson is back for his sophomore season

The low post position has more depth and experience than ever before. Chris Jamke was the starter last year as a freshman and contributed 9.6 ppg and 6.0 rpg.

Look for the return of Tom ipon now that the team has gained Auvil to add depth. After a year's hiatus Auvil is back. He can play either the center or power forward position. Senior Al Hepling, junior George Small and the team's only nores which will give the team a freshman Matt Woolston are all ex-

In the backcourt Wilson re-If last year's improvement turns along with Tim Keehan, Scott continues over this year, the team Jones, Chris Brandt and Charles Duckett. Wilson and Keehan made captains, Andy Bauer and Matt the swing guard position one of the highest scoring on the team, with the two combining for 17 ppg

The point guards on the team hr last year (15.7 ppg and 6.5 rpg) all are "excellent ball handlers who can score and play agressive defense." The triumvirate of Scott Wilson's steady backcourt play Jones, Chris Brandt, and Charles with his clutch scoring acts as a Duckett will compete for court time. Jones is the returning starter. Last year he led the team in free throw

Coach Tom Finnegan is opti-Is Johnson. Brody, who scored 9 mistic about the upcoming season. to do whatever it takes to win," says the Shoremen coach. "If we play up to our potential we can be an exciting and aggressive team this year and continue the winning tradition at Washington College."

1987-88 Schedule

November

20-21 Drew Invitational Frostburg State

December Widener Galloder 11-12 Wild Goose Classic

January Catholic Gettysburg Daniel Webster Bucknell Salisbury State 19 John's Hopkins St. Mary's Swarthmore 26 Ursinus 28 Swarthmore

30 Haverford February Western Maryland

York Haverford 13 Ursinus Widener

20

"Hey you up there. This is a sport, right? Or is it? I'm so confused." What do you think?

Cheerleading a Sport?: A New WC Controversy by Phil-Tom Jackson

John's Hopkins

In basketball, an important thing to a team is fan support. But what is a team to do when its on the road? That's where a special group of young people comes into play. They are called many things, but the one that they are commonly known as are cheerleaders.

A cheerleader is a person who enough to get a point across. leads a group in organized cheering, especially at high-school or college athletic events. Does this mean that this is not a sport? A sport is defined in this way: any activity or experience that gives enjoyment or recreation; pastime; diversion. Is this to coach. What more do you need? say that cheerleading is not enjoy- Competition. able? What makes this activity any different from the sports which it supports? Let's take a look.

There are a number of steps that are taken in the starting up, training, schedule. It really doesn't make and competeing of a sport team. As far as starting a team all you need is people who want to be a part of that sport. Then you must go though college, national, and etc. red tape to teams cheer-off against each other,

be accepted. A coach is a must and but to do this every week doesn't money is always important. A special training program is needed to have the players in top form. Practice sections are an everyday job to make plays and routines smooth for competition. Then all you need are other teams to play. Naturally there is more to sports teams then what Ouestion: What makes cheerleading different from other sports? The people train and practice special routines just like sports teams. They wear uniforms that repersent the team they cheer for. They have a

Now cheerleading isn't just a sport like football or basketball. You can't just sit down a make out a sense to set up a schedule for two teams to cheer-off against each other. Think about it. Yes, there are national competitions in which make sense

The point is that the meaning of a cheerleader says it all. A cheerleader is a person who leads a group in organized cheering, especially at high-school or college athletic

That's a good enough meaning I've talked about here, but this is just for some people, but not for others. So next week I'll look at both sides of the meaning, from the issue that has risen here at W.C. of whether cheerleading is a sport. And I'll preview our women, as they begin their "season."

Need A Job?

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yacht and Country Club $4,00 an hour

778-6765

Bed and Breakfast Inn

Amily Bakory d Collee Shop

klast S A.M.-II A.M Mon.-Sat. 5 A.M.-5 P.M. Sunday 5 A.M.-2 P.M.

Janie Thompson (301) 778-0898

Tuesday-Saturday Convenient Parking

Nelman prepare for another successful season.

Complete Has Care

A Shear Design COMPLETE HAIR CARE

Violence Cross-Checks Success for N

by Arian D. Rayanbakhsh

on violence in the National Hockey League. I can hear the moans and groans already. People either think the sport comes from the nature of the game. I consider myself one of those people who accept the violence in the sport as part of the game. Any sport in which the object of the game is to forcefully separate the puck from the puckhandler will be, by nature, violent

chip shots

But, like everything in life, this can be taken to extremes. An incident occurred two weeks ago in Madison Square Garden that brings up the violence in bockey issue again. Philadelphia Flyer rightwinger Dave Brown went out of his way to deliver a harsh cross-check to the face of New York Ranger winger Thomas Sandstrom, Watching the tapes over again, one is left with the impression that this check was deliberate. No amount of rationalizing will erase that impression from my mind

While writing this, I am supposed to be a neutral observer. So, in the interest of fairness, let's take a look at the other factors involved No one will ever accuse Thomas Sandstrom as being a clean player. His use of the hockey stick to re move defenders away from him is famous. The Rangers and the Flyers have a deep-seeded rivalry between them, so any game involving those two teams will be high on emotion. Under new coach Michel Bergeron, the Rangers have adopted a more aggressive style of play. Part of aggressive hockey is to stand in front of the opposing team goaltender and wait for a rebound to pop out. With this in mind, lets look at the play in question.

Thomas Sandstrom was standing in front of Flyer goaltender Ron Hextall when Hextall covered a loose puck. Sandstrom loomed over Hextall until Flyer Defenseman Brad Marsh, along with Center Dave Poulin, knocked him down. When Sandstrom returned to his feet, Dave Brown had already built up a full head of steam. Brown extended his arms and delivered a first class cheap shot to Sandstrom's face. Sandstrom fell to the ice with a concussion that required hospitalization

Referee Denis Morel gave Brown a match penalty on the spot, which removed him from the re mainder of the game. Last week, NHL executive vice-president Brian O'Neill calling the hit a "deliberate action," announced that Brown had been suspended for 15 games

The Philadelphia Flyers have a So, this is going to be a column intimidating the opposition. During the mid-1970's, while they won two consecutive Stanley Cups, these tactics earned the team the nickthat hockey is the most violent sport name the "Broad Street Bullies." on the planet or that the violence in For some of the purist hockey fans, this nickname can still be applied to the Flyer teams of today. In the 1970's players like Bobby Clarke and Dave Schultz (who holds the NHL record for most penalty minutes in a season) led the Flyer Black and Orange. Now, the names have become Ed Hospodar, Dave Brown, and Rick Tocchet. These are the players that head coach Mike ans and Philadelphia Flyers en-Keenan turns to intimidate the opposition

> This is not to suggest that intimidation is not a part of the sport. Garden) watched a large wrestling The game, by its nature, requires some form of intimidation.

But I draw the line when the intimidation takes the form of a deliberate attempt to injure a player. obviously not pretty The tactics of a Dave Brown keep hockey from enjoying the status of a during the Stanley Cup Finals, major sport that it deserves. There is no greater moment in sports than watching a NHL superstar like baseball swinging slash to the back Wayne Gretzky break in on a goaltender alone and loft the puck over the fallen netminder's shoulder This moment is the one that should represent all that hockey is. Unfortunately, it does not. The public at large sees only these instances when intimidation becomes assualt with intent to injure.

scapegoat is the League President, John A. Ziegler. What should be pointed out is that since Ziegler took over in 1977, the league has made a conscious effort to have the violent nature of the sport downplayed. Unfortunately, for the league, the Philadelphia Flyers are still around. During the last six months the higgest hockey coverage on a national level has been given to three separate incidents, all involving the Broad Street Bullies. In early May, during the Prince of Wales Conference Finals, the Montreal Canadigaged in a pre-game brawl. For twenty minutes the fans at the Forum in Montreal (which is hockey's answer to the basketball's Boston match between the players on both sides. Since this occurred before the game, there were no referees on the ice to establish order, the result was

The second incident occurred Game Four. Ron Hextall went out of his way to deliver a two-handed of Edmonton Oiler Kent Nilsson's

The league reserved judgement on a suspension until after the finals and finally decided to suspend Hextall for the first eight games of this season. I argue maybe Hextall should have been suspended right after the incident in game Four and, each given a three-game suspension established.

history of making the most out of perceived this way? The easy named the winner of the Conn Symthe Trophy as MVP in the play-

> The last incident is the one involving Dave Brown. I feel that 15 games is being a little too lenient. Maybe suspend him for thirty games and see if he tries to pull any furious on the ice, without gone more of his lame-brained stunts.

curred between periods of an early season Washington Capitals-Ruf falo Sabres game

The precedents have been es tablished. I can only hope that the unnecessary violence that seems to be on the rise has been curtailed. Lets keep the action fast and

"...the league has made a conscious effort to have the violent nature of the sport downplayed. Unfortunately, for the league, the Philadelphia Flyers are still around."

this year, suspensions have been handed down to Calgary's Gary Suter (10 games), Montreal's Pat-

Quebec's Gord Donnelly (3 games). Washington Capital Head Coach Bryan Murray and NHL Linesman Ron Asselstine were also

The league is starting to crack down like Dave Brown who reinforce fi on unnecessary violence. Already image of hockey as being just a wrestling match on skates

The image is summed up wit the following old joke: "Last night rick Roy (8 games). New Jersey's I went to a boxing match and hockey game broke out." Jack O'Callahan (3 games), and

This is the image that the league has to fight. I only hope the President John Ziegler continues hold fast to the precedents he has

With a fine staff, your friends at the Coffee House are happy to bring you these and many other events...

The C-House Challenge Series

Ping-Pong, Pool, Darts, Backgammon, Hockey

The Mental Ward

Relax on a Saturday Evening

And now on November 17, 1987

The Coffee House will present a first for Washington College

The Coffee House Theme Nights

Special Nights For Special Fun

And the fun is just beginning. In 1988, More Fun, More Surprises,

From the Coffee House

Its Not just a place to drink beer anymore!

ARTS

Giant Awakened in Government Inspector

The play tells the tale of Timothy Maloney, besides Khlestakov, a young man who is being the director of the Drama employed as a low-level clerk, but is Department's production of The mistaken for a government inspec-Government Inspector, also tor upon arriving in a small Russian adapted Gogol's original work into town after losing all of his money in play form using a number of transla- game of cards. The officials of the ions. He has his own theory about town fear that Khlestakov will exthe theme: "There are two very pose the corruption that prevails, so basic things at work in the play, they give him money, gifts, and he

"...a lot of the action in the play is the result of a sleeping giant that has been awakened and is now stumbling ground, crashing into things, uncertain of where it's going and even why it's alive."

certainly in Gogol's original, and even becomes engaged to the "One is the incredible layers Shakman of corruption and folly that humans develop and find ways to preserve. The second is the awakening of a deeping and encroaching bureaucncy, something created [which is] about to grow beyond its proportions and lulled into sleep by its own inscrivity. At this moment in the play, it's aroused and brought back comedy, "and what sets it apart from wlife, so a lot of the action in the play is the result of a sleeping giant hat has been awakened and is now a lot." sumbling around, crashing into and even why it's alive."

naintained I hope, in the adaptation. mayor's daughter, played by Felicia

Ryder Daniels who plays the mayor of the town, describes his character as someone who "spends the play trying to save his own skin. You'd think he'd be trying to benefit the people."

the average comedy is that it says something. It's funny, but it means universal characteristics in Khles-

Gina Braden, who plays things, uncertain of where it's going Khlestakov, believes that this role is very different from others she has life.

John McDaniels gives Peter Johnston a bit of dramatic advice on the set of The Government Inspe The full stage production will be performed tonight and tomorrow night in the Fine Arts Center at 8 p.m.

played. "In some ways, it's weird flirtation with women and references to his sexuality, but the purpose isn't so much to make me a man, but to make me Khlestakov as He describes the play as a a character.

> takov: "the desire to be admired. respected, looked up to. . .", along [playing a man], because there's vant, is played by Charlie Wilcox, certain situation. He allows, even who seems highly amused by the forces you to make these choices character. "Osip is semi-intelligent, and doesn't correct you until you happy with his station in life as a servant, and enjoys giving Khlestakov hell, even though he gets it back sometimes. He knows how not Braden sees very human, and to be around when Khlestakov needs him."

Both Braden and Wilcox laud Maloney as a director. "He with wanting to achieve the best in opens up the actor to every possible choice he can make about how to free

Osip, Khlestakov's manser- deliver a line or what to do in a make the wrong one," Wilcox explains. Braden feels that this is "kind of disconcerting, but it

> The Government Inspector is a full-stage production with full seating. It will be performed in Tawes Theatre on November 19, 20, and 21. Admission for students is

Banned and Burned Books Are Back

The Freshman Literary Colloquy will be held in the O'Neill Literary House at 3:00 p.m this Sunday. The theme for the Colloquy will be "banned books.

The Colloquy began about five years ago. Said Creative Writing Professor Robert Day, "Professor Wagner and I realized that each incoming group of students has a different enthusiasm. The Colloquy is a way for freshman to demonstrate to the rest of the College what Particular subject is important to

Freshman creative writing Stadents Tracy Austin, Adrienne D'Angelo, Clay Eichelberger, Kating Hegge, Laura Hopper, Mary Saravia and Rob Thompson are scheduled to read. "We considered a number of subjects including Mystery and bad books," Hopper aid, "But when banned books was suggested, we all sort of united behind it Added Hegge, "Also, we had akind of tradition to live up to because of last year's subject.

"Last year's class was ersexed and it showed," said Day. The topic of last year's colloquy was Sex in Literature—An Oral Pres-

Freshman Colloquy

Laura Hopper practices her reading skills to (from left) Tracy Austin, Katrina Hegge and Clay Eichelberger. All will be reading in the Freshman Literary Colloquy this Sunday, in the O'Neilt Literary House at 3:00 p.m.

Spy Catcher, The Story of O, The Autobiography of a Flea, The begin," said Hopper. The group compiled a list of Catcher in the Rye, Uncle Tom's speed books and then chose sever Cabin, Lady Charletty's Lover and readhave been banned in the past for what kind of books used to be all that represented various ex- Fahrenheit 451. "Fahrenheit 451 various reasons such as social, pobanned," Hopper commented.

amples of censorship. Among the was not a banned book, but it is litical, religious, racial, and sexual books scheduled to be read from are about banned books, so we thought openness. "Most of the things that it would be a good point at which to we will be reading from are not that controversial by today's standards The books scheduled to be but we want to give people an idea of

Said Eichelberger "Most people seem to be attracted to things that are forbidden." He will be reading from Uncle Remus which was originally banned for racial

Recalling an incident involving Uncle Remus, when Walt Disney wanted to make it into a movie, Eichelberger comments,"People were shocked, for no other reason other than that the title character was this old black slave. The story made a good point about life, but it was banned because the main character was thought to be too insulting.

"The whole thing will be pretty informal. What we'll do is first tell when and why the book was banned, and then read a passage that illustrates that reason," Hegge explained, who will be reading from The Story of O

"I think it's wonderful that they're interested and aware that these books were banned at one time. After all, the price of liberty is eternal vigilance, especially when you consider that when we weren't looking, great books like Huckleberry Finn and The Catcher in the Rye were banned," concluded Day.

The Colloquy will last approximately one to two hours. A reception will follow at the Literary House, All are invited to attend.

ENTERTAINMENT

Blow Monkeys Blow Up Thatcher

The Blow Monkeys, while well-known in England, have enjoyed only limited success in the United States with the song "Digging Your Scene," from their 1986 debut album, Animal Magic. Their follow-up, also their latest album, trying to write my novel/ but here She Was Only a Grocer's Daughter, reflects a stronger coherence in the lyrics and compositions of the band's lead singer and chief composer, Dr. Robert

The title of the second album is a backhanded reference to Margaret Thatcher; Thatcher and the British Government are the target of Dr. Robert's witticisms and wrath. seem almost trite, but Dr. Robert, at his best, is a subtle lyricist whose words invite closer listening. At his worst, he is vague and ambiguous, using words merely to complete a

The band holds a great affinity for the opening song, "It Doesn't lyrics. Have To Be This Way," since it other song mixes. It's a catchy, danceable riff and one of the best examples of Dr. Robert's songwriting. When he scowls, "They see the sense in my mound of hav/ it's a nightmare or dream it, sunshine!", we know who he's Robert is still slagging Thatcher. talking about

The novel Spycatcher, which is presently banned in Britain for its "Some kind of Wonderful": "I'm she comes again. . . and when they burn that book/ I'll have to make it choose to stay.

up again Last?" bites hard with condescension: When you grow up they say there's responsibilities/ And all you wanna do is make love, make time, and make money. . . you think you're so free and you're so fucking Most of the songs are about love and groovy." He expresses disgust for Thatcher's supporters: "A woman I know makes a living out of this/ and the sad thing is that the victims don't resist." Although the song succeeds, it unfortunately features some extremely trite life-is-whatyou-make-it-so-get-off- your-chair

"Man at the End of His appears on the album in at least two Tether" is an exercise in ironic sarcasm. Dr. Robert sings in mock adoration of Thatcher: "When I'm down/she reminds me of the things I once stood for/ She's so beautiful/ take all hope away/ and I just can't She's a scream/ And I'm not sure if making reference to her "eight long years" in "The Day After You." In "Checking Out," he states his point anti-Thatcher theme, is alluded to in of view clearly: "If she gets in again/People, that will be the end," and speaks directly to Thatcher: "You could make my day/ but you > "Don't Give It Up" is a curi-"How Long Can a Bad Thing ous mixture of subtly sleazy music and a dialogue between three people which sounds like a British version of rapping. The lyrical tone is fragmented, meandering, and amusing, managing to address a number of issues, such as religion and royalty. One can almost picture the glimmer in Dr. Robert's eye as he gleefully yells, "The royals are having a ball/ Princess Diana turns on the lights and says/ 'Shakespeare never did this/ He never did this!"

The Blow Monkeys are best described as style with an edge. Like Dr. Robert's lyrics, the music is a bit like someone who kises the back of your hand but bites your palm. Try imagining a group of guys who listen to everything from Motown to Glenn Miller, to Frank Sinatra, and then form a band, and you've got a pretty good idea about

She Was Only A Grocer's Daughter, the latest album by The Monkeys, has received limited success in the U.S. It is avail DCA Records

Advertise in The Elm

Only $2 per column inch (local rate) Call Erin Hodge-Williams, ext. 321 or 778-9839

SECRET MORE SELF-HELP FILES

Washington College Film Series Friday * Sunday * Monday 7:30 p.m.

Norman James Theater $1 — students, faculty, staff $2 - all others

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Jume 59, Number 12

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, November 20, 1987

"Save The Trees" Cuts Down Master Plan

ents Against Senseless Tree ther" protested the chopping of campus trees by tying yel abbons around them last week-The recent removal of trees is of the College's landscaping

"There's nothing wrong with rifying (the campus), but they idn't cut down trees that are aly beautiful and healthy and seem to pose any problems," sophomore Denise O'Connell. n DiLeo and Cindy Goss, more Jennifer Morgan, and x Janet Harvey also particiin the ribbon-tying

Originally the group planned nica letter to The Elm or stage in, but then O'Connell and aman Katrina Hegge came up the ribbon idea. Though many unbbons are now gone, she said canpaign garnered much supfrom students.

"I don't think some people to how important a plant can You see a tree everyday, stand it it, meet people at it all the Then one day you're standing pile of sawdust going, 'where's

" said O'Connell She explained how a friend las of his favorite tree last eser: "He dyed his hair, started ing bleached jeans, went out hight three electric guitars and and really harsh. It was his

Freshman Kris Wallenburg nituted to the group's effort by from the balcony of Reid last Sunday. She okayed chopping Anewly formed group called down diseased or dead trees but objected to their removal without demonstration of proper need.

"I'm not a fanatic about this or anything, but some things are worth fighting for. To cut down a tree just so you can see Smith Hall...I personally would rather see the tree," she said, explaining that the beauty of the trees on campus attracted her to the College

"Some of us come from big cities in which a tree is something you just don't see," said the Haddonfield, New Jersey resident, advocating that Chestertown establish a law like that in her hometown, where the city provides tree maintenance and makes unauthorized chopping down illegal.

Wallenburg said the administration has failed to communicate the landscaping plans to students and faculty. "We walked out of Smith Hall and a tree was uprooted. We pay 12,000 some dollars to come here; the least they could do is tell us," she said.

Speculating that the administration has not announced grounds plans plans to avoid the sort of student protests of tree removal that have occurred in the past, O'Connell said, "It's just unfair - it's like a dictatorship. Why would they do has since transferred reacted to something that we don't want without telling us? It's like Russia or O'Connell called for more student and faculty representation in decisions on the grounds of the College. "We live here - the trustees don't live here. This place is our home and we should be able to have gag a sheet saying "Save the some say in what it looks like."

Renaissance Dinner The sixth annual Renais- vide accompaniment for dancers

Christmas Dinner, featuring from the College's Dance Club. oc, dancers, and Old English A boar's head ceremony will lare, will be held on Friday and open the Old English candlelight day, December 4 and 5. The feast, which will include a wassail begins at 7:00 p.m. in Hynson bowl, roast beef with various on the Chestertown cam- sauces, a salad of chicken, oven Limited seating is available, browned potatoes and other asbegrvations should be made in sorted vegetables, relishes and once by calling 778-2800, breads, desserts, and wine. A num-286, weekdays between ber of recipes are adapted from early and 4:30 p.m. Tickets are sources, including cookbooks writof per person. Patronages are ten in the 15th and 16th centuries. oper person, of which $9.00 is

The Renaissance Dinner is Throughout the evening, sponsored by the Washington Colof the College's Early lege Music Department, with assis-Consort, dressed in 16th-tance from the Washington College ary costumes and playing in- Dining Service. Proceeds from the fines of the period, will per- event will aid funding of the tarols from the Middle Ages College's Early Music Consort and the Renaissance and will pro- Dance Club.

Lamond echoed that view, saying, "We're the people who live here and we should be consulted." Lamond was particularly concerned with the loss of the gingko tree, once located along the Rt. 213 walkway, where

He suggested that students should try to establish a dialogue with the administration to relay their opinions, rather than simply make symbolic gestures.

Gene Hessey, vice president for finance, said the campus landscape consultant. Ellen Samuels of New York, will present the grounds master plan at a public meeting in early December. He said a similar meeting held last year attracted only a "handful" of people, and that he is unsure if any students attended. This year, he hopes to avoid conflicts with other activities by scheduling the activity for early evening rather than mid-day. "No matter what you plant, not everyone is going to find it as attractive as others," he said, adding that he believes Samuels's expertise sufficient to design the landscape

Hessey said that the trees that have been cut down have been designated fully matured or partially or totally diseased or dead, but that eventually, as further stages of the grounds plans are implemented other removals may precede such maturation or disease

"We've been fortunate for a number of years to have a tree-lined walkway in the front of the campus," he said, adding that random replacement of those trees lost to age is ineffective because the smaller trees cannot compete for English professor Bennett light. Rather than establish a new line of trees further back from the present one, the College has opted to begin group plantings to replace the treeline that will eventually be lost.

O'Connell said she plans to meet with College officials about the tree removal and hopes that other students will take an interest as well. "I was raised to care about things, not to sit idle and not care what happens to my environment,"

Rather than see actions taken that she disagrees with, O'Connell said she would stage a sit-in the Dean's Office and accept the risk that she might be expelled.

"I respect my education, but I can't let things go on that I don't believe in without expressing my opinion," she said. "As far as people saying that nobody cares - people do care. You've got to get people motivated to care.

Sophomore Denise O'Connell, an organizer of "Students Against Senseless Tree Slaughter," protests recent cutting down of campus

College Guest House Under Renovation

construction of the Alonzo Decker ton College. Directly across from Dunning Hall is the College's latest effort to beautify the campus. Convocation and Commencement speakers, guest lecturers, and other V.I.P's will have a pleasant surprise come Christmas.

While previous guests were accustomed to spending the night at the Foxley Manor, the Imperial Hotel, or The White Swan Tavern, the latest project is to be used as a guest house for visiting V.I.Ps. The house, originally called the Casey House, was changed at the request of its benefactor, Betty Brown Casey, to Brown Cottage. The guest cottage was bought by Casey some years ago and was recently given to the College. When completed, the house will accomodate up to four guests. It includes two bathrooms, a kitchen, a dining area, and features a spacious patio. The interior will be College.

by Adrienne DeAngelo decorated by Libby Cater. The Under the shadow of the house has been under construction since September. Although the Science Ceneter is yet another exterior is finished, the house is not renovation being done at Washing- expected to be fully completed for several months

> Brown Cottage is being built with a portion of the five million dollar gift given to Washington College by the Caseys in 1984. Most of the money, in accordance with a three million dollar grant from the state of Maryland, is being used for other renovations on the campus. The closing of the street behind Bunting to make room for the construction of an academic resource center, an enlarged parking lot, and a new art studio in place of the heating plant are just a few of the plans now being revised. Gene Hessey, Vice-President of the Department of Finance adds that he would not be at all surprised if the house adjacent to Brown Cottage were renovated, although not as elaborately. That house is also owned by Washington Editorial

Trees, Pigeons And Master Plans

Yellow ribbons appeared around more trees than simply old oaks last weekend, proving that student activism did not die with the advent of the Eighties. The less positive signals of the "save the trees" campaign were a need for re-evalution of the College's master plan at least the landscaping aspect — and an indication that the folks in Bunting and the folks everywhere else on campus don't talk to each other effectively

We certainly do not object to cutting down diseased or dead trees, but we must protest removals based on purely "aesthetic reasons. Trees are worthy of preservation for their historical significance and emotional value, and should not be marked for extinction because they failed to grow in the right places and thus do not conform to the College's "master plan." Moreover, what constitutes campus beautification, which in any event is a subjective matter, is best judged by those who live on the greens of this institution, not by a professional in a New York office, however competent.

At the risk of overdramatizing, the very term "master plan" evokes the tremulous speculation that the College has formulated a new admissions policy to recruit only those with blond hair and blue eyes. We hope that students will not be forced to conform to any such "master plan," as the trees are.

But the most disturbing aspect of the "save the trees" campaign is that it highlights a serious block in communication. If students' actions were not as well-informed as they might have been the majority of the blame does not lie with them. As students, our fulltime job is to study; the full-time job of campus administrators is to develop and implement the policies of this College. One aspect of this is informing students and faculty of what is happening.

We understand that the administration is hesitant to announce plans at times when specific details remain undecided, but to fail to ever present them fosters rumors and resentment. When students returned from Fall Weekend to see trees missing, the action appeared underhanded, even if deception was not the intention.

"Students Against Senseless Tree Slaughter" must be praised for initiative. At last, action replaced the endless complaints one hears in Hodson. We hope, however, that the second half of their campaign - a protest of alleged plans to exterminate the pigeons that inhabit Bill Smith - won't be necessary. The administration denies such an agenda, while admitting that faculty have complained of the distractions and debris brought by the birds.

A more open approach in handling the pigeon problem may prevent the formation of a group called "Students Against Senseless Slaughter of Pigeons." Also, it will save those students the headache of determining their course of action. As one of the "save the trees" organizers put it, "It's not so easy to tie a ribbon around a pigeon."

Washington College Elm

| Francist Phili            |               |
|---------------------------|---------------|
| Editors                   |               |
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Ke     |
| News Editor               | Tony Caligi   |
| Features EditorJenn       | ifer M. Harri |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beckr    |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Jenny Eist    |
| Photography Editor.       | Michele B     |
| Graphics Editor.          | Todd K        |
| Manager                   |               |
| Managing Editor           | Cathy Jev     |
| Advertising ManagerErio   | Hodge-Willia  |
|                           |               |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and

Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed columns, com taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of the

and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, th cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mailed c/o The Elm Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters become the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be considered for

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen A dormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

School Should Focus On Parking Problem

To the Editor:

I feel that the parking situshould be addressed once more. The school must realize that the shortage of parking spaces is inconvenient to the students. The students also do not appreciate maintenance making the parking situation more unbearable parking problem in Caroline by digging up one-third of the alloted parking spaces. They then proceeded to perform an inefficient job of covering the ditches. Subse quently, a car got caught in one of the covered ditches, and began to eink into the soft mud. The car was retrieved from the enveloping mud because of the help provided by Frank Creegan, Jody Gross, Mike Turner, Mark Szwagolinsky, Skip Tate, and Todd Deitelbaum. Christine Carpenter and I want to

Maintenance aggravated the

sincerely thank them for the rescue of the car Yet students should not have to rely on the ability of other students to solve parking problems Maintenance should work toward being less inept, and the school shortage, and solve it!

Virginia M. Whitescarver

Athletic Dep't Helps With Sig Golf Party

To the Editor:

I wish to express my gratititude on behalf of the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity to Professor Karen Smith of the Washington College athletic department for her cooperation in helping us with supplies needed for an event held in our building.

Last week in Fast Hall we held "Room to Room Golf Party" for the first time in four years. Professor Smith lent us 10 putters along with golf balls for the event. The event was a huge sucess, and we owe a great deal of thanks to Professor Smith for helping us.

semester I have enjoyed the cooperation of the athletic department in conjunction with fraternity events. Earlier this semester the athletic department supplied the use of sev eral volleyballs for our semi-annual Volleyball Tournament, which also turned out to be a huge success. I am

should focus on the parking space looking forward to future can activities of this nature and also continued cooperation of Profe Smith and others in the aft department

With the demonstrated sm of the school such as we have joved in the past, I am confiden we will be capable of sponso more events such as the "Ro Room Golf Party" and the Vo hall Tournament

John Bo

President, Phi Sigma Ka

Cater Recovering

Editor's Note: The foll owin statement was released by th President's Office last Wedge President Cater returns to Chestertown this weekend ale short stay at the Johns Hopkin Hospital, where he underwe tests to determine causes for a allergic reaction following medication prescribed for his This is the second time this Arena registration will be he Sunday in the back of Cain 6) sium. Seniors will enter thess 2:00: underclassmen will foli descending order of seniority dents must have program signed by their advisor to re

REMINDER

FOUND

A class of '87 North Caroline High School key was found last Tuesday. It is available in the Office of Student Affairs.

HELP WANTED

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17. Clark, NJ 07066

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM! Excellent income! Details, send self-addressed, stamped envelope WEST, Box 5877, Hillside, NJ

EMPLOYMENT HOMEMAKERS WANT

TOP PAY! C.I. 121 248 N.W. Suite 222 Norman, homa 73069

Andly Bakory and Coffee Shop

Brooklant S A.M.-11 A.M - Soups & Sandwich at Plaza, Chestertowa 778-2228 Sat. 5 A.M. 5 P.M. Say 5 A.M. 2 P.M.

RESTAURANT

CHESTERTOWN, MD.

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS

HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:3 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABI SCHEELER FIELD 778-1222

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY

Ro. 213 & 201

on't Confuse Personal With Public

tic records and policies.

slept with Donna Rice. Now if you ask fairs? n what is Hart's position on taxing foreign only. This disparity says a lot about the gpublic who rely heavily on mass media it comes to election time. Lately too thas been made by the media and the after they leave their offices.

help guide our nation are just that, people. somewhere along the line or he never would news but dig things up to make it themselves, The hard with the same of the CE. He Admits to Using Cliff Notes for liefs, their own problems. One thing the Grade Book Report!!! It seems that American voter demands in its officials is that in college affect how he served as a judge? I adays people are more interested in when these politicians go to the office that initian's private lives than they are in their they leave these things home and represent us and not themselves. Doesn't it seem like a If you ask many Americans who Gary contradiction then if we demand to know all was it is likely that a majority of them about these things? Aren't we the ones then by be able to tell you that he was the one that confuse personal affairs with public af-

Today's voter demands an awful lot and only a few would probably answer from politicians. Which one of us can say we have led a perfectly spotless life? We have no more right to judge the morals of a politician than they have to judge us. There is of course a limit to this. If these morals interfere with the about what politicians do with their job then of course they have to be taken into account. Did Gary Hart's problems with his No one is perfect, not even politicians. life really affect how he served as Senator? mes we forget that those people who Obviously he must have done something right have been where he was

Did Ginsberg smoking marijuana once don't think so, and yet both men had to give up the chance at what would have been the pin-

Wendy Kloiber

nacle of a career they had been building all their lives because they had shown themselves to be human. Something so small can now cause irreparable damage to both the public and private life of a politician. It is like the huge stack of soup cans that totally collapses if you pull out just one strategically placed can. We don't even wait anymore for that can to slip on its own accord. We leave the responsibility for yanking it out to the Sophomore Wendy Kloiber is planning to

Was politics really that boring before? In a few years very few people are going to want to run for public office. A politician's life is not an easy one. When they do something right they rarely get credit. When they do something wrong they are severely criticized. This is bad enough if the criticism is based solely on their record as a politician. When it becomes criticism based on their record as a husband or college student it becomes just too much. Gary Hart's marriage problems are the concern of two people, his wife and himself. The mass media and the voting public are not marital counselors. They are also not judges. It seems that it is about time that we realize that and stop asking for perfection in someone that is no different really from ourselves #### mass media. Journalists no longer report the major in political science. Should the private lives of public officials be an issue SSUE: in elections and appointments?

Sophomore Baltimore, Maryland

Haverford, Pennsylvania

less it depends on what they're "The private lives of public people in their private lives. If they should be an issue to the extent that a mistake or a bad decision in it is relevant. Public office should private lives, then eventually not be decided on one's public life, night use bad judgement while but it should be taken into consideration."

Meg Murray Sophomore

Chesapeake Beach, Maryland "The media should use more discre- "No. They are human and make "I think that the personal actions of bearing on the person - as in the case they can do the job better than anof Gary Hart. I don't think that other person, then they should have Ginsberg should have been dropped the job. Their private lives should in a campaign." because he smoked pot - it's dirty not be an issue.

politics and dirty press."

Russel Gardner Freshmar Martinsville, Virginia

Deborah Staed Freshman Lothian, Maryland

tion and information that has direct mistakes like everybody else. If individuals should be taken into consideration, but they should not become the sole determining factor

ampus Voices

by Susan H. Stobbart

Voters Need Info To Judge Candidates he famous philosopher Jean Jacques nent information. We do not want and cannot dared the press to follow him. They did and children and an extremely successful political

once said, "Those who would treat tolerate anyone who is unwilling to give us all is and morality apart will never under-relevant information. The liar and the schizothe one or the other." Examining the phrenic have no place in public office. te lives of public officials does not mean lug the role of moral majority and applyone undefinable test of the morality of adividual. It simply means knowing the tal's background for the purpose of ing the individual in question to repre-

We are the voters of America and are Gary Hart was the perfect example of the liar. It was discovered that he and Donna Rice of his or her abilities to lead and repre-

Monte

Bourjaily

uncovered the scandal that ended Gary Hart's career. Congressman Bauman had been livbid for the White House. His undoing was not ing two lives. When his secret life was readultery but lying. There have been and are many public officials who have had extra-

Franklin Delano Rooseveltare two prominent career collapsed. examples. They never hid their relationships and were accepted by the people. Bob Bauman, former U.S. House member from the Eastern Shore, is the perfect individual properly, is if we are given some example of the schizophrenic. Just before the 1980 election he was discovered to be a or her public image is not an easily torn down homosexual. He had hidden this successfully facade for many years. He had a wife and two Monte Bourjaily is a junior poli sci major vealed, people were stunned. It was hard to believe that they had been led on for so long. marital relationships. John F. Kennedy and The bubble finally burst and Bob Bauman's

> In politics, trust is an unquestionable necessity. We need our leaders to be open and honest with us. The only way we can elect an view into his or her private life to ensure his

To Whom It May Concern:

Thanks for being my initiation to the schmucks of Washington College. I'll never forget you, hard as I may try.

burneeds effectively, we need all pertiabout it, he flatly denied the accusation and Christmas Greetings

send a holiday message to a friend through The Elm $2.00 available Dec. 1, 2, 3 during dinner in the dining hall

Science Center

The William G. Baker, Jr. Memorial Fund of Baltimore has given a $25,000 grant to Washington College for the construction of the College's Alonzo G. Decker, Jr. Science Center

annex, which will house eight laboratories and six research units, is expected to be completed next fall. Once completed, renovation of the existing science building, Dunning Hall, will begin. The 4.5 million dollar project will create a modern facility which will centralize all the College's science programs.

As the only four-year private of the sorority for several decades, event. college on Maryland's Eastern Shore, Washington College plays a critical role in assessing the environmental factors and stimulating policy decisions affecting the future of the Chesapeake Bay. Washington College is a founding member, along with the Oceanic Society and the University of Maryland's Center for Environmental and Estuarine Studies of a Consortium to examine conflicting demands on aquatic resources. In addition, the College recently established the McLain Chair in the sciences, whose holder will play a key role in directing the College's activities relating to the Chesapeake Bay.

Academic Computing

The William Bingham Foun dation of Ohio has given a $50,000 grant to Washington College in support of the College's academic computing program

Three years ago, the College established an innovative computing program which now serves as a model for small colleges. Faculty and students were provided with Apple Macintosh machines to create a campus-wide network of personal computers. The network connects the microcomputers to each other and to a mainframe computer

The William Bingham Foundation supported those initial efforts, and has now offered additional support for further expansion of academic computing programs.

Baker Funds Casino Night Fundraiser

Omega sorority's many traditions is "Casino Night", an annual fundraiser which accumulates over one thousand dollars annually for Cystic fibrosis

AXΩ is expecting over four Construction of the science hundred people from on and off campus to participate in this event, which simulates a Las Vegas Casino, offering participants a chance to play Black Jack, Poker, Roullette, and numerous raffles. The event will also feature Bad Influence . a local Jazz band

Casino Night has been a part responsible for organizing the

Among the Alpha Chi according to Elaine Wilson, a member of the AXΩ activities. In addition to being a fundraiser, it is also a time for Alumni to visit the sorority. Wilson expects most of last year's graduating class as well as members from years previous. In addition to Casino Night. the sisters hold several other fundraisers to sponsor Cystic Fibrosis. including a Coffee House band which earned over $600 and a babysitting service around Christmas. Mamie Cummins, the sorority's activities director and chairman of the Casino Night Committee, is

Hotline Established

by Marie Ensor

Chris Schanno, a junior majoring in psychology, is starting a Helpline phone service for Washington College students. Schanno approached the Student Affairs Office to initiate a counseling phone line when he noticed that Washington College lacked such a hotling

For the last two months Schanno has been working to get the Helpline in operation. Due to a back up for phone lines there has been a delay in the installation. "Hopefully we'll be in operation by exam time, " said Schanno.

As a senior in high school, he volunteered with the Red Cross teen couseling program. He also attended Lehigh University for a year, during which he worked on their hotline service. In addition to his regular studies, Schanno works in the Computer Center and is a member of the Alcohol Awareness Committee here at Washington.

The new Helpline at Washington College will be a "sounding board" for students with problems. A non-judgemental approach will be taken to counsel students. Students can guarantee that their calls will be kept strictly confidential.

anything students have to say, phone operators are trained to deal with personal, emotional, and even suicidal problems," added Schanno.

This organization is completely volunteer. The Helpline has received funding from the SGA and Student Affairs. When the Helpline opens up their lines they will be in service from 9 p.m. until 12 mid-

Anyone interested in working on the phone lines should contact Schanno through student mail. Training will begin in spring for individuals who are interested in counseling students with problems.

Hamilton Presents Noh Performance

by Susan Di Leo Hamilton will present a lecture and performance on Noh theater. Noh is a form of theater with origins in ancient Japanese and Chinese dance and religious ceremony. It was perfected in its present form about five hundred years ago and is possibly the oldest existing form of theater. Costumed and masked actors perform the monodrama, which uses symbolic pantomine against verses of poetry chanted by a chorus which is accompanied by flute and drum music. Noh is characterized by spare gestures and minimal movement by its

Noh theater includes a numher of dances which tell stories. Atsumori (Atsumori's Death) tells the tale of the 16-year-old Atsumori's death at the hands of Genii General Kumagai, Kumagai as a monk, encounters Atsumori's ghost. The death scene is reenacted, 'We will not be shocked by and the ghost is reconciled to Kumagai by the monk's prayers for his

On December 2, Howard B. Yuya) is forced by her lord to an a cherry blossom viewing to though her mother is fatally Yuya's dance is a short and sin one, using the basic steps of m

Noh dance In 1956, Hamilton beg studying the performing of N music and dance in Hiroshima der a number of instructors tween 1957 and 1958, he perfor in various stagings of Noh, incl ing a production of Chikubud (the Bamboo Isle), complete costumes, masks, props, clos and instruments. Hamilton tool the main roles of an old man ar dragon.

Hamilton has performe over thirty Noh dramas in H shima and Tokyo, including fe vals and television programs 5 1972, he has given a series of ture-demonstrations throught United States, including New Y Philadelphia, and Chicago. presently assisting in editing ag of English translations of text

Washington College Dance Program

presents

Dance On Film

THE PIRATE

starring Gene Kelly & Judy Garland

Mon. Dec. 2 6:00 p.m. C-house

Sho'men Blanket Drive SHO'MEN, the campus commu nity service organization, is sponsoring a blanket drive to benefit the homeless. While you are home over

Thanksgiving, think of those who are less fortunate then yourself. The majority of Americas homeless will be spending their holiday over a heating duct, trying to get warmth. There is a way we can help. Provid-help them heed the chills of winter which are forth coming. While you are home, please remember these people, and bring an old blanket back to school. These blankets will be distributed to the homeless over Christmas break when the cold of winter is at its peak ing them with blankets could only

IFOOT OF CANNON ST CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

Monday - Saturday

301-778-3566

Coley Charlie Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists A & P Parking Lot Chesterlown, Maryland 21620

KEEP YOUR SUMMER TAN WITH OUR SUNTANA SUN SYSTEM

EMILY HAIRDRESSER

Rt. 213 across from Bowling Lanes

Complete line of REDKEN & PAUL MITCHELL Full Service Salon

Call 778-2686

Stam Drug Co

215 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 778-3030

> · Greeting Cards Cosmetics

· Russell

Stover Candy

• Soda Fountain

The Historical Society:

Contributing to the Richness of Kent County

by Jennifer L. Nicholson Carriages drawn by coss, the clock striking two from an's Hall, and townspeople gathin the downtown streets of Chnown for mid-afternoon Christas shopping. This may have been nical scene of Chestertown on a ekday afternoon a century or two Because of the work of the sorical Society of Kent County, one may imagine such a scene

The Society was founded late 1936 and early 1937 by Si-W. Prescott and a group of calcitizens who were interested in eserving the history of Kent nty. In 1987, its headquarters located in the Geddes-Piper se in Chestertown. The Society private non-profit group intered in preserving the history of at County. Presently, there are en members on the board of this nter organization

Former board member, ine DeProspo, states " [the mical Society] has no political wer except legal regulatory over property it owns." However, it ibutes to the richness of Kent outy's history.

Some of the Society's ons include their primary funing events which are The Canlight Walking Tour, done in unction with Chestertown resias who own historical houses of tours of the Geddes-Piper se. DeProspo says "with these his, we were able to restore the Mes-Piper House. In 1958, thira families were living there in to room apartments... it very

The funds which have n raised by the Society have 1000 went to the restoration of near Kennedyville which is about the Buck-Bacchus General Store, three-hundred years old. Further are twenty-five buildings which are For example, the Skipjack, a ship located on the corner of Queen and contributions were made to the in the National Register of Historic that applies to the Historic District Tench-Tilghman Fife and Drum in the eighteenth and nineteenth Corps, composed of young local centuries. The Society also contrib- boys, ages ten and up, which in downtown Chestertown, and to Tea Party Parade. the oral history project of Kent County. This project involved forty Kent County residents who relayed what they remembered about Kent County in the early twentieth century. In addition, the Society contributed to the funding of the restotion. According to DeProspo, ration of Shrewsbury Parish Church history.

High Street, which was a real store

The Geddes-Piper House, one of many houses on the Candlelight Tour, is the only owned by the Kent County Historical Society.

DeProspo adds that the Historical Society only owns the Geddes-Piper House and that the organization is "open to suggestions for the education of Kent County's history." She further notes that Kent County is in danger of losing its oral Places. Notably, this includes the Middle, East and West Halls of Washington College. Most of these buildings are located outside of Chestertown with many on the Chesapeake Bay.

"For buildings to become a part of the National Register of Historic Places, they must meet very strict architectural criteria," states DeProspo. Some buildings are only about fifty years old, and some structures aren't even buildings. or call (301) 778 3499.

Commission

As the brochure, Historic Preservation in Kent County, Maryland states, tours of the Geddes-Piper House, the Candlelight Tour of houses in Chestertown, lectures, other historical tours and special events are sponsored by the Society. For more information, contact the Historical Society at the Geddes-Piper House, Church Alley, P.O. Box 665, Chestertown, Maryland

Festival of Trees

by April Dean

annual event that was started five years ago by the soroptomists, or professional women, of Chestertown. It is held in the Emmanuel Church Hall, which is located on the corner of Cross and High Streets. The festival consists of a display of approximately forty Christmas trees p.m. decorated by local clubs, businesses, and organizations, as well as Christmas songs performed by community vocal and instrumental groups. There is no charge for the event, which soroptomist Connie Goodwin feels attributes to the overwhelming success of the threeday affair. She states that, "Each year at least two to three thousand people pass through the hall to view the trees and vote on which one they like the best "

Although the college has been asked each year to submit an entry, no groups or organizations have ever gotten involved. This is because the festival takes place during the last few days of our Thanksgiving holiday-when the majority of us are at home recuperating from a tremendous Thanks- get into the spirit of things!!

The Festival of Trees is an giving meal and preparing for the final exams that lay ahead.

The festival runs from Friday, November 27 through Sunday, November 29. The hours are as follows: Friday 12:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m., Saturday 11:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., and Sunday 11:00 a.m. to 3:00

Also on Saturday, there will be a tree lighting ceremony held in the fountain park on High Street, which is sponsored by the town council. The ceremony begins at 7:00 p.m. and involves the lighting of the large cedar tree in the far corner of the park, as well as all of the Christmas street lights in Chestertown. This event always draws a large crowd, and definitely puts one in the season spirit.

So if your car breaks down, you miss your ride home, or if a sports team deems it necessary for you to stay on campus this Thanksgiving, be sure to visit the Festival of Trees held at the Emmanuel Church, or take part in the tree lighting ceremony held in downtown Chestertown. Don't be a "Bah humbug,"

Beating Dead Horses: The New Art of the Eighties

The art of beating a dead states back to the days when and horse joined forces in the deforsurvival. It was definitely abol of prosperity when a man two horses: one to ride and the trio beat. These activities kept from realizing that his cabin had ming water

Today, the art has become latal activity. Few have maslit completely, but many have bedout of the pit of mediocrity digence, and of verbal prosper-But, how does one enroll in this ool of speech?

First, pick a subject. Any If you can't think of one, are many that are popular to-See the last three paragraphs tails Next, think of all the to that can be said about the

This may seem boring, but with always did. Lunch of course, is doing calculus homework, when practice it becomes enjoyable. And always fraught with opportunities breakfast table, bring it up in classes, and never miss the opportunity to answer when someone says, "What do you think?" Soon everyone will know. And maybe, after years of practice, every conversation will be about the same. Everyone will know everything about one topic, and that will be the only topic discussed. Never again will anyone be distressed by not understanding a th area. It has become a sign of conversation when entering it mid-

One good subject that people have been practicing with lately is the Dining Hall. Everyone talks about it, and in the perfection of the art, have graduated to complaining. It starts at breakfast, after all even though you came in at 9:30 AM, and the meal has been put away Then talk about it, or better you should be given a plate of hot complain about it. All the time. scrambled eggs and bacon. Mom remember this is an art. Start at the for complaining. A stocked salad bar, soup du jour, and entrees don't even preclude this activity. Dinner, of course goes without saying, the best is saved for last. Since each meal lasts for about two hours, come early and stay late, devote yourself to this activity. It could be a new world of possibilities. It presents a problem when you are pretty content with the food research paper. here. For now you must be a nonconformist and think of something else to drone on about. Try complaining about the heavy workload you carry. Three intro classes get really rough when combined with one upper level, and it can only get worse from there. Talk about the week you actually had to stay in on Newt's Night and study. It's almost unmentionable when you have to watch Monday Night Football (that you could be watching in at Rolph's Wharf. Or how about the day you couldn't make it up for classes because you pulled an all nighter writing a paper assigned three weeks ago? After all we do spend about twelve hours in class every week, and the work is so hard. And after worrying about when your allowance check will come in the mail, it's difficult to think about your Satisfaction with academic life, of course ruins this topic. So complain about your roommate. Especially when he has the nerve to assume that the room is where he will sleep every night. Or when he plans for you to disappear at least for a few hours every evening. And then there is the roommate who entertains into late in the evening, heedless of the beer spilled on your sleeping head, and then groans sacred event) in your room while when you arise early in the morning will improve more. With this subject comes the delightful people that live on your hall. You know, the type that scream and sound like live horses galloping by your door, and upon reaching their rooms turn on the stereo that is permanently placed at volume ten, that drowns out all noise of doors slamming

(and turn on the light) to study some

If all else fails, complain about the the social life, after all, there is never anything to do on weekends at Washington College. People never party anymore (every one has much too much studying to do), no one drinks, and conversation has become too difficult. After all, not everyone has conformed to the new art that has been sweeping the nation, that is the beating of dead horses. But don't worry, soon everyone will talk about the same things all the time, and the social life

SPORTS

Shoremen Review

Swimming

The Shorewomen topped Marymount University in their opening match Friday, 69 to 53. The lead switched three times in the first seven matches.

The women broke five team records Senior Liz Whelan set rec ords in the 50 meter breststroke and the 100 meter medley. Freshman Samantha Streamer took more than 4 seconds off of the team's 1000 meter butterfly medley, and a second and a half off of the 100 meter butterfly record. Vicky Carroll lowered the previous team record in the 200 meter individual medley by more than 5 seconds.

Volleyball

The women dropped their final match of the season, losing a two and a half hour marathon to Anne Arundel Community College, 16-14, 15-17, 15-13, 11-15,

Turkey Trot Treats Needy

Snow may have chilled Ch estertown last Wednesday, but by Saturday clear weather and sun shine emerged helping to make the first anual Washington College Turkey Trot a success

About twenty-five students and faculty members competed in the event. Teams consisted of five members, each of whom ran the one mile course once. Individuals also ran, circling the course five times.

Suprisingly, the top three indi viduals all finished the five mile race before the relay teams Sean Ireton, a junior, finished first, with a time of 32:45. He was followed by Sean O'Connor (33:40) and Librarian Jeff Chafin (35:17). Mickey Dulin and Judy Berry also ran the individual leg

The team races were tight, with a mere twenty-four seconds separating the three teams.

Winning with a time of 36:25 was the team of Diane Klein Liz Whelan, Dennis Berry, Karen Perkinson, and Rob Press

All participants were awarded t-shirts and turkeys were given to needy families in the names of the Senior Liz Whelan helped her team win at the first annual Washington College Turkey Trot, and some needy families to enjoy a turkey for Thanksgiving dinner

Miller Plans Changes in Intramural Program

by Ben Jacobs

Despite frequent complaint from students that there is little to do Washington, Baltimore or Annap lis and do schoolwork, the Athle Department has many Intramu Activities planned to fill studen spare time.

Few actual changes ha been made to intramural sport which Athletic Director Geoffi Miller considers to "have a way

But Miller has proposed to eral modifications to the program

An important one is the w ing of an "Intramural Operation Manual" by Donald Chattelier, formation on equipment usage, of ciating activities, insurance lish ity, prizes for competions and dent sign-ups for all activities be included in the manual.

Another key element of revamped program will be the tribution of student questionain judge students' interests in Intra rals and to help develop future or

Miller has also suggested formation of an Intramural Cou possibly composed of represe tives from the various dormitor order to give input to the Athle

Department on Intramurals Another change will be the sh from long term events such as month long exposure to a speci event to, as Miller described it, blast concept- a one day or weekend imersion in a partic sport or game." The water best ball tournament scheduled December 6 is an example of

Other scheduled actin include soccer, tennis and foot for the remainder of the fall, vol ball and badminton to start in cember, basketball and indoors cer in January and February, softball to be played in the spi The key to the intrar program will be, as Miller stated give students a chance to rec

Crew Primed For Spring After Fall Successes

by Carter Boatner Men's and Women's crew concluded their arduous fall schedule competing in their final race of the season at the Head of the Occoquan (HOTO) regatta in Occoquan,

In the past several years Washington College has met mixed success rowing on the Occoquan reservoir which is usually windy and has choppy waters. This explained the disappointment shared by many of the program's veteran rowers when they learned that they were competing in the HOTO instead of the previously scheduled Garden State Sprints in New Jersey The dissapointment was shortlived, for when the team arrived at the regatta they were pleasantly surprised by the nearly ideal rowing conditions, much like what they experience on the Chester River. There were 179 boats entered into this years event, totaling nearly 1 000 rowers

W.C.'s first event was the Men's Novice-8 race in which there vere 10 boats entered, two of those fron W.C. The men's novice "B" boat finished third, 48 seconds behind John's Hopkins University who won with a time of 18:21.2 The novice "A" boat met an unfortunate situation and were disqualified

Need A Job?

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yachi and Country Club $4,00 an hour

778-6765

from the race altogether. which the "B" boat defeated were Bucknell University, the John's Hopkins "B" boat, Stockton State, and George Mason University.

Women's novices a chance to coninue their string of strong racing two entries from WC, featured fourteen boats, one of which had traveled from UNC to compete.

The Women's novice "A" boat finished the best of the two W.C. boats, in fourth place. With the time of 20:41.8, they crossed the finish line 1:05.9 behind the Potamac Boat Club from nearby Washington, DC. The "B" boat finished sixth with the time of 22:07 9. The women's boats held off crews from George Mason, John's Hopkins, the University of North Carolina, Trinity College, Stockton State, Bucknell, and Mary Washington

The final race for the W.C. crew program was the Men's Championship-8 race

had competed against and defeated challenge by "walking" on her boat Among some of the crews nearly all of the boats that were in the race. The only boat that they had not defeated was the George Mason University crew coached by current 'Head of the Charles" champion The second race gave the and former National and World sculling champion Robert Spousta.

When the race finally started performances. This race, including after a one and a half hour delay, a tough head wind sprang up which slowed the boats considerably.

Regardless, the "A" and "B" boats were able to maintain good position throughout the 2.8 mile race. The "A" boat started off the line second behind George Mason University, with the rest of the pack following. The crew was able to pull easily away from George Washington University, and proceeded to work on catching G.M.U.

G.M.U. proved to be a formidable opponent and held off all other crews that threatened their lead. Towards the end of the long course, coxswain Katina Smith experienced slight difficulty in negotiating the final turn, and a strong crew from Two weeks earlier the "A" boat the Potomac Boat Club made a and almost gaining open water. Smith's crew managed to hold off the threat and entered the "shoot" in

The "B" boat enjoyed a well steered race by third year coxswain Daniel Feiner

The "A" and "B" boats finished 4th and 9th respectively. G.M.U. was the winner with the time of 15:34.4, 41.1 seconds ahead of the nearest W.C. crew

Despite the fourth place finish, the crew is optimistic about next spring. This fall the crew has demonstrated its ability to defeat some of the bigger rowing schools such as G.W.U.

With the fall schedule complete, the oarsmen's workout will see a change of pace. No more early morning workouts on the cold and crispy Chester. Instead, long hours in the weight room and on the ergometers await the crew, in preparation for the shorter spring races of one and one-quarter miles (2,000 meters) rowed at higher stroke rates.

Fashion Bug

Overstock sale

EVERYTHING IN STORE

20% OFF

located in Kent Plaza (Rt. 213), Chestertown and compete Raybans

OUTDOORSMAN

available

Forneys Jewelers 106 Cross St.

778-1966

orinter with y

you hours of time. Not to mention gallons of correction fluid and reams and reams of paper.

And, if you buy both now, the first ream of paper you'll save will have a lovely green glow. You'll save a bundle of cash when you purchase an ImageWriter II printer along with your choice of a Macintosh Plus or a Macintosh SE. Eitherway you'll be able to turn out beautifully written and beautifully printed papers.

And we'll even try to help you pay for your purchase with a variety of financing options. We feel compelled to tell you, though, that a deal like this can't last forever. So it's a good idea to see your campus microcomputer center today. And join the conservation movement.

The power to be your best."

Washington College Bookstore

ARTS

Pianist Makes Fourth Appearance in Series

pianist Robin McCabe will perform for the fourth time at Washington College. Her performance will be the latest of the Washington College Concert Series and will begin at 8 p.m. in Tawes Theatre at the Gibson Fine Arts Center

McCabe is a renowned and highly lauded pianist all over the world. She has appeared in concert with such symphonies as the Seattle Symphony, the St. Louis Symphony, the Fort Lauderdale Symphony, the American Symphony of Los Angeles and the Albany Sym-the faculty at the famed Juilliard her, but it is what happens before School and, in addition, teaches at the Victoria International Festival.

McCabe made her debut at Lincoln Center in 1978, after win-Competition. Allen Hughes, a reviewer for the New York Times . reviewed McCabe's performance: "What Miss McCabe has that raises her playing to a special level is a strong lyric instinct and confidence in its ability to reach and touch the listener. Oh, she can play loud when the music calls for it and can build a crescendo so skillfully that Swedish label, BIS

On Monday, November 23 phony. McCabe is also a member of one ascribes enormous power to and after these times that makes her performances compelling so much of the time."

McCabe's renown is such that ning the 1975 Concert Artists Guild a lengthy article appeared on her in The New Yorker that was later expanded into Helen Drees Ruttencutter's biography of Robin McCabe, A Pianist's Progress. She has also released several recordings, including Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition" and Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite," as well as four other albums on the

Campus Calendar

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 20

Film Series: Una Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m

Drama Production: The govern ment Inspector, Tawes Theatre 8:00 p.m.

slaughter, he vows to seek revenge-to exact "utu", a Maori word for honor which includes ritualized revenge. Utu can only be achieved by killing others.

In order to return to the warrior tribes, and the mystical heritage of the Maori. Te Wheke has his face carved-the Maori example of tatooing-as a symbol of his revenge. The next scenes involve Te Wheke, joined by a group of guerilla recruits, seeking his revenge on any Briton be comes across

Utu. filled with adventure, has received favorable reviews. Pauline Kael of the New Yorker says: "...because we're not asked to respond in the banal ways that actionadventure movies usually impose on us...we're turned loose inside this epic, and the freedom is strange and use: "The Outrageous Se to I a.m. Coffeehouse

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER Drama Production: The Go

ent Inspector, Tawes The 8:00 p.m. SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 2

Film Series: Utu Norman James Theatre, 7:30

IONDAY, NOVEMBER

Concert Series: Robin McC ianist, Tawes Theatre 8:00

HINDAY, NOVEMBER ilm Series: A Great Wall

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 ONDAY, NOVEMBER

Dance Club Film: The Pira Coffeehouse, 6:00 p.m.

ilm Series: A Great Wall forman James Theatre, 7:30 VEDNESDAY, DECEMBE

apanese Noh Lecture/Perfo ice, Norman James Theat 7:30 p.m.

Movie Preview

Maori exacts Utu on British

This weekend, the Washington who began migrating to the islands College Film Series is showing Utu, a film centered in New Zealand during the nineteenth century. The film begins at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Sunday and Monday nights.

Utu concerns the interactions of the Maori, groups of Polynesians that later became New Zealand, and the British. The British migrated to New Zealand in the 1830's and had an established government system by 1870

As a result of the British establishment, the Maori have become

English. The main character of the story is Te Wheke (Anzac Wallace), a perfect example of a Europeanized Maori. Te Wheke is a scout with the British colonial forces. After he returns to his tribal settlement and discovers the remains of pillage and

Advertise in The Elm

Only $2 per column inch (local rate) Call Erin Hodge-Williams, ext. 321 or 778-9839

SECRET MORE SELF-HELP FILES

AN EPIC ADVENTURE FROM NEW ZEALAN

"BREATHTAKING...RIVETING... UTU has been compared to an American western. While it unfolds with the simplicity and force of the best of the genre, it is distinctively New Zealand in its flavoring -Kevin Thomas, L.A. TIME

Washington College Film Series Friday * Sunday * Monday Norman James Theater $1 students / faculty / staff $2 all others

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

lume 59, Number 13

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, December 4, 1987

Crosswalk Stirs Controversy in Chestertown

regsed traffic and the re-opening of Minta Martin has caused increased tensions over

213 crosswalk

Baer Returns From Overseas Trip by Chris Hanser

Recently Dean Baer returned a visit to England, Scotland, France after meeting with thington College students ing at Manchester College in and with the Junior Year and Program, and setting up academic exchanges with foreign schools he entire trip lasted about ten and according to Dean Baer it ed to be very productive and encouraging

Le first stop on the trip for Baer

Marchester College, wherein

St. Andrews University, a five on to group meetings and indial sessions with the six students Washington College, she also lour some of the campus. The an Library, Oxfords' main ry, was one of places she saw inpus. In addition, Dean Baer otachance to attend two traditional style lectures given by an those students who are currently Oxford Don (professor). The first lecture dealt with Jane Austen and the second was on Black American Women Poets. After meeting the students and experiencing some of the college, Baer said that she got a sense of what the students' lives were like, and their postive involvement at Manchester College. In the three and a half days that she spent there, Dean Baer became increasingly enthusiastic about the Junior Year Abroad Program.

NCIDE

hundred year old institution located in St. Andrews, Scotland. During her two day stay Baer formalized plans to set up an official program between St. Andrews University and Washington College, which would begin next fall

The program would be open to enrolled as sophomores. Guidelines for acceptance would be along the same lines as those now being used for Manchester College. Students 3.0 grade point average or better. While Manchester College excells in the Classical studies. St. Andrews' strong academic areas are political science, psychology, economics and the natural sciences. According to Baer, this program would add to what Washington College already offers through Manchester College. Up to six students can participate and anyone interested in such an opportunity should make an appointment to see Baer or Associate Dean Lucille Departing from St. Andrews, Baer then traveled on to Paris, where she attended a four day conference. At the conference Baer got the chance to meet with Guidance Counselors from European schools to discuss plans to have students from their schools attend Washing-

Baer also got a chance to meet with Genevieve Acker, the woman who oversees a commission which organizes Junior Year Abroad programs in France. In the works is a plan to establish formal ties with French universities. This program would be in addition to the one with Manchester College, and the new opportunity provided at St. Andrews. Thus giving students at the drivers," said Horsey, who Washington College an even pointed out that there are only a very

by Tony Caligiuri tage of their crosswalk privileges or are motorists simply ignoring their responsibility to yield to pedestrians his disagreement with a letter recrossing Maryland Route 213? This cently published in the Kent County is the question that has been stirring controversy and creating agitation among many Chestertown residents as well as WC students for the past several weeks

According to local media, the Washington College crosswalk was a topic of debate in a recent town council meeting and has spurred letters and editorials in recent issues of local newspapers.

'I don't know of any town that has a college intersected by a major road that seems to have as many problems as we do," said Mayor Elmer Horsey of Chestertown. According to Horsey, there used to be three crosswalks, but for the safety of the students and to help the flow of traffic on 213, they were consolidated into a single, major

Horsey said that the problem is based on a lack of understanding about the laws governing crosswalks. According to Horsey, students have as much responsibility to stop and check for moving traffic as Horsey said that the College agreed few students who "flaunt" their Are students taking advan- crosswalk privileges. He said that it is this minority of students who spur the complaints. He went on to stress News by a college alumnus who blames much of the problem on the "arrogance" of the students.

Although many solutions have been suggested by both the college and the mayor's office, no the best action. A proposed tunnel due to security problems while a proposed elevated pedestrian bridge ties felt that it would not be put to use because of the inconvenience

According to Horsey, the Chestertown Chief of Police was to speak with the leaders of the the Student Government Association and WC Security about safety concerns in the crosswalk. According to Richard MacKnight, no such meeting with the SGA took place.

A spotlight was recently installed to illuminate the walk, making it easier for motorists to see students at night. In addition, interested in applying should have a According to Horsey, students have as much responsibility to stop and check for moving > traffic as does the motorist to stop for the pedestrian.

does the motorist to stop for pedes- to level the slope on the north side of trians. He attributes recent complaints by motorists to several different factors

"The opening of Minta Martin Hall has brought increased pedestrian traffic," said Horsey, who said that many motorists have been disturbed by students' failure to use the crosswalk when coming or going to the recently reopened dormitory. In addition, motorists have complained to either the mayor's office or to the town police that a few students will fail to check for traffic before entering the crosswalk or will stop and talk, backing up

Horsey said that another problem was the large volume of out of state hunters and tourists which pass by the College each day. He has seen many of these motorists pass through the crosswalk without even checking for pedestrians.

"Most of the students are very careful when entering the crosswalk and will show respect for the drivers," said Horsey, who the fire lane to make it easier for both pedestrians and motorists to see. As of yet, pointed out Horsey, the college has failed to follow through on that agreement.

"The mayor has remarked to me that the crosswalk was not work ing that well," said Gene Hessey, Vice President for Finance at Washington College, who agreed with Horsey on many of his points. Hessey agreed that a few of the students seem to take a casual attitude towards the crosswalk while many fail to use it at all. "His concern is well taken because the purpose of the crosswalk was for the protection of the students," said

Hessey also has observed students failing to pause and check before crossing which, he says, understandably causes irritation to the motorists. He also commented that the steady increase in traffic causes increased problems when students take their time to cross the street. He hopes that in the future,

continued on page 5

| BIDE:                             | A697    |
|-----------------------------------|---------|
| ashington Internship              | page 4  |
| Opping Guide                      | nage 6  |
| une Cuff                          | nage 7  |
| sketball Victoryeldhouse Proposal | page 8  |
| dalssance Dinner                  | nogo 11 |
| bum Review                        | page 12 |
|                                   |         |

Editorial

Crosswalk Controversies

The crosswalk again. Second only to the debates about the Sophomore Writing Seminar, this subject recurs with the regularity of the coming of goose hunters. The renewed attention results from a letter printed in the Kent County News and from discussions at the town meeting. As complaints circulate of inconvenience and resentment of the alleged arrogance of students builds, College and community continue to meet face-to-face, or rather fender-to-face, in the white-painted walkwa

While the debate is a tired one, it is nonetheless necessary. Students' safety as they venture out into the state highway that cuts this campus is crucial. Though graduation and attrition have faded the College's collective memory of the event, many witnessed the sickening squeat of brakes and the hollow thump of car and body making contact when a student was struck two and a half years ago Even now, near misses are not infrequent.

Granted, the presence of the highway and the resulting need for a crosswalk poses an inconvenience. The College, of course, would prefer not to have such a split in its grounds, while motorists would prefer not to have the required stop in their travels. Unfortunately, the annoyance is compounded during Chestertown's 5:00 "rush hour," when the return of workers to their homes coincides with the time many students make their way to the dining hall for the

But the complaints seem an overreaction. Charges that students exhibit "arrogance" as they cross, pausing to talk to friends, appear exaggerated; such occurences are, at the very most, rare and certainly do not warrant the backlash that other students face: impatient honks, angry glares, even lewd gestures

For their part, students must cross with consideration. People who have reached the age of majority should no more stop to chat in the street than they would run across without looking, in the fashion of a first grader. Students must take responsibility for their own safety and remember the difficulties of stopping a fast-moving vehicle, particularly in poor weather.

It will be nice if a better solution can be found; unfortunately, a quick answer is unlikely. Officials were correct in realizing that an elevated pedestrian bridge would probably go unused. Another suggestion to build a tunnel seems equally far-fetched, but might prove feasible if the idea is developed.

Still, the reality is that however inconvenient it may be, pedestrians have a right to safe passage across public roadways. This right extends even to students of the College crossing some dozen or more times a day for meals and classes.

Until College and community arrive at some sort of compromise, motorists will simply have to sit on their brakes, and wait.

Washington College Elm

| Edito                     |                      |
|---------------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Kebo          |
| News Editor               | Teny Caligiur        |
| Features Editor           | lennifer M. Harrison |
| Sports Editor             |                      |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Jenny Fisher         |
| Photography Editor        |                      |
| Graphics Editor           |                      |
| Manag                     |                      |
| Managing Editor           |                      |
| Advertising Manager       | Erin Hodee-Williams  |
| Circulation Manager       | William Fauc         |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and exam weeks

Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed columns, com taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editor cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments. major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments. Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boyes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mailed of The Elm. Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21630. Letters become the property of the College of the College Chestertown, David College Chester of the College of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be opublication in that week's issue.

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Anne lormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

SCC Case Results in Two-Faced Rhetoric:

College Should Not Underpunish

In an article ("Three Student Charged With Theft, Forgery") in the November 13 issue of The Elm. I noticed a strange dichotomy, one that reflects a real hypocrisy on this campus. On one hand, three girls openly flaunt the law, committing at least three serious crimes and they are fined a paltry seventy-five dollars each and threatened with expulion, and on the other hand there is a letter which states that any person attempting to use a false I.D. will be turned over to the police and prosecuted. This is a prime example of the two-faced rhetoric of the Administration. On one side the College is allowing alcohol related crimes to go unpunished or at best underpunished while on the other hand the college is trying to initiate responsible drinking. The College must realize that this is sending a very mixed to signal to the student body

Now, let's get serious, We are talking about a series of involved and deliberate crimes: one doesn't just 'go off' or 'lose it for a minute' and steal checks, drive to a liquor store, and forge payment. I don't want to be in a school which condones thievery, forgery, and drunken driving (perhaps the most serious of their crimes, on a par with attempted murder), nor do I want to see Washington College openly defy the law. The three women in-

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM! Excellent income! Details, send self-addressed, stamped envelope WEST, Box 5877, Hillside, NJ

they were drunk their actions are strictly legal matter involving somehow excusable. They are entirely wrong on this count. If they had hit and killed someone in the crosswalk their drunkenness wouldn't bring the corpse to life. Does the school really need to be reminded that it is illegal to steal, forge, and drive drunk. This is NOT Oakview Treatment Center, we are not here to rehabilitate people with drinking or drug problems. If we want to help people with problems the best thing we can do is show them the consequences of their actions. Anyone in Alcoholics Anonymous will tell you that until an alcoholic hits the bottom and realizes that his drinking is the cause of his problems he will not stop drink-I also wonder if the SCC (or whatever their blasted name is) was

HELP WANTED

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at

home! Write: P.O. Box 17,

Clark, NJ 07066

volved seem to think that because actually set up to decide many public highways and banking The constitution of the SGA "The College community can ate disciplinary action again student, group of students or pus organization, that violes propriate norms of behavior on or off campus. Violations and federal laws will be turne to the appropriate author (Ch.IV,A.) I can see how the lege might want to handle things as petit larceny, and tru and lewd behavior in house Washington College is not as eign state, and neither the Alt stration, the SGA, nor the SCO the right to prosecute crimes a the general public (DWI and

A Student and a Ci

Alumni House Study Hall

During final exam week, computers (Mac Plus) and will December 13-19, the Alumni House low one student on each perning. Each student rous will be open as an alternative study computer time will be asked 109 lounge. The House will be open under student supervision from 6:00 a "courtesy contract" assuin Alumni staff that the machina p.m. to 3:00 a.m. Sunday through offices will be found in the mi Also, to accommodate the few who have put off papers, the Office computers and printer will be available to resident alumni on a strict sign-up basis. We have three

The "contracts" are avail in the Alumni Office and wil honored on a first-to-request

EMPLOYMENT HOMEMAKERS WANTED TOP PAY! C.I. 121 24th A N.W. Suite 222 Norman, 0

homa 73069

Larrimore's

Deli — Grocery Breakfast, Subs, Sandwiches, Dinner Platters South of Bridge, Chestertown 778-6022 Open 7 days

Foreign Car Specialist Volkswagen and Imports Service & Repairs 778-1098

Bed and Breakfast Inn

Arena Registration Parallels Search for Love

ettle for adequate, albeit, less ideal, alternamatchmakers or suitors? Advisors or ad-

and using so procong an unneced want, be supported by systems, "arena" or "on-line" registra- find the former more efficient in that the sides, Washington College's size is such that never quite realized were in my graduating no 3 yau no be an experience not unlike looking Registrar and faculty know within a couple of an arena-type system proves to be a civilized class. Hence, it had, forme and most likely for for love: one can either take to the streets and hours' time the distribution of students among and manageable affair, not at all like the and manageaste attack in the thick of society or he the courses for the coming semester. Granted, pandemonium that prevails at many larger not but give things a slightly new perspective, pursue in a seek the convenience of the local comit may entail a Sunday afternoon that could be university registrations. outer dating service. For in the end, his needs better spent elsewhere, but at least the job gets are met, though the possible consequence that done in a matter of hours and everyone goes fickle, uncontrollable factors may deprive home happy. The students, on the other hand, him of prime selections on which he has set should experience a like satisfaction with the fixed and feasty eyes. Thus, he is forced to results, unless, that is, they happen to be "closed out" of a course. But if all the sections gives. But convenience for whom? For of a particular course are full, students are closed out regardless under what system registration conducted. The only difference is that, due to the delay in computer feedback, Although I consider both "arena" and they often do not find this out until a day or so

Trying to determine the better of the proaches to accomplishing the same end. 1 and tends to prolong an unneeded wait. Be-many of whom I either failed to recognize or

Sean Ireton

On a more trivial, though nevertheless interesting note, I found arena registration faculty and the student body, lovers and loved about the only occasion - perhaps aside from ones leave the scene for the most part satisfied the dining hall - where so many students are assembled under one roof. This somehow "co-line" registration perfectly valid ap-later, which naturally complicates matters made me more aware of fellow classmates, ish and German

many others, a sort of joint effect, which could one impossible to attain in personal advising

Yet this aspect is merely an incidental one. The crucial argument for arena registration lies in its alacrity and relative efficiency. In a short afternoon things get settled, and without implying illicit liaisons between the with the objects of their desire

Sean Ireton is a senior majoring in Span-

ISSUE: Should Washington College continue course registration by arena or revert to the "on-line" system?

Anne Downing Freshman Columbia, Maryland

Junior Herndon, Virginia

more efficient if the students arrived at their scheduled times and not an

The arena system is best because "I think arena registration should be students can question the professors continued. The two experiences about the courses and, if necessary, I've had have run smoothly. How-speak with their faculty advisor ever, I do think it would be much-hour early."

Davis H. Jefferson Milton, Delaware

cent J. Maximo Sophomore Dover, Delaware

Noel Breger Sophomore Wilmington, Delaware

more efficient than the line registra- work well. One was able to know tion. The problems Sunday were whether or not the class wanted was caused by the underclassmen arriv- available immediately. ing too early. Perhaps the time intervals could have been at one-half hour intervals instead of fifteen

"The arena registration is much "The arena registration seemed to

"Arena Registration certainly was fun, but a lot of people, especially freshmen, didn't get the classes they needed. Washington College should "renig" the arena registration "

lampus Voices

about any conflicts."

by Susan H. Stobbart

Arena Saves Time, Improves Advising The advent of the arena registration sysment is present at arena registration. This advise in a given amount of time student-

the one of the finest things to ever happen gives the instructors the ability to personally faculty interaction is minimal. This is betacher-student relations at Washington tillege. With this simple process of registraome the luxuries of extra time for teach-Gand students and a better understanding of inculum for students.

To begin with, the arena registration m saves invaluable time for all parties olved. Instead of consuming massive ount of time scurrying from office to office student is given the opportunity to resolve of his/her scheduling problems in one fell op. Advisors benefit from the system by having to arrange their schedules so as to the demands of God knows how many isces. This convenience is the result of sors and advisees all being centrally loand thus being able to immediately end to each other's desires and opinions. The arena registration also has many cific advantages. First, the entire depart-these instructors to ability to react to enrollment in a given class. Thus, if an instructor were to see a disproportionate enrollment in a given course they would be able to react to it on the spot instead weeks later. For example, take a single-section course. If this course is quickly closed out then the instructor can decide, right there and then, whether or not to open a new section.

Perry Finney

such a fashion that it goes against the very gives students a chance to meet and talk with fabric of the advising system. Because an advisor has a given amount of students to control the size of their courses. It also gives cause the advisor is concerned with advising all his students in one afternoon and students are concerned with getting a course from the registrar. Neither group is allotted the time to truly discuss curricular life

The on-line system also discriminates against those who happen to be last in line on advising day. Because student are constantly registering during the day those who are last in the process are often closed out without even ever getting a chance to get in a given course

With arena registration student are given the opportunity to meet individually with the instructors of the course they intend to take. This is especially valuable for freshman who quite often have little idea of what a teacher or On-line registration is constructed in course is like. The arena registration system their prospective instructors True, there are minor glitches within the area registration system which must be worked out. This will come in time as the system is worked with more and more. One problem I do perceive with the arena registration system is that of pre-registration. The only individuals whom I can see having a legitimate right to pre-register are seniors and students who are intending on taking part in the second half of a course. From what I understand pre-registration occurred indiscriminately this year. Students who should not been allowed to pre-register did in fact do so. This defeats the purpose of the system and is entirely unexcusable

Despite this injustice the arena registration system is clearly preferable to the on-line system. It saves time and facilitates better relations between advisor and advisee. Indeed, both of these advantages make the arena registration system worthwhile. Junior Perry Finney is majoring in philosophy.

Spilich Conducts Studies

by Melanie Wade Dr. George Spilich, psychology department head, has been involved in experiments in Yugo clavia as well as experiments close: to home all involving how various chemicals affect the brain. Dr. Marcy Pelchat was recently interviewed by Canadian television about her research involving food preferences. In the past several years the Washington College Psychology Department has conducted experiments which have attracted national and international intrest Dr. Spilich stresses the role that students are able to play in conducting various research projects. According to Spilich, "It is important that students be involved, not just sitting on the sidelines watching the faculty." Junior Sandy Perez has begun a research project concerning ground water and its effects on brain development. The research will involve testing of rural ground water and hyperactivity to find out if there is some sort of correlation between the two. Dr. Spilich expects this study to possibly attract national attention and hopefully "cut bown the incidence of hyperactivity." Another research project taken on by Spilich is the effect of nicotine on memory. This has involved many Washington College students as experiment groups. Spilich has found that nico tine is helpful in certain simple reaction tasks. He is now trying to find out if nicotine has the same effect for more complex tasks such as reading comprehension and concentration tasks. It is very likely that the results from this study could attract national attention

Finally, Spilich's research in Yugoslovia involves the effect of the common industrial chemical toluene on memory. He hopes to identify the effects of long term exposure to toluene. This is possible in Yugoslovia because many people stay at their jobs for longer periods of time. He hopes to discover what safe levels of exposure are, and to establish stricter environmental regulations. Again this research is expected to have long term and far reaching effects In addition to the work done by Spilich, Professor Marcy Pelchat has received international reclaim for her work concerning food preferences. She was recently taped for a segment on CTV's show, "Lifetime" which will air sometime in January. She has done experiments which study people's reactions to unfamiliar foods. The hope is that if people are informed about unfamiliar foods they will be more likely to try them. There have been many students involved in this research, including graduates Waverly Wickes Ford, Mary Lorraine Sex ton, and Sharon Hinnamen. Pelchat has conducted several experiments in the dining hall. One in the summer involving junior high and high school students, and one during 1987 freshman orientation. In these studies she offered unfamiliar foods along with a familiar food, providing three levels of information. The first level was simply the name of the food, the second level was taste information, and the third level was nutritional information. The results showed that students were more willing to try unfamiliar foods when they were provided with taste information According to Pelchat, "Most psychologists have assumed that people won't try unfamiliar foods, as something of a safety mechanism, they are afraid they will be posioned; however this study seems to point to the fact that people care more about taste. They are afraid they will be served something that is unpleasing to the taste rather than posionous." This study also pointed out an age factor, older children are more willing to try a novel food than younger children. Pelchat also conducted a similar study among elementry school students and found much the same thing. Pelchat is considered an expert in her field

Student Selected for Washington Internship

by Tony Caligiuri A Washington College Junior was recently selected to attend the Washington Semester Program at The American University, Kelly Fyans, an International Studies major will spend her spring semester in Washington D. C. while attending Seminars, working as a government intern, and preparing a research project "Working in the nation's capital will give me a chance to be closer to the agencies about which I am studying," said Fyans, who believes that this will enhance her International Studies major at Washington College and improve her chances for employment in the Fyans will be attending four to six lectures each week give by officials from the foreign policy bureaucracy, members of international organizations, and foreign embassy personnel. The internship will involve work with one of the many government agencies in Washington including the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Commerce. Finally, Fyans will be responsible for a major written research project of her choice.

The internship program which was founded in 1947 is sponsored by American University and worth sixteen credit hours. Fyans will be specializing in American foreign policy. Other topics offered specialize in economic policy, justice, journalism, and American politics. Over two hundred other colleges and universities participate in the program

Dr. Daniel Premo, Washington College's advisor for the program, expressed great enthusiasm in having a student from WC participate. It has been several years since Washington College has sent a particinant to the program.

Master Plan To Be Presented

landscape architect, will present the completion of the master plan.

the landscape proposal of the master plan to interested students and fac ulty on Wednesday, December 9th at 7:00 p.m. in the Sophie Kerr room. The purpose of this presentation is to discuss all upcoming reno-

Ellen Samuels, the College's vation and landscape plans towards

Said Vice President for Finance Gene Hessey, "Although this pres entation was made last year, we feel it would be helpful in response to recently recognized concerns

Those crazy college canines: Randy Capel (left) and Hank Miller obeyed their masters by eating their dinner in a dog pen. The juniors are fall pledges for the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity

MOM's Cookie Jar

The Christmas scason here! Students of Washington Cal lege are preoccupied with last mi ute papers, studying for exam Christmas break and shopping in family and friends. This is the tipe of year for a mixture of emotion loneliness and joy, anxiety and as ticination As in past years, in W.C.D.S. will kick of the holida season with the annual Studen Christmas Buffet in the Main Diing Room, Wednesday, Decemb 9th. Featured at the dinner will be the popular "Cookie Box" With the Christmas seas upon us. I am sure there are mo students who would like to earn little extra spending money Christmas presents. You can e that extra cash by signing up to we for the Washington College Ding

I know this is a little late coming, but I would like to sa special Thank You to the 136 sp dents who participated in t Thanksgiving "Give-A-Bird p Through their unself thoughtfulness and generosity, a enteen Kent County families had

Happy Thanksgiving this year. To Jennifer Harrison and other members of the S.G.A. Fo Service Committee, thanks for your help with organizing the se ing at the Thanksgiving Ding

You did a great job! In case you haven't nouz ve now serve 2% milk at all ma This came about as a result of dent requests. The Dining Serv wants you to know we care ab you and your needs. The sugges box has been doing nothing collecting dust this semester. If have a suggestion or question, p. in the suggestion box, located inf Main Dining Room.

Well that's about it for i week Until the ..MOM addition

Open For Lunch and Dinner 7 Days a Week

THE BEACON LOUNGE

ROLPH'S WHARF RESTAURANT

778-3227

A Special Place to be, Every Night of the Week

Happy Hour Monday-Friday 4:00p.m. - 6:00p.m. Special Reduced Prices for ALL DRINKS: 9:00p.m. - 11:00p.m.

Monday Busch Draft: 25/each Tuesday Pitcher any Draft $ 3.00 Wednesday Ladies Night! Any Mixed Drink: $ 1.25 Thursday Import Beer: 85/each Friday Frozen Drinks: Sunday Lounge open from Noon to Midnight .. Food Purchase Not Required.

Also Enjoy Our Regular Dinner Menu Featuring Nightly Specials at Modest Prices

Stock Market Game Yields Winners, Losers

by Marie Ensor

The Stock Market Game is a er-based simulation of the market. It is sponsored by the ies Industry Association has its headquarters in New City. Invented by a Canadian red Laurier University, the Market Game was brought to ned States by the Securities

y Association The game is a highly interand motivated investment se created to promote learnbut the economics, financial and stock market of the States. This is the second or the Stock Market Game at ngton College

Dr. Michael Malone, a busirofessor on campus, is the or of Washington College of Economics and also the Shore which includes secschools in Kent, Queen Annes, and Caroline

Smdents trade stocks over a tek period using $100,000 in etical computer money. actions are processed at various centers throughout the country and teams receive weekly portfolios, which include current holdings, brokerage fees, margin interest, and team rankings. At the end of the ten-week game, various forms of recognition are awarded to those teams that have increased the market value of their portfolios by the largest amount. The results are grouped by age and geographical

Participants trade stocks using prices published in newspapers. As the game progresses, students find it beneficial to research and choose stocks for their portfolios. During the ten-week period teams may execute transactions as often as every business day. The Stock Market Game is well suited for upper elementary, junior, and senior high school students. College students and adults have also gained knowledge and experience by playing the game.

Two main problems exist with the Stock Market Game: There is only a short amount of time to play, and no big risk in losing is involved because hypothetical money is used, there is more losing than winning," explains Dr

According to Dr. Malone, the Stock Market Game can be played again this spring beginning February 27. A stock market registration form will be sent to all Washington College students. A LeggMason stock broker will come to an evening workshop to discuss the stock market with players at Washington

"Most of the people who played in the fall took a beating because of the drastic crash in October," says Dr. Malone

Junior Robert Alexander was first place winner of last spring's competition. In addition to receiv ing Washington College's cash prize, Alexander was awarded an engraved plaque for placing first among all teams in Maryland.

Thus far, the Stock Market Game has been quite successful. More than 200,000 students in 28 states participated in the competition during the 1985-86 academic year. This year there is a possibility that 5 more states will be added.

Dean's Trip

continued from page 1

greater selection of possibilities when considering study in a foreign country

To those students considering studying abroad Dean Baer had a number of suggestions. First and foremost. Baer stressed the need to keep grades up, saying,"most of the programs offered are very competitive and require a 3.0 or better." She then went on to add that a student should not neglect distribution requirements, since it might not be possible to take the courses needed to graduate from Washington College at a foreign school. Something else students should consider, said Dean Baer, is taking some Art, Music, or History courses here at Washington College. Doing this would allow the student to appreciate the art, music and culture of the country in which he or she was studying. In conclusion, she felt it was never too early for those interested to actively prepare for the application process

Crosswalk

continued from page 1 the proposed by-pass will cut down on some of the traffic

To level the hill at the end of the fire lane as agreed would require the removal of several trees, said Hessey. The plan was not followed through because of pressure from the students against the tree re-

Hessey thinks that any college in such a situation would experience similar problems, pointing out that there could be worse conflicts than those dealing with students crossing the steet. Both Horsey and Hessey hopes that in light of the recent controversy, students will be more cautious about using the crosswalk and will be patient with those out of state drivers who fail to stop.

"As mayor of Chestertown, I will always be concerned with the safety of the college students," said Horsey. "It is not a major controversy with me. I am primarily interested in the safety of the pedestrians as well as having minimal disturbances with the flow of traffic. There are good relations between the town and the college, it is important to me that they stay that way.

Buy a printer with your onserve paper A Macintosh personal computer

And, if you buy both now, the first ream of paper you'll save will have a lovely green glow. You'll save a bundle of cash when you purchase an ImageWriter II printer along with your choice of a Macintosh Plus or a Macintosh SE. Eitherway you'll be able to turn out beautifully written and beautifully printed papers.

And we'll even try to help you pay for your purchase with a variety of financing options. We feel compelled to tell you, though, that a deal like this can't last forever. So it's a good idea to see your campus microcomputer center today. And join the conservation movement.

The power to be your best."

Chestertown Shopping Guide:

Escaping the Commercialization of Christmas

by Jennifer M. Harrison

Miles from the nearest mall, Washington College students may feel alienated from the thrill of the Christmas chaos typical of December, the height of the shopping year. However, escaping the ritual of squeezing through mobs of people to get to a major department store does not mean that Christmas shopping must be abandoned. The streets of downtown Chestertown hold a great variety of shops that are interesting and service oriented. who stroll screaming babies into innocent people are in for a surprise. Chestertown is the perfect background to enjoy a new kind of shop

Encore

A vintage clothing and consignment store, Encore is located behing a great bay window estertown Park. Encore is open Tuesday through Friday from 10:00 AM-5:00 PM, and it sells every-

the owner of the item and fifty percent to the store. Encore has been in business for about seven years, although it used to be called the Crosstreet Emporium, and relocated with its adoption of a new name. A special feature of the shop is the wide selection of ty-dyed shirts created by Washington College student Sarah Danowski. Ac-Those used to shopping in malls cording to one of Encore's salescrowded with impatient mothers woman, they "try to be a little picky about what we put in here... people like cotton and wool," and after items are in the store for sixty days without being purchased, they are donated to Second Chance in Centreville, a store that benefits the Nearly New

Located at 322 High Street, Nearly New has been in operation for about twenty-five years. As a benefit for the Kent and Oucen Anne's Hospital, the AM-5:00 PM and Saturday 10:00 Women's Auxiliary runs the store with the help of people who volunthing from gold shoes and spiked teer their time or their belongings pumps to men's sport coats. Owned The store sells everything under the by Vince Raymond, the store earns sun from men's clothing to old money for Actors' Community copies of National Geographic. ming, custom made lay-away plans, Colonial Jewelers Theater (A.C.T). All clothing is There is a wide selection of gowns free gift wrapping and in store donated or on consignment with (some adorned with fur, others with charge accounts. For the holiday great place to buy jewelry for la fifty percent of the profit going to sparkles) and women's shoes and season, the store has musical ties prices. Because it is going out

Colonial Jewelers is

The Chesapeake Plantation of 113 Cross Street specializes in craft supplies and Christmas decorations of all kinds

purses of every color. As one saleswoman said "some of them are good and some of them aren't so good" and "some days we make something and some days we don't." It seems that most days they do make something, in the report from June to September, Nearly New carned over $6,000. Its hours are Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday 10-4 and Wednesday and Saturday 10-1. The Yardstick

The Yardstick, formerly a part of Fox's Department Store, has been in the family of the owner, Larry Lyons, since 1970. With special Christmas hours, the Yardstick is open Monday, Thursday and Friday 9-7 and Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday from 9-5:30. The fabric store sells sewing machines, hundreds of patterns and instruction books, yarn, and many different craft kits. Also sold, are samples of natterns made up by the saleswomen

Brambles is a traditional clothing store owned by Richard ing and gift shop. Blue Skies, the Bramble for six years. Selling items ranging from cologne and cufflinks to sport coats and skirts, Brambles offers many services to the public such as free alterations, monogram-

mas boxers with matching nightshirts

The Singletree

The Singletree sells potential gifts for all ages. The front of the store features potterty, some handmade, rugs, candles and towels. The center is surrounded by glass cases filled with jewelry: sterling silver, porcelain, opal and handcrafted earrings. Toward the back the walls are covered by shelves laden with stuffed animals: bears dressed like fairies and brides and "save the bear" bears. Also in the back of the store are interesting toys like games, masks and wind-up toys. Student employee Jennifer Morgan says of The Singletree, "it's good for getting little things for your brother or sister... or pottery for your Mom." The Singletree's Christmas hours are Monday through Saturday 9-5 and Sunday 12-3.

Blue Skies and Heart to Heart

Really two separate stores that share space, this store is a clothclothing half, is presently having a sale on selected items ranging from blue jeans to cumberbunds. Heart to Heart is specializing in Christmas decorations and ornaments.

with Christmas motifs and Christ- business, the jewelry store marked everything down at l fifty percent. This includes Ler china, Waterford crystal, Spi identity bracelets, Cross pens Mikimoto pearls

The Finishing Touch

The Finishing Touch cializes in custom framing, everything connected with frag such as shrinkwrapping and m ing. In addition, they sell arts plies and prints. According to saleswoman, "if we don't have someone needs, we can order comes in very quickly," people who don't think they artistic can find things to do here example, fabric crayons and pai make T-shirts, fingerpaint, co and oil paints. Besides artist's plies and framing, The Finis Touch has a plethora of other items: trays, oil lamps, ice buck candles and candleholders novelty music boxes. Besides the stores above. Chestertown has many o stores to visit during the holi shopping season. Many are on Street but others line Cross S and Park Row. Shopping can be enjoyable event, especially with the commercialization found mall.

Decorated for the Christmas season, The Village House invites browsing at 103 Cross Street.

Need A Job?

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yacht and Country Club $4.00 an hour 778-6765

Enrolling Under False Pretenses

by Robert Thompson I enrolled at Washington ollege under false pretenses such

THE LOCAL POPU-ACE is proud of their fair haven of rademia. Wrooong. I found this out when I attempted crossing the eet the first night. The locals just did not want me to cross the street. irst came the standard size Ford nickup with the gun/bow rack mss the back window and the ale driver with the windows down nd two giggling female passenrs. I stepped into the crosswalk nd the driver, seeing the blinking low lights, must have thought ha they would soon turn red, be-CHISE he HIT THE GAS HARD. I did not step in front of him, but he nd the two she's displayed their neest fingers to me anyway: malieus, college-hating, local fingers en I restarted my trans-213 trek at"Hark!" I heard more. This time was two loud men (you could call de of blue as our Macintosh "A fine collegiate br," I thought, but they delivered same message as the previous ck, only verbally this time and eyleft me staring at a Confederate gustefully displayed across their

No one wants to study, particularly on a beautiful day, particyularly without its complement of sky-rats.

into believing that most of my nights teacher is similar to the relationship There is not one pigeon to be here would be spent with my nose between a driver and the department found in catalogue utopia, but the buried into thick textbooks. Well, of motor vehicles, strictly numerical when the busy beavers around here real Smith Hall is not complete finals are not here yet, so I may live to eat these words but, I have en-

Why? Are me a jeenyus?

with common sense will by now have learned to put the low student teacher ratio (A catalogue truth) to good use. A large school such as the University of Maryland is organized like the real world and the rela-

Of course not, but anyone

tionship between a student and a contest anyway.

and uncompassionate, but W.C. is nice. You see, here in Chestertown, nothing happens, and therefore everyone has time for everyone else. The teachers have time for students (me), so I can ask a teacher for help or a deadline extension or some thing wimpy for my survival, and that is why I am still here and plan to stay a while. Still, I did not expect to have free time

D. SOCIAL LIFE: Onc would be led to believe that since nothing happens in Chestertown nothing happens at Chestertown's "A quiet campus," [ thought, "would provide an atmosphere needed for acedemic excellence. I will not be disturbed.

Don't tell anyone, but I have reached the conclusion that W.C. is as quiet as a bowling alley during league night, and that the only way

E. THE BUNTAGON:

Somehow, I connected the close student teacher relations to close student administration relations

We would be constantly and easily informed of the decisions from the powers in Bunting Hall. Oh, but we are informed of their decisions When I saw a porch added to the Lie house, I concluded that money had been alloted for that construction. This system is known as after-thefact-information-through-the-obvious. The good news is: it never lies. The bad news is: it does not matter because it is too late to change or

off the cuff

ar window. Frogger has an easier crossing a six lane highway,

THE CAMPUS ROUNDS in the college catajoyfully expanding their inds in the name of liberal arts on the Wiedeater returns...

TONIGHT pre-Tom Larsen party

remember your friendly bartender

Andre Bahores

And the big lawn between Kent and the Cafeteria is not plush. Instead, it sports two manhole covers and seven major bald spots complete with cute little erosion he has more lives to spare. So guillies. The gullies are there be-ulathelocal populace cooperation. cause real weather is not always as beautiful as catalogue weather, and the CHESTERTOWN RAIN look more menacing). moved the dirt from the field where bus are full of plush lawns and dirt is supposed to be to the asphalt with preppies reclining under walkway where the dirt is not supposed to be. This dirt serves to DAMN TREES!" and some land- I do not suggest that the W.C. army joyed much more sleep, or whatever scaper is laughing all the way to the kill the poor things, just that they nocturnal activities there are to en-(the pigeons) are included in the joy, and I am not yet flunking out.

pretty pictures as well. And what are those horrific pipes that pierce the giant elm. I don't like them. The tree croaks,"Et tu Brute." I'm sure they are good for the tree, but someone could possibly paint them brown so they will look less menacing (or red so they will

ACADEMIC PRES-SURE: In the catalogues and in the words of acquaintances who have conceal glass particles that also are heard of W. C., I have been misled

OLD WHARF INN ON THE CHESTER RIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

MILLER LIBRARY USED BOOK SALE

Thousands of volumes available. Price reduced each day ($1 down to 10 cents)

December 7 - 12 Mon. - Fri. 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. 10 a.m. - 2 p.m

Follow signs at the back door (off Gibson Avenue)

Washington College -- Phil-Tom has asked the Big Man, Santa Claus, for an early delivery of one very special present. This present has been at the top of many students list since early this fall. Well the C-House is pleased to announce that with a little help from Norm Lewis, (For a little snow). Santa will drop off this special present today, Friday Dec. 4 at 9PM in the Coffee House

Tom Larsen's Blues Band

That's right, Tom's Back And at $2.00 per person you can dance your blues away, not sing them.

Tom Larsen's Blues Band

Tonight At 9Pm

From Your Friends In The C-House

It's Not just a place to Drink Anymore!

SPORTS

Early Wins Confirm Sho'men's Top MD Ranking

by Bill Beekman

After two weeks of college basketball action, the Washington named Most Valuable Player, and College Sho'men have substanti- teammates Tim Keehan and Tom ated their rating as Maryland's best Auvil joined Bauer in being named Division III team

The Sho'men opened their sea- nament Team son winning the Rose City Classic. narrowly defeating Rochester Insti-79-77, and then capturing the cham-Drew University

In beating RIT, Sophomore escape with the two point victory. with 28 points.

Against Drew, Bauer again was top scorer, with 16 points

For the tournament Bauer was to the Rose City's Classic All-Tour-

The Sho'men followed the tournament win with a victory over tute of Technology in the opener, Frostburg State, 89-67, with Bauer, Kechan, and Chris Jamke scoring 14 pionship the next night over host points apiece, and a loss to Division I University of Delaware, 93-80.

Tomorrow the Sho'men face Tank Duckett sank an 18-footer strong competition from chief MAC with four seconds remaining in the rival Widener University (7:30, game, allowing the Sho'men to Cain Gymnasium), Widener has consistently been ranked in the Junior Andy Bauer lead the scoring NCAA Division III top twenty this year, Washington College sopho- Hockey Association Southeast Se lected as a Regional All-American Honorable Menition in field hockey All Star Field Hockey Team.

Matthews Named Regional All-American

Matthews was the leading senior year. scorer for the Shorewomen this for a total of 35 points, or 2.2 points attended Marymount University.

more Beth Matthews has been se- lect Team for the third year in a row.

Matthews attended high school by the National Collegiate Athletic at the St. Agnes School in Alexan-Association in the South Region. dria, Virginia, where she was voted Matthews was also named to the Field Hockey Most Valuable Player 1987 Middle Atlantic Conference in 1983 and 1984, and also recieved the Outstanding Athlete Awars her

Before transferring to Washseason, with 13 goals and 9 assists ington College in 1986, Matthews

Matthews also plays on the Additionally, Matthews was women's lacrosse team, and is maselected to the first team of the joring in Sociology

Athlete of the Week As top scorer, Andy Bauer lead the Sho'men to victory in their first three games of the season earning him Athlete of the Week Last week Bauer scored 44 points at the Rose City's Classic

Andy Bauer

capturing MVP honors for the tour nament which the Sho'men won.

He followed with a tied for team high 14 points against Frost-Bauer is a junior majoring in Junior Andy Bauer positions for a rebound against Frostburg State at the Sho'men's home on November 24, which W.C. won 89-67. Bauer, who was top scorer and MVP in the Rose City's Classic the Sho'men scorers against Frostburg with 14 points, matched by sophomores Tim Keehan and 0 Jamke.

Tomorrow the 3-1 Sho'men host high ranked Widener University in a crucial MAC game. Game state at 7:30p.m., Cain Gymnasium Chestertown, Md

515 Washington Ave

Under New Management - College Welcome

Dec 4 "URGE" Top 40's $3 cover Back of the Pub

Dec. 5 Dee & The Upsetters Motown at its best $5 cover

Steve Taylor Pitchers $3.50 Draft .50 No cover

Front of the Pub

778-1984

EMILY HAIRDRESSER Dec. 10 Rt. 213 across from Bowling Lanes

Complete line of REDKEN & PAUL MITCHELL Full Service Salon

KEEP YOUR SUMMER TAN WITH OUR SUNTANA

SUN SYSTEM

at

Call 778-2686

Kitchen Open - Best Burgers in Town, Munchie Menu Happy Hour 4 - 6:30 daily

trength is Key to Flying 3.5 Million Dollars Allotted

Also: Stay Active For Better Sex

layer. Are there any special exs that I can do to increase my other _H.W., Detriot , Michigan.

Jock

pear H.W.: There are three rant muscle groups involved rical jumping: the posterior scles, the quadriceps (anteocks). The stronger they get, you grow stronger mefastest way to gain strength ork with weights. Whether se fre weights, Nautilus, Unietc., depends on your lifeyour pocketbook, and your nce. Whatever you choose sire that you understand what e doing. Talk to a fitness and ask questions is to do toe raises using gers is How much weight? Here's sy way to get started. First, find the maximum weight tucan lift eight times in a row. night begin testing your limit ng out with weights that a third of your body weight. you can increase that first 10 twelve consecutive lifts raises), add another five or

or killer quads: There are all of machines and free weight es for strengthening your If you want to keep it simple, night leg lifts, wearing a boot Remember to set your adkeep it straight while liftlerwise you put a lot of unsay strain on the knee joint, Stay Active For Better Sex at can lead to problems

Dear Dr. Jock: I'm a basket- groups work as a team, and its risky after his two year study of the sexual if one muscle set is weaker than the

> For hamstrings, lie face down (wearing a weight boot), bend your knee, lift your leg to a 90-degree angle, then slowly bring it down.

Boost your buttocks: To strengthen the buttocks with a weight boot, also start face down. but this time keep your leg straight, your knee still, and lift your leg behind you Don't overdo it. Weights can work wonders but you've got to be careful not to overdo it. Work out every other day so that your body has time to rest in between. Also, mith) and the gluteal muscles make sure that you stay flexible as

Sports-Med Update: High Impact Aerobics Can Be Dangerous to Your Health

Medical Post newspaper reports the stressful news that more than 75 percent of high impact aerobics teachers and 43 percent of their trengthening your calves: students suffer injuries below the test way to stengthen your knee. That's even more than jog-

> Why do they suffer so? There are lots of reasons: poor training, hard floors, bad shoes, insufficient warm-up. Don't think all that highstress jumping is necessary to get into shape. It's not. Cycling, swim ming, racewalking, and cross-country skiing are all alternatives to Low impact aerobics are good, too. The important thing is to do what you like at your own pace. Plenty of people hurt themselves just trying to stay up with the in-

Dr. Jock's Tip For the Week:

If you want to stay sexy, longer, ork up the hamstrings: If get involved in vigorous exercise—going to work on your at least an hour a day, five times a oushould also work on your week. That's the advice of Bentley ings since the two muscle College researcher Phillip Whitten behavior and self-image of 160 master swimmers between the ages of 40 and 80.

average of 7.4 times a month; those over sixty averaged 6.8 times a month. The average for both groups was 7.1 times a month - three times the avarage for non-swimmers of the same age Whitten reports that not only did the swimmers have sex more often, they enjoyed it more. Older folks with tight strong bodies feel good about themselves and how they look, and that helps keep the sex good and frequent.

Dr. Jock welcomes your questions and comments about exercise, fitness, nutrition, mental conditioning, etc. Write to DR. JOCK, c/o Tribune Media Services, 64 E. Concord St., Orlando, FL, 32801.

@1987 by Ruba House, Inc. Distributed by Tribune Media Services schools of the same size.

For Athletic Facility Improvements, Fieldhouse

by Don Steele

Big things are happening in the Swimmers 40-49 had sex an Washington College Athletic Department. The school has allotted plans, the earliest possible date is 3.5 million dollars towards the improvement of the present athletic facilities, as well as towards a proposed fieldhouse.

The fieldhouse is the major development. Geoff Miller, Athletic Director wants the fieldhouse to be more of a fitness center. Present hopes are for a large rectangular indoor structure with a two lane running track and a number of multi-purpose courts in the infield. The courts could be used for tennis, basketball, or so that outdoor varsity sports may practice during inclement weather Miller noted that as much as the fieldhouse would help the athletic of the student body. Additionally, the fieldhouse ould assist in making Washington College more competitive against

Nevertheless, the fieldhouse is a longterm goal. It is not something that can go up overnight. With fundraising and architectural and other

With the fieldhouse in the future, the Athletic Department is making improvements in other areas. Already, a new irrigation system is being installed, as well as planned improvements for the transportation of teams

"...the Fieldhouse is a longterm goal. It is not something that can go up overnight. With fundraising and teams, it would also help "the fitness architechural and other plans, the earliest possible date is 1992."

Continuing, as Coach Dennis Berry said, to "swim ahead of schedule from last season," the Shorewomen improved their record to 2-2 with a win over Salisbury State in their first home meet Wednesday.

Stam Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon Street rug Co. Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188 15 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 778-3030

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30-9:00 Closed Sundays & Holidays

Raybans

OUTDOORSMAN

available

Forneys Jewelers 106 Cross St.

778-1966

Chestertown

 Cosmetics · Russell Stover Candy •Soda Fountain

Greeting

Cards

Conveniently located just 1 mile from Washington College...

PHIL'S FARM MARKET

FLATLAND ROAD (301) 778-1893

COLD BEER ANYTIME

SOON: Liquor and Wine at Cost

> A CONVENIENCE STORE FOR ALL YOUR NEEDS HAND-DIPPED ICE CREAM - 24 FLAVORS BEST SUBS IN TOWN-SUNDAES-SHAKES-PIZZA

- fresh coffee & donuts
   pizza
- hot soups
- shakes
- snakes
- fast microwave foods
- call-in sub orders

Liquor Sale Starts Today

Buesman Tom Larsen brings his incredible music back to Wash gion College tonight, at 9:30 p.m. in the Coffee House. Admission

Movie Preview

Betty Blue Shows Obsessive Love

The last film in the Washing- lished, Betty clearly exhibits signs n College Film Series for this of instability as the film progresses. enester will be Betty Blue. Diilippe Djian. It is in French with restaurant patron's arm with a fork belish subtitles.

d obsessive, tragic love - in a shing and naturalistic way. with style

Betty Blue opens with an tent love-making scene between ly (Béatrice Dalle). In this one, the audience is given a bit of native history as Zorg reads, in ice-over narration, a passage m Djian's novel; Zorg has known by for only a week, and they de love every night.

Zorg is an aimless drifter in early thirties, who tries his uncessful talent at writing. He trks as a maintenance man at the on community where he lives. oughout the film Zorg's submispe attitude is revealed in scenes th his boss and with Betty.

Betty is an assertive characevery significant decision. bugh she shows her assertive and inating qualities when she is the bungalow in which she

After Zorg's novel is reneed and screenwritten by Jean jected, Betty goes to one publisher's seques Beineix, Betty Blue is apartment and slashes his face with edon the novel 37, 2 Le Matin by a metal comb. Later, who stabs a

Betty announces that she is Beineix uses a favorite theme pregnant, yet when a medical ex French filmmakers - the theme amination proves otherwise Betty goes into schizophrenic depression. From this point, Betty's mental state is is the first of Beineix's films to deteriorates as she breaks into concerned more with people than crying fits, hears imaginary voices late at night, and finally plucks out

Betty's deterioration and ing (lean-Hugues Anglande) and Zorg's helplessness are the focal points of the film. Though Zorg can never understand Betty, he wants to feel her pain. When Betty learns that she is not pregnant, her face changes into a tear-smeared mask of makeup. Zorg, in an effort to feel what she feels, rubs sausages and sauce over his face and, crying, embraces Betty

Passion, the importance of sensual and emotional experience over thoughtful analysis, along with the impossibility of people to ever fully understand each other makes Betty Blue successful. Beineix draws realism and authenticity of who tends to drag Zorg along in the emotions portrayed by Dalle and

Betty Blue will be shown tonight, Sunday, and Monday night Zorg live, and then convinces atre. Admission is $1.00 for stu-

Renaissance Dinner Celebrates the Past

Christmas Dinner, sponsored by the another institution, and when they Washington College Music Depart- first presented one at Washington, it ment in association with the Dining was a great success, so much so that Service, will be held this Friday and Saturday nights, December 4 and 5. have two evenings instead of one. The dinner and program will begin and 16th centuries as performed by dar. Planning with the Dining Servthe instrumentalists of the Early Music Consort. Vocalists from that group will be singing and members of the Dance Club will perform November 1. Medieval and Renaissance dances.

the vocal entertainment of the dinner, Professor Amzie Parcell, the Hansen, trombonist and one of the instrumental. The Renaissance three members of the Brass Choir of Christmas Dinner, according to Dr. the Consort, said, "We'll be playing Clarke, was first presented six years carols from the 1400's and 1500's, Amzie Parcell and Professor Kathy Watched' and 'Gloucestershire Mills. According to Dr. Clarke, Wassail.

Professor Parcell had the idea based The Sixth Annual Renaissance on something similar he had done at it was determined in later years to

Planning for this year's dinner, at 7:00 p.m. in the Hynson Lounge. according to Dr. Clarke, actually The evening will feature the began last Spring, when the dates ntation of music from the 15th were selected on the college calenice began this past September, and music practices began after the Early Music Consort's show on

The music planned for the show Dr. Garry Clarke is overseeing will be old carols and various other dance accompaniments. Chris ago under the direction of Professor with names like 'While Shepherds

Karen Smith is organizing the Dance Club, which will be performing dances from those centuries to the accompaniment of the Consort.

The dinner will open with a boar's head ceremony; also served will be a wassail bowl, roast beef. and various other salads, desserts, and wines. Much of the food will be based on old recipes, including some from the 15th and 16th centu-

Dr. Clarke said of the dinner, "In past years we have noted that people have seemed to very much enjoy coming. The audience is consisted of both college people and people from the community. We can only hope that people enjoy it this year as much as in previous years."

Tickets for boarding students are $10.00 and for non-boarding students, $13.00; all others must pay $16.00. All proceeds will go to aid the funding of the Early Music Consort and the Dance Club.

Arts Update

Musicians Play in Church Hill The Concert Artists of Balti- Serenade. Musicians are Won Ju Anne's County's only theater.

the Theater in Church Hill.

A string trio comprised of more will be presenting an after- Kim on violin; Arky Tsarchek on noon musical performance on Sun- cello; and Michael Machellan on and $3.00 for students. They should from a tour in Moscow.

The performance is sponstudents from Peabody Conserva- sored by Friends for Church Hill freshments will be offered after the tory will be performing a Beethoven Preservation, which has been bring-concert. All are encouraged to at-Trio, a Mozart Trio, and a Dohavne ing a variety of shows to Queen tend.

Tickets are $6.00 for adults day, December 13, at 4:00 p.m. at viola. The trio has recently returned be ordered in advance by calling Ms. Mary Wood at 758-0235, and will be held at the box office. Re-

Jazz Band Performs Sunday

by Susan Di Leo

This Sunday, December 6. at 4:00 p.m., the Washington College Jazz Band will present a concert of music from the 1920's Amzie D. Parcell will play the pithrough the 1980's.

According to Director Amzie D. Parcell, "the Jazz Band will perform works that vary in style from Dixieland to Jazz Rock Examples of the former are the 'New Orleans March'by Gary Lindsay, and 'St. James Infirmary, by Joe Primrose" while 'After-burner,' by Mark Taylor is representative of Jazz Rock

Among the other compositions the band will perform are "Take the 'A' Train," by Billy Strayhorn, "It Don't Mean a Thing (If it Ain't Got that Swing)" by Irving Mills and Duke Ellington, and "Round Midnight" by Cootie Williams and Thelonious Mark

The band includes saxo onists Andrew Chandler, Mary Jo Decrecenzo, Timothy Anderson, Timothy Rohs, and Charles Bishop; Keith Wharton, Jonathan Sarris, Robert Fleetwood, and Clifton Cotton on trumpets; Janet Szabo, Kristen Johnson, and Christopher to move to Paris in a failing dents, faculty, staff, and $2,00 for Hansen on trombones; flutist Deg-

Also in the jazz band are guitarist Ford Schumann, bassist Jeff Cessna, drummer William Faust, and vocalist Kate Bennett.

In addition to the Jazz Band, the Cabaret Singers will be performing. This twelve voice ensemble will be directed by Kathy Mills. They will be performing the compositions of Joe Primrose and Gary Lindsay, as well as "Someone to Watch Over Me," by Ira and George Gershwin.

The Cabaret Singers are: Kathleen Bennett, Tamara Braunstein, Sarah Clark, Marti Dver, Petra Fajerson, Laura Hopper, Sarah Johnston, Renee King, Meg Murray, Jill Reppert, Laura Robbins, and Candy Tomei.

The concert will be held in Tawes Theater of the Gibson Fine Arts Center, and is free to the public. Everyone is welcome to attend this concert

See what is perhaps the most important American play written in the last 20 years...

AUNT DAN AND LEMON

at Center Stage

tomorrow

call 778-2943 for ticket information

ENTERTAINMENT

Sting Seeks to Change Human Race by Kevin Holland

Nothing Like the Sun, Sting's newest album, was released this year. It includes the single "Rock Steady" and is available on A&M Records.

With the release of Nothing Like the Sun. Sting continues in the jazz-influenced pop vein he used in his debut solo album, Dream of the Blue Turtle Backed once again by a superb collection of jazz musicians, most notably saxophonist Branford Maris innovative enough so as to sound original, which is no mean feat in rule the charts. Sting sounds like few other musicians and, he is unlike any other who is at the top of the If there is any problem to be found in the music on the album, it is in the tendency of the songs to sound alike. Low-key and jazz-tinged, they tend, in some cases, to run together with the other songs on the

There are relatively few great songs on the album; that is, not many of them are so memorable as to be considered classics, but most of them are rather good. Neil Dorfsman and Sting have performed a lush production job on the album, perhaps too lush. The album misses what is more evident on this album than the first is the encroachment of Sting's personal pretentiousness in his lyrics. The man thinks he is out to change the human race. This is all Noah's Ark. It ends a good and well, except that his mission is too obvious.

He is too self-conscious of his attempts to redeem our thinking for salis, Sting has produced an album him to make many true meaningful that, while made in the same mold of commentaries. Remember "Rusthe first, is not stagnant. His sound sians," from the last album? That song struggled to be profound and became merely trite. "I hope the these days of pop music clones who Russians love their children, too"-I'm sure they do; it's a moot point.

On this album, there are no songs that reach for such simplicity, but there are some that preach. In "History Will Teach Us Nothing," his most didactic song, Sting admonishes to the listener: "Know your human rights." It is obvious that Sting's work with Amnesty International, albeit admirable, is getting in the way of his writing. A tendency in his writing has been to say, "Gee, what a sensitive guy Iam. If the world was like me, what a wonderful place this would be.

balances what he wants to say, the songs can be brilliant. Getting back the best material in recent to human rights, "They Dance he could only learn where the rawness that is inherent in the Alone" is a wonderful example of a the line, between preaching non-preachy statement, with both As in his first album, Sting's music and words that haunt the lis-

"Rock Steady" is Stin. hest The tongue-in-check tions on modern religion an gelists are barely hidden be humorous retelling of the les speaker and his female con abandoning Noah's Ark for rock, where there is room for her and room enough 6 but no room for anything ele of all God

"Sister Moon" is a class iazz number, with Marsali phone flowing smoothly to out "Little Wing" is an a remake of a Jimi Hendrix sa the piece is filled with in quirks

"We'll Be Together! first single from the album obviously designed to be alupbeat dance/pop numbe out of place among the oth on the album; still, the so good, catchy tune,

It is obvious that with! Like the Sun. Sting has take he certainly deserves the at But when Sting is on target and rial he has written and prof both albums stands out as subtlety, music and mis would be a force to red the newest film by Jean-Jacques Beineix (Diva) ...

Chestertown Movie Theater

Revenge of the Nerds

778-1575

TRENDY COMIC

beats the Nish TOO SKINNY WHAT'S OUT (Muscles are OVT ->)

WHAT WILL ONLY BE COOL ANOTHER MONTH SO YOU'D BETTER HURRY: H

$2 all others

Betty Blue

Washington College Film Series

Norman James Theatre

Friday * Sunday * Monday

7:30 p.m.

$1 admission — students, faculty, staff

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 14

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, December 11, 1987

Senate Absenteeism Causes Problems

by Tony Caligiuri The Student Government Association has been experiencing a growing absenteeism problem at senate meetings in the past several

According to SGA Secretary Kim Cavolo, the average rate of absenteeism is seven to eight senafors per meeting. At one point this year, a quorum could not be reached, and the meeting was never called to order. The by-laws of the S.G.A. require that a majority of the senate (17 senators) be present within ten minutes of the scheduled meeting for a meeting to be called to

"This is pathetic, really pathetic," said Cavalo, continuing, "The senators get reminders ahead of time, knowing that it is the policy of the senate to meet every other Monday. It's impossible to say 'I didn't know.

Richard MacKnight, president of the SGA, noted that the problem seems to be getting worse. He feels that the senators may skip meetings because they feel that "nothing ever seems to get accomplished", yet he links this in a large extent to the absenteeism problem. He also says that the problem is partially due to student apathy.

MacKnight feels that this absenteeism problem is, for the most part, confined to the SGA. He feels that student attendance on faculty committees has not been prob-

Both Cavolo and MacKnight stress that action will be taken against those senators missing more than the by-laws allow. According to the Student Handbook, "Any member of the senate or academic board who has a total of three unexcused absences in any semester shall be requested by the senate or the SAB to hand in his resignation. The handbook further allows for the impeachment of any senator failing to comply with this request. According to attendance rec ords kept by Cavolo, senators missing at least three meeting include Jenny Pollard, Chris Fascetta, Noel Breger, Jerome Rene, and E. B. Harris. MacKnight indicated that elections for the replacement of these senators would be held next semester. None of the above could be reached for comment before

In addition, Cavolo noted that there are numerous senators with two absences. Said Cavolo, "I don't understand why these people can't take a half hour out of their week when they originally showed enough interest to run." She added, "I'm sure that there are plenty of people with enough interest who would run and become more involved [in the event of an election]

anta distributes presents to local children at the forty first annual Kappa Alpha Christmas party las Saturday. Thirty five youngsters spent the day with members of the

Companies Make Donations

Olin Corp Gives $100,000; Hodson Trust, $665,000 metals, and defense firm headquar- and will be unable to attend the President Douglass Cater announced that the Olin Corporation Charitable Trust has donated $100,000 to the College for use in creating a general chemistry labora-

The gift will be formally presented to the College at a luncheon in Easton today by John Johnstone, president and chief executive officer of Olin Corporation, a chemical, laboratory will be named in honor of be made Thomas Steele Nichols, a former president of Olin and a long-time gift to the College, said that, "Famember of the College's Board of Visitors and Governors.

ence Center, which is now under in chemistry or science or at least student use next fall.

This new laboratory is critical ticularly involved in efforts to pre- sales of $1.8 billion. serve the Chesapeake Bay."

a plaque with his name will be dis- Chesapeake Publishing Company, played outside the lab entrance. A Delmarva Sash & Door, Dixon 1926 graduate of Cambridge High Valve & Coupling Company, School on the lower Eastern Shore, Dukes-Moore Insurance Co., Fuller Nichols was president and chairman Motors, McMahon Oil Company, of the Mathieson Chemical Corp. in North & Parker, Peoples Bank Baltimore when it merged with Olin Preston Trucking, Talbot Bank, Industries, Inc. in 1954. He later have been invited to the luncheon, serve as president and then chair- which will be held at the Tidewater man of the board of Olin Mathieson Inn in downtown Easton. Chemical Corp., which is now named Olin Corporation.

tered in Stamford, Connecticut. The Juncheon at which the donation will Johnstone, in explaining the miliarity with the natural sciences, should be an essential part of a lib-The Nichols General Chemis- eral arts education." He added that try Laboratory will be located in the he hopes the new chemistry lab will College's Alonzo G. Decker Sci-stimulate students to pursue careers construction and should be ready for improve their understanding of the vital role that these disciplines play.

He also pointed out that enviin the College's efforts to strengthen ronmental education is a key priorthe curricular offerings in the natu- ity for the Olin Corporation Chariral sciences," says President Cater. table Trust, which oversees the dis-"With the completion of a modern bursement of the company's chariscience facility, Washington Col- table funds. Olin, whose businesses lege will be in a position to make include Winchester sporting ammuvaluable contributions to environ- nition and the HTH line of swimmental research, and become par- ming pool chemicals, has annual

A number of local businesses. Once the laboratory is com-pleted, a picture of Mr. Nichols and Brown & Sons, Centreville Bank,

In addition, Washington Col-Although he never completed lege was among four private Maryhis college studies, Nichols be- land colleges and universities re-

Master

Ellen Samuels, the College's landscape master plan Wednesday evening to an audience of administration, faculty, staff and approximately 20 students.

trees and shrubs will expand from len to at least 50, with a sequence of through late August. Fall foliage of the poor condition of the tree. will then begin and trees will bear fruit until about December, when the bark's texture will gain atten-

"Ideally, you get four season selecting plants she considered their prevent destruction of the terrace. adaptability to the region.

She expects that the variety of plants will prevent build up of the many of the campus trees. The loss of the tree-lined walkway will be addressed with the planting of

No trees - including the Clint Baer, director of planning and Plan Presented

special projects. Though Samuels originally called for the removal of the gingko

She explained that kinds of due to bad pruning ("it looked kind of like a dinosaur with a turtle head"), Baer said a review board flowering planned from mid-March okayed the suggestion only because

Within the next six months the Norway spruce near the Alumni House will be cut down to allow for more light in the building. Eventually, the willow oaks in the library interest," she said, adding that in terrace planter will be cut down to

Though the College was gingko - that were not diseased or originally advised that the trees landscape architect, presented the dying have been cut down, said were sufficiently small for the location, the oaks are expected to grow to a 90-150 feet with a root spread of about 150 feet.

Professor Bennett Lamond protested the removal: "It's a question of tearing out bricks or tearing

In a discussion of the grounds aspect of the plan, Gene Hessey, vice president for finance, announced a future increase in park ing spaces from 563 to 822 spaces. The Board of Visitors and Governors gave general approval to the plan at their meeting last Saturday.

Committee Approved

A proposal for a standing sorts of diseases now destroying committee on athletics was unanimously approved by the faculty at last Monday's meeting.

The committee, which will smaller trees from alumni gate begin meeting next semester, will down Washington Avenue to Dun- include one member each from the humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences divisions. Athletic director Geoff Miller's original motion was amended to replace a education department faculty.

Student representation will continued on page 4

lieved that education was vital to the ceiving a total of $2.1 million in strength of our free enterprise sys- grants from the Beneficial-Hodson tem. Now 78, Nichols is in ill health

Editorial

Student No Shows

Some members of this institution's Board of Visitors and Governors probably aren't too sure if Washington College really does have students - they still haven't seen any

Last week, the Board expressed concerns at their general session that student representatives to their committees had neglected to attend those meetings. A few weeks earlier, the five students appointed to the Board's Student Affairs Committee did not make a dinner meeting; worse, only one offered an excuse. At the same time, the Student Government Association is experiencing a similar problem, with senators failing to show up for meetings or to fulfill their obligation to serve on a senate committee.

Granted, last Saturday's Board committee sessions were scheduled for 8:30 in the morning, a time when few students are active and alert. Nonetheless, the Visitors and Governors go to the trouble to interrupt their lives to serve the College; perhaps we could sacrifice a few hours sleep to help them do it better.

The following alternatives to the present line of communication, which consists of the Board reading about students' complaints in letters, news stories, and satire articles in The Elm, could help mitigate the effects of this apparent lack of interest:

One member suggested that the Board periodically write to The Elm to address issues the students raise. Whether in the form of a letter or column, any writing the Board wishes to send we will gladly print.

A student-initiated recommendation is to select a represen tative to the Board along with the election of SGA officers in the spring. This parallels the role of the faculty representative to the Visitors and Governors. Currently, the only students who attend general Board meetings are the SGA president and the Elm editor, who report on the status of their organizations, not of the student body as whole

- The absenteeism problem can also be alleviated if those unable to attend committee meetings send an alternate. SGA senators and Student Academic Board members are permitted to designate non-voting substitutes to ensure the representation of their constituencies. At the very least, a phone call to the committee chair informing them of any schedule conflicts is common courtesy.

The failure of students to show up for such meetings is not only embarrassing to their peers, who are judged irresponsible by association, but poses a danger to the quality of life here. The student voice is crucial in determining College policy on tuition, enrollment levels, faculty salaries, and yes, the trees

If we don't bother to tell the administration and the Visitors and Governors what we think, then it's that much easier for them to do what we don't like. As one Board member joked, "Having seen excessive student participation, I think I prefer it this way."

Washington College Elm

| Editors                   |                      |
|---------------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief           |                      |
| News Editor               |                      |
| Features Editor           | Jennifer M. Harrison |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beckman         |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Jenny Eisberg        |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Balze        |
| Graphics Editor           | Todd Karr            |
| Manager                   |                      |
| Managing Editor           | Cathy Jewell         |
| Advertising Manager       | Erin Hodge-Williams  |
| Circulation Manager       | William Faust        |
|                           |                      |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations an exam weeks.

Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Sixped columns, common-tion, better, clients, and cellural activors represents the opinions of their subser-and are not excessively the view holds by the numbers of the editorial staff.

The control of the editorial staff of the editorial staff of the editorial staff.

The editorial staff of the editorial Wishington and the process of the pr

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Miss Dee Deserves Respect To the Editor:

A couple of weeks ago the television in the snack shop was turned off because of the incredible rudeness of a certain student on two occasions. The first time was on a Friday night while the snack shop ladies were watching Dallas. The student and her friends, who were sitting directly in front of the TV talked loudly throughout the program, pausing only for the commercials. They ignored requests that they be quiet, and the TV was turned off. Early in the following week the same person was again seated in front of the TV, only this time she had the volume at a near deafening level. She ignored Miss Dee's requests that she turn it down, and the TV was again turned off, this time for good. This person then told Miss Dee that it was her privilege to do anything she wanted with the television. She then paid her bill and left,

and students who enjoy a little

Monday Night Football or Wheel

with their cheese eggs have been left with a blank screen ever since. Miss Dee and the others in the snack shop do the college a big cially now on weekends as well. They should be given the respect that they deserve. Many of us think that Miss Dee is owed an apology, and maybe then we will get the tube back. YOU KNOW WHO YOU ARE. At least show Miss Dee a little courtesy

Wm. H. Wilmer

Vandalism Hurts Party Hosts

To the Editor:

On Saturday December 5, AOPi and Theta Chi hosted a party in Cullen basement. At around 12:30am an unknown individual maliciously vandalized one of the bathrooms. This individual(s) by tearing off the sink and stall off the wall has jeopardized the social life at Washington College. When a fraternity or sorority holds a party they go out on a limb to provide social activities for this campus. Rarely are these parties profitable. We do it as a service and because parties are usually entertaining. Individuals who vandalize property at the party get the host of the party into trouble. When hosts favor by working long hours, espe- get into trouble they often are no allowed to hold parties or choosens to hold any more because it is more trouble than it is worth. The vandalism also creates financial difficulties for the organization who has to pay for the destruction. Innoces people are paying for the damage that was caused by people who do not have the decency to act like civilized human beings when they are out socializing. I would like to thank all the people who came to our party and offer a special thanks to those who offered their assistance Thank Yes. Anne Johnson

Friday, December 11, 1987

Correction

An article in the Nov. 20 is sue of The Elm ("College Guss House Under Renovation") contained several inaccuracies. Fund ing for the renovation comes from: grant from Mrs. Eugene B. Casy separate from the $5 million giftshe gave the College. Also, the interior decorator for the project is Holy Rhodes, not Libby Cater. The Eln

regrets the errors Editor Appointed

Freshman Susan DiLeo will assume the position of arts/enter tainment editor next semester. The Elm congratulates DiLeo and thanks retiring editor sophomet Jenny Eisberg for a job well don.

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM Excellent income! Details, see self-addressed, stamped envelop WEST, Box 5877, Hillside, NI

EMPLOYMENT HOMEMAKERS WANTED TOP PAY! C.I. 121 24th Ave. N.W. Suite 222 Norman, Okis-

homa 73069 HELP WANTED

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly home! Write: P.O. Box 17. Clark, NJ 07066

RESTAURANT CHESTERTOWN, MD. RUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-5 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:30-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE
SCHEELER FIELD

778-1222 B1. 213 & 291

Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS

778-4771

Memories of a Sleigh Ride with Santa Is there a Santa Claus? What kind of through the win

question is that? Of course there's a Santa dogs to shut up when I climed into his bag of Claus! He's this really fat guy in a red suit - toys. There was a big red spot in the snow you've probably seen pictures of him. But where he'd fallen off the roof and the dye had I've been in his sled.

I waited one year, listening for those 32 to slide off.) Sure enough, around three o'clock they appeared, bells ringing, waking were howling at them, and The Fat Guy kept in our shingles, and dad got really mad. Anyway, they were scratching at the roof, and the sled was sliding down toward the slipped a couple of times trying to get to the chimney, and finally he just gave up and broke the basement window getting in. back yard, and I was climbing onto the roof. The reindeer were scared of me at first, but I ignored me and kept clawing away at the shingles. It looked like dad had been up there come out of his suit.

"Ho, ho ho! A ladder!" he exclaimed. As little hoofbeats on the roof. (Our roof is really he climbed up I could here him muttering slanted, so they made a lot of noise trying not about the awful dry fruitcake that mom had left out for him

The sled leaned funny as he climbed in. up the whole neighborhood. All the dogs then he cracked his whip. "On Dasher! On Goofy! On Sneezy! On Sleepy!" he cried, and yelling, "Ho, ho ho!" After the snow thawed even our neighbor's stupid little chihuahua we could see all the scratches their hooves left started to yap at him. I peeked out of the bag. My neighborhood was getting smaller and smaller. I threw up.

Deciding to keep my head in the bag, I gorch when I heard The Fat Guy get out. He waited until we got to the next house. On the way there, Santa started to doze off, and almost ran into a helicopter. The next place he landed on had a flat roof, so I thought it'd be Meanwhile, I had a ladder set up in the easier for him, but he overshot it and ended up stuck in somebody's rose bushes. The reindeer were tangled in an old clothesline. The gave them some carrots, and they finally porch lights came on. He was busy cutting the clothesline when we heard the police sirens. At that I decided not to hide anymore, and with a hose, wetting the roof to ice it over. I jumped out of the bag onto the fresh virgin Santa Claus was just crawling back out snow. "Ho, ho, oh, no!" Santa was saving. He had just gotten the sled untangled and turned Santa had broken. My mom was standing right for me, inches off the ground.

A firm hand snagged my collar and lifted me up. I looked down at the astonished watching us rise. I stuck my tongue out at

Dean

Hebert

"That's not very nice," a deep voice said, and then it struck me: I'm in a sled with Santa Claus. I guess because he hadn't spoken to me before, I'd missed the gravity of the situation. "And stowing away in a sled isn't very nice,

"Um, I'm sorry, Santa," I said. Well, now you've made me late to all the other boys and girls. I've got to get to Argentina before dawn

"I'm sorry." I started to cry. Santa knew just where I lived, and he was going to land on the roof again, but he remembered how much trouble he'd had before, and, anyway, we could see a pair of cops looking at the window majoring in English.

around; red and blue cop lights were shining there in her bathrobe. So instead, Santa on the white garage wall. I turned around just touched down a couple of blocks away, and let in time to see the reindeer and sled coming me out. That's when he noticed my shirt was really smelly, and he figured out that I'd been sick in the toybag. I started to cry harder. "Don't cry, now, Dean," he said, and I wondered how he knew my name. Santa policemen, who were standing in the yard, pulled a tiny red bag out from inside his shirt.

"Now, don't ever let me catch you playing tricks on Santa again. You promise? nodded. He reached into the pouch and there was a pinch of glowing powder between his fingers. "Promise!" he said, throwing the powder into the air. It sparkled for a moment, the the entire neighborhood lit up, and I was back in my living room. It was very quiet, and I wondered what had happened. Then I looked at the clock. 2;45. Way off in the distance. I could hear sleigh bells. Our dog started to bark. Quickly I threw mom's dry fruitcake into the trash, and I put out some chocolate chip cookies and a glass of milk. Then I ran upstairs. I was just drifting off to sleep when I heard the basement window break.

Dean Hebert is a senior

Is there a Santa Claus?

Angela Henneman Sophomore Baltimore, Maryland

Santa Claus is alive every time little need?"

Stephen Gregory Sophomore Richmond, Virginia tybody. Santa Claus is the giving department stores and shopping fact, last Christmas I saw my Mom spirit in people at Christmas time. malls. what more proof do you kissing Santa underneath the mistle-

Freshman Ossining, New York "Yes, there is a Santa Claus in eve- "Sure there is! He comes to all the "Of course there is a Santa Claus. In

Neal Roulton Junior Columbia, Maryland

"I met him once."

Kristen Schneeloch Freshman Smoke Rise, New Jersey

"A few years ago, I got a lump of coal in my stocking; Now, it's just a big question mark."

kids laugh and their eyes light up.

Campus Voices

Yes, Virginia, There Is an Untrimmed Trimmer

Does Santa Claus Exist (1) It is evident to the senses that every Santa Claus Can there be any doubt about the exis-year Christmas trees are decorated in millions the of that wonderful little elf from the of homes. But a decorated tree must have North Pole who travels the entire globe in a been trimmed by someone who is already children on Christmas morning? When we want to know for sure whether or not something exists or is real we will be argued that the trimmer of the Christmay turn to philosophy. But has any philosothe addressed the matter of Santa's existence with the sort of rigor required of most elemen

lary school students? As far as I know, there are only three: a Scholastic philosopher named Nicholos from Aquino in Italy, the Archbishop of Cranberry, Anselm of Peidmont (not the airline), and a French mathemalician, physicist and theologian named Rasthe only one of the three not elevated to minthood for his work on clausality

St. Nicholas of Aquinas produced five Proofs for the existence of Santa Claus. We need only mention two:

angle evening to bring joy to millions of dressed or trimmed and that trimmer must in turn have been trimmed by another and so on until you come to an untrimmed trimmer. It

Dr. David

Newell

mas tree might have trimmed himself (a selftrimmer), or that there may be an infinite series of trimmers (a process going back in time without limit). But it is evident that as little children we need help getting dressed the first time (no self-dressers), so there really cannot be any self-trimmers.

Moreover, there cannot be an infinite series of trimmers because the process had to start somewhere. Hence, there must be an Untrimmed Trimmer, and this we all know to be children (who lack direction in their lives) behave according to a design at Christmastime. Where there is design there must be a designer. It follows then that there must be a designer who is capable of making children behave, and that Designer we all know to be Santa Claus

(2) It is evident to the senses that little

St. Anselm of Cranberry argued that Santa was "that elf than which none fatter could be conceived to exist." Even unbeliev ers understand and accept this definition. So, Santa must at least exist in the understanding. But everyone knows that any being which exists in reality is fatter than a being which exists only in the understanding (e.g., com pare your idea of a piece of chocolate cake with an actual piece-which is fatter?). Thus, if Santa existed in the understanding alone, it would be possible to conceive of a being which is fatter than that being than which none fatter can be conceived-which, of course, is absurd! Hence, there must really be a being than which none chubbier can be conceived,

by Susan H. Stobbart

i.e., Santa exists!

Lastly, there was the unsainted philosopher Blaise Rascal. He argued that we cannot know for sure whether Santa exists, but we would be wise to wager that he does. If we bet that he exists, and it turns out that he really does, we stand to gain a great deal more (gifts!) on Christmas morning. If it turns out that Santa does not exist, all we have given up is a few worldly pleasures (fun things) for a few weeks before the Big Day. Clearly the odds favor belief over unbelief when it comes to the jolly old elf from the North Pole

Whether Santa exists may not ma much. If enough people believe he exists there may be some sense in which he indeed does. Merry Christmas!!

Dr. David Newell is the chairman of the philosophy department.

Olin Corp., Beneficial-Hodson Donate

continued from page I Trust Thursday.

Presidents of Washington College, Hood College, Johns Hopkins University, and St. John's College accepted grants from Finn M. W. Caspersen, chairman and chief executive officer of Beneficial Corporation and chairman of the Benefit cial-Hodson Trust at a special luncheon at Baltimore's World Trade Center. Washington College received $665,000.

be drawn from the S.G.A. and from the Athletic Advisory Council, which includes a player from each sports team and meets with Miller monthly. Each body will appoint two members

"The Hodson Trust has donated more than $3 million to Washington College for capital and endowment purposes, enabling the college to take giant steps toward meeting its campaign goal and to build financial

"This year's grant will reach out to three areas of paramount need. Approximately $350,000 will be put toward the Scholarship Endowment Challenge Fund, to be grateful to the Beneficial-Hodson

Faculty Approve New Committee

sory board to encourage faculty hope they get a better idea that what we're doing is supportive of the total mission of the College. We try to keep students' academic interests at the forefront of our priority list," he said, explaining that they do not favor preferential treatment or tolerate poor academic performance input in his department.

from athletes

President Douglass Cater said, matched by the College's Board of Trust Visitors and Governors Also the renovation and refurbishing of the main dining room in Hodson Hall. The remaining $165,000 will be applied to the campus master plan for capital projects. Cater concluded, "These anform of corporate philanthropy. Washington College is deeply

In other business, the faculty approved a proposal for a speech course to be added to the drama department's curriculum and offered next semester. The proposal was initiated by the Student Academic Board last year and went to Academic Council and the drama department for review before being $150,000 will be appropriated for Delaware-based. New York Stock more than $7 billion.

exchange listed financial services Beneficial Corporation is a holding company with assets of

Santa Visits Campus For K.A. Party

nual grants represent the highest Order at Washington College held provides the brothers of Kappa their forty-first annual K.A. Christ- Alpha achance to give some of their mas party for local children on Saturday, December 5 in the basement of Chestertown at Christmas," said of Middle Hall.

The party, which is organized local merchants, invited 35 Chestertown children to have lunch and receive gifts from Santa. The children then spent the remainder of the day with the K.A. brothers and little sisters on campus

many young kids with something to Realty

The brothers of Kappa Alpha look forward to each year, but it also time and effort back to the residents

Chris Fascetta, president of K.A. Fascetta was quick to point by the brothers and sponsored by out that with out the help of local merchants, the party would not have been possible. Among the mer chants who donated to this cause were: McCrory's, the employees of Dollar General Store, Chestertown Pharmacy, Ames, Sly Horse, "Not only does this provide Friendly Video, and Cooper-Barroll

Miller said some professors had misconceptions about the purpose of the committee, and emphasized that it would serve as an advi-News

Briefs

S.G.A. Dance Robby and the Believers will play tonight at 9:00 at the S.G.A. Christmas dance in the dining hall. Admission is $5 for individuals, $9 for couples. Alcoholic and nonalcoholic beverages will be served; Said S.G.A. President Richard MacKnight, "Come and join in the merriment."

Staff. Faculty Earn Awards Eleven members of Wash

ington College's administration and faculty were honored at last Tuesday's annual faculty Christmas party in Hodson Hall Six individuals were honored and presented with gifts for twenty-five years of service to Washington College. The six, all at Washington College since 1962. included Anna Wheeler, Dining Hall; Sylvia Commadore, maintenance department; Leone Eaton college secretary; Kitty Leager central services: Peter Tapke, faculty member; and Harry Wright, Dining Hall.

Five individuals received engraved plates for twenty years of These included Albert Briggs, faculty member; Barbara Brown, Dining Hall: Frank Creegan, faculty member; Shirley Dorsey, maintenance; and Joanne Clothier, college secretary

Board Meeting

Bryson Cook was welcomed as a new member of the Board of Visitors and Governors at last Saturday's Board meeting Cook is a full partner in Venable, Baetjer and Howard, a Baltimore law firm

Also, the Board approved the awarding of two honorary degrees at the Birthday Ball Convocation. David McLaughlin, the new chief executive officer of the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies, headquartered at the Wye Plantation in Queenstown will give the keynote address, while Kurt Schmoke, new mayor of the city of Baltimore, will be invited to give brief remarks.

brought before the faculty. The course will focus on public speaking Pottery Sale

Washington College pottery students will be selling their work in front of Miller Library next Monday and Tuesday from 11 a m. to 4 p.m.

Classic Film Orson Welles' The Third

(1949) will be shown in the O'Neill Literary House Saturday night at 7 p.m. as part of a continuing series of classic films co-sponsored by the Lit House and the Writers' Union. The movie and popcom are

Sabbatical Replacements Allan Long has been hired by the College to replace Dr. Nancy Tatum, chairman of the English department, during her sabbatical next semester. Long, who is completing his PhD, at the University of Iowa, is studying the works of 17th century poet and dramatist Ben A decision regarding who will fill in for French professor Colin Dickson during his leave this spring will be made this week, said Dean Elizabeth Baer.

Mom's Cookie Jar

annual Student's Christmas Buffet ing for exams last Wednesday evening. The dining hall was draped insophisticated Christmas attire. Those who attended the buffet dinner seemed to and the decorations Speaking of decorations, a special "THANK YOU" to the S.G.A. Social Committee, the S.G.A. Food Service Committee and the W.C.D.S. student employees for all their hard work last Sunday decorat- to 1:30 P.M..DINNER, January ing the Dining Hall.

W.C.D.S. will again sponsor the "Midnight Breakfast" from 11:30 P.M. to 12:30 A.M. All students are encouraged to take a break from studies and attend.

Starting Monday, December 14th, and running through Friday, I look forward to seeing you al coffee and donuts will be served in the Coffee House at 11:00 P.M. This is a joint venture sponsored by the The holiday season is upon us. To S.G.A. Food Service Committee tart off the festivities, the Washing- and the W.C.D.S. We hope it will on College Dining Service held its prove a pleasant break from study Dining Hall meal hours will remain the same as always during exam week. The only change will be on Saturday, December 19th. On that day, HOT BREAKFAST will enjoy their meal, the seasonal music be served from 7:30 A.M. to 8:30 A M and CONTINENTAL BREAKFAST will be available from 8:30 A.M. to 9:30 A.M..LUNCH, the last meal of the semester, will run from 11:15 A.M. 19th, served from 5:00 P.M. to 6:00

Sunday, December 13th, the P.M., will be the firstmeal server for the second semester I would like to take this oppor tunity to wish everyone the best of luck on your finals. I hope everyone has a very MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR, and again next semester.

Until then.....MOM

Larrimore's

Deli — Grocery Breakfast, Subs, Sandwiches, Dinner Platters th of Bridge, Chestertown 778-6022 Open 7 days

Foreign Car Specialist Volkswagen and Imports Service & Repairs 778-1098

Austr Behow d Coffee Shop # 5 A.M - 11 A.M

Full Service Salon Call 778-2686

KEEP YOUR SUMMER

TAN WITH OUR SUNTANA

SUN SYSTEM

at

EMILY HAIRDRESSER

Rt. 213 across from Bowling Lanes

Complete line of

REDKEN & PAUL MITCHELL

C-Town liquors æ Deli

FEATURING: HOMEMADE HOT SOUPS

WASHINGTON AVE. CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620

778-2988

Stam Drug Co. 215 High Street

Chestertown, Marvland 778-3030

> Greeting Cards

 Cosmetics · Russell

Stover Candy • Soda

Fountain

Conveniently located just 1 mile from Washington College...

PHIL'S FARM MARKET

FLATLAND ROAD (301) 778-1893

OPEN 24 HRS. YEAR ROUND

COLD BEER ANYTIME

- fresh coffee & donuts
- pizza
- hot soups
- shakes
- fast microwave foods
- call-in sub orders

A CONVENIENCE STORE FOR ALL YOUR NEEDS HAND-DIPPED ICE CREAM - 24 FLAVORS BEST SUBS IN TOWN-SUNDAES-SHAKES-PIZZA

Liquor Sale

Seagram's V.O. 750 ML $7.99

Seagram's V.O. 1.75 L $16.99

Seagram's 7 750ML. $5 99

J & B Scotch 750 M.L. $9 99

J & B Scotch 1.75 L. $18.99

750 M.L. 1.75 L $4.99 $19.99

750 M.L. $12.99

1.75L $9,99 $18.99

Buy a printer with your Macintosh and conserve paper

And, if you buy both now, the first ream of paper you'll save will have a lovely green glow.

You'll save a bundle of cash when you purchase an ImageWriter II printer along with your choice of a Macintosh Plus or a Macintosh St. Either way you'll be able to turn out beautifully written and beautifully printed papers.

And we'll even try to help you pay for your purchase with a variety of financing options.

We feel compelled to tell you, though, that a deal like this can't last forever. So it's a good idea to see your campus microcomputer center today. And join the conservation movement.

The power to be your best."

Washington College Bookstore

SPORTS

Sho'men Trounce Fifth Ranked Widener, 78-55

December 5, 1987 is a day that average Washington College basketball coach Tom Finnegan will never forget. Not only did he win his 200th career game, but he did it in style, dominating the fifth-ranked team in the country, Widener University, 78-55.

"It was quite a memorable game. Beating the fifth-ranked team by twenty-three is something I'll never forget. It is the first time I have ever seen Widener get beaten can Lou Stevens, holding Stevens ludet, 71-55. Andy Bauer again lead to 17 points, twelve off of his Sophomore Tim Keehan had a tremendous game also, with 15 points and 9 rebounds. Keehan also prompted a crowd eruption with an early dunk

Matt Wilson provided a late first half spark. Wilson helped Bauer in defensing Stevens, while chipping in 12 points of his own in the scoring for W.C., with 18 points. Jamke had 17 points, and Keehan recorded 16 points and 9 rebounds.

The wins push the Sho'men to a 5-1 record, and should put Washington into the Top 20. MAC rival Widener dropped to 3-2

Next for the Sho'men is the ual Wild Goose Classic. The Sho'men will host Newman, Dominican, and Wesley.

Last year Wesley snapped The front court tandem of Tom Washington's string of nine straight Auvil and Chris Jamke paced the Wild Goose tournament championby twenty-three," remarked Coach Sho'men on the boards, combining ships, beating the Sho'men in the - first round Comented "It was quite a memorable game. Coach Finnegan Beating the fifth-ranked team by twenty-three is something fan support they Al-

The Sho'men were sparked by great team basketball, as well as by a vocal crowd of 800 strong.

During one five minute and outscored Widener 22-0.

Junior Andy Bauer paced the containing Widener's All-Amerifor 19 rebounds, nine and ten respectively

I'll never forget."

Also important in the victory was the play of the substitutes at the end of the first half. The bench gave forty second stretch, the Sho'men the starters a much needed rest and

Tuesday night the Sho'men team, scoring 18 points while also followed up their victory over Widener, beating stubborn Gal-

your help! Remember those boundries. See you at the T.H.S. re-runs,

Gonher-Let's make all our dreams

To the Swim Team: It's been great!

Thanks for the good times and all those to come. Donuts? V 2

no doubt. E.H-W

'The team would appreciate all the could get. though it is a basketball tournament, some of the money goes to

= charity, and the more fan support we get, the more money that goes to The Kent County

Wild Goose Classic play begins Friday night at 6 p.m., Dominican vs. Wesley in the Cain Gymnasium. W.C. plays Neuman at 8 p.m. Consolation and championship games will be played Saturday, beginning at 1:15

Tim Keehan plays strong under the basket, helping to pace the Sho'men past Widener for Coach Finnegan's 200th win

Christmas Grams continued from page 8 Liam, Happy B-day and thanks for

Heidi Ho- Enjoy your holiday because you're going to have to deal with me again next semester! Merry X-mas! I.

R.B. T.L. L.D. D.F. We must not come true. I love you. -V fail the Freedom Fighters! L.K.

Cheesehead, Sorry about the car. We'll catch the spring tour anyway, I promise! Merry Christmas!

My favorite Bison- I'm gonna miss you! Love, Your Only Cow

Dear Bill, Hope you have a nice Christmas in Ohio. I will miss you lots and lots! Love, Marie Michelle, I borrow you clothes, eat your food, ask for you advice. you're a great roommate, and friend. Merry Christmas. Adrienne.

Remember when the Coffee House used to be fun?

Burning spaghetti is a fine art that only few learn to master. Merry Christmas to the 6am Gang! S.O.H.

Need A Job?

Chester River Yacht and Country Club $4.00 an hour 778-6765 also added to the lead.

To those crazy men of 209 Who always provide a good 'ole

Well guys, have a great holiday Love- The Harshest of Doobie Sis-

Dear Kristy, Stacy, and Bissett: We love you Steve, Duck, Larry, Fred, Fred- Since you've been such a Love, Mimi

Dan, Ron, Bill

Stephanie Milton, Play along with You always make us laugh and smile the Little Drummer Boy. Don't be Though we haven't seen you in a shy, just let yourself go inside. Bela Lugosi

Let's get together soon, O.K.? Merry Christmas to Jesse Winston, the four horsemen and all of Kappa Alpha. From Einstein aka The Gi-

GOOD boy this year... Santa says I am your Christmas present! Love & Lust Sam

Anne, C.J. Leah, Steph, Carole: Merry Christmas to the OH MY GOD SOUAD! Love. Min

Sammy, Thanks for being such a nice guy! The elephan says..."Maryland's beautiful! The elephant

OLD WHARF INN

ON THE CHESTER RIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

Bed and Breakfast Inn

Ravbans

OUTDOORSMAN

Forneys Jewelers 778-1966

Mon. thru Sat. 10-5 Sundays thru Christmas 12-5 Ellen D. Bunting 778-0249

Part time job at golf course

Plantation

Christmas Shop Handmade Crafts Craft Supplies

113 Cross Street Chestertown, Md. 21620

ARTS

Robertson's Solo Attempt Is A Disappointment

by Ricky Puffer

Robbie Robertson is the latest star of the 1960's and 70's to try his luck in today's music scene. Famous for his guitar playing and songwriting with The Band, which he left in 1978. Robertson has just released his first solo, self-titled Robertson once wrote such gems as"Stage Fright"and"The Weight." His lyrics told stories ...

album. Unfortunately for avid fans out the summer for its release, Rob-

Robertson has updated his sound with the addition of synthesizers and drum machines. Added to this is the guest appearences of Peter Gabriel and 112. The combination of these two factors should be enough to make this album a commercial success, but it doesn't make the album very good.

Robertson once wrote such gems as "Stage Fright" and "The Weight." His lyrics told stories and drew beautiful images. His guitar work was very distinct. This album has none of that; it lacks identity.

Hearing one of these songs on the radio, one would have no idea that Robbie Robertson played on them, never mind wrote them. When Eric Clapton made Behind the Sun, he added effects to fill out his sound, and it worked. It was still Eric Clapton shining in the heart of the album. Robertson has abandoned the skills that once made him great. His guitar playing can no longer be distinguished as his guests fill out the sound more than himself

The album opens with "Fallen Angel," a song written for Richard Manuel, a former member of The Band, who patiently waited of The Band who died in March 1986. The vagueness of the lyrics bie Robertson is only a disappoint- make it hard for the song to tie personally with Manuel, but the Following in the line of Eric idea is there. The arrangement is Clapton and Steve Winwood, right out of a Peter Gabriel album, and sets the mood for the entire album. Robertson even vocally sounds like Gabriel.

"Showdown at Big Sky" follows with Robertson opening his political side to us: "Show down at big sky/ Darkness at high noon/marks his first s in Pohertson's new self-titled album attempt on the charts. Produced by Daniel Lanois and Robbie Robertson, the album is available on Geffen Records.

may be soon." It explains someseen more and more in the format of are far from inspiring The violent, hard sound works well to portray the feeling of Gabrielesque throughout, although Show down at big sky/ That day Love" is a weak U2 cut. Neither song lets Robertson come to the what the reason he is playing with front. While they showcase typical U2 and Gabriel. All are politically performances of their guests active in the effort to end the arms (Gabriel's tilting-keyboards and buildup. This political message is U2's grinding beat), these two songs The second side remains danger or impending doom. Lyri- Gabriel doesn't play on it. Tony cally, "Showdown at Big Sky" is Levin's bass and Manu Katché's probably the high point of the drumming are occasionally interesting, especially on "Somewhere The first side closes with Down the Crazy River." Mostly, "Broken Arrow" and "Sweet Fire of though, the side is numbing and "Broken Arrow is another uneventful. Robertson's lyrics are to bring it across to the listenessal Gabriel clone and "Sweet Fire of full of clichés; when breaking from today's music them, they become meaningful nosequiturs. A perfect example is River": "I turned around and she said/ 'Why do you always end up at Nick's cafe?'/ I said, 'I don' know, the wind just kind of pushed me this way.'/ She said, 'Hang to rich."

"Hell's Half Acre" is another anti-war song and "American Ross lette" is about the American Dreser burning out those at the top. Both lack any type of catchiness to grab the ear. Stated in layman's terms they are boring.

"Somewhere Down the Crazy River" has a nice beat Robertson's vocals remind the listener of Tom Waits. BoDean's backup vocals help enhance the song, but once Robertson has your attention, he has nothing to "Testimony" is another uninspired cut with U2 backing. Anything this album has to offer can be found-and found pa together much better-on early Peter Gabriel albums or U2's War. Robbie Robertson has a tremendous amount of talent, as anyone who has listened to The Bandwill verify, but it doesn't show on this album. Robertson needs to find something meaningful to say, and then trust his own musical abilities

Chestertown Movie Theater

Hello, AGAIN! 778-1575

SECRET MORE SELF-HELP FILES

Christmas

The Rat Pack wishes King Chicken McNugget a Merry Christmas. Get rid of that "Bah Humbug" attitude ora break, and come back a nicer person next semester... If you do come back.

Lisa N., Have a good Christmas!

Erin, Thank you for the I.O.U. Have a good Christmas. Geoff

Pam, Chris, Kristin-Sorry we have to spend Christmas hundreds of miles apart-Hope yours is a good one. Low Wendy

To "K" From "I" ... I know who you are!

Whit, Ho Ho Ho Merry Christmas!

Marie- Meeting you has been the best, you're a very special part of my life. I'll love you always. Bill

Flower Summercamp, Merry Christmas & Happy New Year! Have A Great Break! Parkhill

Zucker! Zucker! "Sometimes, I, too, am utterly amazed." I workleup you bunches! The pumpkin of your spe-

Wide Load, Porko, Ripper, Gimpy, Stench Wench, and Mike: Have a good vacation with lots of drawers. Lore Maternity Girl.

To all who can't keep their eyes to themselves: Yes, I'm really having fun... Merry Christmas (It is really see of your business)

To: Leigh Mendelson: Keep up the good work. Good luck on your finals. Go for that 4.0. Washington College

To all my friends, Have a fantastic but safe holiday! See you soon!

To my Hero- Have a merry Christmas and a great break. I love you. Your Subservient Being

To: Denise Smith: Merry Christmas & a Happy New Year. P.S, "Let's get together before we get much old

To the 4th group of pre-cale: We survived! Have a great break. We deserve it!

Merry X-mas Dudes. Ho Ho Ho Have a marvelous vacation David

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 15

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, January 29, 1988

SGA Reacts to Sophomore Writing Seminar

Move to abolish program tabled in Academic Council; petition circulated or Joan McWilliams works on her canvas in the old athletic sted, recently renovated into a beginning painting studio. The hew facility has a three- student capacity.

Cater Updates Campus Renovation Projects

by Tony Caligiuri

With results ranging from klides around Minta Martin, lenance and construction actors have been working Ash out Washington College winter break to accelerate camthovation projects with miniaconvenience to students.

During a recent interview dent Cater reviewed a number ton term" renovation projects ellas continued progress on the tations of the campus-wide Cater first pointed out the 000 renovation project in the Gning room of Hodson Hall is expected to be complete by tad of January. Since nher, the dining hall has been carpeted and tiled, the salad bar has been lighted, and new tables and ting in Hodson Hall to chairs have been put into use. Cater expects the project to be completed by the end of this month with the installment of new tables and a new beverage service area. By next year, Cater hopes to turn attention to the kitchen for a full renovation of the food preparation facilities of Hodson Hall

"Our goal is to make the whole area into a fitting and enjoyable atmosphere because dining should be one of the most enjoyable leisures of the day, "said Cater. "What better way to honor Colonel Hodson, one of our most generous contributors." The money for the Hodson Hall renovations was made available by a grant from

continued on page 5

During a January 25 meeting of the Academic Council, which Philippon as "the most exciting meeting in four years," Dean Lucille Sansing presented the results of a Sophomore Writing Seminar Despite a proposal to further study the results, Council member David Healey made a motion to completely abolish the Sophomore Writing Seminar.

During Monday's SGA meeting, Philippon reported the events which took place during the Academic Council meeting. At the same time, she asked SGA senators' to gather support for a mass letter writing campaign to the deans in which students could share comments and concerns about the WC writing program. In response to Philippon and Healey, the SGA, in an almost unanimous vote, moved to begin an SGA sponsored petition that will be circulated to Washington College Seniors, Juniors, and Sophomores who have participated in the program. The petition, according to SGA leaders, will call for the abolition of the Sophomore Writing Seminar.

" I sincerely think that it should be abolished," said Healey, a junior at Washington College Healey said that the motion was the result of three years of frustrating debate. "This has been an issue with students since it was started and now even the faculty are starting to see it. The only defense for the program are the writing tutors."

Philippon admitted that she does not think the motion will pass, yet she strongly advocated during Monday evening's SGA meeting that all students who have been through the program should send their views on the subject to Sansing or Dean Elizabeth Baer.

"Students are in a very powerful position. In the next six weeks, students will have more power than in the past four years." said Philippon, a senior at Washington College. "Now is the time that people are listening. My concern is that I don't think enough students responded to reflect all the problems that exist. I am urging all students who have ever taken (the SWS1 to send their comments and

The survey was sent out last September to 300 students who have taken the Sophomore Writing Seminar in the past three years. Of those students, only 21%, or 64

students responded. According to Dean Elizabeth Baer, Sansing read and compiled the results into an was described by member Audra eight page report which was presented to the Academic Council. The Academic Council proposed the formation of a writing committee which would be charged with drafting changes in the writing program for the Academic Council. as recommended by the Student Academic Board. If this proposal is passed in its present state during the faculty meeting on Monday, it would be comprised of the Chairpersons of the English and Modern Language departments, the coordinator of the writing program, and a representative of the dean's office. In addition, it would include elected faculty members from the departments of Natural Science: Social Science, English, and Humanities (excluding English). Three senior students would also serve as representatives on the

The results of the survey conveyed two distinct concerns of students who have taken the seminar, according to the compilation by Sansing. First, students complained that writing assignments did not necessarily coincide with the meeting times of the SWS. There was also a call by many students that there be credit the entire writing program, stressing given for the completion of the program. Other concerns raised included the failure of the SWS to reach its desired goal, according to Philippon. She added that there were many compliments to the tutors, indicating that the problems were not indicative of their ability.

Dean Sansing would not comment on the results of the survey or on the publicity campaign launched by the SGA, saving that discussion on the subject at this point in time would be "premature". When asked about the motion made by David Healey, she responded, "there is no motion on the table."

"Constructive suggestions would be most helpful. As long as they are constructive, it's all for the good," said Baer in response to the efforts of the SGA. Baer said that she regrets the low turn out in the survey, but the possibility of a second survey was minimal because of the time involved. She admitted that some of those involved say that the percentage of surveys returned are not sufficient to draw conclusions.

According to Baer, the re sults reached by Sansing's survey also took into account a survey of the faculty, the self evaluations done by the writing tutors, and comments by the tutors themselves. Baer felt that the major concerns brought up were more or less consistent throughout each aspect of Sansing's study. Baer pointed out that it was a common practice to evaluate newly implemented programs in the manner which is now going on

"I have faith in the proposed writing committee in that it will develop a concrete set of proposals with the best interests of the College in mind." said Professor David Newell of the Philosophy department. Newell, a member of the Academic Council, expressed reservations about a large student campaign because of the possiblity of "generating some ill will." He went further to explain that faculty members are open to student needs and concerns, and he feels that the student representatives on the Academic Council are sufficient indicators of student concerns

"Assuming that the writing committee is approved, they will need as much input as they can gather," said Alice Goodfellow, coordinator of the Writing Program., who enthusiastically supported the letter writing campaign Goodfellow outlined the intent of the importance of a sophomore writing component. "Frankly, I can understand the students' frustration, and I myself would like to see the program restructured so that it does benefit the students," said Goodfel-Iow. Geraldine Fisher, also a tutor in the writing program, expressed support for the campaign.

"The release of this survey was important. A motion is now on the table to act on the Sophomore Writing Seminar and we have until February 29 before a decision will be made. If students let the deans and professors know their views. then the message to the Council will be clear," said Healey

INSIDE: Birthday Ball Supplement

.....p. 5 Sho'men Football .....p. 13

Record Review

Editorial

Writing Seminar Blues

There's been talk of armbands, rallies, and sit-ins. This mini ature resurgence of student activism is not for the Soviets or Central America, but for, or rather against, the Sophomore Writing Seminar.

Actually, students have chosen more conventional means than civil disobedience; the Student Government Association (S.G.A.) has mounted a petition and a letter writing campaign in support of a proposal to abolish the Sophomore Seminar made in a meeting of the Academic Council earlier this week. Discussion of the seminar arose from the release of the Associate Dean's report based on surveys sent out to past participants, a report in which those who attacked the program were termed a "crank minority."

Granted, a few lone complaints may stem from sheer laziness, a simple lack of willingness to get up a little earlier for something beyond the required four courses. Nonetheless, the College cannot ignore the fact that much of the criticism comes from the the creme de la creme among student writers as well as from student leaders. In fact, the Student Academic Board (SAB) representative who moved for the seminar's abolition is a former Elm arts editor and a current member of the executive board of the Writers' Union, and the student who seconded the proposal is the vice president of the S.G.A. hardly to be dismissed as mere cranks.

ome administrators seem to believe that those who complain about the program consider themselves beyond the need for writing improvement. Perhaps this is true of the egotistical few. Still, many commonly heard criticisms are valid: the schedule of meetings fails to correspond to paper due dates, prospective majors in math or science may have few papers assigned, the submission of such work as lab reports can be difficult to critique if one is unfamiliar with the discipline. These hindrances to meaningful participation in the seminar prevent it from achieving its goal of improving student writing

For the faculty and administration to overlook the widespread and sincere concern about the seminar's value would be negligent. The Academic Council has deemed the S.A.B. recommendation to require that sophomores attend the writing lab, rather than a seminar, a specific number of times each year, fiscally impossible. Surely, though, the impracticality of one plan need not force us to continue with an unsatisfactory program.

So, seminar veterans, break yourself away from the Superbowl long enough to sign your John Hancock to the S.G.A.'s petition. Better yet, send your own letter to the Dean of the College. Tell the administration what you liked or disliked about the Sophomore Writing Seminar, and why. And write it well.

Washington College Elm

| Editors                   |                      |
|---------------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Kehoe         |
| News Editor               | Tony Caligluri       |
| Features Editor           | Jennifer M. Harrison |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekman         |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Susan DiLeo          |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Balze        |
| Photography Editor        | Todd Karr            |
| Manager                   |                      |
| Managing Editor           | Cathy Jewell         |
| Advertising Manager       | Erin Hodge-Williams  |
| Circulation Manager       | William Faust        |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and exam weeks Editorials are the respon

taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff. and are necessarily the views held by the memors of the editorial staff.

All eited ris full feiters to exceed the views held by the memors of the editorial staff, the editors are rainful and the property of the editorial views are printed are replicated as the editorial views are printed are published as received, without editing for spetting, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the dual their printed would be yielded by disclosure of his name. Students should include their para and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments. Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mailed c/o The Elm, the marked bases at the editorial office or in the Dising Hall, or misled to Take Ein-Manlington College, Chesiertown, Maryland 21620. Letter become the property of Take Ein upper recept and must be received no later than Tuosshy to be considered for Take Ein upper received and the College College College College College College The Ein's business and editorial offices to located in the mail loongy of Queen Anne dormitory, Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 pm. Wednesdays. The office phone numbers is (00) 177-2500, ext. 231.

THIS CARTOON IS ADDRESSED FTHE MMP TO THE ADMINISTRATION: PROBLEMU SINCE THE WRITTEN WORD HAS FAILED TO ELICIT ACTION FROM THE ADMINISTRATION, I AM 1 TAKING THE TIME TO COMMUNICATE THROUGH A SIMPLE DIAGRAM AN UNREMEDIED SITUATION ON CAMPUS ... DROWNIN € SIDEWALK MORAL: CHESTER FIX THE @ # BILS RIVER WATER TABLE ? SIDEWALKS T. KARR'88

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR cubby and a library study carrel to

Textbook Thievery

To the Editor:

To those who might be a little concerned: a $40.00 History of the Theater text and a $24,00 Spanish workbook were stolen on two separate occasions and from two different locations. Is this coincidence or is Washington College caught in the realm of a mysterious crime ring? At any rate, the books are gone, missing - stolen, and we are out text books that were clearly ours. They were marked with our names filled with our notes, and admirably highlighted as a result of our hard work last semester. We would just like the slimeballs who "removed" our books from a Hodson Hall

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM! excellent income! Details, send self-addressed, stamped envelop WEST, Box 5877, Hillside, NJ

EMPLOYMENT HOMEMAKERS WANTED! TOP PAY! C.I. 121 24th Ave N.W. Suite 222 Norman, Okla homa 73069

HELP WANTED TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly a

home! Write: P.O. Box 17, Clark, NJ 07066

two young impressionable freshmen. Our respect for this College's Honor Code is gone - stolen like our books. We can no longer believe in something that is taken so In this case, common courtesy was ignored. The person or persons responsible for the theft are selfish and have obviously never considered how upsetting such a loss can be. Not only is the personal belonging gone, but the victim of the crime loses faith in mankind and his or her trust in the ideas of truth.

However, we are not totally unsympathetic to the thief's point of view, as we do understand how the pressure to achieve and the high cost of books (a hint to the bookstore and College officials) can force a person

Thanks to those who contributed to our

know how they have disillusioned needed to use the books, why did they ask to borrow them? We area were the kind of people who would be glad to lend a helping hand to fellow student. We would just like to remind everyone that we are all the same situation, so why not no spect each other's rights a life more.

into a life of crime. But, if people

Thank you Jacque Collin Jen Jefferse

Editor's Note: This week'son ed question ("How effective is the Student Conduct Council?") va posed to five, rather than the usa two, student essayists to reflect the wide range of opinions regarden the operation of the College's jul cial system. Even in this years reform, the Conduct Council la been criticized for alleged leniero We hope the debate here will sum late discussion campus wide at improve understanding betweenth judicial system's leaders and in people they serve.

Birthday Ball Gowis

custom made original designs reasonable prices fast service

> please contact Wendy Snow Wicomico 206 778-9725

Christmas Clothing Drive.

Your donations were given to families in the Chestertown area.

-The Newman Club

SCUBA CLASS BEGINS MARCH 8TH Learn from the experts

With our professional instructors, you can expect the highest quality instruction. In addition to our entry level scuba classes, our experts teach a wide range of advance and specialty courses. FOR MORE INFORMATION STOP BY OR CALL: Diane Klien at the Casey Swim Center, Ext. 438.

CALYPSO DIVE SHOP

827-7000

Mears Pt. Marina Grasonville,Md.

Jury System Needs Restructuring

offend the S.C.C., but rather to give construc-As an interested student, I system. During my two and a half years here al Washinton College I myself, and several fellow students have been brought up in front of the S.C.C. Through these cases, I have come to realize some inconsistencies and faults of the S.C.C. This creates endless problems. With a campus population as small as ours students become acquainted with one another very easily, and therefore have preconceived opinions ful organization, that judges students who are reputation with the members of the screening brought up on charges. I'm writing this article board. It becomes difficult to judge someone boxpress my feelings towards the S.C.C. and impartially when you have already developed their policies. My intent is not to maliciously an opinion towards that person. Also, students who are selected to serve on the S.C.C. must not only maintain a certain grade point have been distressed by the operation of this average, but must have opinions consistent with those of the people screening them

One possible solution, is not to do away with student involvement, but rather increase student involvement. A student on academic probation has just as much a right to serve on the S.C.C. as a student on Dean's List. Why serve the College community. This is a First of all, the jury is made up of a select should a G.P.A. determine a students ability group of students who serve on every case. to judge someone accordingly? In the American jury system every individual has the right tem. to serve on a jury. It is my understanding that the S.C.C. is a system based on that of the a student can be brought up on trial for "hear-American jury system. If that is what the say," The S.C.C. disregards the fact that we

Why don't we have a system based on the jury system of America, where every student has the right to serve on the jury for a certain period of time during a semester. It would give every student the opportunity to become involved. Students have a responsibility to simple and productive step to increase the involvement and the democracry of the sys-

John Bodnar

A second problem with the S.C.C. is that about one another. A student being tried College is striving for, and it should be, then are functioning adults and takes it upon themsunds a better chance of being found inno-everyone deserves a chance to serve on the selves to impose their power, and as a result, tend to create problems that otherwise could have been settled outside of the system For instance, given this set of circumnces this is what could happen: Joe and Mike are roommates, and Joe hits Mike over a dispute. Joe and Mike later resolve their dispute and Mike forgives Joe, but the S.C.C heard of the incident. The S.C.C. then took the power to bring Joe up on charges even though Mike never pressed charges against Joe. Incidents of this nature have happened in the

There are also other smaller problems such as the unprofessionalism and inconsistencies of the S.C.C. but those are self evident. I hope I have proposed some positive solutions and I hope they will be taken seriously. Students should realize that the S.C.C. is their forum for justice and should be allowed to become more involved.

John Bodnar is a junior English major.

ISSUE:

How effective is the Student Conduct Council?

Bill Kiefaber Freshman Oakwood, Ohio

to the student body in the future."

Holly Walbert Queenstown, Md.

"The Student Conduct Council is "I feel the Council is not as effective very effective at deciding upon as it could be due to the lack of proper forms of punishment for the follow-up action on each case reoffenders. But, more information viewed. Many times we hear about about the Council should be issued the incident itself but never hear what was eventually done about it.

David Sammataro Senio Chicopee, MA

enough for the simple reason that it effective eventually but at this point is too secretive. As the great phar- information on its activities and aoh Ben J. Hinkle said: 'You can't outcomes is not readily accessible.' be effective unless you're famous."

Ruth Davidson West Palm Beach, Florida

"I feel that the SCC is not effective "I feel that the SCC could be very

Charlie Pilkington New York, New York

"The Student Conduct Council is not that effective. I feel that the student body should be more informed of how this council func-

Campus Voices

by Susan H. Stobbart

SCC A Segment Of Larger Judicial Network

The Student Conduct Council does not xist in a vacuum; rather, it is one component of a large network. The other official ments include the Conduct Screening Board, the All Campus Judiciary, the Student Affairs Office, the Resident Assistant staff, and the Security Department. Each of these adjes contributes to the overall design of the anpus disciplinary system; however, the Sudent Conduct Council is the most visible tuension of this network. The tendency to une that the SCC reflects the effectiveness Whe system is natural, but not wholly accu-

E. The Council is an equal contributor. The disciplinary system of Washington ollege is a benefit of its small size. Accesbility to all the primary players allow for a de exchange of ideas and influence; not may each of the above offices and ortrations work closely together, but any negested member of the College community by make an impact upon the system with nly a word, a question, or a suggestion. For anple, last year several students expressed cem that the system neither reflected their ods nor represented them. Because the are of the system allows critics to become incipants, these students are now active

Council Members of the SCC. A concern was voiced in the past that the SCC was inconsistent in its decisions; to remedy the problem, records of all past cases are considered when making decisions in a new case and the final decision form compiled by the SCC about each case contains a rationale section for both the decision and the penalty. Further, the

> Brenda Connor and Rachel Smith

Council was formerly characterized as secretive; consequently, slight, practical changes, such as change in the location of hearings, publication in The Elm of hearing results, and The Elm's "SCC Notes," have been made to allow for more openness

Any judicial body which is to remain open and fair is required to allow constructive criticism and use this criticism to enhance the efficiency of its structure. Many of the changes implemented over the past three years have been because those involved in the student judiciaries were cognizant of this requirement. Building a responsive judiciary does not happen overnight; it is an ongoing process which must rely on the foundations of the past to provide for the effectiveness of the Evidence of the effectiveness of the changes which have taken place during the last three years is prevalent on campus this year. The number of cases of vandalism and fighting have been lower this year than in the past two years. For example, "Mischief Night" typically results in the busiest time of the year for the SCC; however, this year no cases directly related to "Mischief Night" were turned over to the SCC. Additionally, one night last semester a fight occurred, and someone falsely accused of participating immediately approached the SCC's Chief Investigator with his information about the incident; he also went directly to Security the following day to discuss the incident. This persons associated with an incident. In sepa rate cases, two freshmen have voluntarily admitted their responsibility for offensive acts. Finally, the effectiveness of the system is shown by the variety of cases handed to the Conduct Screening Board and the faith of administrators and students in trusting their cases to the Student Conduct Council

The lower rate of offensive behavior can be attributed to many factors: the R.A. Staff, the various social organizations, the Security Department, and the SCC. Seemingly inconsequential adjustments of the system can also be contributing factors to effectiveness. Examples are the Freshmen Orientation program, the presence of an Elm reporter at SCC hearings, the open SCC hearings and meetings, the tightened party registration forms. the enforcement of the alcohol policy, and the overall accessibility of the system. The more people understand about the system and their place in it, the more they feel they can contribute to the effectiveness of campus discipline.

One of the crucial elements for the success of any disciplinary system is the recognition of the body and its role. One indicator

continued on page 11

Cater Updates Projects

continued from page 1 the Beneficial-Hodson Trust

Aside from Hodson Hall renovations were performed on several dormitories, including Caroline Hall and Minta Martin Hall. According to Joseph Cathers, Assistant Superintendent of Building and Grounds, plumbing work was done by private contracting companies in Caroline in re sponse to plumbing and heating leaks. Cathers said that new heat pipes were installed. Work to cover the exposed pipes and complete the job is expected to begin this week

Arena Contracting Company also worked to repair plumbing leaks in Minta Martin over winter break, according to Cathers and Cater Cathers admitted that Minta Martin and Oueen Anne residents are plagued with a great deal of mud behind the dorm, the result of private contracting work which involved the installation of new water lines from Reid Hall. Work to repair Minta Martin's parking lot cannot begin until the ground has settled and dried

Overall, Cathers indicated his satisfaction with the work done over winter break. He pointed out that many of the problems have hurt the image of the maintenance department while not actually being their responsibility

Other short term projects which took place over the break include new carpeting in Miller Library and a fresh coat of paint in the gym

McAlpin art studio also received attention with the transformation of a garage behind the art house into a more modern art facility. Cater indicated that this project was intended not as a permanent solution, but will suffice until work on the old boiler plant behind Bun ting Hall begins. The master plan ulty, and friends of the college will principal at Alex. Brown & Sons, calls for the boiler plant to be trans formed into a modern art facility after the construction of the Academic Resource Center

Construction on the Alonzo Decker Science Center will continue until its expected occupancy in September of 1988. With the completion of the new addition, said Cater, work can then begin on renovating the original structure of Dunning Hall. On March 28 of this year, the college will close Gibson Avenue on the west side of campus to break ground for the construction of a new Academic Resource Center, Most construction on the center will take place during the summer when students are not on campus

The masterplan is now falling into place. The Academic Resource Center triggers the major changes on the campus." said Cater.

The Academic Resource Center, which will house such departments as the Student Affairs office and the Career Development office, is expected to be complete by the end of 1989.

'Peeping Tom" Reported to WC Security

A resident of Queen Annels dormitory reported a Tom" behind the building has Sunday night at approximately 9:15, said Jerry Roderick, Director of Security The female student noticed someone looking into her window and called the Security Department which requested assistance from the Chestertown Police Department The alleged perpetrator could not be located Security, along with local police, are currently investigating other information about the incident. Anyone with knowledge of the incident should contact the security department Roderick said the department plans to boost patrols of the backet buildings to prevent further

AlumniAssociation Sponsors Stock Symposium

The Washington College be considering several pertinent Inc., an investment banking firm in symposium on the stock market which will range in topics from financing a car, house, or college luture employment opportunities for graduating students

The Current Financial Crisis: Which Way Out?" will be noderated by Washington College alumnus Dr. Marvin M. Smith '67, the principal analyst for the Congressional Budget Office in Washington, D.C. The program begins at 7:30 p.m. in Hynson Lounge, and is sponsored by the Alumni Associa-

A panel of 14 alumni, fac-questions regarding the recent stock market crash, new strategies for stock market investment, and possible economic remedies. Will we education to advice concerning have a recession, and if so when? Should the government support the dollar in international markets by raising interest rates and risk a recession, or keep them low to sustain economic growth, thereby allowing the dollar to fall? Also, to what extent does the trade deficit contribute to the instability of the stock market

A background report on the stock market will be presented by Richard L. Wunderlich, Washington College class of '67, who is a Baltimore, Dr. Michael S. Malone, associate professor of economics at Washington College, will present a report on the current status of the

Other panelists will include George Baily, Jr. '68, Director of the Office of Financial and Program Analysis at the Federal Labor Relations Office in Washington, D.C. Dr. W. Michael Bailey, Chairman of the Department of Economics at Washington College; William Brogan, Jr. '52, Chairman of the Talbot Bank in Easton: John Cheek '77 a stockbroker with Alex. Brown & Sons: Charles E Eshman, ley, and Dr. Phillip G. Lebel '64, Chairman of the Department of Economics at Montclair State College School of Business Admini stration in New Jersey.

Mac Heinz Mantel '62, an interetional economist with the U.S. Treasury Department; Dr. Day McCall, a lecturer in the department of economics; Donald McHugh'5 Financial Services Vice President for the Pioneer Group in Camp Hill PA: W. James Price, Managing Director of Alex. Brown & Stes Joseph Sener, Director of Leg Mason, Inc. in Chestertown; and Dr. Edward Weissman, associate pro fessor of political science at WC. Jr. '61, Account Vice President of

Pip's Liquors

Hours: Monday thru Thursday- 9:00-8:00 Friday thru Saturday- 9:00-9:00

> Located at the Kent Plaza Phone: 778-0123

SUTTON'S STATIONARY

Newly remodeled 202 Maple Avenue Complete line of typing paper and ribbons, etc. for all your school needs 778-0880

The Washington College Elm's

Birthday Ball Planner

F E B R U A R

2

1 8

Where to dine when the dining hall won't do. A Birthday Ball guide to choosing a restaurant. See pages eight and nine.

n e

How to be a great date on Birthday Ball Night. How to get a date if you don't have one. See page six.

From Shine to the Refined: Formalwear for the Birthday Ball can even be uncovered in Chestertown. See page seven.

Birthday Ball Update:

An Evening at Mount Vernon

by Jodi Peebles lt's a "Black Tie Affair," own as the Birthday Ball here at shington College. The Birthday Alisa fund raising dance attended idents, faculty, administration, hti, and townspeople.

Along with refreshments, there will be a cash bar for those of legal drinkages will be served.

"We will have shuttles running The theme for this year's event to and from surrounding areas such ing age, and non-alcoholic bever- Kristi Schminger (Secretary), the providing their talents especially for 9:00 pm., (just before the dance) for dance should be a tremendous suc-

"Mebane for this year's event to and from surrounding areas such Mahipta Mount Vernon," with as Centreville and Kennedyville to will go to the Washington College to be held at the Coffee House tenta- 20 from 9:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. Hope including including a surface, pick unthe townspecial ewhowill be Scholarship Fund. Tickets cost tively beginning at 1:30 a.m. The to see you here!

help of Beth Karukas (Vice Presi- the Birthday Ball will be Jr. Cline Fraternity is hosting a wine and dent), Jeff Hopkins (Treasurer) and and the Recliners, a popular group cheese reception from 7:00 pm. to Washington College.

A post Birthday Ball event,

and a flowing fountain to set the Nelson, freshman class president, single, and will be sold by the Stu-atmosphere for an elegant evening. "Everyone is invited!" With the dent Affairs Office. Performing at at 11:00 pm, and the Kappa Alpha

The Birthday Ball, and a Perfect Gentleman

by Stefan Strein

THE BIRTHDAY BALL ting alone with a six pack while Please don't wear ruffled shirts, IS COMING!!! Now for those of everyone else is chugging mixed you who say, " I hate that damn drinks in the gym. If you're going to thing!" stop thinking negatively. The Birthday Ball is only what you make of it. And remember, if all else get to know her first. Otherwise she fails that night, there is a cash bar. For the freshman who may not have heard of the ball, it is the fantastic gala Washington College throws every year to celebrate George Washington's birthday. It also gives us guys a chance to dish out about $200 of our hard earned money for a night of fun with friends and old reonle

FIRST THINGS FIRST Unless you prefer going stag, you'll need a date. For those who have girlfriends, and want to keep them around at least until the ball is over you have no choice. For those personal mate, you're going to need to overcome your shyness and ask someone. You should get your date A.S.A.P. There is no time to procrastinate, unless you want to get stuck with your friend's girlfriend's best friend's deformed roomate (a.k.a the elephant man's sister.) If you choose to wait until the last ask the girl in your Soc, class with blonde hair, it would be advisable to could turn out to be Medusa wearing a gown and ruin your night. Remember, you will be with this girl all night so the girl should be one that you are comfortable with. It is also perfectly acceptable to ask someone who is just a good friend

NEXT, CHOOSING AN OUT-

For guys who fit into the Great weeks in advance. Unwashed catagory and don't own a tux, a tux will have to be rented. Some people have suggested that Suits are fine, but if your date is going to spend $100 - $300 on her outfuthanche deserves formal attire of you who don't have your own from you. Besides, tuxedos are fun college surrounded by nothingness, your choices in tuxedo rentals are Brambles that rents formal attire. Brambles has a nice selection to choose from and is convenient to the campus. Once you have chosen where you will rent, you will need to minute, you may find yourself sit- choose what colors you will wear.

tennis shoes, or pastel tux's. They are tacky and nobody looks good in them. I would suggest either grey, black, white, or black and white tuxedos. They are the classic colors and nothing else is really acceptable. You might ask your date what she prefers and what color bow tie and cumberbund would match her dress. Tails, top hats, and canes are elegant but certainly not necessary.

The type of shoe you choose, slipper or shoe-string type, is up to you. You should be measured and have ordered your tux a week or two

CUISINE

There are many fine restaurants one could wear a nice suit to the ball. in Chestertown and the surrounding area that are suitable for formal attire Chances are that any restaurant you choose will be crowded, so you should definitely make reservato wear. Now, since we attend a tions, otherwise you will and your date will only see the fine cuisine of the W.C.D.S. You will probably be limited. Chestertown has one store, eating with friends, so don't embarass yourself and your date by not bringing enough money or an unacceptable credit card. Dinner at the finer restaurants will probably cost around $75 per couple (including a 15-20% gratuity.) If you go with a senarate checks. This eliminates animosity between you and your buddy who pigged out while you and your date only have chef's salads, and then when the bill is split you end up paying for his bottle of wine and shrimp cocktail. If your party forgets to ask for separate checks and you end up the one who's meal is conspicuously more expensive, then you should also ades.) But, if the music is still notun offer to pick up the tip. Another point that should be well noted, is that they might be carding at the Birthday Ball this year. So you might want of have that extra bottle of wine at dinner to help get you on your way. I'm not suggesting you get too trashed. Also, it is still proper to order for your date, even if you choose to dine at an establishment where the waitress calls you fit into this catagory.

An alternative to dining out is dining in. The options to dining in are endless. One idea is getting your friends together, ordering a couple pizzas from Proc's, getting a couple of cases of imported beer and /or a couple of bottles of good domestic champagne (if that's possible.) You could also prepare a few gourmet snacks for your date as the area will carry all you will need. parties to attend. You and your hate You could pick up some brie and decent crackers ( Ritz and Wheat has been a success then you might Thins do not fit in this catagory), order a pizza for the two of you some jumbo shrimp, mushrooms stuffed with crabmeat. Or cold Coffee House. If your date has vegetables with some onion dip, kiwi fruit and a pint of double dutch chocolate ice cream. You of course will not be driving anywhere so all that can be washed down with a couple bottles of champagne or a gallon jug of wine.

Once you arrive at the ball, most of the fun is over. Hopefully the cash bar will be serving everyone and you and your date will be able to prepare yourself mentally to face that first waltz. Unlike years past we will not be having an orchestra this year, but a band (one that knows some music from the past two dec. to your standards, then stay by the bar until it doesn't matter what the music sounds like. Eventually von will want to dance up there with all the professors and old fogies. This type of dancing is not so terrible, and it gives you a chance to hold onto your date without the older general tions concluding that we college students are all sex craved kids. We know the real truth.

Another good point about "hun" The Old Wharf and Buzz's the ball, is that it gives students the chance to interact socially with the faculty, while at the same time scoring brownie points. It is good advice for you to do your socializing with the faculty early on while you can still stand straight and visa versa.

THE GRAND FINALE, POST RALL FUN

After you have tired from all that in alternative. The grocery stores in slow dancing, there will be some will probably be hungry. If the night before going to that frat party, or the turned out to be a dud, it is now socially acceptable to tell her to go back to her room and chew on he corsage while you order yourselfa pizza. Hopefully this won't happer and you will be rewarded for being a gracious escort.

NEED A TUX?

WHY NOT STOP IN AND GIVE A LOOK AT OUR LARGE SELECTION OF TUX RENTALS.

ALSO WHILE THERE, CHECK OUT OUR WINTER SALE ITEMS OF GREAT SAVINGS ON SHIRTS, SWEATERS, OUTERWEAR AND OTHER SELECTED ITEMS.

Bramble's Traditional Clothing

For Men and Women

Downtown Chestertown 778-6090

Anthony's Flowers and Landscaping

Full line of Corsages for The Birthday Ball

10% discount to all Washington College Students on orders placed by February 20

778-2525

located on Rt. 213 - 2/10 South of bridge

From Shine to Refined:

Formalwear Revives Classic Romance

The lace and curls of the clas- ponytai sic romantic combine with the shine the leg baring harem hemmed skirt cally to enhance eyecolor.

front, or long and pulled back into a however, claims that lame is on its

Makeup is painted softly in of sequins to create formal fashion brilliant colors with the eyes almost for this season. Dresses range from nude with shadows placed strategi-way out, and is being replaced with moire. Heavier than taffeta, moire is reminiscent of ribbon or watered silk with wavy lines of rich colors.

Warren also sees the return of the illusion neckline, a bustier bodice with lace netting covering the shoulders and neck.

Another design not to be ignored is the keynote back that leaves one great circle exposing the Full and circular skirts, mostly in tea lengths are crowned with low scooping necklines and backs, short puffed sleeves and

The bubble, or harem hem claims attention as one of the most popular full skirts. This hem is pulled under at the bottom and sewn to netting to create a fluffy effect that further accents the bowed waist This is usually a short skirt with making legs look longer, slimmer.

A final word from Warren: "Black is always good; you can't go wrong with black."

Mary Lou Elrod, of Royal Formal in the Salisbury Mall, notes that the full skirt plays an important role in the gowns of this season, and while blacks and the royal colors are still big, paler prints are beginning to infringe on their rule.

Lace and bows contribute to this change from bold to subtle: bodices are covered in lace and more lace skirts are appearing; bows accent the back-baring v-dip backs.

The tea length gown is moved to a new dimension with ways fashionable, but are better great petticoats under the skirt, the leg bearing motif of this winter square shoulders and a longer tawith a long slit in the back.

Other options are velvet gowns adorned with cracked ice, or lace, with either long or short skirts.

Carrying the Dynasty Gown Collection, Mrs. Davis of Beulah P. Jump, a dress store in Chestertown, is a great fan of sparkles and sequins, as displayed in the bay window overlooking Park Row. Spaghetti straps are back in decollatage baring cuts with shining ornaments pered waist and no vent.

Tuxedos rented from Simon's range in price from $46.95 to $74.00, and include Christian Dior, Pierre Cardin, Yves St. Lauren in their collection

Bramble's, located in Chestertown, rents tuxedos priced from $59.50 to $67.50. Brambles rents the After Six Line, including Dynasty with the peak lapel; Yves St. Lauren, a very basic fashion; Bill

"Hairstylists for women have returned to the belief that a woman's hair is her crowning glory: This means long, flowing curled hair adorned with a touch of feathers, pearls or flowers. Hair flowing to the shoulder accents the low neckline and plunging back that is favored."

Bare backs make this skin revealing Miami Vice. fashion balanced.

dress. Opting for sparkle and shine, rhinestones surrounding faux gems in drop necklaces and earrings bring life to the face they surround. Silver dominates gold in geometrical shapes and drop earrings.

Pearls and cameos are alto call attention to the cleavage. Blass, a traditional tuxedo; and More innovative than most tuxedo's, the Miami Vice suit floun-Jewelry depends on the dered in trendy flamingo pink, purple haze and fiesta blue, but has now returned to a more classic black tuxedo with a shawl (rounded) col-

> Rich Bramble recommends basic black with a plain white, pleated shirt, and red or burgandy tie and cumberbund.

Bare backs and other revealers; pinstripes and square shoulders

Sequined gowns from the Dynasty Collection drape the window of Beulah P. Jump. The Chestertown dress shop has a montage of gowns, cocktail dresses, hats and lewel ry.

to the long sheath, while men's fashations on the traditional tuxedo of the shine left over from last year, and moving on to the more traditional look of lace and bows, and more muted bowties and cumber-

According to Robert Pennington of Hair Crafts in Chester-

Pennington also notes that ion breaks out in pinstripes and vari-nails can make a great fashion statement this winter. The French mani-In 1988, formalwear styles cure adds subtly to the soft makeup, are greatly varied, including much but brilliant nail colors decorated with nail art is also a great attraction.

As Gaby Brengle of Simon's Department Store in Dover, Delaware observes, lace and bows have flooded the formalwear scene, although they have not drowned out the brilliance of lame and sequins.

"Black is always good; you can't go wrong with black.""

lown, fashion is a renaissance of the Victorian and Romantic styles. This highlights the woman's body from the hair to the legs.

Hairstylists for women have returned to the belief that a woman's hair is her crowning glory: this means long, flowing curled hair adorned with a touch of feathers, pearls or flowers. Hair flowing to the shoulder accents the low neckine and plunging back that is favored. Also fashionable is just the opposite, hair that is sleek and close to the head. Men's hair is either thort and styled with a high top and

Satinsheer and lace are designed in the mermaid style, or strapless, tea length gowns that accent the waist with hooped, full skirts.

Bodices, though often plain, are now decorated with lace or sequins, and the asymmetric waist makes a bold new statement. Lame is most fashionable in bright colors with full skirts, lame shoes are also available, and Simon's will dye them to match any color gown.

contradicting the return to more traditional long gowns. The sheath, a straight gown that is narrow from the bustier bodice that wraps tightly around the Rose Warren, of The Bridal waist and hips to the close fitting Boutique in Milford, Delaware, skirt that hugs the legs, is a part of made most appealing by Christian Dior's introduction of their version pinstriped tuxedo.

Cardin's etoile, a European cut with

Men's fashion this winter is are formal winter fashion at its best. Glitter may have slightly dimmed, but sparkle has not died yet, even as fashion finds a renaissance in the romance of classicism. Also very current is Pierre

Dinner Before Visiting Mount Vernon: of the superb quality of food and

hy Michele Volansky

The Chestertown area boasts a wide variety of restaurants, ranging menu are enhanced by nightly spefrom large banquet rooms to intimate, quiet cafes. Whatever one's run from $6.95 to approximately $20.00 for the stuffed lobster tail. The entree items on the (778-1133)

A restaurant with an approach to dining like that of The Old Wharf Inn. Rolph's Wharf is located becials such as swordfish or flounder side the water on Rolph's Wharf

For a more intimate dinner, the Ironstone Cafe is the ideal choice. The menu varies from night to night and specializes in "unique" dishes, or things not seen on other menus The prices range from about $11.00 to $20.00 and include a salad.

One of the most appealing aspects of the Ironstone is its small

Located at 236 Cannon Street in Chestertown, it is tucked away so it is not disruptive for diners. However, because of its size, reservations are a must and should be made a week in advance

The Imperial Dining Room (778-5000)

If one should desire an elegant meal in a romantic setting, then the Imperial Dining Room on High Street would be the obvious selec-

Like the Ironstone, the Imperial's menu varies from night to night and may include dishes such as Norwegian salmon with oyster sauce or filet mignon stuffed with for large parties.

Great Oak Landing "has the distinction of offering everything from hamburgers to lobster tails. Between these are seafood samplers and their open grill for charbroiled steaks."

atmosphere, and subsequently, res ervations must be made a week in advance.

Leaving Chestertown, there are several restaurants in the area that are quite popular for a meal before an event such as the Birthday Ball,

> The Granary (648-5566)

One example is the Granary located on the Sassafrass River (south on Route 213) in Georgetown. For a twenty minute drive, one, discovers a beautiful night serting overlooking the lighted marina and a delicious meal, specializing in various Eastern Shore seafood.

The Granary also serves prime rib, veal and liver for the non-seafood eater. Meals range from $10.50 to $25.00 and include salad

Reservations (648-5566) must he made at least a week in advance in order to hold a table, especially

Prices at the Imperial are generally $23.00 to $26.00 and simply

Tucked away on Cannon Street, The Ironstone Cafe provides an ideal setting for a romantic dinner for two. Unique dishes, and reasonable prices make the Cafe delightful for all diners the College offer only the best.

Within Chestertown itself are several restaurants which vary from fairly informal and inexpensive (the Old Wharf Inn) to the elegant Imperial Dining Room.

The Old Wharf Inn

(778-3566) Located at the foot of Cannon Street on the water, The Old Wharf Inn serves a variety of items, including seafood, yeal, beef and pasta and meal, the restaurants surrounding to this are peute sizes, which are selected regular items, yet in smaller sizes for those watching their

> The informal setting within the restaurant, and the water outside provide a relaxing atmosphere with which to prepare for a delightful preference for a pre-Birthday Ball stuffed with crab imperial. Added Road, just outside of Chestertown. The range of prices for Rolph's is slightly higher (starting at $10.50) but the food selection is basically the same. It is, however, more secluded than the Old Wharf.

The Old Wharf does not require reservations, but for a large party, they suggest calling ahead.

Rolph's specializes in seafood entrees and desserts, both of which are delicious

The restaurant is somewhat smaller than the Old Wharf and, like the Old Wharf, one should call beforehand when arriving with a large include the dish, with soup, salad or than other area restaurants because

The Kitty Knight House (648-5305)

Like the Granary, the historical The Imperial is higher in cost Kitty Knight House sits on the Sassafrass River providing a distinct

> CHECK US OU tormal gowns

Need a Corsage or Boutonniere for the Dance? come to

LIBBY'S FLORIST

Conveniently located across from the College 509 Washington Avenue 778-1220

Send a Valentine's Message No One Will Miss

Valentine's Greetings in The Elm's February 12 issue

$1.00 25 words

Sign up Fri. 5 - Mon. 8 in the Dining Hall during dinner hours or see Erin Hodge-Williams Reid 107

CINDERELLA

THE FORMAL LOOK YOU'RE AFTER is at

> Located in Scotties Shoe Store

High Street Chestertown

778-2860

Making a Difference Between Dining and Just Eating

Shore specialties such as crab imperial and crab-cakes, yet, like the charbroiled steaks Granary, offers non-seafood selec-

Prices at the Kitty Knight House are about the same as the Granary, though a few are slightly higher. It is worth the drive, as the atmosphere is quite different from other restaurants in the area. Be- quickly

"If one should desire an elegant meal in a romantic setting, then the Imperial Dining Room...would be selection."

cause of this, reservations are also

The Great Oak Landing (778-2100)

Travelling north on Route 213. me finds the Great Oak Landing

Situated seven miles northwest o'clock on weekends from the college at the end of Handy Point Road, and on the water, this restaurant has the distinction of offering everything from hamburgers ($4.25) to lobster tails ($19.95).

Colonial setting. It serves Eastern Between these two, are seafood samplers and an open grill for

> In the winter season, Great Oak is open only Fridays and Saturdays, with dinner starting at five p.m. It is informal and reservations are not accepted, but the food is excellent. causing its space to be filled

Chef Jeff Crossman advises one to arrive promptly at five in order to be seated.

The Narrows (827-8113)

Heading south, one discovers (off of Route 50, immediately south of the Kent Narrows Bridge) The Narrows, owned by Beau Hardstey (WC '62). The scenery, like others located on the water, is beautiful. obvious creating a romantic mood for the Birthday Ball night

For dinner, The Narrows boasts the best cream of crab soup in the area and offers typical Shore food, such as comish hen and pork tenderloin, both in oyster sauce.

The Narrows also has beef entrees and various fresh fish selections daily. Entree prices, including salad, range from $8.75 to $18.00

Reservations are advised and dinner extends to about eleven

If the restaurants in the immediate area are not appealing, one may travel to the city of Annapolis:

The Harbour House (268-0771

The Harbour Houseis located in the Annapolis harbor. Not taking reservations, the restaurant advises diners to arrive at five p.m. in order (268-7166)

Similiarly, the Chart House offers a variety of seafood, yet also boasts their own cut meat and prime rib as a specialty. An entree at the Chart House may run anywhere

While this list does not contain every restaurant in the area, it does have the ones which stand out as being superior in food and setting. It is further suggested that one call the restaurant prior to the Birthday Ball to guarantee the times dinner is

The Colonial style and Eastern Shore specialties of the Kitty Knight House combine delightfully with the beautiful evening view of the Sassafrass River, to open the evening with a fiair.

seafood such as crab cakes, rainbow trout stuffed with crab imperial and cream of crab soup. Prices at this restaurant on the City Dock range from $12-$15.00

The Harbour House features from $10.00 to $20.00. The restaurant's aquatic setting seems to enhance the flavor of the food

The Chart House, like the Harbour House, does not accept reservations, and advises diners to arrive as close to five p.m. as possible

Finally, one should choose the restaurant carefully, as it is a prelude to a special evening.

Remember to drive safely on Birthday Ball night.

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-5 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:30-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD

778-1222

Re. 213 & 201

Coley Charlie

Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists A & P Parking Lot Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Larrimore's

Deli — Grocery Breakfast, Subs, Sandwiches, Dinner Platters South of Bridge, Chestertown 778-6022 Open 7 days

Foreign Car Specialist Volkswagen and Imports Service & Repairs 778-1098

Stam Drug Co. 215 High Street Chestertown,

Maryland 778-3030

- * Greeting Cards Cosmetics
- Russell
- Candy

Stover •Soda Fountain

Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30-9:00 Closed Sundays & Holidays Beulah P. Jump Park Row

Ball Gowns sizes 8-14 Open Monday thru Saturday 9-3

Mom's Cookie Jar hy Tony Calgiuri Americandum cultining requirements for almost finished. Hopefully, all work will be completed by mid-February. Comments from students regarding the renovations have been very favorable A marked improvement in the bussing of tables has been noticed, since the beginning of the semester. For this, the W.C.D.S. staff thanks you and hopes it will

The W.C.D.S. calendar of events looks pretty full for this semester. Upcoming events to watch for are: the Super Bowl Dinner, January 31st: Mardi Gras, February 10th; Pancake Day, February 16th; and the always popular W.C.D.S. Food Show, February

A monthly calendar of ev ents for the W.C.D.S. can be obtained from the box at the entrance door to the main diningroom. This box also contains the weekly menu and other tidbits of nutritional information. Please, help yourself! With temperatures dipping into the teens and the wind chill factor hovering around zero, it is hard to believe summer is just around the corner. But, it will be here before you know it. For those of you who are not aware of it, the W.C.D.S. runs a very busy Summer Conference Program throughout the Applications are now

> Advertise in The Elm

Local ads $2 per column inch Call Erin Hodge-Williams 778-9839

Dining Hall renovations are being accepted for various positions, such as waiters and waitresses, bartenders, kitchen helpers, dishroom and line workers, linen and laundry service and furniture

If you are interested in summer employment and would like to work for the Dining Services, contact Mr. Jeff DeMoss or Mrs. Sharon Crew for more information or an application, before March 11, 1988. In response to many requests, Mary Lorraine Sexton, the W.C.D.S. Food Production Manager, has added soups to the dinne menus this semester. Watch for them, they'll be coming soon. Another new item worth your attention, is the Smuckers jelly packets. If you'll notice, besides an assortment of flavors, they come in low cal too

If you have any suggestions or questions, please see the Supervisor on Duty. We welcome any positive imput you might have In closing, I would like to remind all you students who are in our linen program this semester, Thursdays are linen package exchange days-at the dinner meal. Just ask for Mrs. Crew

Well that's all the space I have for this week. Until the next have good week MOM

Penalties Must Be Clear continued from page I

of inconsistency which brings the criticism to the Student Conduct Council.

A major campus uproar was the result of a much publicized SCC case in which three freshmen females were found responsible for forgery, theft, violating the campus should have assigned that penalty,

Open Season On Freshmen Males

membership in the social fraternities at Washington College from the office of Edward Maxcy. Associate Dean of Students, marked the beginning of Rush for memorandum addressed to all men wishing to participate in this year's rush, lists four academic and social requirements agreed upon by the college and the Interfraternal Council. First, any student wishing to participate must be a matriculant of Washington College and have attended the college for at least one semester. The student must have a

1.75 academic average in the alcohol policy, and conduct unbecoming of a Washington College student. The three admitted to stealing two checks from a fellow student drove while intoxicated to a local liquor store, and forged a check for almost seventy dollars to pay for food, cigarettes, and alcoholic beverages. In response to these charges, a series of penalties by many to be very lenient. Yet more alarming than the fact that these girls were not suspended after admitting to committing a felonious act against a fellow student, the Student Conduct Council admitted to violating their responsibility to the college community. chairman of the SCC admitted on two separate occasions, once immediately after the case and again in an

by one student, that the council based their decision in part on the doubt that President Cater would uphold a suspension. This is an open admission that a council decision was not made "solely on the evidence submitted to the council during the course of the case" as the handbook requires. If the council felt that such a penalty was fitting, it all-campus meeting attended only on academic probation at the time of Interfraternity Council, are to be National fraternities on dry campus require a minimum GPA of 2.0. Furthermore, a student on disiplinary probation can not participate in rush.

Social hids can only be given to a eligible students or to transfer students who have previously February 8. ioined a fraternity at another institu of the Interfraternal Council which may issue invitations to rush parties include Phi Sigma Kappa, Lambda Pi Delta, Theta Chi, and Kappa Alpha Order, according to the Student Affairs Office All rush functions, according to requirements set day leaving responsibility and potential criticism on the sholders of the President. No competent judge would allow a case to be decided on the chances of that case being ap pealed. The same should be de manded of our student judicial sys-

It would be reckless, if not forfeiting a good opportunity, if this were imposed which were thought criticism was presented with no constructive suggestions. In fact, as one of the few students not affiliated with the SCC yet having observed a fair amount of its proceedings, I have developed several suggestions for the members of the SCC

First, a second conduct screening board should be established for the sole purpose of hearing requests for appeals. A appeal can only be treated objectively if it has not already been judged by the body before which it is referred. I do not doubt the professionalism of the which are advertised only an hou Chairperson of the Conduct Screening Board, yet the students of Washington College deserve the most objective judicial process available.

A second suggestion which would involve no re-organization of the judicial system is to be more sanctions imposed by the SCC. and the news editor of The Elin

Following rush party date which are scheduled from Januar 26 to February 5, there is an estal lished period of silence between fraternity members and those being rushed from noon on Saturday February 6 to 4:30 p.m. on Monday

That Monday, the names of The four member fraternities those students issued bids will be posted by the Registrar on the centre bulletin board on the first floor William Smith Hall at noon. There wishing to accept their bid must se the Registrar in the basement of Bunting Hall by 4:30 p.m. on Mon.

Although the council may present what they see as good rational for the penalties in individual cases, for council should be more aware of general philosophy in its work.

Finally, as an advocate of strong campus newspaper, the inportance of the press should not be overlooked. In the case of the Sudent Conduct Council, The Elm ca play an important role in the fuse tion of the judicial system. First The Elm is the only effective line between the SCC and the studen body. Although the council may object to statements concerning the SCC which are printed in The Ele the press is also the only vehicle which allows the student body in sight into the campus judicial so tem Second The Elm is the ber forum for open debate on such to ics as the SCC. Other methods so "all campus SCC meeting before the actual meeting have be a great failure. It is through the forum which the leaders of the SOC can gain valued insight into the opinions and reactions of the sta dent body conscious of the general direction of Tony Caligiuri is a sophometer

C-Town liquors 8 Deli

> FFATURING HOMEMADE HOT SOUPS

511 WASHINGTON AVE CHESTERTOWN, MD

778-2988

Tuesday-Saturday A Shear Design Nat Tips Manicure COMPLETE HAIR CARE

20% discount on all retail items Shampoo Hair Care and Makeup

Golden Inn Restaurant Chinese Cuisine and Carry Out

Rt. 213 Chestertown, Md.

301-778-6747

Sunday Ticket Winner 1st Prize 2nd Prize 3rd Prize $10.00 $7.50 $5.00

Students Determine Effectiveness

continued from page 3 that the Washington College campus recognizes the SCC as their this newspaper layout. If the SCC rar, students wondered what the

of that function. Of late, a major scrutiny, and opinions voiced by all good the concept of our system is, it to be. The foundations for this campus controversey has been the members of campus have influe without the teamwork of the "officient memwork have been laid over the dents' apparent dissatisfaction with the program has given rise to mobihad no place on the campus the lization of the Academic Council ection presented here would not and the student body as a whole to "How effective is the SCC?" but work toward improvement. It has Should we scrap the SCC?" Last become an issue through debate and exchange of ideas. Similarly, the function of the Conduct Council Student Conduct Council has betoday they examine the quality come the object of increasing enced both the major and the minor cial" elements of the system and the past few years and this year have changes in the system. Once student body, no judiciary can sucbrought to the fore, any subject ceed. Students have come to look at benefits from constructive criticism the priviledge of a peer-based disciand participation. And that is how plinary system as their right and Brenda Connor, a senior political efficiency is both created and mease expect the SCC to maintain the science major, is the Chairman of Standard of Behavior and the Honor In order for the Student Con- Code to which they have pledged Rachel Smith, a junior political duct Council to be effective, it re-themselves. The SCC is only as science major, is the Chairman of paid off in the form of the success experienced this year within the SCC

the Student Conduct Council. quires student input. No matter how effective as the student body wants the Conduct Screening Board.

College Lacks Disciplinary Backbone

When I came here four years tion of the student handbook. Their 150, I honestly believed that stu- failure to follow the appropriate tents would be treated as adults for procedure of immediately suspendheir crimes. This belief quickly ing someone caught pulling a fire thanged as I saw students get alarm shows that they are not familsapped on the wrists for crimes that iar with the regulations. What ormally would have resulted in jail would have happened if there had rms. It is an embarrassment to me been a real fire at the same time the nd to my fellow students, for ex- fire department vehicles were at the nole, to know that the person who college investigating a false alarm? ulled the fire alarm last year, in The person who pulled the false cullen, is still enrolled at this alarm willfully endangered the lives shool. And the paltry sentence of everyone within the reach of the nded down to the people involved fire department, and I am insulted the recent check theft and forgery that the violation of our rights has se probably made George Washbeen ignored. ngton and Reverend William Smith How does the administration llover in their graves a few times. expect to develop good relations These incidents are just two of with the surrounding community if the many examples that reveal the it fails to properly discipline stuscc's inability to handle the redents who openly trample the rights onsibilities delegated to it by the of law abiding citizens? I'll bet that Collège. However, before the the owner of the liquor store, where SCC's ineffectiveness can be exam-the three young ladies forged stolen and it must be stated that the adchecks, really feels that justice has inistration is equally to blame for been done. A $75 fine, social probaschool's ineffective judicial tion, and a supposed threat of expulexcess. It seems to me that Presision for larceny and forgery? Come dent Cater, and the rest of the Bun- on President Cater, what are you agon inhabitants, are not familiar doing up there in the Buntagon? in the Campus Regulations sec- Don't you and the rest of your idifit reaches its desired end in a processing of a case, then the SCC

repetent and efficient manner, the could justifiably be labeled as an ablished goals of the Student "effective" body. But, if the body is subset Council must first be deter- to serve an effective judicial func-and before the question of its tion, it would be responsible for anyeness can be addressed, upholding the rules and regulations

thoughout the ten pages of the accepted by the students of Wash-

the ten pages of the accepted by the serving as a deter-subject, numerous lists of rant against the violation of these hts, rules, and regulations can be rules and regulations, and determin-nd yet nowhere is a clearly de-ing the question of responsibility log goal for the execution of the and imposing a punishment in a fair, alConduct Council is determined and regulations set by the college, the academic and judgmental the chairman, as well as the other libera judiciary system presented. objective, and according manner.

young ladies because, judging by President Cater's past record, you did not want to see him overrule tion. Your sentences over the past tive organization. few years have demonstrated that you have the resolve of spineless countable for their actions. I realize that your powers are administration see what is going on evident that you felt sorry for the out here? No wonder your admini- three check forgers and that they stration is becoming the butt of appeared to honestly regret what jokes around the campus and com- they had done. This, you argued, was the second reason that you did As for the members of the not recommend expulsion for the mighty STUDENT CONDUCT three freshmen involved in the COUNCIL(this new name sounds check forgery case. How many impressive, doesn't it?), you told criminals don't regret their crimes me, at the all-campus SCC meeting once they have been caught? You on December 8, that you did not had the power to recommend expulrecommend expulsion for the three sion for the three check forgers, but you felt sorry for the defendants and let the past actions of the administration affect your decisions. This your decision and have the girls get doesn't follow the principle of havaway without any penalties. Why ing a trial by an impartial jury. didn't you let Cater reject it? That Contrary to what you may believe, way the pressure would be where it changing the name of the SJB to the really belongs, on the administra- SCC will not make it a more effec-

Washington College is a great jellyfish when it comes to taking the school, but I can't understand why initiative to make criminals ac- nothing has been done to correct this school's lack of disciplinary backbone. The problem is serious, but limited, but you can't even handle the solution is simple. I hope that the the limited powers that you cur- members of the Board of Visitors rently have. During the December 8 and Governors, the administration, SCC meeting you made it quite and the SCC read this editorial, and jor.

that something will be done to make criminals responsible for their actions. I'll be damned before I give any money to the College as an alumnus until this problem is solved. I refuse to support the College's policy of letting criminal offenders get away with their crimes while the rest of us suffer from their actions. This college will never survive and grow if it cannot gain the respect of the students, parents. and the community that it serves.

J.P. Albert is a senior business ma-

If the effectiveness of the Stuopinion on how well the S.C.C. 'handles those matters," so here it system is overworked. As a mem-

Campus Judicial System Overworked
According to this year's hand. Last semester, I discovered that the lithis is the lot the S.C.C. has drawn in conflicted place all at once, and so book, it is the responsibility of the majority of judicial work at this (or has had drawn for it), so it must 1 find it fruitless to criticize the cur-S.C.C. to "handle those matters school involves thoughtless regret- be evaluated on that basis. concerning the social conduct and table behavior on the part of indibehavior of the student members of viduals usually while they were the college community." The Elm impaired by foreign substances. has asked for my personal expert. The S.C.C. would probably gain more respect from the student body if that student body had not forced it into the position of being a babysit-For the first place, the judiciary tersaying, "Johnny, it's not polite to throw your roommate through ber of the Conduct Screening Board school property." Nevertheless

Keep Penalties Consistent ecause a governing body can mechanics of its operations, or by a clear understanding of what does by be considered effective when the length of time allocated for the and does not violate the student handbook

An important function for which an effective judicial body must be responsible is to be considered a serious deterrant against the violation of campus policies. In order for this to happen, students must have a clear indication of the penalues imposed against disruntive behavior. In is in this respect where the ineffectiveness of the SCC becomes apparent.

The lack of deterrence pro-As far as upholding the rules vided by the SCC is not a result of the council's inability to impose to polarize and judgmental the challman, as went as the other surfer salicitors, our is due to the surfer salicitors. strict sanctions, but is due to the

our campus judicial system are at- from the parameters it is forced to tempting to usher in a new era at function within. Washington College. They are trying to make the system on which each member of this student body rules on the basis of rules and prece- accept the S.C.C. as it is. If you dents, and not whine. Of course, as can't, then take the time to make they are taking records of previous decisions and estimates, they are forced to try to establish those precedents. Thanks to the "monday-morning-quarterbacking" of many, they have come under fire quite often this year for their at-

is necessary, and long overdue. But ties are determined. Despite the individual rational for each penalty assigned by the council last semester, a list of charges and coresponding penalties would paint an irrational and inconsistent picture of the Student Conduct Council.

During the semester, several cases illustrate this view. In one incident, a student was charged with the theft of a key from a Resident Assistant. In the case, the party in question claimed to have picked up an unidentified key after the RA had rent S.C.C. on those grounds; any The current group of officers in flaws in its performance emanate

Finally, I would suggest that your voice heard. Write to The Elm, or better, to the Deans. Let them know what you expect of your S.C.C. that you aren't getting. Only with student feedback can they build an S.C.C. that will be "effec-

Ken Winkler is a junior philoso-The change that is taking place phy major and a former member of the Conduct Screening Board. day returned the key, but not before the RA had reported the loss to Security. Following the key's return, the RA did not want charges pressed, yet the party in question was found responsible for theft of College property and fined one hundred dollars, including seventyfive dollars in punitive damages In a second case, the party in question admitted to drunkenly vandalizing a dormitory, yet the penalty involved little more than community service to repair the damages. It is this type

continued on page 10

13-3 Sho'men Shooting forMiddle Atlantic Title

by Don Steele

The Washington College basketball team continues its quest for the M.A.C. Championship, The team is now 13-3, with the losses coming to two Division one schools Delaware and Bucknell, and a sur prising loss at the hands of Catholic University,

Last weekend the Shoremen dominated Swathmore College, 79-41. Andy Bauer led the team with 14 points. Chris Jamke potted 12 for the team with Tom Auvil and Tim Keehan both netting 10 for the W.C. netters. Jamke also paced the team on the boards with 11. Steve Brody grabbed 6 rebounds as did Auvil.

Thursday the team visited and conquered St. Marys. Bauer again paced the team, scoring 19 of the Shoremans' 80 points, against St. Marys' 64. Jamke, Keehan, and Scott lones all shot in double figures with 16, 14, and 13, respectively Auvil led the team with 13 boards Bauer and Jamke helped out picking un nine rebounds each man dominate the Johns Hopkins' Blue Jays. The team was in control of the game from the start and ended up wiith a rungway 84-55 victory. Tom Auvil led all scorers with 16 points. The starting guards, Scott Jones and Tim Keehan chipped in 12 points apiece in the win. The team played havoc on the Hopkins shooters, as none of the Blue Jays achieved double figures for the While most W.C. students were relaxing over the vacation the Shoreman were still out there playin' ball. The Shoreman played Against Salisbury State the netters won by 20, 84-64. Chris Brandt came off the bench to spark the team with 17 points, including a torrid nine for nine from the free throw line In other holiday games the 19 and 18 points of Bauer and Keehan were in vain in a 110-77 loss to Division I. Bucknell. Bucknell shot 69% from the field and 77% from Western Maryland College.

January 19, saw the Shore- three point range to beat the Shore

Daniel Webster proved to be no match, as Bauer, Chris Jamke and Scott Jones all bucketed 13 in a

The Shoreman also humiliated Gettysburg 129-77, scoring the most most ever by a Washington College basketball team. Bauer led W.C. with 21 points. Jamke and Keehan also netted 18 points. Chris Brandt had an impressive 17. On the boards the Shoreman were led by Jamke and, in an impressive performance, Freshman Matt Woolston with seven boards apiece

The coal in the stocking, however, came in the Shoremen's first game of the new year, a disap pionting 91-86 loss to Catholic University. Jamke paced the Shoremen with 23 against Catholic, in what was the Shoremen's first game in almost a month. The Shoremen travel to

Haverford tomorrow night and are home again next Thursday against

Sometimes a height disadvantage doesn't matter, as the Sho'me showed us by pouncing Swarthmore, 79-41, last Saturday.

Finally, Maybe, A Boredom Bowl That's Super Running Backs: slightedge against Cleveland, the Broncos the coaching booths, Washington

by Arian D. Ravanbakhsh

The only football game of the year which includes roman numbers is upon us

Starting out in the heat of late July, each professional football team has the same dream - to reach the Super Bowl. This year, after playing an abbreviated fifteen game schedule due to the NFL player's strike, the two teams that will play in Super Bowl XXII are the Denver Broncos and the Washington Redskins

The game promises to be the most exciting Super Bowl in recent memory. Agree or disagree, the last four games have not lived up to the two weeks of hype and buildup that come with a game of this magni-The Raiders the 49ers the Bears and the Giants, the last four winners, have won by 29, 22, 36, and 19 points respectively. Each one of these games fell short of pregame expectations It seems that certain players are unable to deal with the borde of media and the pressure of playing in the biggest game of their career. So since kickoff is fast approaching, it is time to take a good look at the

Each of these teams, Denver and Washington, won thrilling conference championship games on the January 17th.

Denver won with an overpowering offense and a Cleveland fumble late in the game. Washington won with a dominating defense and a dropped Minnesota pass near the goal line.

Will the key matchup be the Denver offense going against the Washington defense? We shall see. For now, here is a position-by-position preview of what to expect come Super Bowl Sunday

chip shots

Offensive Line: edge Washington. The Washington offensive line is not as dominating as they were when they had John Riggins running behind them. Due to injuries they have had all season this offensive line has not gotten the respect they deserve. Remember, Russ Grimm is an all-pro guard and is sitting on the bench. Reskins depth at this position will give them the edge. Denver's line does an adequate job, but they have an explosive quarterback who covers up for the line's weakness by turning a sack into a long run

Quarterback: edge Denver. Denver's John Elway is the most exciting quarterback in the league, whether you like his personality or not. John Elway can throw the ball to any place on the football field. If his line fails, he will run for yardage and turn the sack into a gain. He is the key to stopping Denver. Washington's Doug Williams, aside from being the first black quarterback in the history of the ame, is a throwback to the old days of the NFL. He is a classic dropback passer who stays in the pocket. Williams does not have the flair of an Elway, but he does get the job

Washington's running game has had an up and down year. Right now they are platooning Kelvin Bryant, George Rogers, and Tim Smith trying to get a decent performance out of one of them. Denver's game is set around Sammy Winder and he is an explosive runner that can turn the tide of the game and give Denver a win.

Wide Receiver: even. This is the most exciting position in the Denver's three amigos (Vance Johnson, Mark Jackson, and Ricky Nattiel) and their big play capability. Washington's wide outs do not get the attention that the Denver three do, but they do also have the big play ability of the Denver trio. Art Monk will return and having him along with Gary Clarke will give the Redskins two solid deep threats. One thing that is obvious is that the defenses of these two teams can not afford to take the recievers

When you consider the receiving corps for both teams, including tight ends, it is obvious that this is where the game will be decided. It should also be clear that whichever team controls the air will win this game

Defensive line and line backers: edge Washington. If the front seven of the Redskins plays anywhere near the level that they achieved against the Minnesota Vikings in the NFC championship game, no matter what Elway does, the Broncos do not stand a chance. Denver's defense is not quite on the same level. In the AFC game game plan. If the game is decided in almost lost a big lead. True, there may have a been a let-up, but in the Super Bowl there is no space for lackadaisical defensive play.

Defensive Secondary: edge Washington. It is here that the Redskins should be able to stop the Broncos. In the last two games, the Redskins secondary shut down explosive recievers Willie Gault and Anthony Carter. Darrell Green, who will be near 100%, is going to Everyone knows about play an outstanding game. Safties Alvin Walton and Barry Wilburn will add to the overall defensive effort. The Denver secondary is > Special Teams: edge Denver. Rick Karlis is the top kicker in the league. Ali Haji-Sheik has been inconsistent for the Redskins recently. If the game were to come down to a field goal, you have to favor the toe of Rick Karlis and give Denver a win. The question from the Redskins point of view is whether or not their kickers will lose the game for them.

of the Redskins

Coaching: edge Washing-Simply put, Joe Gibbs is a genius. There are no other coaches in the league who have consistently won as often as Gibbs. He has also surrounded himself with very qualified people in key assistant positions and this is the key to Washington's successes. Reeves of Denver does a superb job as well but no staff is able to reach the levels that Gibbs has in Washington. They are also the best at making half-time adjustments to the will have a big advantage

Intangibles: edge Dem Denver has the rare opportunity avenge a Super Bowl loss in fi previous season. Also, if thereis home field advantage in Sa Diego's Jack Murphy stadium would favor Denver. Every you Denver plays at least one game i San Diego and is somewhat familia with the environment.

So now, you are probable wondering what all of this mean This is the one game that everyon makes a prediction about

While not professing to best expert, I will also toss in my adequate, but they are not the caliber cents worth. This is also a hist opinion, because I have been Redskin fan since Billy Kilmers Sonny Jurgensen fought over position that Doug Williams ha Taking all that into considerable like Washington to win in a go close, hard-fought game. score, maybe 24 to 20. And I bely will disagree with me

> "...it should he clear that whichever team controls the air will win this game..."

1988 W.C. Football

Football at Washington College? It seems both tempting and ridiculous at the same time. Over the summer I considered

But then later, when wiser, I impossible here, at this point in time; it is too costly and would be 100 competitive with our successful Hasting Cup. lacrosse program.

Years ago, when tuition was $200 lege, when the game ended with (but fees and room and board did make total expenses almost $850!) Susquehana's five-yard line and students were strictly prohibages on campus, the Washington roons were winless again, going 0-College Maroons dominated gridirons along the East Coast, spreading Colleg

Well, perhaps not dominated ... 43-111-7 for the W.C. Maroons for returning an interception. the years 1926 through 1950 (minus five years during WW II).

early 1900's, but unfortunately them satisfactory Elm and Pegasus and but I've never found any hard evi- why the football program was terdence to support that

Sketchiness is also caused by tam played horribly, it isn't scores that count but the heart with which

Too embarrassed, I guess. I Maybe not.) give them an 0-8 with an asterisk

Roons (Ruins?) from '28 did be-

University's new field that year, a proud highlight in a 73-6 drubbing

But things weren't all that bad. In 1934, after taking seven years to win five games, the Maroons, coach writing an article - and stirring a by George Ekatis, achieved the one controversy - about the feasibility and only undefeated season in of a football program at Washington Washington College football history with a 5-0-1 record.

Led by All-Marylanders Bill guess, I shied away from the idea. A Nicholson and Elery Ward, the football program simply would be Maroons finished their season with a decisive 29-7 win over traditional rival Delaware to win the Senator

The tie came on Homecomi But years ago this wasn't so. day, 6-6 against Susquehanna Col Washington College driving within

This quick rise, however, was ited from drinking alcoholic bever- short-lived, for by 1938 the Ma-

7. And that's the good part The real claim to fame for the the proud name of Washington 1938 bunch is that they were scoreless. Scoreless! That's seven games twenty-eight quarters - without By my sketchy accounts, I touching an opponents endzone, unearthed a cumulative record of without booting a field goal, without

The Pegasus, however, congratulated the mostly-freshman Washington College football team for the dozen or so times they does go back beyond 1926, to the got within the twenty. Good for

The real stuff that I was look-Washington Collegian records do ing for, however, was the myth that I've heard about the Washington Rumor has it that there are College football player who died in stores like 120-0 hidden back then, a game, which, so the myth goes, is minated

Not so. I searched and resuch things as the 1928 Pegasus searched for anything remotely resummation of the football teams sembling that, but found nothing. success, which spends a page and a Nothing. And so, like the myth that half discoursing that, although the you get a 4.0 if your roommate dies, another bubble is burst.

(I did, however, find an Elm he team played. And then they editor who died in a car accident in don't mention the score of a single the mid-fifties, which might prove which activity is more dangerous.

Anyway, the basic reason that Who knows, they could have been the Athletic Counsel decided to drop football back in February of I do know, however, that those 1951 is much the same as why starting an intercollegiate football proone, in their final game, the first gram today at Washington College

Here, the 1938 Washinton College Maroons drive up field. They never quite made it all the way, however as this team scored as many points all season as the 1988 Washington College football team did -- none According to the 1939 Pegasus, though, these Maroons had a lot of heart. You can't say that much about this year's team, which is composed of a bunch of nothings.

would be nearly impossible: money. The football program was taking up arrived in '49, and his "Montermore than one half of the athletic budget

The Korean War, of course, also had a large effect, as it caused a 1934 decline in enrollment, which caused caused a decline in the athletic powerful enough to make none of budget, and, voila, the climination that matter.

of football. War truly is hell. from the Washington College var- 682 on 82 carries, catching 27 sity ranks during that fateful deci- passes for 537 yards from quartersion of 1951, but unlike football, back Wilson, and punting for an Football, although the College Washington's final games, losing expressed hope of bringing it back the last game in W.C. history, 19-13 soon at the time, went goodbye for- to Juniata College. ever, allowing lacrosse to rise as the dominant sport at the little school on victory came in the last college the Eastern Shore.

The ironic part is that the football program was dropped just as its fortunes on the field were turning

Coach "Dim" Montero, who your mind drift back to the times omen" had recorded an 8-5-2 record in his two years, achieving the best record since the undefeated year of

But War, as it did when football a decline in incoming funds, which was dropped from 1942-1945, was

So the '50 Maroons, with star Baseball, too, was dropped halfback Harry Miller rushing for reemrged after only a year's hiatus. average of 40.3 yards, played

> Washington College's final football game played in Chestertown, a 25-7 win over Catholic University

So, as you sit back watching another lopsided Super Bowl, let when Washington College roamec the mighty gridiron.

Quarterback Wilson drop: back. He's looking to the sideline where Harry Miller has broker away. Wilson puts it up. Miller's go. daylight in front of him, an easy six if he brings it down, and another win for the mighty "Monter

It looks as if that ball has faller incomplete, and Washington Colege football is lost forever.

Amity Bakery and Coffee Shop

Breakfast 5 A.M.-11 A.M. anch - Soups & Sandwiches Kent Ptaza, Chestertown 778-2228

Bowman Selected as MAC All-Star

Sophomore Tom Bowman roke a sixteen year old spell when ewas named to the Middle Atlantic Conference All-Star Team in the othern Division. The last ho'men to be named as MAC allars were All-American Billy Wilins and Frank Ogen during the 1971-72 season

Bowman led the the Shoremen soring this season, with six goals of five assists. He also was the men's leading scorer in his thman year.

Bowman, a Business Managemajor, was also named to the ayland All-Star Soccer Team ing with teammates Scott Beeler d John Thomas.

BIRTHDAY BALL Saturday, February 20,1988

"SPEND AN EVENING AT MT. VERNON"

Junior Cline and the Recliners

Join us at the C-House afterwards for donuts, coffee,etc. Tickets available at the Student Affairs Office for $18.00 a couple and $9.00 a person

Lamond Acts Up

by Tamara Braunstein

"Hello, everyone," he says cheerfully, pacing the length of the classroom, arms akimbo. His tone drops to a conspiratorial whisper, his blue eyes darting from one of us to the other, as he asks, "Has anyone brought his book today? No?"

He swings one leg onto the seat of his chaair, waves our crimson and Actor's Group in order to stimulate gold text at us, and says, "Here bygynneth the Book of the Tales of Caunterbury

Bennett Lamond is able to capture not only the attention of his class, but also the attention of audiences in various playhouses and theater groups in places as varied and distant as New York, Rhode Island, and Chestertown, Maryland.

Professor Lamond will be starring in Dear Liar, a dramatization of the letters between George Bernard Shaw and Mrs. Patrick Campbell, on January 30 at 8 p.m. and on Sunday, January 31, at 2 p.m.

I was the 'g' in Thanksgiving in a grade school pageant once. Lamond re:lies, when asked how his career as an actor began, and then enumerates a number of roles he had performed, such as that of Vladimir benefit they arranged two years ago. Mr. Lamond and his co-star, former Washington College student Cecily Lyle, had performed Dear Liar by invitation only at homes in the Chestertown area for the benefit of the Actor's Community Theater building fund.

As President of the Arts Council. Mr. Reimond put together the interest in the dramatic arts. The group often uses the facilities at the Norman James theater, but because of the various events scheduled at the coll;ege, they are unable to rehearse adequately. Consequently, the Reimonds put together the bene fit program so as to obtain the funding needed to renovate an old barn. which they hope to use as a rehearsal theater. In essence, this fundraiser is a continuation of the first of two

Mr. Lamond says that he will enjoy performing the part again, for Shaw's letters run the gamut from sundry thoughts about his contem porary world to war, death, and

It is not certain exactly what the relationship between Shaw and Mrs. Campbell was, for his letters

" I have created a professor here. That professor has a character which I have created, one that I am able to shed when I have the time."

in Beckett's Waiting for Godot and are alternately tender and aloof; Mr. Smith in The Bald Soprano by His success in the role of Vladimir inspired Vince and Leslie Reimond to ask him to help with a sometimes loving, more often than not abusive to Mrs. Campbell. Professor Lamond would not consider acting as a career, for he has no illusions about his abilities;

however, he stresses how much his nearby Church Hill. Tickets are experiences have helped him in the available at $5.00 a piece ($2.50 for classroom

"Many of the elements present in acting are invaluable in reading and interpreting a text to students, he explains. "Timing, gestures, creativity . . . there is a great deal of performance that goes into teach-

Frequently he can be heard telling his students. "I am only as good as you make me.

According to his view, the members of his class are his costars, and they respond to and interact with one another in much the same manner as actors on a stage. He thus gains fresh insight into the material with each new group of students who interprets the text.

"I have created a professor here," Lamond says with a smile. "That professor has a character which I have created, one that I am able to shed when I have the time." Lamond will be appearing in Drama major Charlie Wilcox concentrates on the rehearsal of his senior project, "A Lesson from Aloes," which will be performed on February 5 and 6.

Notice: The Flm is seeking arts students) at the ice cream parlor on & entertainment writers Cross Street. To order tickets by Contact Susan Di Leo phone, call 778-1100, and you can 778-9880 be assured an intriguing alternative to Superbowl Sunday.

Shoes to fit your formal and casual needs come visit

PAUL'S SHOE STORE

conveniently located on Hight St. in Chestertown Open Monday-Thursday: 9-5:30 Friday: 9-8:00 Saturday: 9-5:30

Need A Job?

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yachi and Country Club $4.00 an hour 778-6765

> Word Processing Servicesreports, term papers. etc.-

prompt, accurate, reasonable. Call Cathy 348-2126

COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND

University of Moral Acts, Technicians: 1-5 PM
Specially Acts, Technicians: 1-5 PM
Specially Acts, Technicians: 1-5 PM BALTIMORE, MARYLAND

Wednesday, February 3
Tawson Stote University, Burdick Holl—Studio 104
Singers: 4-6 PM, Dancers & Instrumentalists: 7-8 PM
Specialty Acts, Technicians: 4-8 PM

Ready to get involved?

write for The Elm

sports news features arts

'It's not just a job, it's an adventure."

contact Andrea Kehoe ext. 321 Reid 100B

Three Jailbirds Held Down by Law Director Jim Jarmusch pimp named Jack (John Lurie). In on their way to becoming jailhouse character who is as pragmatic as he a comic film and one that Jarmusch

presents a dismal and comic view of the opening scene, Jack listens life for his third feature film, "Down by Law." The picture offers very little plot, as that is not the point of larmusch's story. Narrative is the crucial and successful drive of the film, aided by the extraordinary performances of the three main characters in the tale: a pimp, a disc jockey, and an Italian tourist. country of contemporary New Orleans, most of the film takes place in a parish prison where the three previously unacquainted men find themselves held for separate crimes.

without interest as a lady friend tells him, "America is like a great melting pot because when you bring it to a boil, all the scum come to the top." Later, Jack is caught in a vice squad trap while he's trying to add a teenage "Cajun goddess" to his stable.

Zack is an unemployed disc Set in the Louisiana Bayou jockey who is having problems with his girlfriend and life in general. After being kicked out of the house, he agrees to drive a car across New Orleans for one thousand dollars. The car's undiscussed The first character introduced cargo puts the unsuspecting Zack in in inexperienced and street-dumb the same cell with Jack. The two are vegetables

Luckily for Jack and Zack, as well as the audience, the third misfit is added to the group in the form of an unusual Italian tourist (Roberto Benigni) who has been arrested for murder. The Italian, named Roberto, assures the two that he is indeed guilty of murder, but only in self-defense over a card game. Roberto is part genius and part clown; he sees his situation only as a temporary delay in his plans for seeing America. His English is random at best, and he prides himself in reading American literature translated into Italian, enjoying "Bob" is sophisticated.

the unique and interesting narrative that allows the otherwise plotless film to work. The characters have little historical background, making even less. their past unimportant, and putting them in a rare position of objectivity. Their person is formed only by their present circumstances, and their world, as it is seen by the camera. There is little intercutting between the three men, allowing the camera to capture a clear focus on the characters, sharply and at a dis-

Despite first impressions of intends to be uplifting. America is Combined, the three provide shown as a logical system of reward and punishment, one that cannot understand people such as these three men, who understand America

"Down by Law" is part of the Washington College Film Series and will be shown in the Norman James Theater on January 29, 31, and February 1 at 7:30 p.m. Admission for students is one dollar, two dollars for all others.

researched by Geoffrey Frost, for instance. He is a changing darkness, "Down by Law" is indeed Robert N. Girard

Campus Calendar

JANUARY:

Friday, 29- Film: Indecision, Coffee House, 9 pm-1 am

Sunday, 31- Film; Poetry Reading-Page Delano. O'Neill Literary House, 3:00 pm

FEBRUARY: Monday,1- "Down By Law", Norman James Theater

Poet to Give Reading

This Sunday, January 31, the poet and her husband moved to the Empire State Collège (SUNY). She poet Page Delano will be visiting Washington College to present a reading of her work and to moderate a special workshop for student poets.

Delano graduated with a B.A. from the University of Maryland (Eastern Shore) and received her M.A in 1985 from the Writing Seminars at Johns Hopkins University. She originally began college at Sarah Lawrence in 1967 but left in 1969 to devote her time to the antiwar and feminist movements. The

Monday thru Wednesday

6 'till 10

Friday and Saturday

500 11

Eastern Shore in 1982 and returned to college Delano has received numerous distinctions as a poet: a Work-in-Progress grant from the Maryland State Arts Council, a Mid-Atlantic States Art Consortium Fellowship and two residencies from the Virginia Center for the Creative Arts. This spring, she will be writer-inresidence at the Saratoga Springs, NY Public Library. Delano has taught at Baruch (CUNY) and invited.

and her husband and two children live in Manhattan, and the poet has published in The Literary Review, Prairie Schooner, Minnesota Review, Raccoon, and West Branch.

Delano will be presiding over a workshop during lunch at the Literary House for a small number of poets, from 11:30 to 2:30. At 3 pm, Delano will present a reading of her poetry at the Literary House. Admission is free and the public is

FOOT OF CANNON ST CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

BAR MENU AVAILABLE

NIGHTLY HAPPY HOURS 4 - 6:30 Friday - 5:30 Free Hors D'oeuvres

Under New Management - College Students Welcome

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT BOBBY & THE BELIEVERS

$5.00 cover

Campus Paperback Bestsellers

Bity and the Boingers Bootleg, by Borke Breathed (Little Brown $7.95 Littlett Brown County authors)

 Garden of Shadows, by C.V. Andrews. (Pocket, $4.95 Beguning of the honor that baset the Dollanganger fam.) Windmills of the Gods, by Skiney Sheidon, (Warrer, $4.95) Story of a woman trapped by international conspiracy.

 Whirtwind, by James Clavel. (Avon. $5.95.) Fiction the world-shattering upheaval in Iran. Peper Money, by Ken Foliet. (NAL/Signet $3.95.) Newly residued the file of the world of high finance and journalism.

Red Storm Rising, by Torn Clancy. (Berkley, $4.95.) Russians plan a major assault on the West. The Prince of Tides, by Pat Conroy (Bantam, $4.95.) The beauty of South Carolina and the dusty gitter of New York City.

The Hunt for Red October, by Tom Clancy (Berkley, $4.50.) The Includible chase of a nuclear submanne.

The Far Side Observer, by Gary Larson (Andrews, McMee $5.95) Latest Far Side carbon collection.

Secret Fire, by Johanna Lindsey. (Avon. $4.50.) H Englishwoman turns Russian prince, her captor, in

New & Recommended

Success, by John T. Molloy. (Warner, $9.95.) A no practical guide for executives everywhere.

MONDAY $1.00 All Imports "Import Night"

TUESDAY $2.00 frozen margueritas

Tequila $1.00 a shot Free Nachos at Bar

"Mexican Night"

THURSDAY

Rose & Taylor

Acoustic Guitar Duo (No Cover)

FRIDAY

Leon & Shades of Blue

WEDNESDAY

Lucky Bingo Night

Win Your Drinks

Country Swing $5 person, $8 couple

Introducing in Feb. 25 cent Draft of Your Choice

9:00 - 10:30 on Band Nites in the Back

515 Washington St., Chestertown, MD 778-1984

Harrison Returns from Cloud Nine

by Brett Lankford He was always the shy Beatle, the least recognizable. He was cludes such notables as Eric Clapconstantly overshadowed by bandmates John and Paul, and even Ringo to some degree. Finally, George Harrison is at center stage, after 25 years of waiting. Harrison has released Cloud Nine, his first album in five years and possibly his best album since All Things Must Pass After the breakup of the Beatles, Harrison was free to do as he pleased. He was able to release an entire album's worth of his own music, as opposed to his two or three songs per Beatles album. The critically acclaimed triple album All Things Must Pass allowed Harrison to get all of his previously unre leased songs out of his system. This album included his best known song

"My Sweet Lord." George Harrison had some legal problems to go along with his solo albums. He lost a lawsuit which claimed that "My Sweet Lord" was a copy of the old Chiffons' song "He's So Fine." He started the know why I don't hang out much, I Eighties off with the song "All Those Years Ago," a tribute to the late John Lennon. His 1982 album Gone Troppo went floppo, and Harrison decided to take a temporary leave from the music business.

George Harrison's long-anticipated return has been well worth the wait. He was able to recruit some ready reached the top of the charts.

him on Cloud Nine . The list inton, Jeff Lynne, Elton John, and former bandmate Ringo Starr. Lynne, formerly of ELO, also coproduced the album along with

This album includes many of the qualities which were absent from his previous records. On Cloud Nine Harrison is able to switch from a soft, mellow ballad like "Just For Today" to an upbeat, light song such as "This Is Love" without a problem. This album also has a mystical quality which was absent from his earlier albums. This is evident in both the title track and Breath Away From Heaven

There are some songs on Cloud Nine which are among Harrison's hest. One of these tracks, "Devil's Radio", addresses the world of gos-As the seventies continued, sip. He blasts broadcasters and other journalists constantly throughout this fast-moving, wellexecuted song. His recent absence from the public eye is explained to a degree with the line "You don't > wonder why you can't see.' "That's What It Takes" is one of the superior tracks on the album. It shows off George Harrison's newer, stronger voice, along with some enchanting music. "Got My Mind Set On You" was the first single off of the album and has al-allowed Harrison some top 40 success. Harrison purists may be taken aback by the pop sound of this song. but it is still superior to much of the music on the charts today

Reatles lovers will especially adore one specific song off of Cloud Nine. Harrison acknowledges his past and his former partners with a song called "When We Was Fab" This song tells of the times at the height of the group's popularity, often including lyrics of such Beatle-ese as "fab" and "gear." It sounds like a mixture of a number of the classic Beatle songs. Ringo plays the drums on this track, and Harrison even dusts off the sitar for one more performance. "When We Was Fab" is a wonderful combination of both old and new Harrison.

Cloud Nine is a very solid album with no poor tracks. "Wreck of the Hesperus" and "Fish On The Sand" are two other upbeat songs from the album. "Someplace Else" includes the Harrison on guitar with a sound that has become his trade-

George Harrison is able to accomplish his goal with the album Cloud Nine. This album should bring him the respect he deserves. In an age where teenage pop singers and young rock groups dominate the music scene, it is refreshing to see a veteran back at work with a solid album. George Harrison has proven he is still one of the best

After a lengthy absence, George Harrison emerges with the wellexecuted Cloud Nine., available on Warner Brothers Records.

778-1575

DOWN BY LAV R MANAGES CO

Washington College Film Series Norman James Theater Friday * Sunday * Monday 7:30 p.m.

S1 admission — students / faculty / staff $2 - all others

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 16

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, February 5, 1988

Zeta Tau Alpha members sell "men of W. C." calendars to benefit the National Association Retarded Citizens. Junior Linda Anders snapped Chris Hummel, Tank Duckett, Brian

Faculty Approves Writing Committee

In a split vote, the faculty approved a proposal to establish a ermanent writing committee at last Monday night's meeting.

The standing committee, which will replace an ad hoc subcommittee of the Academic Council, is expected to address such issues as the Sophomore Writing Seminar, a suggested Junior Seminar, and the role of computers in writing. According to the proposal drafted by the Academic Council in November, the body will "oversee and support the College's total writing effort" and will have responsibility for determining fulfillment of the writing requirement.

Alice Goodfellow, director of the writing program, said she had supported the suggested standing committee as a member of the ad hoc committee on writing.

'I think the committee will make a valuable contribution to the College," she said. "I am particu-

College is sponsored by the national effort to bring leaders to small liberal arts colleges for a week of classes, informal discussions with students and faculty, and career counseling. Since 1973, more than 180 colleges have participated in the larly pleased that it is representative of the entire academic community.

Goodfellow said she felt that participation from each division outweighed the criticisms about the size of the committee, and pointed out that the student body will be represented as well. Members will be elected by the faculty, with one faculty member from the English department and one from each of the following divisions: natural sciences, social sciences, and humanities (excluding English). In addition, three senior student representatives will be chosen by the SGA. Ex-officio members will include the chairmen of the departments of English and Modern Languages, the coordinator of the Writing Program, and the Dean of the College or the Dean's representative. A committee chair will be elected by that body. Prior to the vote Professor Richard DeProspo urged his colleagues to vote against the proposal if they feel the writing program is

"I didn't want people voting for the committee thinking it would fix the fundamental deficiencies of the program," he said, explaining that the committee structure will serve only to finalize the current situation.

He said that the writing program is a "quasi-department" in that it administers a graduation requirement, as do the departments representing each academic discipline, yet the program lacks integration of training among the staff that compose it. Also, DeProspo said the goals of the writing program remain 'ill-defined

Among his recommendations for strengthened leadership in the program are the hiring of a director with faculty or administrative status, in order to empower that person, for example, to oversee the teaching of Forms of Literature.

In addition to better coordination of the program, he suggested the implementation of a standardized test to identify deficient writers and perhaps a remedial course for those who failed to meet the minimum profiency.

DeProspo also said he feels the new committee is unlikely to respond to student complaints about the Sophomore Writing Seminar by

"In no way does this change the likelihood of the Sophomore Writing Seminar problem being adessed with any kind of expediency." he said.

Labor Journalist To Visit College

list with The New York ns for 43 years, will spend next etkat Washington College in Chlown as a visiting Woodrow on Fellow. On Thursday evene, February 11. at 7:30 p.m. nson Lounge, Raskin will deer a public address on "The Fuception will follow.

Raskin has won several honinfustrial relations. His definithe wrap-up of the 114-day newser strike and shutdown in the rly 1960s earned him the George Memorial Award and the Page te Award, among other journalisaccolades. The Labor Press ancil of Metropolitan New York value of his distinguished service in labor management relations

elly, and Greg Johnson, among others, for the 1988 Calendar

A native of Alberta, Canada, Raskin grew up in Seattle, WA, and New York City. He first joined The Times as a college correspondent while attending New York's City ac of Organized Labor." A public College. In 1934, he became a staff member of The Times, specializing in welfare and labor.

In 1961, Raskin moved from rs for his reporting and for service chief labor correspondent to mem bership in the Editorial Board at The Times, specializing in labor and national affairs. He was assistant editor of the editorial page from 1964 until 1976, and then became labor columnist until his retirement

Three months after his retire-

| ment, Raskin joined the Nation |
|--------------------------------|
| INSIDE:                        |
| effers To The Editor           |
|                                |
|                                |
|                                |
|                                |
| Basketball page 8              |
| Page 8 page 9                  |
| reshman Poetry Readingpage 10  |
| Lesson From Aloespage 11       |
|                                |

non-profit, voluntary organization Woodrow Wilson National Fellowconcerned with advancing the free-ship Foundation, which launched a dom and responsibility of the nation's news organizations. He serves the NNC as associate director Last year, Raskin was named a Fellow at the Employment Studies Institute at Syracuse University.

Raskin's visit to Washington program.

Washington College Designated As A Bicentennial Campus

recently selected as a Bicentennial Campus by the authority of the Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution.

Professor Peter Tapke, Washington College's Campus Bicentennial Chairperson, through a letter from Mark W. Cannon, Staff Director of the Commission. This recognition allows the Bicentennial Committee to use the official Bicentennial logo as well as allowing its use by campus organizations.

"We are very honored," said President Douglass Cater. He hopes to have several speakers visit during the time of the national celebration. committee in its endeavors."

Washington College was Mortimer Adler and Louis Goldstein are scheduled to speak on April 27 and April 14, respectively. Cater also indicated an interest in having Former Supreme Court Justice Notification was received by Warren E. Burger, chairman of the Bicentennial Commission, visit Washington College.

> In a letter to Tapke, Cannon said, "We are committed to making the Bicentennial commemorations in the years 1987-1991 a rewarding educational experience for all Americans. The Nation's colleges and universities have an important role in leading this effort. We look forward to cooperating with your

Censored

Last month the Supreme Court took a step back to the Middle Ages of high school press freedom.

In a 5-3 decision, the Court granted public high school officials the authority to censor articles of controversial nature, writing that the institution "need not tolerate student speech that is inconsistent with its 'basic educational mis-" The ruling followed from a suit by Hazelwood High School (Miss.) journalism students against their principal, who deleted two pages of the school newspaper that included articles about teenage pregnancy and divorce.

The rationale that committed this act of censorship, and the rationale that perpetuated and upheld it, centers around the notion that high school students lack sufficient maturity to publish or read about significant subjects. This ruling has consequences not only for publications, but for selection of material for dramatic performances as well.

Student newspapers should contain articles dealing with the issues that most concern their readers; at the high school level, teenage pregnancy and parental divorce are among such subjects. An administrator's perspective of what should be on the minds of his students is likely to resemble an episode of Ozzie and Harriet With the extension of the principal's control, papers will become uninteresting, irrelevant and, ultimately, unread

The 'basic educational mission' of our public schools is to stimulate thinking, not to control it. School officials should encourage students' achievements, not assume a lack of restraint simply because a publication's writers and readers are young. But of what importance is this to the college press, who have not had their rights trimmed away? Aside from a belief in a sort of "domino theory" of civil liberties, suggesting that when one freedom is curtailed others are likely to be lost as well, we recognize that the future of collegiate journalism lies with our younger colleagues. Reporters trained to produce an administration-approved newspaper (newsletter, if you will) cannot be expected, upon entering a university, to suddenly possess the abilities and persistence to produce articles about issues of campus concern.

The present Justices, or at least a majority of them, seem to forget the 1969 Tinker v. Des Moines Independent Community School District decision, in which Justice Abe Fortas asserted that students do not "shed their constitutional rights to freedom of speech or expression at the schoolhouse gate.' They do not lose those rights in the newspaper office or on the stage either.

Washington College Elm

| Edito                     | n                    |
|---------------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Kehor         |
| News Editor               | Tony Caligiuri       |
| Features Editor           | Jennifer M. Harrison |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekman         |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Susan DiLeo          |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Batze        |
| Graphics Editor           | Todd Karr            |
| Mana                      | zer                  |
| Managing Editor           | Cathy Jewell         |
| Advertising Manager       | Erin Hodge-Williams  |
| Circulation Manager       | William Faust        |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the acad

Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed columns, commen-taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff. All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editors cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or are princed are putinistic as received, without entiting for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in race cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments. Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening priorie numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mailed of The Einst Washington Cotlege, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters become the property of the Conference of the Confere The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be of publication in that week's issue.

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Anne dormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

MODERN EDUCATION:

BASICALLY, THE SUPREME OH AND NO COURT'S DECISION MEANS THAT I. QUESTIONING THE PRINCIPAL, WILL NOW CONTROL YOU, THE STUDENTS. THIS MEANS FITHER YOU MAY NOW COME FOR YOU, THE STUDENTS. THIS PALL, NO NO SEX, DRUGS, OR ROCK'N' ROLL, NO WARD AND KISS SMOKING, EATING OR DRINKING, NO MY RING. AND READING OF UNAUTHORIZED MATERIAL REMEMBER BIG AND POSITIVELY NO THINKING GOT IT BROTHER IS HAVE A QUESTION

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

SCC Relies On Rumors

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to last veek's articles by Brenda Connor, Rachel Smith, and J.P. Albert Connor and Smith defend the SCC and their own jobs, by portraying the organization as a valuable service for Washington College students. I, and I believe many others, feel the exact opposite is true. The SCC and the screening board are organizations that seek out incidents, rather than students bringing problems to them. Both rely on word of mouth and rumors to bring cases to trial. Students are often unable to resolve differences among themselves because they are brought up before the screening board. Miss Smith has much power. too much for one student. She and her board can literally alter the course of a student's academic future. And for the amount of tuition you and I pay to attend this school. the SCC and the screening board are way out of their league. J.P. Albert's fist waving letter for tougher discipline is immaand quite sad. Albert attacks the administration, namely Douglass Cater, for being spineless when handing out punishment. The cases Albert cites are the fire alarm and check forging fiascoes. Albert is quite incensed at Cater for not booting the guilty parties out of school. Since when are you God, J.P.? Cater had the guts to give second chances to college careers with punishment (albeit a light one). I'm not defending crimes, they were senseless, but I'm also not pretending to be Joe Perfect, J.P.

Finally I would like to remind all of our self righteous friends that when they hit the real world, a rude awakening is in store. There is no place for their meddling into other's affairs and there sure ain't no neighborhood screening boards. Miss Smith. You people should check

> EMPLOYMENT HOMEMAKERS WANTED! TOP PAY! C.I. 121 24th Ave., N.W. Suite 222 Norman, Oklahoma 73069

have definitely burned out.

Boycott Coffeehouse For Reform

To The Editor I am writing this letter to the editor out of frustration in hopes of shedding some light on an absurd and even ludicrous drinking policy dictated by the Coffee House

As a student here at Washingon College for two and a half years, I have recently become a victim of a C-House employee's power trip. which seems to illustrate the inconsistent policies with regard to punishment for drinking here at the school.

In the not so far past, students have forged checks, pulled fire alarms, and vandalized. For this, they were put on social probation. In my case, I was one of many underage drinkers in the Coffee House this past Saturday, and for this I was put on social probation. The absurdity of this is of course the severity of my punishment in comparison with that for the felony noted above.

Rumor has it that the chair of the Student Conduct Council had witnessed me drinking a beer and without a warning, she proceeded to tell the authorities. I would like to know why I was victimized without warning when there were roughly 100 other minors drinking alcohol along with me this past Saturday.

I seems to me that I am not alone in my feelings toward the inconsistent and, unfair policies of the Coffee House here at Washington College. I feel it is appropriate to ask my fellow students and friends to boycott the C-House until changes are made.

Thank you, Daniel T. Feiner

HELP WANTED

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17. Clark, NJ 07066

your halos, because their lightbulbs Cater's Record Fair, Firm Thanks,

Kenny Haltom To The Editor:

Sometimes repetition of en in newspaper columns, if uny rected, causes error to be accepted as gospel truth. This applies tot notion, reiterated in the pages of last two issues of The Elm, tha stand ready and lenient in over ing judicial decisions reached had Student Conduct Council Their are to the contrary. While reservi the right to reach independent july ment on appeals brought to me, in record shows that I have been in but firm. My hope is that Washing ton College can continue to develo and strengthen the tradition of a lowing students a large area of n sponsibility in administering the

Douglass Cale

Make A Splash Over Swim Team

To The Editor:

lives on campus

I would like to address an issue which I feel you have neglected it cover in any of your articles the year. The issue is the Woman Swim team here at Washington College. I have waited every until Friday rolls around it hopes that I might read someth about their efforts. To dateally nothing. There are only ntercollegiate sports in season the moment, Men's Basketball s Women's Swimming. It has be great to read about the Men's the and I will be among the first applaud their efforts. A substa number of the Men's Basket team, by the way, seem to find time to come and support Women's Swim team. I know women appreciate their suppo

continued on page

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM Excellent income! Details,9 self-addressed, stamped eave WEST, Box 5877, Hillside,1

Liberty And Justice For Everyone Else

in school. The Court said a St. Louis high school principal acted correctly when he deleted stories about divorce and teenage pregnancy from the student newspaper. Publications, however, were not the only form of given censorship power over what students discuss and dramatize as well. While the ruling made no determination concerning the rights of students attending private schools, colleges, or universities, it does suggest that publications and other mediums of expression representing, or funded by, educational institutions may be in a kind of "constitutional limbo" when it comes to First Amendment rights.

irony. Public schools are, after all, government-sponsored institutions which, along

Early last month the Supreme Court ruled out that these institutions, where each day all school administrators believe, or should cation at all has no business engaging in it. mandatory, and where the air is thick with red, actions were upheld by the Court's decision, white, and blue rhetoric, are where the Court and school officials have the least faith in the First Amendment.

Dramatic productions, discussion groups expression affected. Administrators were and student publications are hands-on learning experiences. Their value lies in the opportunities given to participants to explore different ideas and courses of action, to make mistakes, to correct themselves, and to learn in the process. Educational intent is abandoned if administrators make decisions that should be made by students. There is also the question of how students are to learn to respect the value of civil liberties when their own are constantly at risk of being arbitrarily revoked.

The high costs of activities promoting stu-The Supreme Court's ruling is rife with dent expression often necessitate institutional sponsorship. The educational benefits of these endeavors are so universally recognized that it is constitutional to censor the expresbegins with the Pledge of Allegiance, where believe, that these activites are educationally sion of public school students while they are courses in U.S. government and history are valuable, some, such as the principal whose

Thomas Schuster

First Amendment rights while simultaneously being subject to censorship. The inconsistency of such a predicament suggests that educating students is of secondary importance to the school officials responsible for it.

The Court treats censorship in this case as if it were a rational administrative policy for school officials to employ but fails to explain how the goals of such a policy can possibly coincide with the educational goals of the public schools. Censorship is a desperate act committed by desperate people. It is the fear with their educational mission, strive to instill that nearly all schools provide for student of ideas in its worst form and any educational

School administrators fearing the wrath of angry parents and interest groups, however, are often more concerned with their image in the community than they are about education. Muzzling student expression is preferable to being blamed for substantive student debates about sensitive issues concerning them-issues such as family separation and teenage

The result is the same regardless of why the Supreme Court finds it necessary to condone censorship in the public schools. Students, learning from the example of school officials, learn that the enjoyment of constitutional rights is a matter of expediency, that the law need not apply equally to everyone, and that hypocrisy is an act of good faith. The only way students can avoid arriving at the same dismal conclusions as the Court and school administrators have in this instance is by becoming more aware of their First Amendment rights and asserting them anyway. Tom Schuster, a senior sociology major,

in students the virtues of citizenship. It turns publications and dramatic productions. While administrator with any committment to edu-Do you agree with the recent Supreme Court decision allowing high school administrators to censor student publications?

Transfer Annapolis, Md edit their own work with the assistance of a teacher. Making mature decisions is not only part of growing up, but part of being grown up."

Lancaster, Pa.

"No. The students should censor or "No, I don't agree! I suppose free- "No. dom of speech isn't popular with the Supreme Court these days. Heaver forbid a high school student should print that Judge used to smoke pot when he was fifteen."

Perry Finney Chapel Hill, N.C.

Dehorah Staed Freshman Lothian, Maryland

"No. The Supreme Court has no "Absolutely not. Freedom of the right to take freedom of speech press is one of our basic rights that away from anyone, regardless of should not be revoked from us."

Sophomore Monkton, Md.

Campus Voices

by Susan H. Stobbart

Chopping Away The First Amendment

spent many winter mornings by the woodpile with my ax. Then, at night, I read the paper by the fire and am warmed again. One January tight I discovered that I was not the only one who had been chopping that day. The Supreme Court Justices in Washington had passed a 5-3 decision giving schools even more authority to censor the intellectual activities of their students, cutting away at the First Amendment.

The next day I was splitting wood again. The old farmhouse I live in is cold, there are many drafts. The work was slow and hard, and I started to think of other things, like that decision, and what it meant. Certainly it was a step backward. Chop. It was a move toward hought-control. Chop. It was a regression of democracy. Chop. School is not a democracy, an idea which the Justices understand very well. Educaatmosphere for learning. However, school is controlled. My God, what does controlled

David Healev

John Paul Stevens think otherwise. (What is this business of three names, anyhow? The only three which are any good are William Brennan, Harry Blackmun and Thurgood Marshall, who dissented against the majority of Orwellians.)

The ruling says that discussions of Santa tional institutions need authority and discipli- Claus, sexual activity, drugs and alcohol, a place to educate, not to mandate. This mean? I had sudden visions of naked nstitutional authority should not give any lightbulbs and blackjacks. School officials self-appointed moralists the power to decide can decide what is printed in the school paper, what students discuss, perform, or think. what is performed on the stage, and what is Justices Byron White, Antonin Scalia, Wil- discussed in class and in the hallways. Will liam H. Rehnquist, Sandra Day O'Connor and elementary school students get an extra recess period now for turning in a friend who is upsetting other students by saving that Santa Claus doesn't exist? Do high school students get detention now for talking about their dates? Conceivably the Supreme Court has said yes to these questions in their January 13 ruling They have given school "officials" (Who is a school official? The principal, the teacher, the janitor?) the power to decide what students say, do, and discuss in school. My ax got caught in a burl of oak, perhaps hard as a Justice's mind. I pulled it free, took out my file, and sharpened the ax. I hope

Issues such as abortion, teen pregnancy, and politics are controversial because they are unsolved problems which plague our society. Solutions can only be reached through knowledge and discussion. The ignorance and silence promoted by the Supreme Court solves nothing. The difficulties remain and entrench themselves more deeply in our lives, strengthened by a lack of action and understanding. Remember that the proverbial ostrich is beoming extinct.

Our future citizens want to know, they need to know, in order to excercise the concepts and ideals of democracy. Why has the Supreme Court denied them's

By then I was angry. Chop. The wood split in two, the crack echoed through the frozen woods. I looked to the south, toward Washington, and wondered what they were cutting that day. David Healey, a former that editorials are like wood, creating heat, in Elm arts editor, is a senior English major.

Leslie Raimond takes a break from serving up sundaes at the recently opened ice cream parlor downtown. The store, along with a dance studio in the rear of the building, benefits the Actor's

New Act In Chestertown

by Jodi Peebles Approximately three years ago. Vincent and Leslie Raimond tions founded the "Actors Community Theater

"The whole effort has been made possible by Washington College. They let us use the Norman James Theater for all of our productions", says Mr. Raimond.

The Actors Group consists of members of the community ranging in ages from 4 to adult. The Theater has performed works from Christmas Carol, which consisted of 52 characters to Tally's Folly, a two character play.

Open auditions are held for those who wish to perform. It is not formal and membership is not required. People may participate in productions as often and frequently as they wish We have found that many of the people who participate give all of their time to the production and sometimes even finance it!", says Mr. Raimond. In addition, aid from the Drama Department at Washington College with technical aspects. such as lighting and stage direction. cessful. Many students of Washing- evening ton College have also participated in Mr. and Mrs. Raimond's produc- to expand their clientel by establish-The "Actors Community Theater" obtains its funds from a local patrons list and a small grant from the Kent County Arts Council. Mr. Raimond's hope is not to depend so greatly upon these funds therefore he and his wife Leslie have established their own capital by leasing a building which is now occupied by "Act I Studio", and Act II Ice Cream Parlo

"Act I Studio", directed by Leslie Raimond, consists of exer cise classes, Karate lessons, dance instruction and Dramatic Theater.

"Act II Ice Cream Parlor" opened in December. Within this quaint establishment one may enjoy sundaes, shakes, floats, banana splits, the whole works! There is also a menu consisting of sandwiches from shrimp salad at $2.55 to hot dogs with toppings at $.85, and a vegetarian cuisine is also available. For take-out orders call 778-1100. The Ice Cream Parlor is open from 11:00 A.M. to 7:00 P.M seven days a week. In the summer have made these performances suc-season hours will be extended in the

Mr. and Mrs. Raimond wish ing a small restaurant "modestly priced", adjacent to "Act I", and

'Act II". "Right now we are trying to get experienced personnel and find the likes and dislikes of our clientele",says Mr. Raimond. "The community is not only contributing to us through the Ice Cream Parlor and Studio, but as an audience, which is what we have been working for,"he adds.

The Great Wall of WC

by Andrea Kehoe It's not a Nativity scene. It's will choose the mortar color that she mortar samples

not a bus stop. It's ... a display of Speculations have been rampant as to the purpose of the brick structure on the grass between Tawes and the art house that appeared late last week, but few right," said Gene Hessey, vice would have guessed that the display is of mortar samples proposed for use in the planned Academic Resource Center providing funds to cover the construction costs of the facility.

feels best coordinates with the brick As of presstime the selection was set for yesterday, depending on weather conditions.

"It's a curious little project, that's president for finance, admitting that his office has received numerous inquiries regarding the structure.

The display, which was built by Betty Casey ('47), who is Arena Co., the contractors for the Resource Center, will be removed once the selection has been made.

Annual Pan-hel Tea

On Wednesday, February 3rd and songs with the annual PanHellenic Tea.

Wednesday, Feb. 10. Each informal formal Rush '88 opened for women On Thursday evening Feb. 11, each group will hold a Formal After signing the Rush List at Rush party, at which time Rushee's the Tea, each rushee is invited to the may ask any final questions they Informal Parties given by the have about sorority. Preferencing sororities. These parties will be will take place after the parties at sponsored by the AXO's on 10:30 Thursday evening in the Monday, Feb. 8, the AOPi's on basement of Minta Martin Tuesday, Feb. 9 and the ZTA's on Dormitory.

Rush will conclude on Friday party is an opportunity for Rushees Feb. 12 with an open "Bid Party" at to meet and be entertained by the 9:30 in Cullen.

Mom's Cookie Jar

more about good nutrition so you can tinue to eat too much fat, too much make intelligent, informed decisions sugar, and too much protein about the foods you eat and the lifestyle you develop. The old adage instant everything, many search for "you are what you eat" is true. What the miracle of health in vitamin and how much you eat directly affect pills, organic foods, and jars of how you look and feel.

A poor diet increases your risk of developing a long list of lifeshortening and typically American diseases such as heart disease, cancer, stroke, diabetes and high blood be - a great source of enjoyment. pressure, in addition to the less threatening problems of tooth decay, bone fractures and obesity.

Diet can also affect your physical appearance, your emotional and psychological well-being, and Pork Loin and all the trimmings. how well you study and sleep. Yet,

From time to time this column despite a growing awareness of mi tries to help you understand a bit tritin and wellness, Americans con-

In this era of quick fixes and wheat germ. There is no "magic" involved in good nutrition. The key is to practice discretion and moderation in your food choices. Food has long been - and should continue to

Next Wednesday the W.C.D.S. will feature a Mardi Grass Dinner in the Main Dining Room. The menu will consist of Blackened Carfish Caiun Oysters and Roasted Effective Monday, February

8th, you will not be allowed access to meals without your I.D. card. There will be no more "I left my card in my room or my locker." LD. numbers will not be keyed into the computer, unless your card is damaged or de-magnetized. In the case of a damaged card, you will have to have it replaced. De-magnetized cards will be re-encoded by the W.C.D.S.. You three fellows with the staples in your cards must get new cards IMMEDIATELY

Well, that's it for this week See you next week, same time, same place.

MOM

Beulah P. Jump Park Row

Ball Gowns sizes 8-14 Open Monday thru Saturday 9-3

phone: 778-4748 Full Line Ladies Apparel

KEEP YOUR SUMMER TAN WITH OUR SUNTANA SUN SYSTEM

at

EMILY HAIRDRESSER

Rt. 213 across from Bowling Lanes

Complete line of REDKEN & PAUL MITCHELL Full Service Salon

Call 778-2686

Stam Drug Co.

215 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 778-3030

- e Greeting Cards Cosmetics
- Russell Stover Candy
- Soda Fountain

continued from page 2

gut, the issue of coverage still gands. We have received great sublicity from The Pilos due to the forts of Scott Bramble and we have received tremendous coverage from the Kent County News due to he efforts of Trisha McGee. I should know — I field the barrage of shorte calls late at night for the

Does the Washington College ommunity know that the women are breaking records weekly? For instance, last evening in a double net against Widener and Bryn Mawr the 50 yard freestyle record was broken by Katherine Finneson with a time of 27:73. Anne Johnson of a new record in the 1000 free event of 13"56. A total of 10 out of 12 swimmers have already qualified Dana Loy, having swum the 100 yard fly for the first time ever, nearly qualified to go to the MAC's - one more attempt should reap great results for Dana.

This week the women will swim on Friday evening (tonight) against arch rival Goucher College for their final home meet of the season. With only one day's rest they will compete at the Maryland State Championships in Baltimore. Again, with only one day's rest the women will travel to Western Maryland for a crucial conference dual

My point is this, fair is fair, give letter will appear in this week's Elm for the MAC's or 83% of our team. alongside an article about the women who are swimming for Washington College.

Locked Out Of Reid To The Editor:

The Front Door will be locked at 11 pm every night. No one is to use it after 11 pm.

Please use the back doors. posted at convenient locations in and around Reid Hall. After getting over my initial anger about not doors? A very good question. Well, being able to use the front door of you see, my key (also my

Reid Hall is constantly open. Therefore it is safer for the residents of Reid Hall to have the door locked.

Yet, believe it or not there are other solutions to this problem. We, as Sincerely, residents of Reid Hall and as stu-Judie Berry dents of Washington College pay close to $12,000 a year to attend this off some steam about this annoying institution. Yes, we do get a lot of nice things with our $12,000; a good liberal arts education, a pretty dining hall, and decent rooms to live in. Well, I think that maybe out of somebody's $12,000 a new lock for the front door of Reid Hall should be purchased and installed. Oh hell, take it from the money that my par-wouldn't mind. Why, you ask is this person This is a copy of the sign that is making such a big deal about keeping the front door of Reid Hall locked, when she can use the back the dorm that I live in, I stood back roommate's key, and keys that be ents and I pay. I'm sure my parents and realized that the front door to long to many other Reid Hall residents), does not work on the back doors. Those locks do not work either. In fact I reported this to the security department at the end of last semester and nothing was done

Thank you for letting me blow situation. But this is just one of many things that are beginning to aggravate me about this school with respect to Reid Hall. Those of us that live on the second and third floors do not have ceilings (we get to stare up at the pipes all day), and now the parking lot behind the dorm is all torn up. I guess the door situation was the last straw

NOTE: This letter was written before the Reid Hall dorm meeting at 6:30 on Wednesday night, where I am sure the subject of the front door will be discussed.

> Sincerely. Dehorah Nahmias

Philosophy Honor Society Opens Membership

College's philosophy honor socity, the Maryland Delta chapter of Phi Sigma Tau, is available to stutents who have completed three full college or university. which a minimum grade point additional $10.

Membership in Washington average of 3.67 was attained (at least two A's and one B)

Students who meet these criteria pay a $12 application fee and are then eligible to participate in the smesters of study at any accredited activities of the local chapter. Application forms are available from Each applicant should be in the Professor David Newell, chapter uper third of his or her class and advisor and philosophy department have completed at least three chairman, in Smith 12. An honor courses in philosophy or religion in society key is also available for an

Apple Awards Equipment Worth $30,000

Apple Corporation has speed processing. awarded Washington College four director of computing.

Terming the machines "the top end of the MacIntosh line," he said developing academic software or the computers include such features as color and a 40 megabyte drive to ware.

"We've been a good customer Mac 2's, worth a total of approxi- for years," said Bishop, explaining mately $30,000, said Paul Bishop, that he asked Apple to donate some equipment to the College. Apple stipulated that the machines be awarded to individuals interested in applications using existing soft-

The Academic Computing Committee has solicited proposals from faculty and staff who would like to develop such projects. Those who receive a Mac 2 must be willing to demonstrate the project they have used it for at the October conference of Educcom, the largest national group for academic computing in the United States.

OLD WHARF INN

Enjoy Waterfront Dining Located at the foot of Cannon Street

> Chestertown, Md. (301) 778-3566 Credit Cards Accented

Send a Valentine's Message No One Will Miss

Valentine's Greetings in The Elm's February 12 issue

$1.00 25 words

Sign up Fri. 5 - Mon. 8 in the Dining Hall during dinner hours

or see Erin Hodge-Williams Reid 107

NEED A TUX?

WHY NOT STOP IN AND GIVE A LOOK AT OUR LARGE SELECTION OF TUX RENTALS.

ALSO WHILE THERE, CHECK OUT OUR WINTER SALE ITEMS OF GREAT SAVINGS ON SHIRTS, SWEATERS. OUTERWEAR AND OTHER SELECTED ITEMS.

Bramble's Traditional Clothing

For Men and Women

Downtown Chestertown 778-6090

Afternoon Tea Steeped In History

by Jennifer M. Harrison

White Swan Tavern, and she will escort you into the Isaac Cannell room, where a blazing fire and tea buffet await. Served everyday from three to five afternoon tea is flavored with spirit of the eighteenth century.

"Tea can be sporadic.... Sometimes we get people who come in and sit down and play backgammon in front of the fire and stay three hours" says Mary Clarkson, innkeeper and alumna of Washington College

Mulled cider and fragrant tea are not the only highlights of an afternoon spent at the White Swan. From its paneled window seats to the carved chess and backgammon figures. the Isaac Cannell room is host to visitors in a building steeped in the early life of America. With the intent to be more open to the public than a museum, the White Swan is a working bed and breakfast inn, open to the public for tea, tours and private parties

In 1977, Horace Havemeyer, Jr. purchased this brick building with the intention to return it to its first period. Used as a public building during most of its history, the White Swan Tavern was included in records from the eighteenth century. This was the beginning of the search for information.

Colonel Joseph Nicholson bought the property in 1733 from John Lovegrove, a shoemaker, and built what is now the front section of the present structure. As a member of the Commmittee of Correspondence, he was active in many revolutionary activities, lending his hand to the shaping of the United States. He was also influential in the founding of Washington College. Public records indicate that he may have used his home to lodge people for a fee, but there is no information pertaining to its use a tavern. Nicholson's death, his widow sold the building to John Bordley.

Bordley made many improvements on his purchase, giving the Tavern much of the charm it shows today. The money he invested indicates the success of his business. He sold it in 1801 for 1000 pounds, a profit of 650 pounds In 1812, Isaac Cannell became the third owner of the Tavern. When Cannell died, he left behind an inventory list that includes great quantities of linens, furniture and china. This indicates that the building

William H. Wilmer, the pastor of St. Paul's keeper or owner of the past. The Wilmer leased it to a series of innkeepers.

Advertised in the Kent News beginning in 1825, the establishment was run with success by a variety of innkeepers, among them Thomas Peacock, William Simms, and Thomas Lusby. Advertised for sale in 1853 as 'the best tavern stand in town", it was purchased by Thomas Eliason. This sale closed the tavern and Eliason opened his store that sold everything from clothing to lumber. The White Swan is called a lumber yard on later mans of Chestertown

Uncovering Artifacts

An archeological dig was conducted in March of 1978 by Karl de Rochefort-Reynolds and his class from Chesapeake College. In the back yard of the tavern, under eighteen inches of fill, was a paved terrace of square Pennsylvania flagstone. Mixed in with the fill were artifacts some of which are now displayed in the museum showcase. After a limited dig in the basement revealing layers of dirt and fill, the scientist turned to the area between the original house and the kitchen. Here many mid-eighteenth century artifacts of tayern life were unearthed, including bricks indicating the connection between the two buildings.

The most important discovery was found trapped beneath the brick floor of the old kitchen: a 1730 North Devon charger inscribed with a bird. This White Swan has made this motif their own, as their official logo. A local potter was commissioned to copy this on breakfast dishes for the inn

The Restoration

Inside the building, layers of materials were stripped away, exposing many of its early characteristics. The floor plan was discovered by the beginnings and endings of chair rails and baseboards.

On the second story the partitions were re-built and the original woodwork reinstalled. The initial floors were still intact. and needed only minor repair.

The rooms were furnished with antiques and reproductions of the period that were thought appropriate to the owner. Clarkson notes, "Now it's certainly different, especially upstairs, from what it would have been

The Isaac Cannell Room, restored as closely to its original decor as possible is where tea is served. was probably used as an inn. He also left then. I don't think they were very glamorous behind a billiard table that was probably used places; they put lots of people in the rooms, in the Tavern

Sold two years after Cannell's death, lots of people in the beds.

Today, the upstairs rooms are very the Tavern became the property of Reverend comfortable. Each is named after an inn-

Ring the bell for the innkeeper at the Church, Alexandria, Virginia. Wilmer was Room and the Bordley Room are in the front, houses the museum showcase which is fin also the president of the College of William facing High Street. Both are decorated in with a sampling of artifacts. A replication and Mary. Although he owned the inn, the colonial style: the Wilmer Room in red and eighteenth century bar stands in the comit, Tea at the White Swan Tavern is served daily from 3-5 in the afternoon accompanied by mulled cider and sweets. Bordley Room in samine with lowpost beds.

The Thomas Peacock Room is now a favorite of honeymooners, possibly because the most prominent feature in the room is the threequarter four poster canopy bed. Across the hall to the addition, built in the nineteenth century, is the Victorian Suite. The two bedrooms and sitting room have orange and green as the prominent colors: stencilling on the walls and cabbage roses on the rug further accent the Victorian style

Clues about the original appearance of the first floor rooms were supplied as the building was stripped. Fireplaces were found buried under layers of plaster, and nailing blocks surrounding them indicated that panel ing had decorated these rooms. Other indications to its eighteenth century decor were window seats, chair rail, and comice, parts of which were found and copied. "All the colors are original colors of the building, although they may not be in the right room ... We had old pieces of wood, but we couldn't tell where it came from We could determine the color so they [the owners] just randomly selected where to put it," remembers Clarkson.

To create the fireplace panels, the design was copied from other early Federal houses in the area. The fireplace in what is today the Joseph Nicholson room, was constructed from black marble aquired from Kilkenny County, Ireland. Several pieces of this stone had been excavated, and proved to be part of an original fireplace.

room, in its original location. In the old kitchen, renamed the John Lovegrove Kitchen, the fireplace was reco structed according to the size of its four tion, and the walls plastered. Large posts at joints were left exposed in the ceiling at walls to continue the tradition of rused Today, it serves as the fifth guest room, and noted by Clarkson as one of the favorites. examination of the kitchen structure led # searchers to believe that present day visit are not the first to live in this room. shoemaker, John Lovegrove, may have line in this very room, in his time, however it st a one room dwelling.

The last room on the first floor original window jambs and trims still in plat The fireplace was replaced with a Federal more befitting the rest of the decor. This ro is a sitting room for overnight guests walls are lined with bookshelves, and a teles sion is concealed in a cabinet.

The two first floor front room Isaac Cannell Room and The Jo Nicholson Room, were furnished using inventories from a previous owner w stated what furniture had been in the Tare the eighteenth century. Both are I rooms, open for tours, private parties and course, afternoon tea.

Many thanks are extended to Mary Clar for her assistance and time and Mich Bourne for his informative article.

Another Brick in the Wall... Or Is It?

Just when we thought there would be a lull in the frenetic building and renovation activity at this thriving college we know and love, loand behold we return from Christmas vacation to find that yet another structure has been added to our campus. The new structure is brought to you by the same administration that gave us:

the devilishly practical carpeting in the dining hall (Boy, will that teach those kids not to throw food in the dining hall!) Though I wish they had cleaned the year-old petrified banana off the ceiling before they repainted the walls.

the luxurious lighting in the salad bar (Thank God I won't ever

off the cuff

again have to go through the embarment of stabbing someone with afork thinking, in the darkness, that his hand is a deviled egg) into an art studio. This one person capacity studio miraculously fits three people. (Smacks of the loaves and the fishes doesn't it?) I kind of feel sorry for the Athletic Department now that they don't have their storage shed, but I figure that new Field House will be a salve for their wounds. And I guess having to wait mother three or four years for a new Arts Center is a small price for the job and the new sink in McAlpin.

When I returned to school this semester, I spied the wooden frame on Gibson Avenue beautifully silhouetted against the house that stands between McAlpin and Fine Arts. My heart filled with good cheer and and warm remembrances of Christmas as I spied the structure Of course that was because I thought it was a manger left over from one of those jumbo Nativity scenes. You know, the kind with the three feet high plastic baby Jesus. Then I thought that maybe it was part of a set for some experimental outdoor theater project where the audience was to be forced to actually experience the bone chilling cold suffered by the characters trapped by snow in an abandoned log cabin.

My assumptions are not the only ones on campus concerning this monolith. Already the campus is alive with gossip and innuendo concerning this plastic covered thing. I have heard such intellectual observations as, "Hey! What is that plastic covered thing?" At the posing of such a metaphysical question, the astute minds of Washington -the Athletic Shed transformed College grind into motion, the precision cogs of their brains emitting the faint smell of burning oil. "Well I think it's a new bus stop" is one reply. "No. it's like the Berlin wall except it splits the Fine Arts and the Studio Art buildings off from the rest of the school;" says one young Republican, "I always did think they ere a bunch of commies." "Well. I thought it was that new art studio they're planning," says another stu-An Department to pay for the paint dent, "but it can't be. It's not the year 2000 vet."

Well, being the scientifically chael Jackson records for the cafete-brown, I decided not to rely on mere speculation and approached the structure. Pulling the plastic aside, I peered in. Then my artistic observation skills came into play. It was minded person I am, having gotten ria jukebox we enjoy so much since been made by a panel of brick exan A in Kiddie Chem even though it's in the lobby and we can't hear it. my synthesized aspirin came out Why not have the students and community pay for this noble brick wall? We could stage an adopt-abrick campaign with Sally Struthers as chairperson choking out 'For just pennies a day you can create an made of bricks. It was flat and kind edifice that Washington College of tall. Yes, it was a brick wall. Just a brick wall. I bet it will look beautiful around the new academic resource center in 1990 when I come back as an alumna, but right now it looks out of place, like those now iconic mounds of mulch that sit for six months before trees can be

Now I have learned that this wall is a gift from Betty Casey whose contributions to other parts of the campus, such as the O'Neill Literary House, are well known Why not contribute the money for something useful, like more Mi-

planted in the soil

Please hear their cries for bricks. Show them you care.

Of course knowing that the structure is a brick wall doesn't satisfy the ever-questioning students "How do we know this is a brick wall?" asks a philosophy major. "What is the nature of a brick wall?" asks another philosophy major.
"This is not a brick wall." says a student of performance art and of surrealist painter René Magritte. One theory suggests that the wall is a brick sampler to be used in deciding what kind of bricks look best on campus. Once a decision has perts, including members of the faculty and administration, the Academic Resource Center will be built out of the selected brick. Frankly, I think that this supposition is too probable, in light of my grow ing knowledge of the College's administration, to be considered a possibility. I think a more likely answer is that this wall is being erected to be used in the dedication of the Academic Resource Center. Build a wall in 1988 and use it in a dedication ceremony three years later. Now that makes sense.

My one concern is for the person on whose lawn this monstrosity has been planted. He must feel akin to Arthur Dent of the Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy series, who wakes up one morning to find that his house is to be flattened for a new highway to be built. He ultimately discovers that the whole world is to be destroyed. I wonder if they've told him that he will have to move or if they will even make him move. To add insult to injury, not only does this man have to live in the shadow of his destroyer, but, rumor has it, that in an effort to speed up the building process, workmen tapped into his electrical wires to power their electric mortar driers. I can picture him watching T.V.,plagued by static, or having all the clocks in his house suddenly go dead. Then peering out of the window like the first aboriginal man to witness an erupting volcano, he scratches his head and think "The Gods must be crazy." Or maybe to him, like us, it's just another brick in the wall

The Right Way, Wrong Way and W. C. Way

by Kelly Lamoree Having spent three plus years at Washington College for the purpose of obtaining the benefits a liberal atseducation can offer, it was espetially gratifying last week when it suddenly occurred to me that I had not only gone most of the way to taming that coveted B.A., but I lave also learned things. I'm not along about theories of physics, which I have indeed learned, or even hundred years of art history, which I like to think I've learned In talking about Life, folks. It sidenly hit me that I know the kight Way to do things, and the trip, yeah, I already knew that What's this wacked out chick talking about?" I shall explain by example, the Right Way to explain things

The Right Way to get mail: This requires practice and diligent study. It is a shame that we don't have a football team, as young people could practice with the team to prepare for the mighty onslaught that occurs when the mailroom

When the door to the mailroom opens - and it won't until 75% of the student body is crammed in front

"It is a shame that we don't have a football team, as young people could practice with the team to prepare for the mighty onslaught that occurs when the mailroom opens."

Wrotg (boo hiss) way to do things. here is a Washington College way to things, but that is obvious. I or think I need to reiterate that. Perhaps you are sitting there itg, "Hey wait, I know right and of it - one must take a deep breath and CHARGE!!! Girls, wear your spike heels; Guys, wear cleats and face masks. Protective gear for both sexes is suggested.

Once in sight of the interior of look before you cross the the mailroom, be sure to move as street, tie your shoes so you won't slowly as you can at all times. It is writhing in agony because despite extends the fun of standing around 700 impatient, loud, tightly crowded bodies. Near the mailbox. hold your key in front of you in as menacing a stance as possible, daring anyone to cut in ahead of you. Once you have opened your mailbox, be sure to carefully and painstakingly inspect every piece of paper there, maybe read an entire letter while you're at it. Take as long as you possibly can. Talk to friends; if none are around, make some new ones. This the Correct Way to obtain one's mail.

> The Right Way to approach the Birthday Ball: Summon up all the panic you possibly can. Freshmen are allowed to take the lion's share of the panic, although seniors who are dying to attend their last Birth day Ball also should be recognized. Scope out all and anyone who could possibly be a date, make references to whatever you think will entice him/her into spending an evening of unbridled hilarity and solemn tradition with you. Bribe if necessary.

Now for those who have "Significant Others" (what a yuppie overused term but a Correct One), the thing gets a little more complex. Imagine the horror of someone who For shame.

their undying adoration for their pooh-bear, sweetheart or whatever people are calling each other these days, their said object of love doesn't want to go? Oh my God what worse fate is there? The Birthday Ball is a very strange event, more often anticipated than remembered. Keep that in mind.

This next category is a little controversial, but nonetheless a topic I have heard debated of late: the fact that there is a correct way to write. No, I refuse to rehash the sophomore writing seminar argument - there is no more overdiscussed topic in the world. I think -but I mean creative writing. For example, short stories and other such worthy endeavors. Sinister mutterings after creative writing class and at the castle of literature indicate that not everyone wishes to follow the precepts of Pound, to adopt the abstractions, to short- write "Creatively." What we have here, you rascally Lit house folk, is a mere argument over semantics and definitions. People have no right to experiment with time-tested truths, so stop whining about changing the ending of your short story or moving that comma.

There is a Right Way to comport oneself in public, in general areas. This is to run at a breakneck pace, mowing down people coming or going to class, screaming at any given moment.

The only way better than this living-on-the-edge pace is to move so slowly that you would fall asleep if you weren't discussing the latest heinous thing your bank has done to

off the cuff

you. People don't have anywhere more important to go to than where you are going, so there is no need to be in a rush

One might also mention the correct way to choose new environmental accents, or to assist in finan cial endeavors, but that's really another column. I have used exaggeration today --- yes, that was exaggeration - to illustrate that sometimes things get us down and we can see things as a lot more terrible than they really are. Of course truth is stranger than fiction, and real life is the biggest cliché. If we try to keep things in perspective. there would be a lot more harmony.

SPORTS

The W.C. Laxmen prepare for their season opener on March 9th, only

Ursinus Derails Sho'men's Perfect MAC Record

by Don Steele

gest games the Shoreman will play this season when the team travelled to Ursinus. Both teams were tied atop the MAC at 3-0 going into the game Unfortunately the Shoreman came out at 3-1, as they picked the wrong game to shoot a paltry 41 percent from the field, and were defeated 87-66

The W.C. netters seemed to have no luck. Most players were ders with nine four points off of their season average. Andy Bauer led led the team with 12 points. Chris Jamke and Tom Auvil potted 9 and 8 points for the Shoremen, and also led the team in rebounding with 7 and 5 boards respectively.

The Shoremen quickly bounced back, though, to humiliate Swarthmore (2-15, 0-5), 85-43. This game was more indicative of the Shoremen's season, as the team shot 60 percent from the field. Tim fifteen. Auvil had six rebounds tournament.

while Keehan, Jamke, and Al Last week saw one of the big- Hepting each had five. The Shoremen also played an intense defense. holding Swarthmore to an ice cold 18 percent from the field

Lowly Haverford (1-13, 0-5) next stepped under the heels of Washington College. The Shore netters won by sixteen, again paced by Bauer who score 17 points. Jamke added sixteen and Keehan fourteen, while Auvil led all reboun-

The Shoremen now stand at 15-4 and are 5-1 in MAC, second place behind Ursinus, who nipped Widener 46-45 to remain undefeated in the MAC at 5-0.

With three weeks to go before the MAC playoffs, the Shoremen face York College away tomorrow night, Haverford at home on Wednesday, and then a key game at home next Saturday against first place Ursinus

The next three weeks will de-Keehan paced the team with 16 termine if Washington College can points, while Andy Bauer netted return to the NCAA Division III

American Literature · Children's Books 778-6707 Thurs 11 AM to 3 PM 11 AM to 4:30 PM 312A Park Row Chestertown Md

Need A Job?

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yachs and Country Club $4.00 an hour 778-6765

Cheerleading Mishap Lands Coleman in Shock Trauma

Will Be in Body Brace Until July After Fracturing Vertebrae

by Bill Beekman

Tragedy struck the Washington College Cheerleading team last Monday when Sophomore captain Tracey Coleman fell, suffering a compressed fracture of her first lumbar vertebrae. There was no nerve damage, though.

During practice on Monday January 25th, just after the mats had been brought out to practice sideline stunts. Coleman fell while attempting a partner stunt.

When successful, the partner stunt involves one cheerleader standing on another's shoulders, with a front flip dismount. The cheerleaders use this stunt sometimes to punctuate successful foul shots during Shoremen Basketball games. Coleman is one of only two W.C. cheerladers able to do this manuever.

Before the fall, Coleman had completed the exercise successfully twice, but according to Cheerleading coach Karen Smith, "she didn't feel as though she was landing as she should." So she tried again, On her third attempt.

Coleman's timing was off. She jumped too soon and was unable to get the proper height to complete her cording to Smith turn, landing on her back with her knees and head bent thick mat, but the protection was insufficient to prevent her injury considering the force of the blow.

The weight of Coleman's falling body produced the compression support, in order to prevent mobility nate accident."

At the time she was being spotted by other cheerleaders, but the accident "happened too fast. There was nothing that anyone could do," according to Smith.

Present during the accident, according to cheerleader Jeanie King, were the nine other cheerleaders and Smith Trainer Betka Alexander and Athletic Director Geoffrey Miller were called onto the scene immediately after the fall. Coleman lay immobile until the team rescue squad arrived. The rescue team kept Coleman in the same position, putting her in what Smith described as a "padded cell that fit her body" in order to transfer her to he ambulance which took her to Kent and Queen Anne's Hospital. At the recommendation of Kent and Queen Anne's Hospital back specialist Dr. Fred Lohr, Coleman was transferred to the Shock Trauma unit at University Hospital in Baltimore. Lohr described the injury as a 'very common sports injury," ac-

Surgery was done to reposition the broken vertebrae. Two steel rods were inserted beside the spine for injury. Coleman fell on the 11/4 inch in the injured region until it healed Monday, Coleman was to be fitted with a plastic body braswhich will take six days to harden Coleman will have to wear the brace, which extends from her arm pits to her hips, fitting like a legan until July. At last reports Coleman was expected to recover well, although she will probably have decrease mobility. Soon she will undertherapy to adjust to the body brace

The near-paralyzing acciden however, "hasn't dampened fe enthusiasm for cheerleading at all? says Smith. But it has affected for

For one, Coleman's absent means that the other cheerleader must repostion themselves on the stunts. For another, all cheers mg be reworked for nine people insta Psychological effects mustals be expected. Smith has noticed to phenomena: that "eveybody is much more careful, maybe out careful:" and that the girls, thut dejected at first, now seem mor determined, "sort of as if to wind for the gipper." "One thing that this has taugh us is that no one is immortal," all Smith. "In spite of precaution accidents do happen. No one w negligent - it was just an unfor

Sports Calendar

February 5......Swimming vs. Goucher College, Casey Swim Center, 7:00 PM ....Basketball at York College, 7:30 PM ......Maryland State Swimming Championships at Loyola College February 7 ... February 9... ....Swimming at Western Maryland College February 10......Basketball vs. Haverford College, Cain Athletic Center 7:30 PM

CHECK US OF tormai gowns

THE FORMAL LOOK YOU'RE AFTER is at

CINDERELLA

Located in Scotties Shoe Store

High Street Chestertown

778-2860

Used Furniture For Your College Needs

....Basketball vs. Ursinus, Cain Athletic Center, 7:30 PM

Sofas, Chairs, End and Coffee Tables, Desks, Lamps and Much More.

Crowding's Store Rt. 297

Four Miles North of C-Town Worton, Md.

778-0389

Visa/Mastercard Accepted

Word Processing Amity Bakery Servicesand Coffee Shop reports, term papers, etc.prompt, accurate.

reasonable.

Call Cathy

348-2126

Breakfast S A.M.-11 A.N Lunch - Soups & Stadutt Kent Plaza, Chestertown 778-2228

shorewomen Swimmers Sink Five WC Records

by Bill Beekman

men's Swim Team broke five wol records Monday in a dual against Widener and Bryn

Sophomore Katherine Finnesnapped the 50 yard freestyle d Anne Johnson broke the m free, while Freshman Samansuramer set new marks in the 50 1200 butterfly

The women also recorded their ever time in the 400 freestyle raced by Senior Liz Whelan omore Kathleen Carlson, Fin-on, and Streamer. Although the women lost to Bryn Mawr and Widener, they e a "better performance" than year, according to Coach Den-Berry, cutting their losing marnom forty to twenty-five points. rypredicts that the women are "a raway from catching Widener." Earlier, the Shorewomen had vdefeated Notre Dame and lost bickenson, a top Middle Atlantic ference team who showed their nt by crasing many Casey Swim

The Washington College their "hardest part of the season," says Berry, with four meets in eight days

Tomorrow the women host Goucher College in their final home meet. The meet will be a senior send-off for Whelan, Johnson, and Karen Hinson. Whelan has been with the team since its conception two years ago.

Washington College has never beaten Goucher, although last year they lost by only two points.

Sunday the women will be at Loyola College all day, participating in the Maryland State championships. Tuesday the Shorewomen travel to Western Maryland to battle the Lady Terrors who defeated Washington last year.

Although the women's record is only 3-6, the wins and losses do not matter as much as they do in other sports such as lacrosse and haskethall

The key, according to Berry, is Anne Johnson swims into the record books in the 1000 free Monday. The Shorewomen swimmers broke the times, and for the team to peak at four other records on Monday, with Samantha Streamer capturing new benchmarks in the 50 and 200 butthe right time, at the MAC Swim-terfly, Katherine Finneson setting the standard in the 50 free, and Liz Whelan, Kathleen Carlson, Finneson, ming Championships at the end of and Streamer breaking the previous record for the 400 free mediey. Tonight, the Shore swimmers compete in their final home meet of the season, starting at 7 PM against Goucher.

Don't Let Cold Freeze Your Fitness DEAR READERS: Cold exercise and start to perspire. Avoid running to manufacture heat. Don't

osing in the winter. You can k nin ski, skate, cycle.etc. in a comfort during winter if

BE WISE, ACCLIMATIZE: in the body. You've got to yourself time to get used to it. est way to get used to winter is exercising all year round. to winter workouts, don't weather problems Ittakes a while to adjust, but do fine. Just read on.

THINK WARM. If you go hating winter, resenting cold er, wishing the temperature 75 instead of 25, your time ing outdoors will be miseristas your body mus adapt to eather, so must your mind. warm thoughts as you premeet the elements. Notice loveliness of winter. Appre-Estiliness. Allow the wind to ber way, at you and through thout taking offense. In tam to relax and enjoy. oly is well-equipped to do

DRESS IN LAYERS. This od to being outside in the the natural tendency is to put eviest and warmest clothes inart. One heavy layer is not good as several lighter her is no reason to give up exercising in clothing that is wet. It exercise right after eating, however makes you colder, faster, than if If you exercise immediately after your clothing is dry

CHOOSE ITEMS WISELY. smart enough to understand You don't have to spend a lot to stay asics. To help you stay OUT of toasty warm. You just have to sand IN condition, DR. JOCK choose wisely. Wool clothing reshe following facts and infor- tains heat better than cotton clothing which loses 90 percent of its ability to keep you warm when wet. made a resolution Jan. 1 to Investigate the new lightweight, allexercising outdoors Jan. 2, weather fabrics that keep you dry again. Cold weather can be a and warm without a lot of bulk. Don't let high-fashion style or color be your guide when you buy outdoor clothes. Comfort and warmth lasts longer. Also, don't buy tight shoes cause of cold injury. weather gradually changes, or clothing. It impairs your circulaody slowly adapts. If you're tion and increases your risk of cold- Don't let your healthy exposure to > WEAR A HAT. Hats don't just keep the top of your head warm. They keep your whole body warm by not allowing body heat to escape. Did you know you lose 50 percent of from a bare head in 40 degree goggles weather? Wool knit hats are good because they go on and off easily and can be crushed into your pocket.

MITTENS OVER GLOVES, SOCK OVER SOCK. Mittens are warmer than gloves. If you tend to covering your mouth and nose with get cold hands, look for liner gloves to wear inside the mittens. Two pairs of socks are better than one, feels better. thick over thin. Make sure you have enough room in your athletic shoes to accomodate extra socks. If your sylostaying warm. If you're shoes are too tight, you can't get proper circulation and your feet and toes will get colder, faster. TOO TIRED, STAY INfind. It may sound good but DOORS, Don't exercise outdoors if you're overtired or if you haven't Makiple layers trap warm Your body's ability to manufacture and you and insulate you heat is impaired if you fatigue dehydrates you and can disguise the control of the co sted a layer or two as you source of energy to keep your motor lerns.

eating, much of your circulating blood volume is shunted to your intestinal tract to digest the meal so less is available to your working muscles for energy production and for maintaining body temperature. DRINK PLENTY OF FLUIDS. This rule is too often forgotten. Drink a coouple of glasses of water before you work out- and during and after too. depending on the extent of your workout. Don't wait to feel thirsty. .. drink! Dehydration is a primary

SKIN CARE COUNTS. cold weather chap your lips and dry out your skin. Use quality products (not necessarily expensive ones) to keep your lips moist and your skin lubricated. To protect your eyes (and the thin skin around them), your body heat through radiation wear good-quality sunglasses or

DON'T WORRY ABOUT LUNG FREEZE. You can't freeze your lungs by breathing too much cold air. If it is especially frosty out and you're not used to the cold air. a scarf will warm the air you breathe. It's not necessary; it just

REMEMBER: Exercising outdoors can be a very pleasant and invigorating experience. Don't OVERDO it, however. If you take all the precautions mentioned above and von're still uncomfortable, go indoors and warm up. If there's ice underfoot, when you run or walk, your risk of injury greatly increases In short, use common sense. And

Indoor Lacrosse Clinic Sponsored by MILL

In an attempt to round up future John Driscoll of the New Jersey door game. Current MILL players, including John Lamon and Jim Beardmore day, February 6, at the Capital Cenof the Washington Wave, Lou Del-ter, from 9:30-11:00 AM, and Saturplayers, the Major Indoor Lacrosse Saints, and Mike and Paul French of Leauge, MILL, is sponsoring a the Philadelphia Wings, will demclinic designed to acclimate current onstrate the differences between the college lacrosse players to the in- indoor and outdoor game and teach the fundamentals of indoor lacrosse.

The clinics will be held Saturligatti and Mark Pierce of the Balti- day, February 13, at the Baltimore more Thunder, Larry Quinn and Arena, from 9:30-11:00 AM.

Freshmen Pose Their Prose

College's best freshman creative writers will be presenting selections man Literary Reading, to be held of prose and poetry by the following Matthias C freshman writers: Conaty, Chris Deri, Susan DiLeo, Clay Eichelberger, Michael Gaucher, Kevin W. Holland, Laura Hopper, Tim Madison, Mary Sar- free verse, and he has designated a avia, and Jeff Vail

All ten writers were members of ent at the Reading the Freshman Creative Writing Workshop in the Fall semester. The etry as being primarily lyrical in Workshop, conducted by Professor form, and she selected her poems for Robert Day and Ms. Kathy Wagner, the Reading through a review of her provides student writers with an semester's work: "I went through opportunity to submit their creative my poems and picked out the best of efforts for class discussion and criticism. The writers for the Freshman result of this process, and with an cases, excerpts from novels-in-Reading were selected by the members of the two Workshop sections. would have in oral presentation, she

the Freshman class are distin- at the Freshman Reading. guished by their diversity of literary interests and approaches to creative example, is a poet who characterizes his work as imagistic and experimental, and for the Reading he has selected poems including free verse Some of Washington lyrics, anarrative poem, and a mock sonnet. Conaty, who feels that the Modernist poets William Carlos from their work at the annual Fresh- Williams and e. e. cummings and the Irish writer Semus Heaney have this upcoming Monday at 8:00 p.m. been the writers who have had the in the O'Neill Literary House. The most influence on his poetry, says, reading, sponsored by the Writers "I chose the poems that I felt had the Union, will consist of presentations most merit and some based on my personal affection.

Kevin W. Holland followed a similar plan in selecting the poems he will read on Monday; he characterizes his work as predominantly group of five of these poems to pres-

Mary Saravia describes her pomy work for the semester." As a eve towards the effect the poems The writers who will represent chose the six poems she will present

Several of this Monday's writing. Matthias C. Conaty, for readers have dedicated their efforts to the art of prose writing, and they will be presenting their fiction in the writer, Jeff Vail, is currently writing on a novel with the working title Plying Lethe, a project which he began during the Fall Workshop. Vail, who particularly enjoys the describes the subjects of his prose form of short stories and, in some efforts as "leaning towards science fiction," and he plans to read an progress. One freshman prose excerpt from his novel-in-progress at the Reading, Choosing an appropriate and representative passage from a longer work can be difficult, Vail says, and among the various criteria he employed in selecting the works of Arthur C. Clarke, Edgar passage, he found to be particularly Allan Poe, and H. P. Lovecraft, useful: "Having decided I would read an excerpt from my novel, I decided to read as little dialog possible.

The creme de la creme of Freshmen writers. From left to right: Jeff Vail, Kevin Holland Matt Conaty, Clay Eichelberger, Laura Hopper, Chris Derl, Michael Gaucher, Susan DiLeo, and Tim Madison.

The 1988 Freshman Literan's ing promises to be a show some of Washington College new student writers, and the event should be of interest members of the campus com who share an appreciation power of well-written poth

Movie Preview

She

Has

Washington College Film Series will be the critically and popularly lauded film, She's Gotta Have It. The film was released in 1986 to much acclaim and was a success in theaters across the nation, surprising the makers of the film, which was made in twelve days in 16 mm film, on a budget of a paltry $175,000

The film's success can be attributed to the writer/director/co- same sexual freedom enjoyed by star, Spike Lee. The 29-year old men. filmmaker graduated from the New

The next installment in the has been called by some critics to be the black answer to Woody Allen. The film is the story of Nola, a young black woman who is seeing three men at the same time, as well as being pursued by an overly friendly female. The three men find it hard to accept Nola's indecision regarding which one of the three she really wants; Nola simply wants them all, and doesn't see why she shouldn't. She wants to enjoy the hard worker; a vain model; and a perpetually unemployed but funny young man, played by Lee himself. The movie moves at a fast pace, detailing the adventures of Nola and her three lovers. Some feminists have claimed the movie is a feminist film, but Lee doesn't think so, "To me, the film is about men's attitudes toward women," the filmmaker said. "It came to me after constantly hearing male friends of mine bragging and The three lovers are all dif- boasting about all the women they York University Film Institute and ferent stereotypes: a responsible, had. Yet, if one of these women wanted to see other guys, they through the roof."

Newsweek said of the "She's Gotta Have It succes high spirits, casual sensual Lee's sharp but good-naturely

She's Gotta Have It playing in the Norman Jans atre on Friday, February 5, Su February 7, and Monday, Feb 8. All showings begin # Admission is $1.00 to student faculty members.

researched by Kevin Hola

BIRTHDAY BALL Saturday, February 20,1988

"SPEND AN EVENING AT MT. VERNON" with

Junior Cline and the Recliners

Join us at the C-House afterwards for donuts, coffee,etc. Tickets available at the Student Affairs Office for $18.00 a couple and $9:00 a person

She's Gotta Have It

Fri./Sun./Mon. 7:30 p.m. Norman James

$1 admission

Washington Colle Film Series

Pete and Gladys (Chas. Foster and Gina Braden) struggle in a sene from A Lesson from Aloes.

A Lesson from Aloes Plays Tonight

by Jeanette Smith

ven, now released from jail, plans to The setting: a reunion between move his family to England. Before bee longtime friends attempting to he leaves South Africa Pete invites alvage a friendship plagued by Steven to dinner for one last time bobt, betrayal, and lies against a As the dinner progresses, old backdrop of a political system that wounds are reopened and doubts comodes the relationship between blacks and whites, man and man -A Lesson from Aloes, a play by Athol Fugard, portrays the current spartheid system in South Africa as being detrimental to society as well athe individual. However, the play a tot racial as it does not center on he oppression of blacks. Instead. te focus of the play is the oppresion of a friendship between a white an, his wife, and their black friend result of the mistrust caused by he political system.

Pete Bezeidenaout, an Afriater (portrayed by Chas. Foster). as deeply involved in the resisnce movement. As a result of his ricipation, Pete becomes close ds with a black man called even Daniels (played by Vincent implications. nson), also involved in the moveone night, Steven attends a et party despite being banned run rampant. Steven questions Pete's faithfulness as a friend and member of the resistance, while Gladys (Pete's wife, portrayed by Gina Braden) questions her own friendship with Steven, her marriage, and her sanity.

The action begins when Ste-

In the course of the dinner, the three characters struggle to find their identity as individuals and as friends

A Lesson from Aloes is drama major Charlie Wilcox's senior project. He chose this particular play for its "intensity and difficulty." After first reading the play, Wilcox described it as having "an undefinable sense of something I couldn't figure out." His intent is to define that sense to better understand Fugard's Wilcox's stage manager is Michele Beck. The set is designed by Steve Brody. A Lesson from The government to do so, and is Aloes runs February 5 and 6 at ently arrested during a po- Tawes Theatre. Both shows begin

Chosapeako

Handmade Crafts Craft Supplies

10% off any item with this coupon paint and paintbrushes

113 Cross Street

Chestertown, Md. 21620 Ellen Bunting on thru Sat. 10-5 778-0249

Sting Jazzes Up Virginia

by Geoffrey Robert Girard/ The Police. The band worked with he is on this tour. Each member of Mary Saravia

"Are there any musicians in the audience, tonight?" Sting asked a crowd of fifteen thousand, at the Patriot Center, on the campus of George Mason University, in Fairfax Virginia, the night of January 30. Most claimed 'yes', but the eight performers on stage were the only ones that could prove it, and did so throughout the evening.

consists of guitarist Jeff Campbell, keyboardists Kenny Kirkland and Delmar Brown, bassist Tracy Wormworth, percussionist Mino Cinelu, drummer Marvin Smith, with the critically acclaimed Branford Marsalis on saxophone. Sting masterfully led the group throughout the night, adding an occasional guitar riff or keyboard improvisation to the combined musical expe-

Starting slowly with "The Lazuras Heart", the opening track on the album, the band followed with a strong version of The Police's "Too played "We'll be Together", this bum's "radio" song, to an approving teenage audience. What followed was a collage of Stings solo music from "Dream of the Blue Turtle" and "Bring on the Night" in smooth improvisations through the set. Sting also revamped several Police songs, including; "One World is Enough", "Don't Stand so Close to Me", "Message in a Bottle", and, of course, "Roxanne". Foreshadowing "An Englishman in New York", Sting reminded the crowd of Superbowl Sunday, asking, "So, do you think the Re-Supporting his latest album, dskins are going to win?" The audi-Nothing Like the Sun, Sting's band ence cheered wildly, and Sting warned, "You should save your voices for the game tomorrow. Later, after asking for requests, Sting joked with the crowd over their screams for "Roxanne", noting, "Every night of my life, I sing this song. Just once can I have the night off?" With greater enthusiasm, the audience urged sting to sing the classic Police song, "just for you and the Redskins." Playing olo, with only his acoustic guitar, Sting obliged Sting then dedicated "Secret Marriage" to "our couple, Tracy and Brandy", the band's bassist and Much Information". The band then pianist. Accompanied by the pair and Marsalis, Sting captured his Nothing Like the Sun" ballad.

Artistically, for Sting, it's easier being brilliant when you're surwork and his compositions from rounded by brilliant musicians, as the band stands professionally in the jazz and R&B field, adding their individual talents to the established musical form of Sting. The reggae soound often found in Sting's music has evolved to jazzier melodies reminiscent of Duke Ellington and Thelonious Monk. This transition can be attributed to the band, most notably Marsalis, whose solo work has earned him critical approval and an accomplished career in music

Percussionist Mino Cinelu displayed his expertise during an extensive solo during "They Dance Alone". Sting and Branford took a playful maarch around the stage while Cinelu played the elaborate fill on the bongos and crash sym-

Jimi Hendrix's "Little Wing" provided a showcase for the powerful guitar work of Campbell. Sting himself took a few bars of the song for his own serene interpretation of the piece

Earlier in the evening, Sting promised that after a short break the band would "play all night". though the concert lasted only a little over two hours, the time vanished in the music and it seemed as if several generations of musical style had been captured in an eve-

BAR MENU AVAILABLE

Monday thru Wednesday 6 'till 10 Friday and Saturday 'ein 11

NIGHTLY HAPPY HOURS

4 - 6:30 Friday - 5:30 Free Hors D'oeuvres

Under New Management - College Students Welcome

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT

Friday, February 5

Leon & Shades of Blue

$5 person, $8 couple

MONDAY $1.00 All Imports "Import Night"

TUESDAY $2.00 frozen margueritas Tequila $1.00 a shot Free Nachos at Bar "Mexican Night"

Ladies Receive Special Prices 50 cents Draft Lite $1.25 House Drinks

WEDNESDAY

Ladies' Night

THURSDAY The Cutters $5 per person $8 per couple

FRIDAY Outrageous Squids $5 per person

$8 per couple Introducing in Feb.

25 cent Draft of Your Choice 9:00 - 10:30 on Band Nites in the Back

515 Washington St., Chestertown, MD 778-1984

INXS Kicks In With New Album

by Susan Di Leo

In five albums and less than a decade INXS have mastered different styles of "pop" music. 1982's breakthrough Shabooh Shoobah, their third album, which featured the hit"The One Thing," showcased the band's eclectic tastes in a quirky but melodious fashion. The Swing followed in 1984, an album which was more studio-oriented than the previous one to an almost excessive extent. In 1985, Listen Like Thieves was ushered in, featuring INXS returning to the basic guitar-drumgrowl formula with a vengeance, improving it. With their sixth album, Kick, INXS attempts to combine these stylistic ends of the

The album opens with "Guns in the Sky." Here, the music com- ate/ Try not to hate/ Love your plements the scowling, spitting mate."
vocals of lead singer Michael Hutchence, When Hutchence sings "See the sound/ It crashes in/ All around/ It gets in," the band crashes right along with him. The subject matter of the song refers to the Strategic Defense Initiative, Ronald Reagan's pet project; Hutchence's feelings are clear: "They want to put/ Guns in the sky/ Someone out there/ Ain't gonna like it." He con cedes that "it could be good/ Make us love each other."

"Need You Tonight," the first single from the album, is a PMRC nightmare, since it is obviously sexual without being blatantly so: "Your moves are so raw/I've got to let you know/ You're one of my kind/...There's something about you, girl/ That makes me sweat. Lyrics like these, bred with a danceable yet restrained groove, make for a song which lends true meaning to the word "sensual." It segues directly into "Mediate," a laid-back tune that features consecutive spectrum, doing so successfully and with phrases; collectively, they convey a message of the love and peace that should exist: "Hallucinate/ Desegregate/ Mediate/ Allevi-

> "New Sensation" ranks as one of the more driving songs on Kick. The band lets loose as Michael Hutchence sings from the gut: "Cry baby cry/ When you got to get it out/I'll be your shoulder/You can tell me all/ Don't keep it in ya." INXS can be a powerhouse with a Hutchence's biting, mock-rap volittle effort.

However, "Devil Inside" flounders badly. The band sounds tired when it means to sound ominous. The lyrics are absurd, which doesn't help the situation: 'Here come the woman/ With the look in her eye/ Raised on leather/ With flesh on her mind." Thankfully, most of the other songs are not as tiresome as this.

In the tradition of Listen Like Thieves "The Loved One" is a Stonesy number in which Hutchence's searing, pleading vocals are matched by the rawness of the music. INXS did a version of this song much earlier in the decade; rhymes of single words interspersed they've improved with age in regard to "The Loved One."

> Most of the second side of Kick is of little consequence, the exceptions being "Never Tear Us Apart" and "Calling All Nations. The former is interesting because it is rather ballad-like and uncharacteristic of INXS; whether it works depends on the preference of the individual, "Calling All Nations" is another tear-the-carpet-up piece which pounds along with Tim Farriss' quick-fire guitar licks and Kick, the sixth album by INXS, is likely to attract new it is available on Atlantic Records.

cals: "Well you spent the whole day/ some new fans for INXS. The With your axe to the wheel/ Read political overtones contained in the late paper/ It was full of bad Despite his cynicism, Hutchence is urgent: "Calling all nations/ To put it on the line.

an album, and it may even garner this album to the band's past work number of the songs are interesting but vague and noncommitted However, Kick does not stand a their best work to date, so longtine fans are likely to feel a twingen Kick is an overall success as disappointment when comparis

Chestertown Movie Theater

Hours: Fri. Sun 78 9 p. c.

778-1575

- SECRET MORE SELF-HELP FILES .

SERVING DINNER

Friday 5 p.m.-10 p.m. Saturday 5 p.m.-9 p.m.

Dave Brand Entertains Saturdays 9 p.m. - 12:30 a.m.

30 Motel Rooms . Restaurant & Lounge . Banquet & Meeting Rooms • Golf Course Full Service Marina • Miniature Golf

Home of LaVida Yachts

On the Bay at Fairlee Creek P.O. Box 527 Chestertown, MD 21620

Restaurant/Motel 301-778-210 Marina 301-778-500

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 17

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, February 12, 1988

Chris Jamke fires for two, helping the basketball team stymie Haverford, 100-56. The Shoremen are now 17-5, tied for first in the MAC with Ursinus, whom they host tonight

College Considers Modular Housing

Fifty singles possible by Fall 1988

by Tony Caligiuri

In an attempt to alleviate overcrowded conditions as well as allow more flexibility in campus housing, Washington College administrators have been examining the feasibility of the construction of modular housing units to be used as student dormito-

The housing units, if approved by the Board of Visitors and Governors, will add about 50 single rooms to the College's housing capacity, according to Vice President of Finance Gene Hessey and Dean of Student Affairs Maureen Kelley McIntire. Each one story unit, of which there may be approximately 10, will contain five single rooms, two bath rooms, and a common living room. Additional units may be constructed specifically for laundry, kitchen, and recreational

The housing proposals presently under consideration would be constructed by Cardinal Industries, Inc.. The company has constructed similar stuctures for motels and apartment buildings, as well as for dormitory

The differences in modular housing as opposed to traditional dormitory housing lies mainly in construction materials and life expectancy of the structure. The proposed housing by Cardinal would be primarily composed of wood with several modifications for student occupancy, including addi tional soundproofing between walls and steel

"Cardinal's proposal was more appealing because of their high quality constuc-

tion and flexible design for student use," said Hessey

Cardinal sets the life expectancy of their modular units at 25 to 30 years, yet according to Hessey, the College plans to use the units for five to eight years. Hessey said that the additional living space would give the College more time to decide if increases in enrollment would be desirable. Despite this Hessey felt that the number of units proposed would allow some breathing room, without creating a housing excess. "The long range planning committee has recommended stabilizing student enrollment, so additional traditional housing would not be feasible right now," said Hessey.

Cost of construction is "substantially less" than that of traditional housing, according to Hessey. Each unit is estimated to cost between $30,000 to $35,000, averaging $6,000 to $7000 per single room. Hessey pointed out that Cardinal would be contracted for the entire construction job, from sight preparation to installation of utilities and fur-

Because the proposal has not yet been approved, no definite sight has been selected. Hessey stated that although such factors as access to sewer electric and water lines must be considered, the units would most likely be placed on the northwest end of campus, either behind the baseball field or across the railroad

"I was very impressed," said McIntire, who visited sample units built by Cardinal. McIntire expressed an interest in the new housing because of the many demands for housing which are made to the Student Affairs Office. Aside from overcrowding problems, she felt that this would allow additional flexibility in creating more specialized housing as well as preventing overcrowding effect present specialized housing. "We can almost guarantee singles to any senior...and some juniors," said McIntire.

Before an agreement can be made with Cardinal, the proposal must be approved by the Board's Finance Committee and the Board of Visitors and Governors. In the event that an agreement is signed by April of 1988, the new housing could be complete by the fall

Black History Week To Be Observed Washington College is celebrating Black Family Life and Community Struggle in the two films, and a concert given by a local District of Columbia. gospel group, the Bethelites.

Times of Edward Ambush: A Narrative attend free of charge and American civilization at George Afro-American Communities Project for the Natural Museum of American History at Snithsonian Institution, has done extensive has published articles examining Afro-

History Week beginning this Monday with a Antebellum North, and co-edited City of book at the life of a freed slave, the showing of Magnificent Intentions, A History of the Horton has appeared on Washington.

Dr. James Oliver Horton will kick off the D.C. television as a guest interviewer and http://www.monday.evening.at 8:00 with a lecture/ historical consultant, and gave a televised title presentation entitled "The Life and lecture/discussion entitled "Jesse Jackson and the Jews." He has served as historical advisor History of a Freed Slave." The talk will be in to the ABC News series, "Our World," for the Hymson Lounge, and the public is invited to NAACP Legal Defense Fund, and for the National Geographic Series, "The American Horton, associate professor of history Presidents," among others.

Black History enthusiasts can catch two Washington University and Director of the free films at Washington College this week. The film classic "A Raisin in the Sun" will be shown in Norman James Theatre twice: on Tuesday, February 16 at 7:30 p.m. and on Search into the lives of freed black slaves. Thursday, February 18, at 9:00 p.m. The hit 1987 film of the black experience in benfraan identity in the 19th century, and Hollywood, "Hollywood Shuffle," will also setifically, that of black artists, black be shown twice: on Sunday, February 14 at and families, blacks who migrated 8:00p.m. in the Alumni House, and on Friday, onh, and the mulattos in the North. He co- February 19 at 9:00 p.m. in the Coffee House authored a book entitled Black Bostonians: of Hodson Hall.

The Bethelites Gospel Choir of Chestertown will conclude the week of celebration on Sunday, February 21, with a free concert in Norman James Theatre, beginning at 4:00 p.m.

The group was founded in 1971 by Jocelyn Williams and seven other women who wanted to spread the Word of the Lord through song. The group has since expanded to include 23 members, and in 1980 recorded of 1988. their first album

INSIDE.

| Conservationist                         | page 4      |
|---|-------------|
| Valentine Sentiments                    | page 6      |
| Shoremen Host Ursinus                   | ·····nage & |
| Chip Shots: Olympics                    | nage S      |
| Valentine Grams                         | nage 10     |
| Album Review                            |             |
|  | and and     |

Writers' Rights

and professors with selections from their own poetry and prose. Aside from the usual amount of courage required to present one's work to an audience, these fledgling writers faced the possibility of ridicule from disdainful upperclass colleagues. They are newcomers to the literary scene in a year that saw the emergence of the dreaded "Wicomico Committee for Competent Poetry.

Taking its name (as well as its membership) from the building in which the writers' floor is housed, the committee satirized selected freshman poets, even posting the parodies for other residents and visitors of the hall to read. The results? A lot of laughs and a few temporarily bruised egos. In one instance, however, the effect was more serious: the declaration of a targeted writer not to continue his

It is not the process of criticism - of careful evaluation and judgment of others' work - with which we take issue. Indeed, peer responses and suggestions entail one of the best facets of Washington College's creative writing program. We do believe, however, that mockery has no place in this exchange

Student writers here stand "competent" to offer advice on rhyme schemes and metaphors, but not recommendations as to whether a young writer should abandon the craft. Benjamin Franklin urged fellow representatives to the Continental Congress to doubt their own infallibility to speed passage of the Constitution; writers here would do well to question their perception in recognizing the potential of others

As with any endeavor, those new to the practice of writing must struggle to carve out their place within the tradition. The search for the genre that best matches the author's abilities and intent is not unlike the juggling of positions on a sports team in order to place each player at a personal strength. Moreover, submissions to the creative writing class are works in progress, not galleys for Esquire

Arguments among artists are inevitable; when these disagreements surround ideological rather than personal issues they serve to fuel creativity in the field. The committee members in question, who implicitly consider themselves among the more "competent" poets on campus, might share what is no doubt a cohesive and comprehensive philosophy of literature with the unenlightened.

In place of division in a group which in many respects is isolated from the mainstream of campus life, Washington College's writers should emphasize their sense of community. We don't expect those in this "Lit House crowd" to send one another inspirational and supportive messages, in the way that sororities often do. While written reminders such as "Go for an A on your portfolio" or "Good luck with that sestina" are unnecessary, written messages of discouragement are equally so

Perhaps this comes after-the-fact. This semester's creative writing class is composed of upperclass students - less easy marks for the red-penned committee, thus necessitating disbandment.

If, however, the group intends to continue their crusade, they might wish to alter their present course somewhat, perhaps calling themselves "The Wicomico Committee for Competent Criticism."

Washington College Elm

Editors Editor-in-chief Andrea Keho News Editor... Jennifer M. Harrison Sports Editor. ..Bill Beckman Susan DiLeo Arts/Entertainment Editor Photography Editor Graphics Editor..... .....Michele Balze

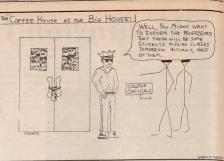

Manager Advertising Manager Circulation Manager ...Erin Hodge-Williams ......William Faust The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed columns, com taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

Managing Editor

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editors cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or malled c/o The Elm Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters become the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be considered for publication in that week's issue.

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Adormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

C-house Boycott Would Hurt All

To The Editor:

As the bar manager in question in last week's letter from Daniel Feiner, I am obligated to respond to its inaccuracies; the maliciousness contained in the letter will not be addressed here

First. I must emphasize that the measures taken against Mr. Feiner are not actions of the Student Conduct Council; rather, Coffee House management exercised its prerogative in revoking Mr. Feiner's Coffee House privileges

Now, why were these privi-leges revoked? Contrary to Mr. Feiner's assertions, the incident of January 29 was not the first occasion in which he violated Washington College's alcohol policy and Coffee House regulations; in fact, it was the fourth such incident. The first two occasions involved underage drink ing for which the alcohol was con fiscated or he was asked to leave the premises for the evening. The third incident involved Mr. Feiner's attempt to pass a false identification in order to be served alcohol. At this time, in addition to other measures taken by the authorities, he was warned - for the last time against such behavior. Two weeks ago, he chose to blatantly ignore this succession of incidents and warnings by drinking alcohol in the Cof-

Yes, I identified him, and yes, management made a collective decision to revoke his privileges (i.e., he may not enter the Coffee House. He was not put on Social Probation). Dan Feiner, however, can hardly be seen as an innocent victim of a tyrannical system or of an "employee's power trip." He was given several opportunities and the benefits of several doubts. His removal from the Coffee House is a product of his own engineering.

I have a few final comme One, Mr. Feiner defends his behavior by saying that 100 other underand had my "required ID" age students were drinking alcohol. Possibly true. However, if 100 other citizens were looting stores after a hurricane, do their actions give another a license to copy them? Two Mr. Feiner was not singled out. As other, unhappy students can verify, numerous beers were confiscated by C-House employees that evening, and as two other students can verify, Mr. Feiner was not the only student expelled from the premises. Finally, boycott if you wish, the alcohol policy is unpopular and tends to ruffle a few feathers. But what purpose (or, shall I say, whose purpose) will be served? If hours are cut back because of slow business, the consequences will be unfortunate for everyone, including legal drinkers, non-drinkers, and bar workers Thank you,

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM! Excellent income! Details, send self-addressed, stamped envelope WEST, Box 5877, Hillside, NJ

Brenda Conner

Turn C-house Into Big House

To The Editor:

This response is in full accordance with last week's letter by Daniel Feiner. Dan was put on social probation prohibiting him the use of the Coffee House because of illegal consumption of alcohol: something most of us, if not all of us under age drinkers are guilty of. How many people between 18 and 20 were drinking beer that night? Well, according to what most of their I.D.'s said, not many. I understand that Mr. Feiner was approached before and that it is risky and somewhat strange that one would try it again, but wasn't he breaking a law which we could all be hauled off for? I never believed in the saying, "It's not illegal until you are caught," but that is what I see happening here. How much beer in illegally consumed in Kent, what, about 1,000 cans each weekend?

How many times have I gone to a party, be it sorority or fraternity

EMPLOYMENT HOMEMAKERS WANTED! TOP PAY! C.I. 121 24th Ave. N.W. Suite 222 Norman, Oklaboma 73069

checked? None. I'm not running around with a neon halo, because I am as quilty as the next guy of any thing listed here, but this all has to do with consistency. Those of us who are under 21 are basically trained to walk around campus with a beer and fear no legal reprisals. Only until get to the Coffee House do I pinch my arm and try to convince myself that it is illegal to drink if you are no of age. The next time an event is held, bust all of the underage drinkers, including myself, whether it is their first or tenth offense. Yes lock the doors and turn the Coffee House into the Big House. If one personis going to get nailed for the whole semester for something everybody does, doesn't it seem logical to bus everybody? If you don't like th rules of the Coffee House in regard to drinking, go back to your room the front lawn, or Newt's, where your obviously fake I.D. workseve

Geoff Nelso

Letter Was Unnecessary To the Editor:

I am writing in response to la week's letter to the editor by Kenn Haltom and his personal attack of J.P. Albert. Haltom criticize Albert's call for tougher disciplin as "immature and quite sad" an later accuses him of acting as God Who is judging whom here? Hil tom refers to the cases Alberteitesa "fiascoes" and only four sentence later refers to them as what the actually are, "crimes," and Federa ones at that

In the same letter, he make mention of the fact that the "sel righteous" are in for a "rude awak ening" when they enter the rea world. In the "real world" # people responsible for these crime would have at least been to trial by now if not serving serious punish

Letters continued on page

HELP WANTED

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly #

home! Write: P.O. Box 17, Clark, NJ 07066

Small College Means Small Audiences

the darkness — and in front of me are 575 ington College equals 40. empty seats in Tawes auditorium.

I enjoy playing in the jazz band as an escape from academic pressures, so for me the disappointment of poor attendance rarely lasts very long. For someone who makes his orher living by playing an instrument, acting, or lecturing, however, facing an empty auditorium can be very disheartening. And unforunately this scene is all too common at Washington College. The cry is heard over and over again from administrators and faculty. "Why don't Washington College students attend more of the events offered on campus?" There is no clear and simple answer. Several factors play arole in determining how many students will attend this week's Sophie Kerr lecture or next week's drama production.

One important reason is size. Washing-

f those 800 students have the motivation to yond 800 students, the statistical facts remain. future cultural events? Some professors even groups on campus, I am familiar with the attend lectures and concerts. Assume five scenario. After weeks of preparation, the percent of the students at the University of night of the jazz band performance finally Maryland attend a lecture-that's 2000 stuarrives. I walk out on stage, my eyes adjust to dents. Five percent of the students at Wash

> With those bright statistics in mind, consider further that any given event is only going to appeal to a certain percentage of the Washington College population. Philosophy majors are not going to be interested in a lecture on quantum physics, for example. Throw in conflicts with sporting events practices, and academic obligations and it's really any wonder that anyone is left to show up at these events at all Another, and perhaps more important, reason, is student taste. While it is admirable that the College strives to provide students with adequate opportunities to immerse themselves in culture, the fact remains that the majority of students would rather go to the Coffeehouse on Friday night than sit in Tawes theater listening to a chamber orchestra What are the solutions? Since the Colon College only has 800 students, and not all lege has no immediate plans to increase beThere simply are not enough interested and announce them at the beginnings of their motivated students to go around.

As for generating interest among the students, the College has a couple of options. Many students who might consider attending an event decide not to simply because they are unfamiliar with the lecturer or the topic. Short blurbs in The Elm don't always help. Perhaps for an upcoming literary event or lecture, some samples of the speaker's work could be published in The Elm or pasted up along with the posters announcing the time and place.

Janet Szabo

And while the mail is theoretically a great way to attract students' attention, five or six fluttering little white slips of paper in the mailbox usually end up in the wastebasket, or worse, on the mailroom floor. How about one

Yet another option would be for the College to bow to student taste, since a portion of our activities fee does help support the cultural events offered on campus For instance, toss in some rock concerts along with the violin and piano concertos. Other schools get rock groups - what's keeping Washington College from getting the Hooters to play here? If money is the problem, raise the activities fee, or, even better, substitute quantity for quality. A few really good big name concerts (classical and otherwise) during the year will fare better than many average ones

The students do have an obligation as well. It is our money which is being spent to bring these artists to campus, and the Concert and Lecture Series committees would certainly welcome student input. Student and College cooperation on this issue should improve the turnout at future lectures and concerts big sheet (the monthly calendar?) describing Janet Szabo is a senior biology major.

ISSUE: What should Washington College officials do to improve attendance at lectures and other cultural events?

Anne Johnson Senior Brewester, N.Y.

Freshman Federalsburg, MD

Sophomore Annapolis, MD "The administration should get "Maybe polling the student body to "I think they should offer prizes at speakers that the students have ex- see what kind of events we would the door. This is a very materialistic have any real influence on anything pressed an interest in. Teachers prefer would cause the numbers in society. As the great pharaoh Benstudents do outside of classes. If iamin T. Hinkle once said, "I'll buy

George Small Shadyside, MD

they want better attendance, they should get better speakers."

Jeff Hopkins Freshman Glenside, PA

"I really don't think W.C. officials "Choose stimulating lecturers to speak on current student interests.

who attended lectures directly related to their classes. Campus Voices should give extra credit to students attendance to rise."

by Susan H. Stobbart

Where Have All The Students Gone? It's eight o'clock on a Wednesday night faces. This isn't even dress rehearsal, in fact, future; despite the colorful paper, often one Dining Hall (what is that microphone for,

that for a dollar "

Kerr Room talking softly to the visiting a lecture. Another professor glances nervously at her watch and back out the door again to check if anyone is coming. They decide to Wait a few more minutes before beginning, and nod to the handful of students already in the room to help set up some more chairs, just in case. In the meantime, the professors leave the guest to prepare his notes while they tonfer on what else might be happening on tampus that night. Perhaps a pool tournanent, a club meeting, or even a hall meeting has kept the crowds away. A few more audents straggle in, late. the performers take their place on the stage of awes theatre. When the lights come up, the Mayers will deliver their lines into a blue sea atd two professors are standing in the Sophie it's closing night for the production. During just doesn't stop to read them intermission in the Green Room, drama ma-Woodrow Wilson Fellow who is about to give jors hang their heads in disappointment at the small turnout, commenting that Saturday nights are bad if there's a frat party.

Why aren't more students showing up for lectures, performances, and readings, and

Mary Lee Barry

what should we do about the problem? That's what the Administration would like to know Although some students insist that they just never hear of the events on campus, insuffi-The house closes, the lights go down, and cient advertising does not appear to be a problem: sponsors hang announcements in every nook and cranny around - some turn up in places you didn't even know about. Perof empty seats, dotted with a few familiar haps these could be more eye-catching in the

If "getting word around" is a problem at this small school, then we are in trouble. Faculty should learn that the perfect thing to do at the beginning and end of each class period, when students' attention span is waning from the subject matter at hand is to announce upcoming events, and encourage students to go. Only when the topic of a lecture or event is particularly relevant to a course curriculum or class discussion, though, should students be required to attend. It should be know to majors in any field that they are expected to attend events sponsored by their department. Start an intellectual rumor mill, and let the word trickle down from "those who know" how interesting and worthwhile the speaker or performance will be the most talked about events always draw the biggest crowd. Announcements should also posters, mailers, and events on campus (could this be possible?), then Administration should consider spending money to bring more famous, interesting people on campus, albeit less frequently. There was no shortage of turnout when Toni Morrison or Kate Rand Lloyd came to campus. Conflicts in scheduling would be greatly reduced if numerous events on campus were spaced farther apart.

If students are inundated by too many

Your tuition contributes as much to the special events on campus as it does to your classes and professors, so lectures and other cultural experiences should be viewed as cocurricular rather than extra-curricular activities. Maybe then the Sophie Kerr Room would be full and people would once again have to make reservations to be guaranteed a seat in Tawes theater. Mary Lee Barry is a be made during lunch and dinner hours in the sophomore planning to major in English.

Conservationist To Discuss Wildlife Protection The protection of world discuss the results of the Amazor

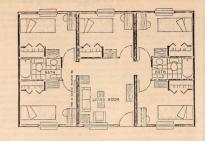

wildlife will be the topic of the research. William James Forum on Tuesday. February 16. Victor H. Bullen, Washington Coordinator of the World Wildlife Fund, will speak on "Protected Wildlife Areas: How Big is Big Enough?" The talk, accompanied by slides, begins at 7:30 p.m. in Hynson Lounge. The public is cordially invited to attend without charge

Bullen, a former Peace Corps conservationist in Paraguay, is currently participating in a project in the Amazon to determine how large a protected wildlife area must be in order to be a self-sufficient ecosystem. The project has global implications as human population centers crowd out wildlife areas around the world. The speaker will Spanish on conservation projects.

A native of Delaware, Bullen holds a bachelor of science degree from the University of Idaho and a master of science in natural resources from the University of Michigan. After working on a number of conservation projects in Idaho, he spent three years as a Peace Corps volunteer in Paraguay, supervising the Cerro Cora National

In addition to his involve ment in the Amazon project in Brazil, Bullen serves the World Wildlife Fund as Project Officer for the Southern Cone countries of Latin America (Argentina, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay), supervising all WWF projects in the region He is the author of several articles in

4 CARDINAL This floor plan is under consideration by the College for proposed modular housing. Story on page evening. Many of the comments I received were quite favorable. Hats off to the cooks who prepared the meal. They did a SUPER job!!

Mom's Cookie Jar

Wednesday, February 17th, the W.C.D.S. and J.P. Brokerage & Associates will put on a Food Show. This event is always well received Tuesday, February 23rd and we hope this show will be no exception. Please feel free to give the W.C.D.S. managers feedback on the items featured at the show. It's the only way we know what you liked or disliked.

Don't forget, the W.C.D.S. is accepting applications for summer employment. The deadline for getting in applications is March 11th. To pick up an application or get more information, contact Sharon Crew or Jeff DeMoss

On Thursday, February 25th, W.C.D.S. will feature "DINNER WITH AN R.D." Donna Smith, registered dietician, at Kent & Queen Anne's Hospital,

Hope you all enjoyed the will be on hand to meet with Mardi Gras dinner last Wednesday students interested in eating disorders, diet problems or to answer questions regarding nutrition. This will be a dinner meeting in Hynson Lounge, beginning at 5:00 P.M.. Students interested in making reservations must contact Sharon Crew by

> The Dining Services hopes many of you will take advantage of this excellent opportunity to meet with Ms. Smith. We are also planning to have a "Topic You Would Like Addressed" box set up at the Number's Lady's table, beginning Wednesday, February 17th Students are encouraged to submit topics of interest that they would like discussed at this meeting.

> Now that the the Dining Hall renovations are complete, plans are in progress to a dedication dinner on Wednesday, February 24th. Until then

Students Recognized ForAchievements

A program to recognize students who have performed tasks or acomplishments "above and beyond the call of duty" has been proposed by Dean Edward Maxcy, Associate Dean of Student Affairs to the faculty's Student Affairs Committee According to a memo from

Maxcy to the committee, the award would "recognize members of the student body who, above and beyond the perimeters of expectation, make a significant contibution to the improvement of life on campus or within the larger community in response to an individual act or event to a student or group of students who may be nominated by a peer, instuctor, or other acquaintance. The nomination should be in the form of a letter to the Dean of Students which will be presented to the faculty's Student Affairs Committee. Maxcy felt that such an award was necessary because although there are many means of recognition for academic and athletic acomplishments, this would allow other meritorious contributions to be recognized

Hynson To Match Funds President Cater announced:

completion of a Christm The award would be presented Scholarship drive which is expect to yield over $550,000. Since ni December there has been an a going drive to meet a $250.00 scholarship challenge by & Hodson Trust Fund. Cater saidth he expects the goal of $250,000 be exceeded by $50,000 in gifts and endowments

> In response, the Hodson Trut Fund agreed to match the fin $250,000. In addition, Cate announced a $250,000 gift from the Penn Trust to be used for furnishin the Alonzo Decker Science Win expected to be completed next ye

Corsages and Boutonnieres

Birthday Ball

15% off to students with this ad

and ID

Elburns and GREENHOUSES

Corsages in Roses, Mixed Spring, Orchid and Carnation ORDER EARLY!

"A trip to Elburn's is worth it for their low prices and high quality

778-2200

Stam

215 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 778-3030

- * Greeting Cards
- Cosmetics
- Russell Stover
- Soda Fountain

Candy

BIRTHDAY BALL Saturday, February 20,1988

"SPEND AN EVENING AT MT. VERNON" with

Junior Cline and the Recliners

Join us at the C-House afterwards for donuts, coffee,etc. Tickets available at the Student Affairs Office for $18.00 a couple and $9:00 a person

continued from page 2

ment for the magnitude of such felonies as check forgery. A federal crime is a federal crime regardless of where you are or what campus you choose to help shelter you from adequate punishment. Frealize that Haltom is not defending these crimes, but his attack on Albert and the collective "haloes" of the people he mentions in his letter is certainly unnecessary for someone who does not believe in meddling in other people's affairs.

Sincerely Kathleen B. McGuigan

SCC Does Not Meddle

To The Editor:

My usual response to a "letter to the editor" with which I disagree is to ignore it. I don't believe the editorial page is the proper forum for settling personal gripes. However, a letter from Mr. Kenny Haltom in last week's issue put forth an opinion which frightens me, and I feel it necessary to enumerate the is an all too common one. He makes

Dreams, and Cynthia Saunders, of Queen Anne's County's Department of Social Services. The public brary, free of charge.

Letters To The Editor

Mr. Haltom's first charge is that the Student Conduct Council and the Conduct Screening Board "seek out incidents." As a former member of the CSB, I can assure anyone giving credence to Mr Haltom's accusation that none of the members of the board, including Miss Rachel Smith, ever sought out spond immediately to every alarm cases, or derived any pleasure from a heavy case load. I am unsure from where Mr. Haltom derives his data that the SCC and CSB rely upon "word of mouth and rumors" to bring cases to trial, but in checking over my files from the CSB last semester, I found that the vast majority of cases were accompanied by a signed confession from the accused. Next, Mr. Haltom moved into what I found to be an offensively personal attack on Mr. J.P. Albert He refers to the fire alarm and check forgery fiascos." I think a better word might have been "felonies." This brings me to my fears. The attitude Mr. Haltom assumes, I feel, the insinuation that the judicial sys-Cold Weather tem is "meddling" in other peoples affairs. But when someone violates, and quite flagrantly, the rights or property of others, it becomes everyone's affair. For example, To The Editor: each of our lives has been endangered by the frequent fire alarms. The fire department does not re-now due to these "senseless" pranks, and if there ever is a fire. more property, and possibly personal injury, will pay the price Attending school here is a privilege, not a right, and this school will never be free of the gross apathy to the rights of others if they keep giving offenders second, third, fourth, and fifth chances

I would like to close this letter the way Mr. Haltom closed his: with advice for dealing in the real world, where there is no Screening Board, only an American government which puts people in jail for forging checks and pulling false alarms.

Sincerely,

Ken Winkler

NEWS BRIEFS wife in a white-collar home can be-

Spouse Abuse Talk "Shattered Dreams: Surviving come mired in a pattern of abuse for Spouse Abuse" will be the topic of a several years, and why it requires discussion on Wednesday, Februsuch extraordinary courage to break ary 17, at 8:00 p.m. Sponsored the pattern and begin again. jointly by the College's Sociology Cynthia Saunders works with Department and the Lecture Series, physically and emotionally battered spouses in Queen Anne's County. the discussion will be led by Charlotte Fedders, author of Shattered

Stock Game

Team registrations for this semester's sick market simulation is invited to attend the lecture, in the game are due today by 4:00 p.m. Sophie Kerr Room of Miller Li-Sponsored by the Investment Club and the Washington College Charlotte Fedders' plight as an Center for Economic Education, the abused wife became public in 1985. ten week game will begin next Friafter 17 years of marriage to a politiday and end April 29. Individual or cally powerful man, the chief engroups of two or more use $100,000 ment officer at the Securities in computer money to simulate tradand Exchange Commission, John ing stocks listed on the New York Fedders. Her novel tells an intimate and American Stock Exchanges. and shocking story of how a loving

Weekly printouts show the value of each team's portfolio, with brokerage fees subtracted. Winners receive cash prizes at the game's conclusion. Further instructions are available

The $10 per person registration fee and forms should be turned in to Dawn Baker on the second floor of Spanish House. Checks should be payable to WCCEE

Library Vans

Miller Library has resumed its service of providing free transporta tion to nearby libraries with a new facet - customized trips. Students and faculty can arrange a group trip to the library of their choice, and Miller Library will pay for transportation using the College vans.

The next trip is Sat. Feb. 27. Call Jeff Chaffin, Director of Readers' Services (ext. 391), to reserve a Fitness Can

Be Fatal

Jock column, which while putting forth some very useful and relevant information on cold weather fitness tends to deemphasize the very real dangers of cold injuries to the Pulmonary system.

While it is matter of fact that one's lungs do not freeze, it is anatomically higher up that the real concern lay. It has been noted that cardio-Pulmonary function improves in colder ambient air, that is, to a certain extent.

The danger is Trachael/Broncho spasm which is very similar to the process of an acute asthma episode - which is a medical emer-In reference to the recent Dr. gency. From experience I know of two such deaths attributed to this Sadly, one was a physician. Both were avid runners. It has been found that wearing a simple device like a surgeon's mask sufficiently preheats inhaled air to a less than traumatic level, and thereby makes winter running considerably safer - besides just "feeling better '

> W.P. Jones '88 History

Teams Sought for Bowl-A-Thon

Sisters network on the Upper Shore may still participate by bringing is recruiting bowling teams for its their pledge sheet to the lanes that most important yearly fundraiser day and they will be assigned to a scheduled for March.

Bowl For Kids' Sake is an annual Bowl-A-Thon where at Queen Anne's Bowling Centre, pledges are collected from sponsors. A few cents are pledged for each pin knocked down during a single game, to benefit children of the Eastern Shore who are in the Big Brothers/Big Sisters Program.

This year's bowl-a-thon will take place on Sunday, March 27, at the Queen Anne's Bowling Centre, from 10 to 4. In Talbot County, a bowl-a-thon will be held on March 13, at Chesapeake Bowl 2000.

The bowl-a-thon goal this bowl year is $41,000. The proceeds go to support the operation and programs of Big Brothers/Big Sisters in the Upper Shore area. The organization has been in operation for the past eight decades, helping children from single parent families meet the challenges of growing up.

Anyone may participate. Teams are limited to five members.

The local Big Brothers/Big Individuals who are not on a team

Pledge sheets may be picked up Kent County Parks and Recreation Office, or the Big Brothers/Big Sisters office.

For those who want to bowl, everything is free. Big Brothers/Big Sisters is paying for the use of the bowling lanes, while the bowling center is providing the shoe rental The only obligation each bowler has is to have a pledge sheet with people or organizations sponsoring them. The sponsor sheet is the ticket to

The top money raiser in the adult category will receive $500. Second place winner will receive a color TV and third an AM-FM cassette radio

For additional information contact the following: Debbie Russell, 822-7708; Harry Pisapia, 648-5395; or Big Brothers/Big Sisters at 822-7095

Anthony's Flowers and Landscaping

> Full line of Corsages for The Birthday Ball

10% discount to all Washington College Students on orders placed by February 20

778-2525

located on Rt. 213 - 2/10 South of bridge

Need a Corsage or Boutonniere for the Dance? come to

LIBBY'S FLORIST

Conveniently located across from the College 509 Washington Avenue 778-1220

C-Town liquors 8 Deli

FEATURING: HOMEMADE HOT SOUPS

511 WASHINGTON AVE CHESTERTOWN, MD 91690

778-2988

Love Ick! Poo! and Other Valentine Sentiments

by Kelly Lamoree

"Me miss you "Me miss you too!!" The young man made a puppy dog face and snuggled close to his girlfriend. who also made a sick-looking face and snuggled closer to him. They giggled for a couple of minutes exchanged dialogue unprintable in this publication (for its very inanity) and continued on their way, probably unaware of the havoc they had caused in the form of nausea that rumbles in the viewer's stomach. Kissy nioses were heard as they walked down the hall and out of

This charming scenario did not take place in a terrible movie shown in a basement somewhere. nor is it an exernt from an excreble novel-in-progress. It takes place every single day, in some form or another, with various variations the possibility of losing not only their lunchs but their minds? Yes, there can. There are so many weird and obnoxious things that those crazed beings known as "those in love"- what a cuphemism! - do that an analysis is in order.

We all know that love chemical reaction produced in the brain, for the most part-makes people act talk dress eat think and in general live in ways any sane person would scoff at. I once read a statement that "the wise want love, and those who love want wisdom." How true that is; no matter how many times one has been burnt by Cupid's branding iron (forget all of that archery nonsense) there is always the temptation to go back for more. Once caught in that web of doom called love, you're history. Dull eyes sparkle, an ordinary gait so earnestly, subjecting passer-by to listen to his 'heart', and come run ning, give up, or be convinced that one feels that way. This process is known as courtship: chasing after someone, being after them, in love with, crazy for, et cetera.

Behavior is very easy to misconstrue in this touchy little stage. One isn't sure if party B is sending clear signals or if you're reading things into simple actions and statements. Minute analyses of every phoneme uttered begin to occur, ("where did you say you saw him last night? In Miss D's? what did he get?.. Was that a sandwich, or a sub?"). Information is gathered about one's love interest. One throws oneself into the path of one's love interest, ("Oh, I just happened to be sitting outside of the gym. watching traffic for a business project. It's really not that cold. Twelve degrees in the wintertime isn't that

Sometimes the relationship is that annoying adversarial type in language all to their own. Mor which the two prospective lovebirds fight all the time, to the point where friends mutter "Either they kill each other soon or I will ' They fight over the color of the sky, continue. They coo, floating on the where to go, whose friends are nicer; actually, anything so long as it is trivial. It's extremely annoying to all parties especially to the two most involved because often they don't exactly know why they are fighting; they just do. All the strategies in the world will be useless unless you, at some point, make it clear that you want them for your heart's very own. It is They are never seen apart, and know possible that they will not know, especially if you are very very nonchalant (=cool, chewy in some circles); springing the awesome and expecting an instant repsonse will not work in most cases. For example: "What! You mean that you didn't realize that I was pursuing you of you? Good god, woman, telling the truth. You had to have known. Come on. I came over almost every three days. I don't do that for everyone.

"What are you talking about," your intended paramour than realizing that someone has go on like this. been earnestly courting you and you were totally unawa. of it. Then you must wonder why this was so, but often you don't have a chance because you're so confused.

You know what I'm talking about. You've been willfully blind. in for it, bad! People who are some You had to know. And I want an answer now." This is a doomed plan life miserable, cutting their lives, if in most instances. Unless your intended "significant other" has time to digest this startling piece of information, there's little chance that you will get an good response.

I'm not positive which stage is more annoying/ hysterical to see: the stage of pursuit or the stage of What Happens Afterward.

What Happens Afterward

The aftermath of declarations of interest are just as interesting as the prelude. Some couples experience extremely agreeable conversations

"What do you want to do today?"

"Whatever makes you "No. I want to do what makes you happy, please tell me ... After one or two times this particular type of conversation is amusing, but any more than that it becomes very repulsive.

other in the dining hall, carry books, and such like, has become such a carry each other over mud puddles, tie one another's shoes. Sometimes feel correct without some brust they feed each other food, go shop- with it. Our civilization is such ping together, are invited places as a with it, and the people entrapped in unit, anything— so long as it's it. The only thing we can do is to gri somewhat trivial.

They may even inventa link couples seem to fall into the dreads habit of making up little pet name for each other: pooh-bear, snugely buns, passion flower- I won't heights of the most fulsome clicks This phase can last anywhere from an hour to years

Others settle down rather calmly and adopt a bizarre routre that makes it seem like they are Fred and Wilma Flintstone, domesicated for years. If you missed the opening events, you would this that they had always been together everything about the other. It's more eerie than amusing Of course if the pursuit is my successful, ooh, even worse. There news upon your object of affections might still be feelings on both sides if so, it is rare that the two people can ignore each other forever

When Love Goes Wrong Often they fall into an adversarial relationship of some kind you can't be that cruel!... You're not flirting, teasing, mocking the other's new paramour. A good sign that this is the case is when someon tosses a drink in the other's fazz during lunch, or other such viter acts. People who are "in the know love this sort of thing in a way, and will say in shock/disbelief/ perhaps often bets are drawn as to how long horror. There are few shocks greater the unconsummated blissmates can

> Very often the person who feels the most wronged will be the most belligerent in the teasing or fighting, not surprisingly.Caution one disadvantage to dating a witis that if the loving goes sour, you are what clever can makes their "ex's" not their hearts, to shreds,

> It depends on the state of affairs before the whole love thing came into it. Good sports can be friends afterward-especially if they were friends before, but others find it difficult to get over a certain very annoying, memorable phrase that the other uttered; if the people didn't know each other before, they often forget about the whole thing Sometimes it is best that way; once romance enters the picture, "jet friends" is impossible. A good friendship down the drain. Some times a former or would-be be failed couple pretend they can be friends, but it just doesn't work finding themselves with lingering feelings of the petite amour. Almost as uncomfortable is person who refuses to admit that they can indeed be friends. The controversy goes on

Love, something invented by scientists and economists to self They fetch things for each greeting cards, candy, painkillers status symobol that no one would our collective teeth and deal withit

risy -Valentine's Day- approaching, the scene seems more and and more prevalent, intensify- ceptible to illusion- seeing things ing as the days draw closer to that as they are not. Very often after the Day of Bleeding Hearts.

to by the above appellations because tions they had about their darling it seems really weird that we should and cherishes them much as a jaded take one day out of 365 to make a dilettante cherishes his long past special point to tell someone how one feels about them; to treat Snugglebuns with the utmost care and is at its root not so bad, but it shouldn't be so contrived. What is so special about a day when everyone else is doing the same thing that Christmas, New Year's and the Fourth of July are similar in nature little more intimate, unless you're is what causes a lot of trouble into that sort of group thing. What's sweet to your sweetheard, then one hormones. day won't help much.

per of grace. Nietzsche said love is the state in which man is more susmasks are off, so to speak, one Valentines' Day is referred remembers the initial misconcepinnocence in his lonely old age It begins somewhat innocently...

Research indicates that durardour. The idea of Valentine's Day ing the first five seconds of the first glance, one can tell if someone else is delectable prey. If so, in that five or ten seconds, one begins to flirt, often subconsciously. That qualiyou and you amour are doing? True, fier-subconsciously-can wreak havoc. You can flirt with someone. and sort of like them, but they might but Valentine's Day should be a not seem to respond. Not knowing "doubts are more cruel than the wrong with spontaneous affection? worst of truths," said Moliére. Anxi-If you need to be reminded to be ety reigns as absolutely as the Okay, but what happens

It's not so bad that when other party doesn't immedi-Valentine's Day happens, but can ately 'see' something? Hell, and all there be a more annoying sight than seven levels. The prospective parapeople talking in baby voices ever mour must wait for the beloved to factor"). The whole point of the exercise is to get your beloved's attention. You get sort of frantic and irrational Ways of attracting your

beloved's attention once you have established contact include haunting the beloved's room, inviting them anywhere the lover thinks they might want to go, bringing them small gifts, weird things like especially beautiful rocks or a magazine with the beloved's favorite tycoon on the cover

Then there is The Lookthe wide eyes-slightly unfocused, the untroubled "heaven is gazing at your face" expression, the slightly curved smile People sometimes mistake you for having taken some sort of mind-altering substance, and, in way, they are right. People try to hide it, but they can be caught- and oh isn't that so much fun! But when people insist that you are in love with someone, and you are but you're trying to hide it, well, it's enough to make you forget the whole thing. Teasing someone in love-theory and practice, would take up a whole other column.

Take Heart:

Valentines Can Be Found In Chestertown

by Michele Volansky

With Valentine's Day fast coaching (Sunday), one must and decide what special item to for that "significant other." If ing something is out of the quesdue to a lack of funds, then the ision of what to do that day ns over the befuddled lover. stertown offers many suggesof not only what to buy, but at to do on the day of love.

Flowers, especially roses by far the most popular item for ntine's Day. Males and fe les alike can appreciate a dozen es, carnations or a flowering wfive dollars for boxed and two dollars for an arrange-While this is somewhat high s are one of the most obvious s to say "I love you."

Camations, in red and white. sightly cheaper, ranging any re from ten to fifteen dollars a en, but they too can express love heir own way. Flowers by by on Route 213 offers a wide ty of design-your-own arenents and will arrange them in e cup covered with hearts for es ranging from ten to twenty-

Flowers by Libby also sells ns, which they will deliver, as dothe flowers. Heart balloons. tons with "Happy Valentine's and "I love you" emblazoned tiom are popular and are less ive than the roses or carnas. They are a good gift idea for end or roommate, rather than a friend or boyfriend.

Another idea for a ine's Day gift is a good book. rska Bookstore on High Street sts gardening books which is a the idea, as it will be a lasting. ing memory of Valentine's It also reflects the importance hals for this holiday. There are, ourse, the standard "love" romances such as Lady erley's Lover and poetry like lets by John Donne or peare. And, if so inclined. is The Joy of Sex.

Hearts, like flowers, are also apparent at P.J.'s Hallmark Kent Plaza. For the holiday, bark put out boxer shorts, teeand pillow cases, all bearing and things symbolic of te's Day. These three retail who has everything. Also person. arat Hallmark, along with the ands of serious and not-sogreeting cards, are the animals and teddy-bears, with a special Valentine's 4c Like Flower's by Libby, sells balloons for the holiday affect Cupid's presence in nn. As is the case with the the balloons are selling well te a popular idea for almost one.

Don't forget your parents cialized 8", 10" or 12" cakes for $6.75) from C-Town Liquors.

Stam's Drug Store on High Street set up a display of Valentine candy, ranging from elaborate heart boxes to foil covered marshmallow hearts on this day of sharing feelings: a variety of Hallmark's best selling spend, then a trip to Forney's Jewable to express your sentiments.

Street puts hearts on almost anything and if one is struggling for a heart pendants and lockets gift idea, this would be the ideal averaging about twenty-two dollars place to browse in. Gifts range from are popular for Valentine's Day. inexpensive key rings to expensive ornaments and vases and can be goblets, sold for twenty dollars a found for anyone on a Valentine's pair. These, in turn, can be used for list. Also special about Heart to the Birthday Ball. Gold, pearl, or Heart is that there is a price range diamond earnings are also sold and, for anyone and one is certain to occasionally, for the eternal romandiscover something special and tic, diamond rings. All have lasting 155 and are a good idea for the unique for a special and unique value for remembering a special

> Like Heart to Heart, McCrory's on High Street offers a wide variety of gifts, including boxed candy, candy hearts, cards and carnations. This store offers the "stocking stuffers" for Valentine's Day and suggests buying many small gifts and wrapping them in a gift box or bag. There is plenty at McCrory's to fill a box for a loved

If one has extra money to item - greeting cards - are avail- elers would be a wonderful place to spend it. For men, Forney's offers Heart to Heart on High watches, gold chains and bracelets for ten to fifty dollars. For women,

Also popular are crystal

Amity Bakery offers spe

Austr Babore

eklast S A.M.-11 A.M. Soups & Stradwiche Plaza, Chestertown 778-2228

C-Town also suggests Moet-Chandon ($21.00) for a quiet evening. The most popular champagnes for Valentine's Day are, however, White Zinfandel or Blush. which can cost as little as five dollars. However, while the cost is relatively cheap, there is a certain to be romance bottled in champagne shared by two. If one just cannot afford to buy anything, then perhaps a romantic walk for two at dusk through Chestertown or even Annapolis is a possible way to celebrate the day. Walking by the water arm in arm will make your significant other forget the absence of a gift.

Also popular for little cost is to make a candlelit meal for two. This, of course, can be as simple as ordering from Procolino's, combining sick trays from the dining hall, or, for the true gourmand, flammbé that burns from the depths of one's hotpot. This could be followed by a romantic movie.

If one's idea of cooking is a little more simplistic, heartshaped sugar cookies can be baked from scratch. Wrapped in a box decorated with hearts and tied with a red ribbon, this could be the ideal pres-

For lovers artistically inclined, wonderful valentines can be created from the simplest materials. Construction paper, glue and a crayon can be the key to a truly romantic expression

Another idea, though a little more offbeat, is to fill one's love's room or car with red balloons. Hide a clue, the first in a string of many ultimately leading to a treasure (you) in a place where he/she is certain to discover it, Since Valentine's Day is on a Sunday, you have all day to play this game

Whatever one decides upon Valentine's Day and will inscribe to buy or make for Valentine's Day. anything one requests on a cake or the most important requirement is to cupcake. This is a good way to end create the aura of love and mystique the day, perhaps along with a bottle associated with February 14th. of Freixant Champagne ($5.50- Also, don't forget to say "I love

Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30-9:00 Closed Sundays & Holidays

Seniors Liz Whelan, Anne Johnson, and Karen Hinson competed in their final home meet last Friday against Goucher, whom the Shorewomen beat for the first time ever.

Shore Swimmers Win Pair, Lefty Driesell Place Second in States To Speak Here

Next Week

special from "The Pilot" by Scott Bramble

Former University of Maryland basketball coach Charles "Lefty" Driesell will visit the Eastem Shore to speak with local youths on the fundamentals of the game of basketball. The program will take place in the Cain Gymasium and is scheduled to begin at approximately 5 p.m. on Wednesday, February 17, 1988. Admission is free

Hoopsters of all ages will get the opportunity to witness first hand some of the philosophies that have made Driesell second on the All-Time list of coaches for most victo-

on the basics of the game to players dropping her times in five events. at the Church League age, it remains a great chance for local high school and college players to gain knowledge from one of the game's greatest teachers

Neil Brayton, a Chestertown dentist and guard on Lefty's 1965 University of Maryland basketball team that finished 18-8 finalized the details of Driesell's visit.

When reached last Tuesday Driesell said he was looking forward to his trip to the Shore. "I'm always happy to help the kids out with some of the fundamentals, and just to talk to them

'I want to take the opportunity to help them as baskektball players and as people," said Drie women's swim team had a phenomenal past three meets by edging Goucher College 126-115 on Friday. February 5th, then capturing second place in the Division III Maryland State Championships and claiming one State Champion on Sunday, February 7th. The Shorewomen culminated their week downing Western Maryland, 66-29, on Tuesday, February 9th. The women now hold a 5-6 record, the most wins ever posted in the college's swim team history. The past week also feautured breaking school records and personal best times. Thirty-one personal bests were performed by the twelve-member team. Sophomore While Driesell plans to focus Dana Loy had her best meets ever This week has prepared us for the MAC Championships," stated coach Dennis Berry. "Although it is taxing to perform in this many meets n such a short time, I believe that this kind of performance will help us in our efforts at MAC's.

School records were broken in the 200 yard Medley relay (juniors Jenny Korten and Elizabeth Rexon, sophomore Katherine Finneson, and Freshman Samantha Streamer in 2:09.04), 400 yard Medley Relay (Korten, Streamer, Rexon, and Finneson in 4:58 83) and the 400 yard freestyle relay (Streamer, Finneson, and sophomores Vicky Carroll and Kathy Carlson in 4:12.70)

In individual events, senior Anne Johnson swam a 13:54.20 in

The Washington College the 1000 yard freestyle, Carroll broke her own school record by swimming a 6:05.42 in the 400 yard individual medley, while Streamer also broke her own record in the 200 yard buterfly with a time of 2:48.50. Rexon boasted two new record times in the 100 yard and 200 yard breaststroke, 1:22.89 and 2:56.58 respectively, which she held previ-

> The 1988 Shorewomen have now rewritten all but seven of the previous school records.

The highlight of the week was the Maryland State Championships held at Loyola University. Washington could not compete with the depth of St. Mary's College, but still captured second place in Division III. 762-439, Jenny Korten became the first State Champion in the college's swimming history with a :34.11 in the 50 yard backstroke.

"It is very satisfying to see the progress of the women throughout the season," expressed Berry. "They have proven themselves time and time again by showing their competitiveness against quality competition which is reflected by their hard work in practice."

"The swim team has come a long way for only being three years old," commented Athletic Director Geoff Miller. "We, as a department, are exceptionally pleased by their performance the past six days. The women, as well as the coaching staff, have put us ahead of schedule in terms of the development of the program."

OLD WHARF INN

Enjoy Waterfront Dining Located at the foot of Cannon Street

> Chestertown, Md. (301) 778-3566 Credit Cards Accepted

Need A Job?

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yachs and Country Club $4.00 an hour

778-6765

Shoremen Host Ursinus for MAC Bragging Rights

Tied for First After Crushing Haverfood

by Don Steele

ketball team is now poised for its game to put the Shoremen in se final run at the Middle Atlantic figures. Conference title Going into tomorrow's crucial

MAC game against Ursinus, the Shoremen stand 17-5 and are tied at the top of the MAC with Ursinus. Washington's only conference loss ie to Ureinus In last week's play the Shore-men went 2-1. Continuing their unbeaten streak at home, the W.C. netters beat Western Maryland 74-64 and trashed Haverford, 100-56. Strong inside play play by Tom Auvil, Andy Bauer, and Steve Brody pushed the team to victory over Western Maryland. The three led the team in scoring with 17, 15, and 14 points respectively. Bauer led the team in boards, gathering nine, Chris Jamke and Auvil added eight boards apiece. The Shoremen defense played well also, limiting Western Maryland 34% from the field while causing 18 turnovers. Away against York College, however, the Shoremen lost a nailbiter, 72-70. Bauer lad the Shoremen with 18 points. York shot 63% from three-point land, which killed the Shoremen Returning to friendly Chestertown, however, put Washington back on the winning track as they ravished Haverford, 100-56.

Tank Duckett sank run The Washington College bas- throws with 7 seconds laft in Chris Brandt played a sa game for the Shoremen, so nine. It was Brandt's crisp, unse passing, however, which may stand out. Brody led the Shore ers with 19, and Jamke adde with 8 rebounds. Auvil also h rebounds.

The next few days could n break the Shoremen's se Tomorrow, the Shoremen Ursinus in their final regularse home game

Currently Ursinus is tief Washington atop the Souther vision of the MAC, after la Hopkins defeated Ursinus eati the week in Baltimore Wednesday, the Sho travel to Chester, PA is Widener, a tough team to be their home court. College van leave at 5:30 PM for anyone ested in making the trip. A sig sheet is located in the lobbyo Cain Athletic Center. And finally, on Saturda

Shoremen visit Baltimore to the Ursinus-slayers, Johns Hop Wins in these games will clie Southeast conference of the for the Shoremen, and put # the MAC playoffs starting on ruary 25, in hopes of tanis NCAA Division III tourname

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY

HAPPY HOUR - DAILY (3 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILAL SCHEELER FIELD

778-1222

Colev Charlie

Audra Laura

Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists A & P Parking Lot Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Word Processing

Services-

reports, term papers,

etc.-

prompt, accurate,

reasonable.

Call Cathy

348-2126

Larrimore

Deli — Grocer Breakfast, Subs, Sand Dinner Platter South of Bridge, Ches 778-6022 Open 7 days

Foreign Car Speci Volkswagen and Im Service & Repair 778-1098

Stop the World, I Want to Watch the Olympics

by Arian D. Ravanbakhsh

Every four years the world sets side its political problems and fouses on the world of sports. This year is one of those special years.

Right now the focus is on Calgary, Alberta for the start of the XV vinter Olympics. The opening eremonies take place on Saturday After that, the world's attention will ent be on its political leaders, but on

All of these athletes have ned with this sole event in mind. Their dedication and persistence the next two weeks.

Personally, I find the winter mes much more enjoyable to uch and follow than the summer mes. Every sport in the winter mes is one that is easy to underand and a joy to behold.

What we have before us is a o do his or her best. The situations

Chip Shots

Everyone has certain Olympic nories that embody this spirit orme, these memories come from winter games.

I remember the games in struck, Lake Placid, and Sarao. At each of those Olympiads letes outdid their greatest expecons to create memories which Illive forever

In Insbruck, 1976, Austrian it Franz Klammer came from where, surpassing all of the top whill skiers in the world to win e gold medal

The story of dedication is found one begins to look at the its surrounding the victory. My Klammer was a last-second acement for an injured Austrian er. He was not considerd to be on place finish... "if they get lucky." same level as the rest of the rid's skiers in the competition Austrian Olympic team almost not pick him for the vacant spot the team. And once they did se-Klammer, the Austrian coach Franz Klammer vowed to himto do better than anyone exled. With the added incentive of g the Olymics in his native When he reached the m, he had surprised everyone thadynamic run that earned him draw. d medal. And even beyond the dal Klammer's victory assured place in Olympic lore. Four years later, the world was for another hero. Nestled in the middle of the adacks lies Lake Placid, ansmall town taking on the world is athletes. The most outstand-Olympic performance ever in records by capturing five gold medals. Heiden is the only athlete in the history of the world who can claim

Though he was the favorite to win a least a couple of golds at Lake Placid, no one who claimed themselves as an expert believed that Heiden would dominate the events in the way that he did. He simply won every event that he could have entered in the speed-skating compe-

The Olympic speed-skating ill get rewarded during the course competition is divided into five races, each of varying distances. One is a short run of 500 meters, while another race is a grueling 10,000 meter event. These distances require a different style of skating in order to compete well in

Eric Heiden won these events lection of athletes, each striving and won them by large margins. He showed all of the physical training and skill required to dominate every speed-skating event the Olympics offered him. His performance was incredible. Heiden is the individual who shined the brightest in Lake

> But wait. I also seem to recall that in those same Lake Placid games a team shook the world.

States Ice Hockey team. They turned critics into believers during the two-week span in which their miracle was at work.

Ask anybody what they remember most vividly about the XIII Winter Olympics in Lake Placid, and they will tell you all about the exploits of the hockey team

The team had worked together for nearly two years prior to the games, yet a mere ten days before the games began it was destroyed by the Soviet Team, 10-3, at Madison Square Garden. Many people said that the Americans were overworked and underachievers. And most experts predicted maybe a fifth

But the team believed. Maybe they wouldn't earn the gold, they thought, but they could at least suprise a lot of people by winning a medal

The first surprise was a 2-2 tie cod him near the bottom of the against the Swedes, who were expected to fight the Soviet juggernaut for the gold

Two nights later, the Americans went out and demolished the Czechoslovakian team, 7-3. Those Klammer attacked the teams were supposed to compete for medals and they were the toughest teams in the American half of the > Three relatively easy wins later, the United States found itself two games away from the gold

The first test was the toughest. The Americans faced off against the most powerful hockey team in the world, the Soviet Union. Team Captain Mike Eruzione's wrist shot with ten minutes left in the game's Oympiad was achieved there. final period was the difference.

On nationwide television, Al Heiden rewrote world and Olympic Michaels proclaimed "Do you believe in miracles...YES!!" United States hockey team did what no other nation in the world had done since 1968: they beat the Soviet Union in an Olympic ice hockey game. Of course, the Americans had one more game to play. But by now the games were a fairy tale which they were not going to let slip away. Two days later, on the last day of the games, their fairy tale ended happily ever after, with the gold medal.

> An easy victory over a power ful team from Finland provided the ending to the script that nobody could have written two weeks prior to the Lake Placid games. The Olympic spirit has never been quite as alive as it was that Sunday after noon in the tiny town of Lake Placid. New York

And now we turn our attention to Calgary for this year's Olympic games and have to wonder what memories are awaiting us. Will Debi Thomas win her gold medal? How will the US and Canadian hockey teams fair? What about American figure skater Brian Boitano? Will Switzerland's Pirmin Zurbriggen sweep the skiing

The answer to these questions That team was the United will appear in two weeks. Then, we will own a new set of olympic memories that will last a lifetime. And maybe we'll have witnessed a

ew more miracles

The Shorewomen lacrosse corps are busy at work across the train tracks, preparing for their opener in mid-March

Sports Schedule, Baskethall

Saturday, February 13 vs. Ursinus, Cain Athletic Center, 7:30 pm Wednesday, February 17 at Widener, 7:30 pm Saturday, February 20 at Johns Hopkins, 8:00 pm Thursday, February 25 MAC Playoff Saturday, February 27, MAC Playoff

Specialists in men's formal, women's evening and designer bridal tashions

1328 G Street, N.W.

Univ. Blvd. at Viers Mill Iverson Mall Annapolis Road, Landover

1515 Rockville Pike Laurel Centre

Annapolis Mall

Valentine's Day Grams Auf Wiederschen, Dave

Buffy, Julianne, Muppet and even "The man in yellow chords. Thanks for all your Help. Happy Valentines Day! From: E. (by the way I wasn't adopted and I'm not a

D. darling, In by 4, up at 6, close the window, the sick tray is coming, did you say "exercise"?, JELLO RULES, Do you think he enjoyed the concert? Listen to this letter. I'm freeceaking out! Love 'ya, Hey Big Bird- Happy Valentine's Day from Little Bird!

Your "roommate"

To The Walking Dolls, Thanks for Saturday night. Next time let's use

Passionately yours, The Haloes To Heidi Widrick. We Love and Miss You! Love- The 6 a.m. Gang To the Guys in 219 Kent-You're the Greatest!!!

Hey, Guys in Kent 219, I beg to Marcus-Have a Happy Valentine's V.D. Anyway!

Pete and Mark Happy Valentines The Crossword Champions of the World salute you! One down. "Eros inspires this" Heather

E., Jen, Elizabeth, Hey Sexies! Lové

. .my fellow New Englander. May all your hard work pay off. Happy Valentines Day to my new big brother. Love you Jenny

To all the fine, sexy babes who forced me to write this: You know who you are. - BJL P.S. You're all very witty, too.

Dave Puskar- Will you have my child? From ??

My Little Virgin- Happy Valentine's Day with all my love!!

Beth- I didn't throw no kid off no

Snuggle bumpkin, You're as sweet To Sherry-Thanks for being there Happy Valentines Day! Love, as pumpkin pie, You're the apple of for me. I will miss you next Monster my eye. Please hang my laundry out year. Love, Janice Hutchins to dry. -Swirly D.

Tamara, Happy Valentines Day! will miss you next year. Love, Jan-

Used Furniture For

Your College Needs Sofas, Chairs, End and Coffee Tables, Desks, Lamps

and Much More. Crowding's Store Rt. 297

Four Miles North of C-Town Worton, Md.

778-0389

Visa/Mastercard Accepted

Tisha- Happy Valentine's Day from your new friend at Washington College, Love you, Jenny valentine's day. Guess who

B, I really need you tonight, I WANT YOUR SEX, and baby, I want it bad! Pass the soap, choose your weapon and be my Valentine-I'm saving the green ones for you! I'm yours forever- so look out-here comes trouble. I Love You, S

Hey, Woodstock: What a long, strange trip it's been! ! yar down and still smiling! Here's to 1989-I love you, baby! -f.w.

Hey I Merca Fast! Love B

To all the Washington College Sweethearts, From the Snack Bar

Dear Julianne, Happy Valentine's Day! Love, Your Admirer in Phi differ! (Nothing Personal) Happy Day! I'm really glad we've become friends- Hope you have fun here! Love ya- Julianne

> S.H. I'd like to become lost in your blonde hair, for an eternity. D.S.

Dear Imran, Happy Valentine's Day and Happy Birthday. Love, Kitty

Jim, Thanks for all the great nights. You're the best thing from England I've ever had! Please don't bring the board next time. Love. The Mall

Matt, Happy Valentine's Day! You're a real sport! By the way, it was me (as if you didn't already

Happy Valentine's Day Whit! Good Luck with Crew

know). Love, Julianne

To G.I. Jane and the Campbells Soup boy- plastic water guns can be dangerous if not handled with care. So can serious relationships, so practice safe sex

To Sandy, You have a great year. I

Dear Chris: Happy Valentine's Love, Your Hero Day. I do not advocate the use of nuclear weapons except in the case of the smurfs!! Have a smurfy

Liz-Can I just tell you something?-Happy Valentine's Day! Love ya, Jenny P. LOVE ME, LOVE ME, Miss Usuka-Will you be my valen-LOVE ME AS ONLY YOU CAN! tine? Love?

Tank We will love and worship you FMIC for all etemity, yet we will never visit you because of where you live!!!!!!! Love, The Harem Happy V.D. to All the Girls at W.C. Paid for by P.V.B. & A.L.

Jam, Beware of people flipping off beds!! Good Luck in all your endeavors. You can do it! Love va. B.

Lucy. The first time I met you I knew you were very, very, special Happy Valentine's Day! Love, Fred Dear Libby, Fond memories of you!

The tall, dark guy in the dishroom! IT'S THAT TIME OF YEAR AGAIN WHEN WOMEN ALL OVER THE WORLD ARE SAY-ING THOSE THREE FAMOUS

All I wanted was a glass of wa-

Beth, One Awesome Redhead deserves another. . . Will you be my Julianne. Here's to a wonderful Birthday Ball evening! Matt

Aunt Michelle- I love you -Jesse

Geoffrey- P.P.? Mecca! Mecca! Just me and Ace, you're cool? Chaucer 3x- Happy V-Day!!!! Love, Erinn

Dear Irish-I didn't intend to confuse or hurt you. I still care about you; Please accept my apology. Have a

To My Hero- Hope your Valentine's Day is great. Just remember that sex is best when its 2 on

A V.D. reminder to my subservient being: Sex is best when it's two on

Em... We got no roses roomie, But we shouldn't be gloomy, Although now it's a pain, It's always darkes before the RAIN! Love you, Jenny

1. Love. Your Subservient Being

To Beth Speer-Would you please be my Valentine?!?!-#12

Petra, Happy Valentine's Day and many more to come Love va.

Mr. Cheese: You make my heart smile and every time you smile at me my smile grows. Thanks you for making me so happy. Love, Me

Chip- You looked incredibly, hot in that blue towel. We could hardly control ourselves! Love va- Anne and iulianne

Bullwinkle's Daughter- You are the best thing that ever happened to me. Mr. Cheese

Dave, Happy Valentine's Day to a 'hasically wonderful" boyfriend. You're the best part of my life and I hope it stays that way. All my love, WORDS ... MEN ARE PIGS!!!!!

M I Fan Club

Mary Brown- My favorite drinking buddy!! Be cool- "Party at Mary's!!" Happy V.D. Love, "Party at Denise always being there, and especially for being who you are! Happy Valentine's Day. Love-"Tres"

Chris and Nicky- Congratulations and thanks for such a wonderful weekend! Can't wait 'til B. Ball. Happy V.D. I Love You Both-

Pete- We miss you so much! The dining hall service just isn't the same without you! Come back soon!! Happy V.D. Love, Denise and Erin

To the three girls who so badly wanted my $1.00, Happy

Elizabeth. G.E.S.H. Teddybear- Thanks for always being there-you always cheermen when I'm upset and need a huz.

Love You-L. P.S. Thanks for pa ting up with me and my store moods

To all of the members of Alpha ( Omega- Happy Valentine's Day! Tizzy

Heather Peris- Come back!!! Is going crazy!!! Happy V.D.Lon

Jen- Happy Valentine's Da Roomie!!! You're the best!!!!In you bunches, Em C.J. Thanx! I guess I'll just ka

how to knit socks! or drink hearly Smile cause this Tal Beta deltales loves you! Min-Lou Magoo G.A. On this Valentine's Daylon you my growing love, undersus ing, worries, hardships, and se cesses (life guarantees us a few these by its very nature) for these of consciousness. H. H.N., Happy Valentine's Dayo treasured friend forever. H.W.

BABAK: I'm never alone who we're apart- I feel you by my sid Shake-Shake-Shake-Shake. heart you and love you. Los

Riley!! Happy V-Day Michael. The Elaine- I've liked you for so la I'd really like to get to knowy was waiting for you last weekee

> C.H.B. Would you be mine? or No, I'll make it easy for you decide!"I love you, Bear D.L.

Juan, Thanks for the support, for Mike Jenkens, You skating that pion, you! Next time opt note the tripple, let me know! Ha V.D. I love you; Nathan! Design MoJ-Sylvia?- Yes, Mickey. To Middle Nites. Do the Men And many Oversleeping. talks... Thanx 4-everything; Har Valentine's Day, friend!! Soon-the tape comes off!!!! va. Em

Erin- Thanks for being such aki roommate! Stay cool- Happy Love, Denise

Hey Buns!! Congratulations your 4.0... and you know what means, unless of course you'd to switch positions. Either way love to

To Porko, Wide-load, Big Ma Towson's Pride, Maternity and Ripper, Happy V.D! Fal Ma

#1 Denise, Be mine or pa TOAST, Love you Always, On

Dean, You're the sunshine that pels all my shadows. Hopeyou my Valentine for another year many more to come. Love 101

the granary
on the granary Dinner Features For

Washington's Birthday Ball Saturday, February 20th

2... Veal Victoria- Sauteed Lobster and veal Medallions Vegetable and Potato Included Only $21.95 Regular Menu Also Available

Foot of George St.

Georgetown, Maryland

Reservations Option 648-5176

Writers Reside for Weekend

ished writers to visit Wash-College...We would ask writers to identify a beginning whose work they have engod, either through direct inion, or in a more general advofishion; our basic requirement tiere has been something of a mentor relationship." the description of the project "Mentors and Apprentices," of the Writers in Residence

In Barth, the mentor, and his ice, Michael Martone, will is campus next week to presgries of talks and discussions

oln Barth, a Maryland-based has had several books pubsince 1956, among them The exploring the corruption of inno-events

Road, and The Sot-Weed Factor. which is considered by many to be his opus magnus. One review of the Powers, Alive and Dead in Indiana. book: "Set on Maryland's Eastern and At a Loss. In addition, he has Shore in the 17th century, this huge published his prose and short fiction is a boisterous and rowdy farce which parodies, among many things, the form of the conventional historical novel, with its convoluted American Review plot, extraordinary fidelity to its setting, and elevated rhetoric and Martone will give a reading in the wordplay. Coincidences, comic set Sophie Kerr Room at 8 p.m. The pieces, scatalogical humor, comples following day, Barth and Martone conspiracies, disguises, walk-ons by Great Men of History (usually at definitely ungreat moments in their lives) abound. Following the shape at 8 p.m., Barth will give a reading in of the wanderings of a classic hero. It examines the interpretation of lowed by a reception. The public is history and myth, with a subtheme

Michael Martone has written hree books since 1977: Return to in a variety of books. His articles have been printed in magazines such as Indiana Writes and North

On Thursday, February 18, will hold a conversation entitled "Authors and Mentors" in Hynson Lounge at 2:30 p.m. That evening Hynson Lounge, which will be folencouraged to attend all of these

Campus Calendar

Friday, February 12: The Washington College Concert Series QUINK, vocal ensemble- Gibson Fine Arts Center, 8p.m

Monday, February 15: President's Office and the Washington College Lecture Series-THE LIFE AND TIMES OF EDWARD AMBUSH: A NARRATIVE HIS-TORY OF A FREED SLAVE; Dr. James Horton, Associate Professor of History and American Civilization, The George Washington University-Hynson Lounge, 8:00p.m. The Film Series: SUMMER-Norman James Theater, 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, February 16: A RAISIN MARTONE IN THE SUN-Norman James Thea Friday, February 19: The O'Neill

Wednesday, February 17: The Soci ology Department and The Wash ington College Lecture Series SHATTERED DREAMS: SUR VIVING SPOUSE ABUSE; Ms. Charlotte Feders, Author, Shattered Dreams: Ms. Cynthia Saunders Department of Social Services Queen Anne's County- Dr. Lucille H. Sansing, moderator, Assistant Dean, Washington College - Sophie Kerr Room, 8:00 p.m.

Thursday, February 18: A RAISIN The O'Neill Literary House

WRITERS IN RESIDENCE JOHN BARTH AND MICHAEL Literary House

Summer time Blues

Summer is the latest in a long from herself or from life. But line of the inexpensive and critically uink has Quirky Vocalists praised films by the 66-year-old French director Eric Rohmer. The story revolves around Delphine, a Parisian secretary whose summer plans are in disarray when her girlfriend pulls out of their vacation at the last minute. Delphine's escapades are traced throughout the movie, from treks to beaches, to mountains, and to cities. Delphine is a seemingly pneumatic character who preaches vegedents free) and are available at the tarianism-"Lettuce is a friend"-

Newseek said of the film: "Rohmer takes us inside this young woman until we realize that she's suffering from true anguish of the heart. The French have a genius for poetry of the mundane: Rohmer converts a working girl's search for a vacation into a spiritual odyssey.

Summer will be shown at the Norman James Theater on Friday, February 12, Sunday, February 14, and Monday, February 15. All shows begin at 7:30. Admission is $1.00 for students and faculty, $2.00 satisfaction for all others.

by Ben Jacobs th vocal music ensemble rangements. will perform at Washington on February 12. Many have been impressed with cese of musical technique, ricularly their expressive they were fantastic. In addition, ne, Kees-Jan de Kooning, everybody." ed van Woerden, Paula de Corrie Pronk, has become roughout Europe for their my in three sections, occareligious in nature) from taissance, baroque music main, impressionist music from France, twentieth-century and heard on radio throughout the her one tour of the United music from the whole of Europe, world and several through Europe, folk songs, and close harmony ar-

Music department chairman Garry Clarke commented on the upen vocal technique, flu- group: "I listened to the tape they sent and I thought they came recommended very favorably and their program seems to group, composed of Harry have something that will appeal to Quink has been extremely successful in several prestigious music renditions of madrigals (a competitions throughout Europe including the Holland Festival and The Netherlands National Competition. They are also frequently seen on Dutch and German television ond side is "Everything But You," substantial in every important way and complex enough to make you think about its theme well after the song is ended. In it, the protagonist muses about how much she adores her lover, except for himself, the not liking them. Relationships and their concommittant intricacies are themes that Lisa and Wendy handle

the best, although there are exceptions. "The Life," for example, is combination of funk, jazz, or classithroat, nor are they sugared to make ently: Wendy's voice is more rich,

Indeed, most of the music is a Quink will be performing at the Tawes Theater, in Gibson Fine Arts Center, on Friday, February 12 at 8:00 pm. Tickets are $7.00 for adults (children under 18 and stubox office the evening of the con-

BAR MENU AVAILABLE Monday thru Wednesday

6 'till 10 Friday and Saturday 'till 11

and who finds little satisfaction JENTOWN

NIGHTLY HAPPY HOURS 4 - 6:30 Friday - 5:30 Free Hors D'oeuvres

Under New Management - College Students Welcome

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT

Friday, February 12 Outrageous Squids

$5 person, $8 couple

MONDAY $1.00 All Imports "Import Night"

TUESDAY $2.00 frozen margueritas

"Mexican Night"

Tequila $1.00 a shot Free Nachos at Bar

WEDNESDAY

Lucky Bingo Nite! Win Your Drinks! No Cover

THURSDAY Dee & The Upsetters

Motown $5 per person Favorites $8 per couple

FRIDAY Sol Knopf Returns

Front Bar front man for The Cutters $2 cover

Introducing in Feb. 25 cent Draft of Your Choice

9:00 - 10:30 on Band Nites in the Back

515 Washington St., Chestertown, MD 778-1984

inued from page 12 like glass; soprano sax is a tent of the song along with second side has a whole tone and sound to it. For ig, the tone is somewhat tire, and Lisa does some of classic case of loving someone and vicals, which is a complete from the first side where does all of the lead vocals. track has a harder edge to it, tof the whole side, and is advocates love as the pleasant enough but too long unless ost ills that ail one, but you're depressed enough to appretrally more to it than that, ta song abut dealing with people in difficult sitututes a while for this song cal sounds. The songs have mesthe listener, but then it sages that aren't forced down your rack following is "Song them palatable. Both Wendy and The hurt is there, the Lisa can sing well, though differunhealed, thee is a trace but not an unquench-It is sweet, and moving. uscy and confident than adrams is introduced in able in its beauty. The music is ad will stay for the dura- always well played, especially the a promising album for a new group.

something to sink your sense into, while Lisa's is similar to sliding along an icy cliff path, exhilarating terpect, but it works. The yet just on the edge of being unbearguitar in "Light." On the whole, it is

Wendy & Lisa's Royal Debut

by Kelly Lamoree The most common response to the mention of this group is "Oh, Prince's women," coupled with a disdainful remark that their music is probably a thinly disguised version of his music. While it is true Wendy One of the best examples, "Waterand Lisa have been professionally affiliated with Prince for many years, and it is often the case that members of Prince's coterie often ing, because like many of the songs do produce similar sounding music, of Lisa and Wendy, it is appealing, a fortune teller's tent: "Pick a cardy that is not the case here

This album is made up of surprisingly enjoyable and polished the album deal with a "time has donically chiding, almost indul-Those two words-especially the former-are used because in the past it was not incredibly obvious that Lisa Coleman and Wendy Melvoin had any talents The protagonist realizes that the compelling beat other than what we had seen them exhibit during their stint in the feeling, is over and can handle that, Revolution: keyboards and synth. while musing that "Love lost/ aland guitar, respectively. Each had to rise instead," almost bitterly endone occasional back-up vocals for Prince, but again, they didn't lead one to believe that they could produce music such as that on this The sounds are original, danceable, understandable and perhaps the biggest attraction for some is that there is little or no resemblance to any of Prince's music. One would not guess that Lisa and Wendy had spent almost ten and seven years, respectively, with him and his way of music the tone is one of hope against apathy; various struggles are described and fought. These struggles are generally won, and it is the method employed that hooks the listener. fall," was released right after the album's debut early this winter and did well in the Top 40. Not surprisstrong and sympathetic without being saccharine. Many songs on name your fate." The tone is sar passed" theme present in "Waterfall," but this particular song has something that makes it a standout. relationship, or at the least the love end, somewhat cynical perhaps, but The first side seems to have the most memorable songs on it, "Waterfall" being one of them, with full, rich sounds and matching vocals (by Wendy). It opens with "Honey-ways makes one one sad/ you seem vying the sangfroid of her former love. Metaphors like "Dry land/is just a love away" are more prevalent in this song than in others, but despite them, rises to a triumphant

The album is evenly paced, and moon Express," about trying to save something fading, "I get so lonely/when I think of you/I get the feeling/our love is never new." Like many of the songs on this album, this theme is treated in an initially bitter tone, but ends hopefully, while hooking the listener with rich. flowing sound.

"Sideshow" follows, a satirical view of the times in the metaphor of any card/ I'll guess your name/ I'll passed take heed/ for our love has gently sarcastic. This is another one of the great songs of the album, with verve and sass indicated through the rich vocal descriptions and strong.

> It is an excellent lead-in to "Waterfall," which is the richest, fullest song, at least on that side. Aside for the obvious literal connotations one may gleem from the song one also wonders if it isn't also referring to the time in the Spring of 1987 when Prince suddenly decided that the Revolution was over and dissolved the band. The parallels between the song's tale of disappointment and survival does fit the feelings that Wendy and Lisa probably had when Prince made that very unexpected announcement.

The same suspicion occurs upon hearing a song on the second ested will probably catch some of sweet ode to something definitely After "Waterfall," the lost but still around. Lines like "So changes. "Stay" is a much plaintive song, almost hope strange that no one stayed at the end its sadness, a jewel-like glin of the Parade," give one clues that melancholy that doesn't de there is more to this song than trislistener down; it is not over tesse d'amour. [Parade was the last album that the Revolution & Prince all The music is interesting did, the soundtrack to his less than ing almost, with good guitar "White" is an instru sucessful second movie. Wendy, piece that like many of the all Lisa and Prince still work profestracks has overtones of in sionally together, occasionally, though not here.] I won't bore nonclassical music intertwined more -dare I standard-m Prince afficiandos with further testiis a bit dark, but then shimr mony to the cause, but those intercontinued on page II

MENDYETT

Chestertown Movie Theater PLANES, TRAINS, & AUTOMOBILES

Hours: Frt. Sun 789p.v. Mon Trurs 746 p.m.

778-1575

Washington College Film Series Norman James Theater Friday * Sunday * Monday 7:30 p.m. $1 admission — students / faculty / staff

$2 - all others

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 18

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, February 19, 1988

Premeds Report

100% Acceptance Rate

by Tony Caligiuri

The committee, chaired by comendation from the College to

Math Committee Proposed

by Marie Ensor Earlier this week at the Academic Council meeting Dr. Al Briggs, on behalf of the Mathematics department, proposed a plan for a math workshop at Washington College. The purpose of this workshop is to provide assistance to students who have quantitative difficulty in any mathematics course. One of the motivating reasons for this workshop is the Pre-Calculus couse offered at Washington College. This workshop would be set up similar to the Writing Lab. All students enter the course on such different levels that it becomes difficult to teach sity plus students. The class is therefore, divided into four levels of advancement; each working at a diverse pace but headed towards the same goal. This means that the less advanced student will work twice as hard as the more advancement student to arrive at the same level. "It's not fair for those students to have to struggle and do all the work at once," commented

The math workshop would trable students in the lower advanced groups to excel more quickly with less trouble. The math Workshop would be set up to help student in all different areas of math: Calculus, Statistics, and Accounting.

Due to several factors involving funding, location, employees, other competing needs, and time a decision has not been discussed on the proposal. During the next Academic Council meeting in March the proposal will be further

Freshman Tom Andrews gives Mount Vernon a paint job in preparation Presiment form Annuewa gives mount vernon apaint point preparation of the formation of the Washington's birthday and benefits a scholarship fund. This year's this year all three students applying common among other colleges and theme is "An Evening at Mount Vernon."

McLaughlin, Schmoke Honored In Convocation David T. McLaughlin, Baltimore's newly-elected mayor, College in New Hampshire. newly-appointed Chairman of the also will speak at Convocation and Board of the Aspen Institute for will be presented with an honorary Humanistic Studies near Wye Mills,

Maryland, will deliver the keynote address at Washington's Birthday

Convocation on Saturday, February

20, at 2:00 p.m. in Tawes Theatre.

McLaughlin, president emeritus of Dartmouth College, will receive an honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

Kurt L. Schmoke,

Each year the college celebrates the anniversary of the First President's birthday with a convocation, formally opening the second half of the academic year, and a Birthday Ball on December 8, 1987.

McLaughlin is a graduate of Dartmouth College and its Amos Tuck School of Business, from which he holds an M.B.A. After service in the United States Air Force, he embarked on a business career with Champion Papers in 1957, over the next 13 years rising to president of the corporation's packaging company in Chicago.

In 1970, McLaughlin moved to Minnesota as president of The Toro Company, retiring from his post as Chairman in 1981 to accept the presidency of Dartmouth

During his six-year term as president o Dartmouth, McLaugh-Doctor of Laws degree. Schmoke, a lin was responsible for significant growth of the school's endowment native of Baltimore and former and led a campuswide building pro-State's Attorney, is that city's first gram that resulted in the Hood elected black mayor. He took office Museum of Art, three new residence halls, and the John W. Berry Sports

> McLaughlin initiated an enormous undertaking with the relocation of the Dartmouth Hitchcock Medical Center, and established the John Sloan Bickey endowment for international understanding. In 1985 he joined the board of Aspen Institute, a "thinktank" on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

Kurt L. Schmoke is the former State's Attorney for the City of torney for the City of Baltimore, and Baltimore. Between 1983 and 1987, Schmoke created a narcotics unit, a domestic violence unit, and a child abuse unit to deal more effectively with these social problems. He served on the Governor's Commission on Prison Overcrowding, the Maryland Criminal Justice from Western Maryland College

Washington College's one or more schools. According to recently formed premedical Verville, Demetri Zefefos , Harold Spanglerl, and Janet Szabo were accepted to medical schools "The committee serves an medical schools for the 1988 advising purpose from the freshman year on, but it becomes very important in the junior year with the students' applications," said

Verville. After the junior year, a advise premedical students, to student intending to apply to medical schools may be interviewed by the committee. Following the interview, the committee meets to decide whether to recomend or not recomend a professional school admission test, student in a letter to the medical and to help students prepare their school.

It was made clear that according to a handbook published Washington College does not offer premedical as an undergraduate major, yet any major is free to apply to medical school. The premedical committee provides guidance in course selections for a premedical M.D., is the most recent member to student of any major.

Verville pointed out that Verville said that although in although a premedical committee is to medical schools were accepted at universities.

Force to Reform the Insanity Defense, all activities designed to improve the operation of the criminal justice system.

Schmoke earned his bachelor of arts degree from Yale University, and as a Rhodes Scholar studied at Oxford University. He obtained his law degree from Harvard University in 1976, and began the practice of law with Piper and Marbury in Baltimore.

In 1977, President Jimmy Carter appointed Schmoke an Assistant Director of the White House Domestic Policy Staff. In 1978, Schmoke returned to Baltimore as an Assistant United States Attorney, later rejoining Piper and Marbury. In 1982, he was elected State's Atwas re-elected in November 1986.

Schmoke has long been active in a variety of civic and commu nity associations dealing with edu cation, health, the arts, and political issues. He holds honorary degrees Coordinating Council, and the Task and the University of Baltimore.

INSIDE:

| Letters To The Editor | p. 5 |
|-----------------------|------|
| quoughts on George    | n. S |
| Vietician To Vigit    | n 1  |
| "Um's Cookio Jan      | 770  |
| Vesegregating WC      | m 5  |
| 40 men Rackothall     | m 6  |
| Cunto                 | - 7  |
| Beckett One Acts      | р. 8 |
|                       |      |

The Good, The Bad And The Beverage Bar

If George Washington were around today, he might not just toss Washington College his fifty guineas and be on his way to chop down the nearest cherry tree. No, he just might give us a piece of his 18th century mind, pointing out the things that would make him proud of his namesake as well as those to make wish the place were named for King George III.

Our George would probably notice that a number of exceptional departments keep the College operating smoothly. The superb fundraising skills of the Development Office help to stave off the need for budgetary miracles of the loaves and fishes variety, while the Financial Aid Office, assisted by President Cater's Christmas campaign, enables many students to pull together the money for a private education. Academic computing here is a national model among small colleges; similarly, the public relations department has utilized their computer capabilities to produce an exemplary alumni publica-

But innovation is not limited to staff alone. Student clubs have held clothing and blanket drives for local needy families. The formation of "Students Against Senseless Tree Slaughter," which has since disbanded, proved that activism did not go out with lava lamps and peace signs

A virtual artistic renaissance is underway here in Chestertown. A new organization founded for the promotion of the arts has seen at least one performance at a regional theater, and innumerable independent publications flourish under the Writers' Union sponsorship Additionally, alum Betty Casey has generously offered free tickets to the Washington opera to any member of the College community.

But George would no doubt see weaknesses as well. Though Washington College prides itself on a low student-faculty ratio that allows much interaction between undergraduates and professors, instructors' salaries fall below those at similar institutions. Despite excellent instruction and such out-of-class opportunities as studentassisted research, the school remains, in some respects, mediocre. Phi Beta Kappa's rejection of the College last year stems in part from the fact that graduation requirements - particularly the number of D's permitted - are excessively easy.

Although the College has numerous well-intentioned benefactors, they seem committed to enhancing the institution's aesthetics rather than its academics. Perhaps more frequent and thorough visits would elicit new insights regarding the most pressing needs of the College, such as expansion of library holdings and updating of academic buildings, instead of new plants on the green or new tables in the dining hall

Ironically, while the art house, an area one would expect to be visually pleasing, suffers not from an overattention to appearance, but from outright neglect. Repairs made last semester helped conditions, but the very fact that the facility ever deteriorated to a state of exposed electrical wires and inadequate ventilation is inexcusable.

Of course, while the above is merely a list of speculations of what George might praise or condemn about W.C. today, one thing is certain: You can bet he'd be damned proud of the beverage bar.

Washington College Elm

| Editors             |                      |
|---------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief.    |                      |
| News Editor         | Tony Caligiuri       |
| Features Editor     | Jennifer M. Harrison |
| Sports Editor       | Bill Beekman         |
| Photography Editor  | Michele Balze        |
| Graphics Editor     | Todd Karr            |
| Manager             |                      |
| Managing Editor     | Cathy Jewell         |
| Advertising Manager | Erin Hodge-Williams  |
| Circulation Manager |                      |
|                     |                      |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the acad

Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chlef. Signed columns, commen-taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors taries, letters, editorials, and editorial carrisonar persental the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the view hold by the manther of the editorial staff.

All eletters to the editor are read with interest bud, due to apace initiations, the editors cannot always public very letter read van dome much the shortest. Those that are published as review, without editing for spelling, particulation or are published as review, without editing for spelling, particulation or would be yielded by dickoner of his name. Schedisch should include their parts and major. Esculy and staff members should include their publicus and departments. Intil tetters to 600 works or less and included by and evening better numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be department, the marked boars at the editorial affice or in the billing lift, or waited to 5 hz Elin, and the marked boars at the official field of the billing lift, or waited to 5 hz Elin, and the proportion of the letter is needed. Letters may be departed in the marked boars at the official field of the billing lift, or waited to 5 hz Elin, and the proportion of the letter is not the billing lift, or waited to 5 hz Elin, and the proportion of the letter is not the continued of the letter in the opinion of the letter is not the little lift. The letter is not the letter is not the letter is not the letter in the letter in the letter is not the letter in the letter is not the letter in the letter in the letter is not the letter in the letter in the letter in the letter is not the letter in the l publication in that week's issue.

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen An dormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Alcohol Policy Foolish. Dangerous

To The Editor:

I am puzzled by the new Coffee House alcohol policy. This policy is foolish and dangerous. It assumes that by denying students who are minors the privilege to drink alcoholic beverages, mainly beer and cause students circumventing the Commentary:

seek out an off-campus alternative. This assumption is foolish because it is commonly known that alcohol is, whether for good or bad, an integral part of adult and preadult life. This College purports to treat us as adults in every manner except where alcohol is concerned.

The policy is dangerous be-policy are very likely to drive home drunk. This endangers the lives of not drink at all or at least will not everyone on the road.

> I submit to you that it is far better to have a student walk home drunk than to put the same studentin the position where he or she drives drunk. Let us please review the problem realistically rather than idealistically.

Monte F. Bouriaily, IV

Wake To Reality, Donate To AIDS Charity

When will the president wake up to reality? He continues to purchase another unneeded nuclear weapon system of mass destruction the BI bomber at a final cost of more than $280 million dollars per plane. Meanwhile across the nation and the world people are dving in a ravaging aids epidemic. Surely by canceling the BI, S.D.I. and other unneeded nuclear weapon systems enough money would be freed to find cures for aids, most cancer and probably feed and shelter the homeless and still go a long way toward balancing the budget. The F.D.A. must wake up to reality also. While people die of aids here in America, other aids sufferers elsewhere are being saved stubbornly delays testing and approval of, not to mention making it illegal to manufacture, prescribe and possess them. The F.D.A. must wake up and cease its anti-humane aids policy immediately. The Supreme Court must wake up to reality also and recognize that the true marriage bond is the strong love and mutual sharing realtionships bond and not a piece of paper. It must recognize this and the need to grant nothing less than full, human, civil and economic rights and privileges, regardless of sexual preferences in such relationships. I urge everyone to wake up the president, Supreme Court, F.D.A. and Congress by sending them copies of this letter as with aids drugs which the F.D.A. a part of a chain letter to everyones friends and relatives so that they may do the same. Lets all do our part also and make a donation to an aids

> Leonard De Fazio 31 Elmwood Ave, Batravia, NY 14020

Send Letters To The Editor

care of Andrea Kehoe (campus mail) or place in letters box on the Elm affice door, Queen Anne Lounge

The SGA invites

all students interested in the future of the Sophomore Writing Seminar to attend the Senate meeting

> Monday the 22nd at 7:00 pm in the Coffeehouse

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM! nt income! Details, send self-addressed, stamped envelop WEST, Box 5877, Hillside, NJ

EMPLOYMENT HOMEMAKERS WANTED! TOP PAY! C.I. 121 24th Ave. N.W. Suite 222 Norman, Oklahoma 73069

HELP WANTED

YPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17, Clark, NJ 07066

'Nation's Father" Would Okay Frat Parties

on how George Washington would look at Washington College today, I have to admit that I was taken back. After all, I knew very little about Mr. Washington personally and I felt that it would be presumptuous of me to speak for him. Since I didn't feel comfortable with the assignment, but because I had made a commitment to do it, I was determined to learn what I could about Washington in order to do him and his views justice. Being a history major, research doesn't frighten me. In the course of my digging I uncovered a number of facts which surprised and shocked me, some of which are reported below The first thing I learned was that George Washington is dead. In fact, he has been dead for nearly 200 years. I need hardly tell you what kind of impact this would have on his perception of our school. The fact of the matter is, he probably couldn't care less about Washington College nowadays, even if it is named after him, and who could blame him?

suggested that I write the piece as if Washington were still alive. I said that was going to be tough because he would be celebrating his 256th birthday this week, so even if he went to the Birthday Ball he could hardly be expected to dance, especially if the band played a lot of fast songs. My friend just told me to do the best I could with it. No one gives you any help at this school

Well, I did some more research and I found out that Washington gave fifty guineas to the College. Some quick figuring showed that the amount he gave then, corrected for inflation, is roughly $12,000 of today's dollars, so I guess he'd have no trouble with the tuition he'd have to pay if he were a student here now. He probably wouldn't even balk at the proposed increases in the student activity fees, having married a rich widow.

I also discovered that, as a young man, he chopped down a cherry tree. I guess it's safe to say then that he'd approve of the current don't know what is.

I mentioned this problem to a friend, who policy in effect on the campus of cutting down as many trees as possible. Perhaps this policy has something to do with the fact that George Washington had wooden teeth. If so, I would recommend that the administration add a few courses in dentistry, or at the very least Wood Shop 101, to make this connection clearer

David H. Kellv

Further research showed that Washington once threw a silver dollar across the Potomac River. This is a tradition which the college supports whole-heartedly today. Why, just look at that mysterious brick wall. or better yet, my financial aid package. If giving me money isn't throwing it away, I

Pictorial evidence shows that George tended to stand up in rowboats. I therefo demand that in order to show solidarity with our college's namesake, Coach Chatellier begin making the cox'ns steer their races standing up. It's a matter of pride, dammit.

I also have reason to believe that Washington was the Commander in Chief of the Continental Army and that later he became President of the United States. Unfortunately, I was not able to get reliable information by press time as to whether these positions would qualify him for an office in the SGA or as captain of the lacrosse or basketball teams.

Finally, I unearthed the fact that George Washington was called "The Father of His Country." One can only assume from this that he actively participated in the aftermaths of more than one multi-keg frat party. I guess it just goes to show, the more things change, the more they stay the same.

David H. Kelly is a senior majoring in his-

ISSUE: What would George Washington think of Washington College today?

Tracy Meyer Hagerstown, Md. Junior He would probably be perplexed as to why people (pledges) continually ask his statue about his welfare.

Brent Hopkins Lewes, DE Sophomore I think that the Father of Our Country would demand a statue of the Great Pharaoh, Benjamin T. Hinkle, erected on the right hand side of his own statue. As the Great Pharaoh once said, "Copper ain't the only heavy metal."

Dr. Rosette Roat Chemistry Department

He would believe his 50 guineas were a wise investment

Dr. Robert Fallau History Department

I would hazard that Washington would be rather impressed with the College's many areas of new knowledge and wide variety of education. yet disappointed with the College's lack of emphasis on civic virtue, morality and Republican morality. He possessed a rather didactic view of education in that virtue would only flourish in the proper moral

Melissa Grim Baltimore, Md Sophomore

George would say that, to enhance the education of the student body, a computer should be given to each student at the expense of President Cater

by David Johnson

Campus Voices

George Would Give Fifty Guineas, No Opinion People I've talked to have been pretty they're the ones Washington met at the The truth is that if George Washington cation, not as an inflexible chore, resented by both students and faculty, mandatory, but for

nuch evenly split - either General Washingto would be appalled by the things that go on here, and demand his name back (no one knows what fifty guineas is worth now, but he'd probably want that, too), or he'd really dig it here, become an honorary brother of the KA's, then get smashed at the Birthday Ball and try to prove that "Father of Our Country" is not just an idle boast. The truth is, George Washington would never get close enough to this school to form any sort of opinion at all No visiting dignitary of his caliber ever does

George, in his role as plantation owner and country gentleman, would fit right in here on the Eastern Shore, and right into the endless stream of receptions planned for him. There would be one in the garden of Hynson-Ringgold House, with a select number of well-dressed, articulate students, representafive of the College community. Another would be at the Lit House, or in Hynson Lounge, after the General's lecture in the Suphie Kerr Room. We all know which audents usually attend lectures here -

Cater's that afternoon. And after he talks to a political science class the next morning, he has lunch "with the students," in Hynson Lounge. Any students sitting at his table were invited to do so, not as a random average of the student population, but as a bright, eager, genuinely interested in what the General has to say, but nevertheless "representative," section of the student body.

Chas. Foster

The only chance George would have to mingle with an uncontrolled population of students would be at the Birthday Ball, which he would inevitably attend (it being his 256th birthday and all). But this event is always so packed with unfamiliar, drunken alumni that he would probably receive little notice - just a few remarks about his resemblance to the plastic statue standing over by the band.

came back today he would be an old and wealthy celebrity, a precious commodity at a the most part remedial. small liberal arts college. And as such, he would be courted and coddled, and presented with a view of this school straight out of the College catalogue. He would be impressed with the low student-to-teacher ratio, but not bothered with the faculty's low salaries. He would be shown the breathtaking new dining hall, but not the cramped and inadequate (but repainted!) art house. The Sophomore Writing Seminar would be presented as an innova- Senior Chas. Foster is majoring in home tive new program on the cutting edge of edu- economics.

George Washington would not be allowed to form his own opinion of the only

College with permission to use his name. An opinion would be carefully formed for him. That is the nature of a private college, and it is an important part of the College president's job. Fifty silver guineas doesn't go far these days towards a $20,000 salad bar

The Elm reminds you not to drink and drive on Birthday Ball night.

Senior Holly Walbert adds her name to a Student Government Association petition calling for restructuring of the Sophomore Writing Seminar. Dorm senators obtained over 200 signatures this week, in preparation for Monday night's SGA meeting, which will center on discussion of the seminar. All students are invited to attend the meeting at 7:00 in the Coffee House.

Mom's Cookie Jar

Thought I'd change the format of my article this week. Besides,

"variety is the spice of life." There are a number of events the W.C.D.S. has scheduled in the next coming weeks that I would like you to be aware of. Once you have read all the articles in this issue, turn back to this article and cut it out. That way you will know what is going on at the Dining Hall.

W.C.D.S. UP-COMING

FER 23RD BIRTHDAY NIGHT

FEB. 24TH .... MAIN DINING ROOM DEDICATION RECEPTION & DINNER 4:30 - 6:45 P.M ENTERTAINMENT PROVIDED

AMY TIDBALL

AT THE PIANO

FEB. 25TH.....DINNER WITH THE R D registered dictician, Donna Smith dinner in Hynson Lounge

5:00 - 6:30 P.M. Dinner by reservation only Free to board students, $5.75 for off board students & guests Contact Mrs. Crew (ext. 347) to make your reservation

MARCH 4TH ... W.C. HEALTH & FITNESS FAIR 10:00 A.M. - 6:00 P.M. in STUDENT CENTER

(any one interested in helping with the Fair contact Mrs. Crew (ext. 347)

That's all for this week. See you same time, same place next week!

Limo Provided

Word Processing Servicesetc.-

reasonable. Call Cathy 348-2126

Dietician To Visit Dining Hall

On Wednesday February 24, 1988 the new improvements made to the Dining Hall over Christmas break will be officially dedicated Ceremonies will begin at 4:30 with an official ribbon cutting ceremony by President Douglass Cater.

Immediately following the ceremony there will be a reception in the Dining Hall. However, this reception will not interfere with student dining and dinner hours will be as normal. During the evening meal Amy Tidball will provide the entertainment, playing selected piano music for the enjoyment of diners.

On the following evening, Thursday February 25, the Dining Hall will host a dinner and discus sion by Nutritionist Donna Ann Smith. The dinner will begin at 5:00 and will run until 6:30, those students wishing to eat with Smith should contact Sharon Crew ext. guidelines required of the College 347 by February 23, for the necessary reservations

Starting Sunday a suggestion box will be posted in the Dining Hall. Students who are planning on attending the dinner are invited to drop off any ideas they have on possible topics of discussion. Smith feels that in this manner more personal eating problems may be discussed and at the same time anonymity may be maintained.

Another reason that she was invited to the College was in the hope of futher educating the student population on better nutrition and eating habits. This is not the first time that Smith has visited the College. She has been here on several other occasions to monitor the menus, and has found them well within the necessary nutrition

Alcohol

Committee

To Meet

our campus.

regularly.

Smith has an extensive bark round in nutrition. She has recieved degrees from both Loma Linds University and the University of Maryland

Her work has included develop. ing program materials for a USDa Food program and teaching classes at Kettering Medical Center regard ing the psychological aspects in volved with reducing weight. She presently employed as a Clinical Administrative Dietician with Kra and Queen Anne Hospital.

The dinner on Thursday is free for boarding students and the charge will be $7.50 for non-boarding sp. dents. Again, those students who are interested should contact Shara Crew in the Dining Hall by February 23 so that they can be sure of reservation.

The next meeting is scheduld for Wednesday, February 246, a 3:30 in the Student Center. An interested member of the Friday or from 8:00 to 9:00 p.m. on the evening of the Ball. The chauffered van will also be available from midnight to 1:00 a.m. in front of Cain Athletic Center Washington College community for those who choose not to drive. may attend The membership of the Tail Force includes designated student

(SGA, sorority/fraternity, Collin House), adminstration (Dears of Students, Directors of Security & Student Center, Health Service and Faculty The Alcohol Task Force will

The topics under consideration will include: Coffee House policy Wednesday to discuss alcohol and funds for social programming drug related issues which concern This body, which workshops on hosting large soci functions, campus programs in recommended the adoption of the adult children of alcoholics, a campus meeting of alcoholic current alcohol policy, has been in existence since 1981, although until anonymous, and other suppr recent years it has not always met groups.

The President and Visitors and Governors

Washington College

Request your Presence at

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

CONVOCATION

Honored Guests

David T. McLaughlin

Chairman of the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies

and

Kurt Schmoke

Mayor of Baltimore

2:00 p.m.

Saturday the Twentieth of February

In Brief:

Forney Recognized The Board of Visitors and

Governors of Washington College has formally recognized the contributions of Chestertown resident Robert L. Forney to the College's Concert Series, now in its Forney, a former teacher of resume monthly meetings next music at the college, a violinist, and a life-long lover of music, helped found the Concert Series in 1952, which each year brings criticallyacclaimed musicians to campus for the enjoyment of the College and community alike.

At its February 4th board meeting, College Trustees adopted a resolution which read as follows:

"Be it Resolved: that the Board of Visitors and Governors wishes to convey its gratitude to Mr. Robert L. Forney of Chestertown, Maryland, for his thiry-five years of service to the Washington Collegew Concert Series. His untiring efforts on behalf of the Concert Series program provide a shining example of that spirit of cooperation between the community and the College so vital to the continued success of Washington College."

For students attending the Birthday Ball, a driver will be available to pick up students at residences or restaurants between 9:00 p.m. and 10:00 p.m. on Saturday evening. For reservations call 778-6738, Wednesday through

Carge Is Covely

Downtown, Chestertown, Md 778-5343 Final Winter Clearance SALE 20% to 50% Off 14 1/2 to 52 'Open Mon.-Thurs.: 10-5 Fri: 10-7 Sat.: 10-5 reports, term papers, prompt, accurate,

Chestertown's Fight For Civil Rights

The words of Martin Luther King, ve a dream," are a symbol to the nation of the fight for black civil liberties. Rising from the tyranny of slavery, blacks were met with one obstacle after another. In the Chesignown of 1962, it was clear that the belief in separate but equal was no longer acceptable. Those in opposition became public with heir opinions, thus beginning the Freedom Rides and protest marches. Integration was proposed and slowly accepted by the commusity as part of the changing times

When the first black student enrolled at Washington College, it became "a little cosis in a segregated town," remembers Nathan Smith. Not long after Tommy Brown and adjusted to college life, Freedom Riders from Northern colleges like Brooklyn Col-

from students travelling from Swarthmore to Kabat and Christine Pabon, then students of the College, to join the rally.

Pabon remembers, "I had always campus. been upset, deeply upset about the segregation. I knew it existed in this community, but like most cautious people, I wondered about the nature of that particular movement. After the rally, a few friends and I met with the Freedom Riders from Swarthmore. We talked about where they were going, what they were doing, and what we could do in our own community to continue the work that they had begun... After talking to them, there was no question in my mind that this was one time in my life that was a moment for action New York State University, Yale and or a time to earn the title of an armchair

A.M.E. church where there was great support help with "I hope they kill you," says Kabat. He was saved by the owner of the house who the South. Interest and curiosity led Martin climbed to the roof of the house with a .22 gauge shotgun, and chased them away. Subsequently. Kahat was forced to move back to

> During one of the Saturday picketings, one man came equipped with a movie camera. He filmed Pabon, involved in her protests, and said to her "'Girly we're gonna get you. We're gonna rape you," Pabon recalls. "The most depressing thing of all was the unmitigated hatred that you felt when people shouted ugly things at you - the intensity of that hatred," she adds later.

These intimidating events led Pabon and Kabat to seek police protection. Police Chief Haddaway threw them out of his house with the words: "Protect you? Why I'll spit on you." He continued with advice: "If you put yourself in the cage with a lion, you're going to get mauled.

Haddaway was questioned by an Elm reporter about finding the identity of the destructors of student property. He replied "I have not done anything to find them. I intend to do nothing to find them. It happened up at the college, and if they want to find them, they can find them themselves. You can quote me on that. You can tell that to President Gibson." [The Elm, March 3, 1962].

The most violent act during the weeks of demonstations was the assault on the librarian. Kabat remembers him as a tiny. religious man, and is not positive that he was even involved in the demonstrations. Some men came behind him in a pickup truck and beat him up. The Elm, on March 3,1962 reports, "As one of the faculty members of Washington College was returning home from the demonstrations he was assaulted. Major injury to him was prevented by several students who quickly obtained the state po-

The trial of the perpetrators was held, one man was charged with assault, one with assault and battery. They were found guilty for taking the law into their own hands, fined and reprimanded. On Saturday, February 7, 1962, The Elm printed a letter from student Bill Hessom. Hessom argues against a letter sent generally to the College on February 7, 1962. He quotes from the letter: "The college neither encourages nor prohibits participation in sit-ins, petitions, etc. The College, however, does not condone violations of the law." Hessom countered this by bringing up the interpretation of the 14th Amendment in the Brown vs. Board of Education of Topeka case of 1954. Since the interpretation established the rights of each individual, the violation of these rights is a direct violation of the law. Hessom involved. A rally was held at the Bethel chief at that time responded to Kabat's call for claimed that the college was passively break ing the law

Like Kabat, Pabon was forced to move back on campus. Living in Crowe House (now the Alumni House) as a part of an Experimental Honors Program, Pabon was hand-picked with the other women in the house to live without a housemother. When her involvement with the picketing began to be dangerous, her housemates demanded that Pabon move back on campus. She refused. and when the residents met with school officials, they took the stand that she was not jeapordizing their safety. The women were given the choice, either all move back on campus, or all stay in Crowe House. The women returned to campus.

Later, Pabon was threatened with not graduating. As a student teacher in Centreville High School, Pabon's activities upset students and teachers alike. Students would hurl jeering hoots of "Freedom Rider" at her back as she passed in the halls. The teacher with whom she rode to school each day refused to pick her up. This culminated in the administration's demand that she desist all activity or lose her position. This would mean no graduation. In an effort to intimidate her. they offered Pabon a job at the black high school. When she jumped at the opportunity for such a great step at integration, they immediately backed off. They agreed to allow her to stay on at the high school if she would be more covert about her actions. Pabon found these terms easy to accept, as they had finished picketing.

When the demonstrations ceased, so did the violence. The movement continued with committee work. The former picketers went into the school systems to talk about the law, did tours of black housing, and talked to blacks in substandard housing in order to mobilize them

"I think that Kabat and I, on graduation day, left town with a deep sense of failure. I think we felt that we had stuck our necks out and ultimately not accomplished anything," Pabon says today. Fortunately, this remark was countered by a colleague who reminded her that their efforts had sown the seeds, and the town eventually began to move on to integration.

Progress has been made. Nathan Smith, a teacher of history during and after the time of the protests, has seen great change. He saw the first black student enroll at Washington College, and the integration of the community he lives in. A particuraly poignant moment in this history was the black student sponsored speaker Julian Boyd, a black political leader. Held in Tawes, Boyd addressed an integrated audience as the dozen students who arranged the lecture sat on the stage behind

"Protect you? Why I'll spit on you." He continued with advice: "If you put yourself in the cage with a lion, you're going to get mauled."

the first efforts to desegregate the town

The 150 Freedom Riders came to Chestertown on Saturday, February 3, 1962. movement Picketing throughout the town at restaurants. fieir afternoon culminated in violence at a restaurant called Bud's. Ordering the protestes from his property, Bud was supported by a great mob of drunken people who had mped out on his parking lot for the event. With little police protection, and the policy of turning the other cheek when provoked, the picketers were chased away by the angryepithets and attempts at assault.

In his editorial, on February 9, 1962, Elw Editor H. Allen Stanford wrote, "We can't help but wonder at the motives of a local nerchant who gives away intoxicants at a place where violence is expected, and at a time when geeting juiced to the gills is condutive to anything but sound judgement. Fighting fire with firewater adds up to little more han a rather low attempt to make a right out of two wrongs."

editor opposes the hasty, and often retrogressive, nature of freedom rides, raids or sit ins... carefully the depths to which some types of fined, and released. counter demonstrations can sink.

Swarthmore, visited Chestertown in one of liberal." Kabat recalls being stimulated by those students, and meeting with teachers at the college who were strong supporters of the > Meetings became regular after the rally. Picketing was planned for Saturdays, the goal being one of desegregation and eventually integration of the restaurants, movie theaters, hospitals and schools. Picketing became a dangerous occupation, as tempers of pro-segregationists flared.

"I wanted to get that red-haired son of a bitch for a hood ornament," Kabat remembers hearing before a local man came out of Bud Hubbard's restaurant and attempted to run him down with his car. Pabon recalls the statement as "I'd like to get that red headed bastard for my radiator cap." In any case, the man barely brushed Kabat who was third in line, but struck the black woman in front of him. The man would not have been arrested if he had not later taken a swing at a state trooper. At the trial the picketers were accused of provoking the violence. He continues his opinion with: "The assaulter's intentions were questioned by his own prosecutor: "How can you be sure he meant to hit you?" Kabat remembers being but we must urge the student body to consider asked. The man was found guilty in the court,

Following this incident, a group of Soon after this first march for free- people went to Kabat's apartment with ton, students from the college began to get torches, intending to burn it down. The police

Fin Fur Feather Inn

424 Bayside Ave. Rock Hall, Md. 639-7454

We Specialize in Fresh Seafood

Special for this week is Live Steamed Lobster Priced According to Weight and Daily Market

We also have a Prime Rib Special for $12.95

Shoremen Need Win To Clinch Playoffs

Shore Netters Trip Ursinus, Stand Alone Atop MAC ....

by Don Steele

The homecourt hardwood of a packed Cain Athletic Center was just what the Shoremen needed Saturday to defeat their Middle Atlantic Conference rival Ursinus. The win marked the Shoremen's twelth consucutive win at home, and propelled Washington College into first place in the MAC Southeast region.

Going into the game tied in the standings with Ursinus, the Shoremen knew that losing would hinder their chances of winning their division, as well as of even making the MAC playoffs. The top two teams in each division of the MAC make the conference play-

After winning 75-70, how ever, the Shoremen are in the driver's scat. They can clinch a playoff spot with wins against either Widener or John's Hopkins. Winning both ensures a first place finish and home advantage in the first MAC playoff game Thursday, February 25th. Both games will be tough

Teamwork was the key to the victory. Solid defense and patient offense helped the Shoremen ride over Ursinus in front of the partisan and very loud home crowd of 1500.

Chris Jamke "bulled" his way past the Grizzly Bears with a game high 20 points. Tim Keehan chipped in 12 points and Tom Auvil had 10 points. Steve Brody came off the bench late in the first half and provided some intensity as well as nine points. Tom Shivers led Ursinus with 20 points

On the boards Andy Bauer paced W.C. with ten. Jamke, Auvil and Keehan also had strong games on the boards with eight, six, and five, respectively. Defensively the Shoremen had a solid game. They limited Ursinus to shooting 38% from the field. W.C. shot 43 percent.

Two other important statistics are the ten steals and blocked shots that the netters tallied.

The win seemed in jeopardy at the outset, as Ursinus roled out to a five point lead early after the Shoremen scored the first basket of the game. With 10:31 left in the first half, however, Keehan hit a baseline jumper to give the Shoremen a 20-18 lead which they would never squander, W.C. led at halftime 38-

The home team stretched their lead to as many as twelve when Tank Duckett alertly followed up a Keehan stuff attempt. The closest that the Grizzly Bears got was four points with 1:38 left in the game, but pressure foul shooting from Matt Wilson snapped Ursinus' comeback and put the Shoremen alone at the row, they are guaranteed a playoff spot in the MAC. They may also win first place in the Southeast region, provided either Ursinus loses to Widener, or Ursinus wins and the Shoremen win the toin coss that determines the region winner in the case of a first-place tie. A first place finish means that the Shoremen open the playoffs at home, where

Shoremen Face a Muddled Playoff Picture ... only one team going to the MAC's.

If the Shoremen win tomor- they are undefeated this season. A second place finish, they must struggle on the road. If the Shoremen lose tomor-clogging the MAC Southeast with a row, the Shoremen will have to win a tie-breaker game to reach the playoffs. This can occur in several ways. For one, Ursinus can defeat Widener and win the region out right, leaving John's Hopkins and Washington tied for second, with four-way tie for first between Washington, Ursinus, Widener, and John's Hopkins, all at 7-3. Only two of those teams will advance. In any case, the Shoremen still

Or, in an even more bizarre circumstance, Ursinus can lose to Widener, control their playoff berth. All that ust do is win tomorrow.

....Then Get Tripped By Widener, Fall Back Into Tie

by Bill Beekman

After defeating Ursinus on Sa. urday, the Shoremen were in the driver's seat to win the Southean region of MAC. Their ride, however, got bumpy Wednesday night when they fell to Widener, 78-61

The loss drops W.C. back into tie with Ursinus at 7-2 in the division. Both Widener and John's Hopkins, whom the Shoremen play tomorrow night, are one game back at 6-3. Widener travels to Colleges ille. PA to meet Ursinus tomorrow What all this means is that the Shoremen, 18-6 overall, must win tomorrow night to guarantee a saw in the MAC playoffs starting near Thursday, They can make the playoffs even if they lose, but this depends upon a Shoremen successing run-off match. The possibities are explored below, left.

Before facing Widener, Coach Finnegan expressed caution 'We're looking to get into the playoffs. To finish first and get the hone advantage on Thursday would be nice but we've got two difficult road games to play first." He wa absolutely right.

Widener traditionally is tout to beat in Chester, PA. Ursinus tit it by a point earlier this year, 50-49 but even that was a surprise. Las night, however, the Shoremen lei their bag of surprises at friends Cain Athletic Center.

The Shoremen stayed close for much of the game. They were within four at halftime, 31-27, but wer outgunned in the closing minutes "It was a good ball game unti the last four minutes," said Coach Fune gan, "then they finished up strong

Andy Bauer led all Washington scorers with 20 points. Tim Keehat collected 6 rebounds to share the lead with Tom Auvil. Keehanadel 13 points before fouling out.

Two Widener players 3: counted for 69 percent of their tally Chris Gardler netted 30 points while MAC scoring leader LouSk vens pumped in 24.

The Shoremen face Hopkins tomorrow. "We have to win," sal Finnegan. "It's in our h

Juzo Itami's

Tampopo

The First Japanese Noodle Western

Washington College Film Series Fri* Sun* Mon 7:30 p.m. $1 admission

the granar on the Sassafras

Dinner Features For Washington's Birthday Ball Saturday, February 20th

2...Veal Victoria- Sauteed Lobster and veal Medallions Vegetable and Potato Included Only $21.95 Luncheon: Wednesday to Saturday, 11AM to 3PM

Dinner: Wednesday to Saturday, 5PM to 9 PM Friday & Saturday to 10 PM. Sunday 1PM to 8 PM Reservations Option Foot of George St. Regular Menu

Also Available Georgetown, Maryland

648-5176

W.C. Dwarves Seven Other Colleges in N.J. Tennis Tournament Despite the cold weather out-Gewer raced through his first

side the Trenton State College field three rounds and then rallied from house, the competition was heated one set down to nip Swarthmore's inside as Washington College du- Steve Tignor, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, in the eled Swarthmore College at the semifinals. Freshman sensation Lions Winter Invitational Tennis Flippin-Read did not lose a set en-Tournament February 12-14. route to the finals as he chalked up

The Shoremen, led by Larry impressive wins over Swarthmore's Gewer, captured team as well as Tom Cantine (quarterfinals, 6-2, 6individual honors at the three day 2) and Linsay Williams (semifinals, event. Gewer took the singles 6-1, 6-3). crown, defeating teammate Scott Flippin-Read in the championship doubles team of Gonzales and match, while the doubles tandem of Marshall were the giant killers of the Claudio Gonzales and David tourney. After upsetting the Marshall were runners up in the tournament's number three seeds, doubles competition. Every mem- Vivek Varma and Cantine of ber of the six man squad reached at Swarthmore, in the opening round, least the semifinals in either singles the scrappy duo ousted the nation's or doubles

Playing clutch tennis, the tenth ranked team of Mike Gibbs and Mike Krieder of Buffalo in the

The semifinals featured an all-Washington College match as Gonzales and Marshall edged Rick Phoebus and Peter Maller to gain the The price will be identical to finals. Phoebus and Maller were

In the team standings, Wash-22-54, and free admittance for chil- ington amassed 21 points to take the championship. Swarthmore was the closest rival, finishing with 14 points. Trenton State, Buffalo Uni-

dren under 6, adults over 55, and Washington College student's with The track surrounding the field versity, Farleigh Dickinson, Queens will continue to be accessible to the College, and Rutgers-Newark rounded out the eight team field.

Athletic Department Hopes to Fence Lacrosse Playoffs in Chestertown This Spring "Our ability to legitimize attenwhat they are for Basketball, $1.00 seeded second.

> has precluded our hosting playoff years," says Miller. Additionally, the fence will enable Washington College to charge admission fees at home la-us by one of the big hurdles which crosse games

BAR MENU AVAILABLE Monday thru Wednesday 6 'till 10 Friday and Saturday 'till 11

public. TOWN

for ages 6-21, $2.00 for adults aged

NIGHTLY HAPPY HOURS 4 - 6:30 Friday - 5:30 Free Hors D'oeuvres

Under New Management - College Students Welcome

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT

Friday, February 19

Dee & The Upsetters $5 person, $8 couple

Molown

WEDNESDAY

MONDAY $1.00 All Imports "Import Night"

THURSDAY

Steve Taylor

Chestertown's Own

TUESDAY $2.00 frozen margueritas Tequila $1.00 a shot

Free Nachos at Bar "Mexican Night"

Ladies' Night Ladies Receive Special Prices 50 cents Draft Lite $1,25 House Drinks

FRIDAY

Chid's Play

Baltimore's #1 Rock Band $5 per person

(No Cover) Introducing in Feb.

25 cent Draft of Your Choice 9:00 - 10:30 on Band Nites in the Back

515 Washington St., Chestertown, MD 778-1984

And just why did that fence teams and another to perrenial Divi-

start growing around Kibler Field sion III champ Hobart, as well as dance figures for the NCAA will get with a win against then top-ranked last week? The fence is just one of the Washington & Lee, was forced to Athletic Department's projects for travel to Delaware, Ohio during events with regularity in recent will not only serve to protect the irrigation system we put in this fall to upgrade the quality of the main playing field, it will also increase Washington College's chances of

Last year the 10-6 Shoremen

1987-88. According to Athletic exam week to face number one Director Geoffrey Miller, the "fence ranked Ohio Wesleyan in the first

No, the College does not plan to turn Kibler Field into Kibler Jail For Underage Drinkers. Rather, the Athletic Department thinks that this fence will help bring Chestertown some home playoff gam round of the playoffs. The Shoremen lost 12-3, failing to make the Division III championship game for the first time since 1985 A large-determining facor in the hosting NCAA playoff games in the NCAA playoff committee's decision to pack the Shoremen's bags was the inadequate facilities at larrosse team, with four losses Washington College, and the lack of coming to top-notch Division I any real attendance figures.

Beckett Plays

natioued from page 8 teatrical experience that Beckett

riended. Even the set must be carefilly thought out, so that it helps the miy of the shows rather than deracts from them. The object is to create an impression that you are in be world of Beckett's imagination ted, according to Rubin, the set is ksigned to move the audience both *ysically and mentally.

Helping out Davis and Rubin this production are, of course, a nber of student assistants. Steve Indy is Technical Designer, Charwikox is stage manager, Wendy ow is costumer, and Mary Lee ary and Steph Bauer are producton assistants. All these elements one together in Tawes Theater ten weekend. However, seating is n-stage and limited, so if you ould like to reserve tickets, please all extention 269

Stam Drug Co. 215 High Street

Chestertown, Maryland 778-3030

- * Greeting Cards
- Cosmetics Russell
- Stover Candy
- Soda
- Fountain

OLD WHARF INN

Enjoy Waterfront Dining Located at the foot of Cannon Street

> Chestertown, Md. (301) 778-3566 Credit Cards Accepted

ARTS

Beckett Beckons

by Andy Caporoso Next weekend, An Evening with Beckett will be presented by the drama department in Tawes Theater. The show, a trio of one-act works by Samuel Beckett, will begin at eight o'clock on February 25, 26 and 27, next Thursday, Friday and Saturday

Samuel Beckett is a playwright of painstaking detail. All the words and actions in his script are carefully chosen, and many boundaries of set and of character are rigidly defined. Many directors shy away from attempting to put on one of Beckett's shows, and Beckett has even stopped several productions of his shows because they do not follow his written directions for production

Director Rick Davis, who con siders Beckett to be "one of the greatest twentieth-century writers," plays because it presents a challenging task for both director and actor. Reckett's plays, although short one acts, are dense with emotion and image. His theatrical devices are so direct a production which will be "respectful to the playwright's wishes," gives strict care and attention to the text In the director's interpretation.

the three shows, named Play, Footfalls and Theatre II, explore different facets of a major question of life: "How does man confront the burden of consciousness?" In response, these three shows use "highly differentiated theatrical means and come & different conclusions, if any. " In each show, the characters are confronted, blatantly or discreetly, with choices between life and death. In Davis' eyes, "the level of [Beckett's] exploration of the human condition is as profound as drama gets." In order to fully realize the themes expressed in Beckett's plays, an emphasis on simplicity and unity of style are impressed, both on the direction of the characters and the direction of the set on which these characters will exist. "Art is the purgation of superfluity," as Davis often says. In others words, has chosen this particular group of an artist must cut away all the extraneous material in order to reach the essence of what is being expressed. Beckett's material provides "new challenges for the actors than are traditionally faced." Just as sparse that "each element counts for the details of plot and style are a great deal." Davis, who wishes to emphasized because of their sparseness and simplicity, so the acting is also cut down, "distilled to their essence." No intricate, rich behavior will be seen on stage, but rather the basic essentials of acting. The Ryder Daniels and Andy Caporoso are two of the actors who will perform in An Evening With Beckett. a trio of plays by Samuel Beckett. The plays will be staged next week at Tawes Theater. simplicity of the acting is intended separate plays along with the actors was given to the conceptualization to create a haunting or ominous feeling which will ultimately leave the spectator thinking by the evening's end.

The actors of the cast find Beckett fascinating, and a challenge to perform. They consider the shows tremendously exciting. Because of the challlenges that they will face, the actors are forced to think about their assumptions of what acting really is. This is due largely to the direction of Rick Davis who discovers the intricacies of each of the in them. Together, actor and director constantly reread the script, finding interpretations, symbols and subtle messages which will eventually translate onto the stage.

The cast of the trio of plays includes Debbie Nahmias and Kevin Holland in Footfalls; Play stars Chris Drechsler, Kevin Holland Emily Lott, and Michele Volansky; the actors in Theatre II are Ryder Daniels, Andy Caporoso, and Derick Serra. Much thought and preparation and creation of the stage setting." set design was created to try a for "atypical staging for an atypi Davis, along with Ja show ' Rubin, designer for An Evenings Beckett, are setting out to creat world of Beckett's imagination which production has cont Says Jason Rubin on developing set, "Beckett gives you every?" he wants." The object is to cre set that will properly convey

continued on page

Chestertown Movie Theater

DIRTY DANCING

Hours Fr. Sun 789p.cs Mon Tours 745p.m.

778-1575

SECRET MORE SELF-HELP FILES

MASTERCARD

778-3227

FREE!! LOUNGE APPETIZERS

Eriday Dichtes. SO. SO Roasi Beer Sandricks aday nights $6.25 Drafts Saturday night, February 20-10% off Dinner Check for Washington College Students for the Birthday Ball

Dinner Specials

Mon - Senior Citizen Discount on Entrees-30% off to persons 55 and older Tues - All you can eat Lasagna . Includes pasta salad and garlic bread $6.95 Wed - Early Bird Special 1/2 off any entree order before 6:00 p. Thurs - All you can eat Steamed Shrimp $9.95 Fri - Prime Rib - Full cut only $12.95 Sat - All you can eat buffet only $ 12.95

DRIVE A LITTLE-SAVE A LOT 3 Miles South of Chester River Bridge on Rolphs Wharf Road. Contact us for on or off premise catering.

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Jume 59, Number 19

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, February 26, 1988

ne for pledging and the accompanying pranks. Above, sopho-ore Drew Elburn, a Phi Sigma Kappa pledge, visits the statue of erge Washington during a fire alarm in the traditional Sig fashion. Yearbook Goes orge, are you O.K.?!?" As the spring season arrives, so does the

To Press

egasus went to press early this nh with the final product ex-

ted to be available to students ing the first week of April Arian Ravanbakhsh, editor ef, was pleased with the book.

link the cover looks fantastic, ple will critcize no matter what do, but I think it looks acceptsaid Ravanbakhsh

Ravanbakhsh said that al the only had three active staff bers again this year, work went more smoothly

Despite the improved staff rar, Ravanbakhsh still admitthat there were some problems. tes of organizations in particu-This year, due to lack of overon my part, the organizational ires have been left out. Bigger izations such as Greeks will ably go in the supplement, but I node ob lliw aw ted won maller groups and clubs."

Ravanbakhsh said that work e supplement has already beand will be complete after encement, most likely in and Commencement. Any details as to the cover of the supplement are not yet available

In addition to completing the book on the deadline, the staff also reported finishing production with a balanced budget and a surplus. Ravanbakhsh pointed out that this is the first year in recent memory that

Pegasus editor Ravanbakhsh the production staff has been in such a good financial state

Rayanbakhsh expressed great hope that the book will be pleasing to the entire student body.

"Coverage should be much htakhsh, is devoted mainly to the campus included in the book", said Ravanbakhsh

SGA Discontinues Film Series Funding

Kabat Defends Series; SGA Calls for Fee Increases

Student Government President Richard MacKnight lead the SGA Senate Monday in a decision which would request the discontinuation of SGA funding for the Washington College Film Series.

The film series consumes approximately thirteen percent of the annual SGA Budget, in addition to money allotted from a comprehensive fee derived from tuition According to MacKnight, an additional 1.5 dollars for each student send the administration a message shopping malls and see the same that the student activities fee is too movies, then what is the point of low," said Caldwell.

'Frankly, I was a bit surprised [by MacKnight's actions], of the SGA, criticized Kabat for said director of the film series Mar- depending on the SGA to cover the tin Kabat, who had hoped to meet losses from the film series. "There with the Senate before a decision is no reason why Kabat should have was made. According to Kabat, the the right to come in and siphon a move was "fairly sudden" consider- thousand dollars out of the SGA ing his fifteen year old agreement funds to cover his deficit," said for funding with the Student Gov- Finney, who continued, "Why money, not to the students. This is a film series", said Kabat, who conreal opportunity for the students to tinued, "If students can go to the supporting the series?"

Perry Finney, vice-president

'There's no reason why Kabat should have the right to come in and siphon a thousand dollars out of the SGA funds to cover his deficit ." - SGA Vice President Perry Finney comes from the SGA budget in addition to the 3.99 dollars from other funds. The money provided by the SGA, from $800 to $1,000 annually, is used to cover the financial deficit which the Series incurs each year, according to MacKnight. He pointed out that because of the limited funds of the SGA along with the growing financial obligations of the Organization, the Series was becoming too much of a burden on the SGA budget

The request, which is in the drafting process, will be made to the Student Affairs committee in order that it be presented to the faculty at the next faculty meeting. The request must pass through the faculty committee before presentation to the Board of Visitors and Governors. If passed by the Board, Mac-Knight hopes that this change will be implemented by next fall.

"We're in trouble financially, there was nothing else for us to do but cut off this funding," said Kim Harb, senate representative from West Hall.. "The SGA wasn't asked to fund the film series, it's being asked to pick up the film series' deficit," said Harb, who pointed out that Kabat did not approach the SGA until after a deficit was discovered and most SGA funds were already committed.

"I think it's kind of ridiculous for the students to fund a film series if they have no say," said Senior Bob Caldwell after attending the last SGA meeting. "I have had the class and enjoyed it. I also think The supplement, according to broader with a greater spectrum of the concept of the film series is an admirable one, but Kabat should look to the administration for years has anyone ever questioned is agreement."

Kabat said that a financial loss should be expected from such a program. "The program was never intended to make a profit, this College is not run for a profit," said

Kabat quickly ruled out any changes to the film series for the purpose of increasing student interest and participation for two reasons. First, Kabat said that although a "popular film" may attract many more students, they will still cost a great deal more to show. Second, Kabat did not want the film series to be perceived as having an "SGA dance party" atmosphere. Kabat defended his film selections as based on critical success, not neces sarily on "popular" success. "These are the films that students will never ernment Association. "Not for ten should he be allowed to take the money from us if we have no say in the film [selection]?

Finney said that Kabat should talk to Vice President for Finance Gene Hessey about a raise in the student fees as a long term solution instead of approaching the SGA after the deficit is discovered.

Kabat said that in the past, student input in the selection of the films did not prove very successful. Although Kabat did not discourage input from students, he was quick to clarify that "choosing the films for the series is not a democratic process." Kabat said that his goal was not to please a majority of the students, but to serve the minority who were interested in more artistic and

Kabat concluded, "The day the film series becomes a forum for see unless they are brought in by a popular films, I'll have no part of it."

aesthetic films

INSIDD:

Letters to the Editor.....page 2 Feminist Philosopher....page 4 Eating Obsessions.....page 6 Sick Sick Sick.....page 7 A Fish Story.....page 8 All-Time B-ball Team....page 9 Swim Championships....page 9 Letterpress Expert.....page 11 Album Review.....page 12

Cranks & Critics

seem to have adopted the nastiness of pit bull terriers. The recent distribution of flyers portraying the current Chairman of the Stu dent Conduct Council (SCC) with a wine cooler in hand and calling her the "Queen of the Hypocrites," was just another in a series of personal attacks absent of logical argumentation. While we do not wish to further publicize, and thus encourage, such backstreet forms of dissent, we feel that the personalization of the attack cannot go ignored

It is rather obvious that the Student Conduct Council has received much criticism this year, particularly in letters to the editor. To upperclassmen with even a vague sense of recent history that's nothing new; the previous judicial body, the Student Judicial Board (S.IB), was controversial as well.

Since last year when this newspaper termed the SJB a "kangaroo court," much improvement has been made, though serious flaws remain in the system. One previous complaint was the secrecy with which the hearings were conducted. A reinterpretation of the Buckley Amendment now allows any member of the College com-munity to view the judicial process. Unfortunately, at times the Council thwarts its own goal of openness, perhaps unintentionally Elm reporters, for example, have had difficulty covering cases due to the frequency of last-minute location changes

Additionally, the SCC is inconsistent in verdicts. When a forgery case resulted in a penalty that many in the College community perceived as too lenient, the Council explained that they had feared that sentences of expulsion would be overruled by the administration. The SCC should remember that it is not their task to second guess how the administration will handle a case sent their way. The Council might schedule another public forum, as they did last December, to open discussion; this time, however, they might publicize the event earlier than two hours before it is to begin.

Clearly, much remains to improve with the SCC, but the reforms in the process must be recognized as well. Student input can only speed the betterment of the judicial system; these comments, though, should be made in a constructive way, not through name calling letters to the editor or vicious flyers. Adjective laden letters indicate that the writer lacks logical and well-thought out arguments as support or, if he does have some support for his case, he does not have a sufficient comprehension of his side of the argument to present it intelligently

In place of the recent precedent of personal criticism of public figures, we offer a step-by-step formula for fair and effective dissent: Attempt to learn why the Conduct Council (or, for that matter, anyone with whom you disagree) took the course of action to which you object. Examine how that explanation fits in with your original complaint. When you take the time to discover another individual's intentions and the obstacles they encounter, you can better understand his line of reasoning. If you still disagree with the action, tell the person, calmly and reasonably. Offer some reasons to back up your opinion. They just might listen to you

Please note: putting up posters attacking the person with whom you disagree is not among our suggestions. If you do that, then your mother wears combat boots.

Washington College Elm

| Edito                     | n .                 |
|---------------------------|---------------------|
| Editor-in-chief.          | Andrea Keho         |
| News Editor               |                     |
| Features Editor           | Jennifer M. Harriso |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekma         |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor |                     |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Bak         |
| Graphics Editor.          | Todd Kas            |
| Manaj                     | ger                 |
| Managing Editor           |                     |
| Advertising Manager       | Erin Hodge-William  |
| Circulation Manager       | Wittiam Faus        |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed col taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

All letters to the collor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editors cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mailed c/o The Elm.
Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters become the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be co-publication to that week's issue.

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Anne dormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

BEING IN A SCHOOLLIKETHIS VALU WOULD EXPECT THE GREEK ORGANIZATIONS TO BF ON THE CUTTING FOGE OF YEAH WIFFKEND ENTERTAINMENT. RIGHT YOU KNOW, HAVE CHEWY PARTIES WITH LOTS OF DRUNKEN HORMONF CRAZED YOUNG-AMERICANS SPILLING AND SPEWING ON EACH OTHER

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Student Reps Make No Effort To the Editor

THE WASHINGTON COLLEGE ELM

As a member of the Council of the Alumni Association, I would like to express my personal views, not those of the Council, on the subject of official student liaison with alums

Well in advance of our meetings, we invite the Presidents of the Senior Class and S.G.A. to attend No one appears. This year, we went so far as to suggest alternates be appointed and we still see no one I live in Washington, D.C. This past Saturday I drove four hours to and from an Alumni Council meeting; some members travel even further. It is somewhat of a mystery why people several minutes away cannot attend these meetings.

Karen Price, our Alumni President, Pat Trams, our Alumni Director and others are making great efforts to build a strong Alumni Association with a close relationship to the College. We are starting many new chapters around the United States, offering a variety of activities and we are building a strong alumni network. It's discouraging to see that official student represen tatives, in comparison, are making no effort at all.

Brien F. Kehne '69

Sincerely.

Award Winning But Not Getting Better

To the Editor I have been hearing the words

"Award winning and getting better" for three years now and I would just like to say the WC Dining Service, stop lying to me. In the three years I have been at Washington College the food has steadily declined in quality and a good number of the employees have acquired attitude

> EMPLOYMENT HOMEMAKERS WANTED! TOP PAY! C.I. 121 24th Ave. N.W. Suite 222 Norman, Okla homa 73069

problems. The new chairs do not push in far enough under the new tables that are clearly too short. The dining hall certainly looks a lot better after the recent renovations but in some respects is more inconvenient. None of this is terribly earthshattering, but if the WC Dining Service is going to keep telling us that it is getting better, I think it should do

> Sincerely. Robert D. Morrow, Jr.

SCC Criticism Should Be Properly Directed

It surprises no one these days when criticism about the SCC is heard. It is found everywhere and, thanks to recent events, it is seen everywhere: I have no quarrel with that; however, I am concerned with the future of the SCC. In order to shed some light onto the reality of the situation, I feel compelled to write this letter Criticism is a healthy, valuable thing that can provide many potential insights: that is, when it is accurate and properly directed. When it is not properly directed, or even worse, childishly directed, it only serves to be stupid and cruel; void of all constructive purposes. much of the criticism aimed at the SCC appears in this form.

On several occasions this year, students have directed scathing criticism at the SCC. Instead of promoting the discussion of what should be a critical issue to students, the complainants quite often directed their attack on personalities within the system. So, instead of raising questions pertinent to student life on the campus, questions were raised about the integrity of a selected few.

Clark, NJ 07066

An example of this is found in the recent shoplifting incident which came before the SCC. In this incident, a student was apprehended by authorities for shoplifting at a local convenience store. The stu dent was then identified and the Chestertown Police turned the case over to WC Security. Security passed the case on to the SCC Correspondingly, the student was found guilty Now perhaps I am wrong, bu doesn't half the issue here involve the right of Security to pass along case from the Chestertown Police It has tremendous implications of student life at WC, yet I never heard word one about it. All I heard was "How in the world can the SCC hear that case?" I'll tell you how, WO security passed it on to them. My question is "Is it right for Security to act as they did?" Then only when this question is answered can i begin to answer the other half of the nmhlem

Other questions that arise out of this include, "Is a WC student responsible to the College for his &tions in the community?" I next heard one student bring this issue up. All I heard was how the SCO was, while under the direction of a few individuals, railroaded this poor fellow. Garbage-the issue at hancuts much deeper than the popular myopic interpretation of the sitt ation. This is only an isolated even but it is a fine example of the igno rance that pervades discussion about the SCC

People on the WC campus also fail to deal with the aspect of the ma litiplicity of personalities one su dent is able to assume. This problem arises from the small size of the campus. Everyone knows about everyone else. As a result students fail to differentiate the many roles person might play. So when student sees another student in prominent position, they see that student as a role, not as a multicontinued on page

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM HELP WANTED TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17.

Excellent income! Details, is self-addressed, stamped enve WEST, Box 5877, Hillside, 107205

reeks More Than Just Beer Clubs

lege is alive and well. Our fraternities and sororities are not simply beer clubs or gossip groups; the Greeks of this college provide a remendous service to both the campus life nd the community as a whole. These organiations provide a large portion of the weekend xial events, but they also sponsor fund rais-5, blood drives, and supply a good portion of ampus leaders. If the Greek system were minated at Washington College, the entire impus, as well as the surrounding commuty would suffer a blow not easily recovered

Many people choosing a college or uniersity look for the Greek system as a positive actor to base their decision upon. The issence of such a system may be the factor that turns people away from a school. Howerer, those not interested in the Greek system will still consider the College as a choice while simply abstaining from the entrance to

Greek life The tension that once existed between

This body has already sponsored one very successful event, The Bash Concert in Oct. '87, and is looking forward to arranging several other events in the near future. This cooperation between organizations is reflective of the unity and philosophy they represent. A fraternity or sorority is an organization of like minded people working toward a common goal. The entire process of pledging a Greek organization is geared toward creat ing a sense of unity and brotherhood among the organization. Adversity is faced as a group and sucess is only found through cooperation, teamwork, and ingenuity. These are the qualities in Greek organizations that are often overlooked on this campus and in the community. Few people realize the number of community activities that our Greeks sponsor and partake in. The AOTT's sponsor an annual blood drive, the KA's have their midnight madness party to benefit Muscular Dystroindividual organizations on this campus has phy, the Lambda's and the Zeta's both par-annual Casinonight for charity. It also cannot is a senior majoring in American Studies.

fraternities have formed the Greek Council. mile relay to protest the abuse of achohol and drugs in our community. The Greeks are also planning to give strong support to the upcoming bowl-a-thon to benefit charity. Obvi-

Steve Leary and Bob Caldwell

ously, these and other similar events sponsored by the Greeks have a very positive effect on the community and the way in which the College is perceived by the community

These organizations also provide a number of beneficial functions on campus that are also overlooked. The Lambda's are planning their second annual Career Night Major Series, the Theta Softball tournament and the Sig Volleyball tournament booster the intramural program, and the Alpha Chi's run their history major. Bob Caldwell, also a Lambda.

portion of the leadership presently on campus. The current Vice-president, Secretary, Treasurer, and Social Co-Chairmen of the S.G.A. as well as numerous members of student faculty committees are all members of Greek organi-

In conclusion, it is obvious that Fraternities and Sororities play an important role in today's campus events. Ironically, their importance is testified to in this question being posed and this article being considered for publication. Washington College would be a barren place without the Greeks just as the Greeks would be useless organizations without the input and balance of the independents on campus. The Greek system is not for everyone, and we do not hope it to be, the effects of the fraternities and sororities on this campus are positively good for this community.

What are the advantages/disadvantages of the Greek system at Washington College?

Deal, New Jersey Ithink that if there were no Greek system that some of the people on campus would be at a complete

Jeff Michaels

Rence King

Freshman Bethlehem, Pennsylvania "There are many advantages to bethose who elect not to belong, making them feel like second class citi- community."

Frank Creegan Sophon Chestertown, Maryland "The majority of faculty and adlonging to a Greek organization; ministration judge Greek members, however, those belonging some- frat members in particular, differtimes tend to discriminate against ently and in most cases more harshly than other members of the College

Darby Clarke Freshman Catonsville, Maryland

"I feel that, just like anything else, the Greek system is very diverse. life will be as close, as inspirational, Although there are some very nice and as challenging as the ones fraternities and sororities, there are many fraternities and sororities that have amazingly ridiculous sta dards for admitting rushees and even sadistical practices."

Debora Hitchcock Sophomore Towson, MD "Few relationships in your entire within your own fraternity circle."

by Susan H. Stobbart

Campus Voices

Drop False Labels and Accept Others

I have heard much talk in my first two big deal. I have however come to understand initiation, fine. But after he finis Mars at Washington College regarding fratertities and sororities, probably too much. The first thing that needs to be said is that I am not is a fraternity or a sorority, so I have an outside tinion. I don't really know what its like, hg's true. But I do have friends who belong h Greek organizations or who are pledging and I do feel I can say a few conservative tings about fratemities and sororities here. As a first year student living in Kent Rouse, joining a fraternity, as half of our hall 64, was not a concern. My views were rather inple. If that's what you wanted to do, great. If it wasn't for you, great. However each individual felt about it was entirely up to them. It certainly didn't reflect the core of the inner most soul. I never liked hearing kople saying so-and-so is a "Sig" or a A.". I mean we're talking about people bare. Some belong to Greek organizations and one don't. I confess that the entire issue of that it is, at this small college, a much more he made him drink until he got sick again. And serious issue that can drastically effect your social life while you go to this school. What "to be a Greek or not be a Greek" has done is create false labels of acceptance and unacceptance that should not be there. It is not how ever a problem of the system, but of the individuals.

Ryder Daniels

My roommate of last year pledged Theta. He was very excited and happy to receive a bid and accept it. And although I had no interest myself in joining a frat, I supported him as much as I could. During his initiation a lot of, in my opinion, awful things happened. For example, one night his big "brother" made him drink until he vomited in my trash raing the Greeks did not seem to be such a can, twice. No big deal. I guess that's part of enormous polarization that occurs between then he made him do it again. That's just one example, from my experience, of how this initiation thing can get out of hand, and I'm sure that there are others. I really can't for the life of me see where drinking alcohol and throwing up again and again makes you feel like you belong or, on a less serious level, is any fun at all. It would make me fill ill and then stupid. Some of the things I have heard about initiation although, I think, are fun. The K.A's let their pledges abuse the brothers about as much as the brothers abuse them. There is a lot of good-natured teasing that goes on. They practically initiate each other. The practical jokes that I have heard about, for the most part, sound like great fun

This year I learned a lot of new things. At Washington College, a great disharmony exists between the different groups of individuals. This is what I'm really sick of. The organizations shocks me. Everyone is responsible. Just ask yourself how much you really know about the people of groups that you dislike. "He's a Lambda" or "She's a weird drama major" is so little a reason to judge someone that it makes me cringe. It isn't in the philosophy of Greek organizations to make people throw up or excommunicate others because they're different. It's a problem of the

If you can't see some of the good things fraternities and sororities do, then you are as guilty of being as elitist as some of the extremist brothers and sisters are. Everyone has bogus stereotypes. For example, K.A.'s are called homosexual. Lambda's are stupid. For God's sake, anyone reading this who says but that's all true... (except for my group)...' is missing the point. Anyone different, and yes everyone is, should be shunned, right? Bullshit. We are all students at Washington College.

Ryder Daniels is a sophomore.

In Brief:

William James Forum

The author of The Science Question in Feminism, Sandra Harding, will address "Gender Bias in Science" at the William James Forum on Tuesday, March 1. Her lecture begins at 7:30 p.m. in Hynson Lounge, and is open to the Harding will be discussing how and why science has been dominated by males, with women often discouraged from entering the field. She asserts that even scientific methods of research are shaped by male perspective. She also will discuss how male bias has shaped the natural and social sciences.

Harding's book, which won a number of awards, takes a feminist approach to the philosophy of science and theories of knowledge. In it she challenges the intellectual and social foundations of scientific thought, and argues for more effective conceptions of scientific objectivity and of a unified science-conceptions that must be grounded in such as anti-racism, anti-classism, and anti-sexism.

Harding is associate professor of philosophy and Director of Women's Studies at the University of Delaware

Flu "Epidemic" Hits WC

The Health Service has received 80 visits from students with the flu in the past week, said Betty Schauber, registered nurse. Though this number includes repeat visits from particularly ill students. the "epidemic" is typical for the month of February, she said.

This particular flu strain seems to be hitting this age group harder this year," said Schauber, adding that a few cases of bronchitis and some ear infections have developed as well.

The virus starts as an upper respiratory infection with a sore throat, cough and fever or, in other individuals, as a stomach ache and

Roommate Register

Janet Corgill

P.O. Box 2208 MBS

21842

Ocean City, Md.

301-723-1609

coming later. Schauber advises those who recognize such symptoms to "eliminate all but the most essential activities," drink plenty of liquids, and use Tylenol rather than aspirin to avoid Reye's In addition, the sore throat/fever with the sore throat and fever cough aspect of the illness can be treated with coricidrin-D and cough syrup, and feelings of nausea can be counteracted with Pepto-Bismal. Anyone who thinks they have the flu should visit the infirmary to ensure that the virus does not develop into something more severe, such as bronchitis or pneumonia, Schauber suggested.

P.A.C.E. Program

world but don't have the cash? Try sone vicarious travel through Washington College's Program for Adult Continuing Education Program. PACE has lined up some seasoned travelers to share their experiences of China, Brazil, Peru, Nicaragua, Scotland, and Russia.

The Armchair Traveler begins on Tuesday, March 1, with a trip to China, Dr. Davy H. McCall will be the tour guide. The six-week course meets on Tuesdays between 7:30 and 9:00 p.m., in Room 14 of William Smith Hall

Other ports of call: Dr. Jeannette E. Sherbondy in Peru, March 8, Dr. George Shivers in Brazil, March 22; Dr. Daniel L. Premo in Nicaragua, March 29; Dr. I. Thomas Divilio in Scotland. April 5; and Mrs. Pat Ingersoll in Russia, April 12.

For more information, contact Mary Ellen Larrimore at 778-2800, Ext. 207.

Campus Radio

SGA President Richard MacKnight announced that plans are now under way for the formation of a campus radio station. Following a series of meetings with interested students. classes will be offered in radio communications. Interested students should contact John Bodner

> Presbyterian Church of Chestertown

George N. Clayman Pastor

Sunday Morning Worship

Corner of Philosophers' Terrace and Kent St. Chestertown, MD.

Anyone interested in helping with Health & Fitness Day, please cos-tact Mrs. Crew, ext. 347. I hope al of you will take a few minutes outo

your day, next Friday, to visit the Student Center and take part in or

Interested persons should contact

Mrs. Crew or Mr. DeMoss. The final day to place an application is Health & Fitness Day.

Maryland novelist John Barth spent last weekend on campus as a writer-in-residence along with colleague Michael Martone, his former creative writing student at Johns Hopkins University. Bolt authors gave readings and held a conversation entitled "Authors and Mentors. Wed. March 30th - HEALTH

Mom's Cookie Jar CHOICE NIGHT - "STEAK TO VEGETARIAN"

Hope every one enjoyed the dinner of the planned events: last Wednesday evening. Jester, our catering manager, planned the menu. The meal was well planned and we received a lot of nice compliments. Thanks, Mr

I would like to take this apportunity to thank Miss Amy Tidball for playing the piano during dinner Wednesday. Her selections were most enjoyable and the music lent much to the evening's festivaties.

March is National Nutrition Month.

The W.C.D.S. has planned serveral special events throughout the onth. Listed below is a schedule NIGHT

Fri. March 4th - W.C. HEALTH & FITNESS DAY (in Student Center 10:00a.m.-6:00p.m.)

Wed March 9th - CITRUS DAY

Just a reminder, anyone interestedi summer employment, the W.C.D.S. Fri. March 11th - LUNCH LAST is still taking applications for ou MEAL BEFORE BREAK Summer Conference Program.

Sun. March 20th - DINNER FIRST MEAL AFTER BREAK

Wed. March 23rd - DAIRY DAY March 11th.

Tues. March 29th - BIRTHDAY Well, that's about it for this week

1988 Internships

ew York Metropolitan area. The student internship service offers you listings of summer internships in your major fields. Placements are available with sponsoring companies in New York City and on Long Island. Many of these internships are either salaried or offer

Write for further information.

Student Internship Service P.O. Box 1053 Kings Park, New York 11754

The Sisters of the Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority, Sigma Tau Chapter would like to announce and welcome

Tiffany Bailey Kristin Callazzo Kimberly Clinton Sarah Coste

Erin Gillespie Stacy Maenner Mary Bisset McCurdy Victoria Vahos

Lauren Powers Deborah Staed Kristin Schiminger Kristen Schneeloch Susan Stobbard Heidi Usilton

as their Spring Pledge Class 1988

Stam Drug Co.

215 High Street Chestertown Maryland 778-3030

> e Greeting Cards • Cosmetics . Russell Stover Candy •Soda Fountain

Letters to the Editor

eted student with a broad range of concerns and duties. This complicates controversial issues and it ends up with the stereotyping of an Remove Flvers individual. A sad thing to happen at a College like ours

I am not trying to vindicate the performance of this year's SCC. that is not the intention of this letter. My concern is with the future of the SCC on this campus. If we continue to rip it apart. If we continue to destroy its members. What will tomorrow be like? Who will do a job that has to be done if it can't be because it is feared? Feared because it is the object of merciless scrutiny. Feared because the person who takes the job is marked, by their peers, from day one. Is this the type of atmosphere that we want to surround the SCC? I think not, and I implore the critics of the system to become more informed and more tolerant of the system. After all it is the only one we have. If we don't want the system or if we can't handle it, then there is nothing written that says the students must have

What are our alternatives to the SCC? I am sure they are less appealing than the current system to many of the students on this campus. They involve review by faculty, admini stration and other similar governing todies. The sooner students come to the understanding that the responsibility for students to pass judgnents on other students is a privelize, the better off it will be. It is by to means a right. The key to this understanding comes about when students educate themselves on the issues and treat the situations and institutions with respect, and not in such a surly, discrediting manner. Certainly problems exist within the system. Our job as students is to work, like adults, within the system in an effort to bring about a better

> Perry Finney On Behalf of the SGA

r of High & Queen Sts. cown, Chestertown, Md. 778-5343 al Winter Clearance SALE 20% to 50% Off 14 1/2 to 52

Mon.-Thurs.: 10-5 Fri: 10-7 Sat.: 10-5

Security Should Not To the Editor:

What is just?

Security has an important and integral job on this campus. However, it is not their responsibility to remove flyers, posters or messages they do not find appealing. This is in reference to the flyers concerning Brenda Conner, Chair of the S.C.C The flyer had no profanity, and told the truth signifying the best and jest of us are guilty. Therefore, those of us who are willing to take the time and effort to express our views should not be stopped by badgeyielding editors. The First Amendment Lives On!

George M. Ryan Senior Non-degree

Flyer Was Cheaper Than A Newspaper

Editor's Note: While it is not The Elm's usual policy to print unsigned letters except in rare cases (see editorial policy, page 2), we publish the following letter to allow for an explanation of the action in question, since the responsible parties have refused to publicly reveal their identities To the Editor

Due to the growing surge within the college community of self-promoting and self-righteous people, myself and my fellow cohorts (operatives) feel that a person such as Brenda L. Conner needed to be reminded that her self-serving principles should be exercised in moderation upon other students The flyers were intended as a reminder to Miss Conner that even she experimented with alcohol while under age, as did her selected target,

Need A Job?

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yacht and Country Club $4.00 an hour 778-6765

OLD WHARF INN

Enjoy Waterfront Dining Located at the foot of Cannon Street

> Chestertown, Md. (301) 778-3566 Credit Cards Accepted

Burning down Mount Vernon? Jr. Cline and the Recliners played for students, faculty, admir and alumni at last Saturday's Rirthday Ball. This year's theme for the annual event, which both cele brates George Washington's birthday and raises scholarship funds, was "A Night At Mount Vernon.

bring to light is that security and student affairs had no right to take under the category of a public figure within the college community. Furthermore, there was no slanderous or false information on the flyers, and the college could therefore not be held liable. It is upsetting that on a liberal arts campus such as ours a dean of students would dis patch an R.A. to take down posters of this nature. Let us not forget the

BAR MENU AVAILABLE

Monday thru Wednesday

6 'till 10

Friday and Saturday

1600 11

importance of our First Amendment scheduled for Friday evening has Another point I would like to rights, especially on this college campus

I do not intend to judge Miss down the flyers. Miss Conner falls Conner. However, the group that I so proudly chair felt something had to be done. It is unfortunate that we had to resort to these tactics, however former messages have fallen on deaf ears. Besides, the fiver was cheaper than printing a newspaper. Sig Party been cancelled by Dean Maxcy in response to a fight at a function in East Hall after the Birthday Ball. The fraternity has been required to present written guidelines worked out with the Director of Security to ensure that there shall be no future incidents of violence at social func tions sponsored by the fraternity. Should there be another incident, permissions to sponsor functions for the remainder of the semester will be revoked by the Dean. Edward Maxes

The Phi Sigma Kappa party

paramo ENTOWN

NIGHTLY HAPPY HOURS Friday -- 5:30 Free Hors D'oeuvres

Under New Management - College Students Welcome

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT

Friday, February 26 Child's Play

$5 person, $8 couple

Rock Band

WEDNESDAY

Lucky Bingo Night

Win Your Drinks

MONDAY $1.00 All Imports "Import Night"

TUESDAY $2.00 frozen margueritas

Tequila $1.00 a shot Free Nachos at Bar "Mexican Night" Spring Break

Weekend

FRIDAY

THURSDAY The Cutters $5 per person, $8 per couple

Jr. Cline & the Recliners $5 per person, $8 per couple Introducing in Feb.

9:00-10:30 on Band Nites in the Back 515 Washington St., Chestertown, MD 778-1984

25 cent draft of Your Choice

FEATURES

Women and Eating Disorders:

Coping With Society's Need for Thinness

In a country where television is an acceptable pastime, and the screen is filled with beautiful women with lissome bodies, it is no suprise that the ordinary woman is concerned about her weight. Starting at an early age, the need to be thin can grow into a genuine health concern. Society: models in glamour magazines, actresses, and what women think that men think is beautiful, all create pressure to be as thin

"I don't think directly society is saying in order to be beautiful you have to weigh this much ... they show it." says one sophomore woman who started dieting when she was thirteen

"This is just the way that society confuses us about our bodies," Dr. Lucille Sansing, associate dean at Washington College, explains. In 1945, Miss America was 5' 9" and 145 pounds; today this woman would be considered chubby, and the standard for beauty is 5' 9" and 118 pounds. "We set much thinner standards: unrealistic standards of beauty. We teach girls in order to be beautiful either not to eat adequately, or throw up. ... The obsession is not within a group of neurotic girls, but part of the American system

"Distortion of body image is not just a problem of anorexia, but a society wide distortion," says Dr. Marcy Pelchat, psychology teacher at Washington College. Children are becoming weight concious at earlier ages than they used to be, and society clearly has an obsession with weight loss

"It's kind of fashionable to be on a diet," one freshman woman claims. "And people our age are more likely not to cat well, like popcorn and diet soda. I went on my first diet when I was thirteen, obviously I thought I needed to lose weight, but I had never noticed it until someone pointed it out."

Adolescence is not an easy forced to lose weight in order to chiatrist, she was weighed every belong to the society they are entering, are under particular pressure. Generally confined to white was under supervision, threatened graphic by Michele Balat disorder clinic in John's Hopkins anorexic, but I still felt fat. Teenage in the past ten or so years. Eating girls are under so much pressure about their appearance. You turn logical disorders, and can, at times, thirteen, and think you should be 36-26-36 > having an anorexic friend: "She never admitted that she was anorexic, and I wouldn't say anything to her. She would take offense." But early in high school, this same girl dieted, "I got down to 88 or 87 and I week, her parents searched her room fainted. My dad made me go to a for laxatives. For three months she doctor... they made me start eating. It never got to the point where I thought it was unhealthy, I thought I could get down to the minimum of the range for my height." Teased in middle school for her chubbiness, another sophomore recalls spending her summer trying to reshape her body into one that would be accepted by her classmates, "I had really low self-esteem at that point in time, because I had a perception of myself as being grossly overweight. Now when I look back at pictures of myself at that time I realize that I wasn't. But you couldn't tell me that then. I was obsessed with losing weight and becoming thin, and becoming thinner after that. I stopped eating, started exercising all the time. I lost weight quickly, and tried to lose more. The idea of food disgusted me, I had to pretend to eat dinner at night so my mother wouldn't know I wasn't eating. I took vitamins to compensate for the nutritional loss, but when I began feeling dizzy all the time, I was worried.

"One of my best friends in high school was anorexic. She wouldn't talk about it, but she mis sed about two months of school. I used to go to visit her and every time she would be thinner. Then I decided that I needed to lose weight, I had a real complex about it. I felt fat, and I didn't like it, so I stopped eating. My friend told me it was okay to stop eating, you just shouldn't exercise at the same time or you'd become anorexic. I just figured it would be okay if I got to the bottom weight for my height. When I got there, I wanted to lose a little more, so I'd have a little room if I gained a little bit. And then I wanted to lose more. It was a control-type thing, I guess I just needed to have some control in my life 1 thought, okay, if I lose this much weight, all these wonderful things will happen to me. I have a sister who is really thin, maybe I wanted to be as wonderful as I thought the

was. Now that I look back on it though, it's really a sick thing; girls should be trying to become comfound able with themselves, not control their lives by making themselves sick. I'm not anorexic . I mean ! don't worry about my weight twenty-four hours a day now like! did then, but I do worry about it think it's a part of being a woman says a Washington College junior

"It's easy to say work with what you've got, but people who are unsatisfied with themselves physically are unsatisfied with themselves," a freshman adds.

"It's very difficult to say what people can do to feel better says Pelchat, "For the average person obsessd with her weight, the thing to do is try to be comfortable with herself. I have two choices work all the time to keep myself below a certain setpoint or acception

"To some extent, the problam seems to resolve itself with see We wouldn't want to sit and waitfor this in extreme cases, but normally... Women who binge, for example, it's not clear why it get better with age. Maybe because women become more comfortable with themselves. Adolescence is not the best time for most people.

Names of students have been withheld to protect their privats of 18 and 25, anorexia is a concern Hospital. "I don't think I was an that has been thrust to the forefront become life threatening. "It's a function of self esteem," says San-One sophomore remembers sing, "a need for control in relation Chubby in middle school, a mior remembers, "When I got in high school I became more self conscious about my weight, my appearance. I had an extreme weight loss in high school, I started to lose a lot of weight. I weighed in disorders are symptoms of psycho-ships to parents and mass media."

the low nineties, though before I

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS

HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:30-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE

778-1222

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-5

Be. 213 & 291

OPEN FORUM

President Cater and Vice President Hessey will discuss

THE CAMPUS MASTER PLAN,

including

Closing of Gibson Avenue Parking Areas Schedule of Development

> March 2, 1988 Hynson Lounge 7:30 p.m.

How To Avert Your Eyes In 4 Easy Steps

by Dean Hebert

It happens to everyone Maybe it happens early in the morning (if you're the sort to be awake early in the morning), or maybe in the evening. Most often it happens in the evening, or in the afternoon. You're walking along the fire lane, or on one of the campus' many sidewalks. (Y'know, just to digress for a moment, it amazes me how many people between the ages of 18 and 22 don't have any better sense han to walk through the mud between Reid and Caroline, or behind Kent, or over by East Hall when there are perfectly good sidewalks here. I guess you guys don't worry about tracking mud all over the place, but that's a topic for another

Off the Cuff.) Anyway, you're walking arross campus. Alone. And way down at the other end of the fire lane you see somebody else walking. And they're walking toward you. Noproblem, right? Sort of. They're the only colorful, moving object in the whole scene, but you don't want them to notice you staring at them. While they're still 150 feet away, it's okay to stare. But they're going to walk past you. What do you do? Here's a Handy Guide of Things to staring at them. Look at Instead of The Person Walking Toward You! 1) Look at your books.

2) Look at your shoes. They probably have mud caked on them. Quickly, glance at the other Particularly effective in using time person now to see a) if he/she is and wipe your nose with the back of

Hill Dorms. Look at anything ex- doing? Glance at the person again you. Avoid eye contact. Look at your shoes again. Close your eyes cept that person walking toward Okay, they're ten feet away. What are they looking at? Spanish House? Good.

4) Look up for passing air-

"But, Dean," you might now be saying, "what do I do if that other person and I accidentally make eye contact?" As the two of you advance, eye contact is possible. If this occurs, look away as quickly as possible. Look at your shoes again. If it's someone you've seen in the back of one of your classes, you might smile at them before you look away. Turn your head away from them as they pass you.

off the cuff

Now here's the most difficult part. If you really want to make them paranoid, say, "Hello." Notice the look on their face as they pass you. They probably won't say hello back. If they do, they're just trying to see the look on your face. Ignore them. Look at your shoes. They're until the other person passes you is to stick a pencil in the spirals of your spiral notebook. This assures the

b) how far away he/she is 3) Look at the sky. Or the person that you are definitely not treetops. Or the architecture of the your hand. Look at your shoes Stare at the molding near the roof of West Hall - hey, there's somebody in the top window. What's he probably caked with mud.

Sick. Or Addicted to Sick Trays?

by Kelly Lamoree

There are all kinds of illtesses here, from simple neuroses to thicken pox, and people have many conceptions of what defines illness here at Washington College. Some think it means being in favor of the Stephomore Writing Seminar. Others believe that certain political, noral and creative lifestyles are

Another definition, which is can be part of other definitions of ilness, is that it's what you use as an ticuse to get out of an eight-thirty dass, or any class or undesirable activity for that matter. Just think of what would happen if we didn't have medical excuses: not only would we have truly ill people in ass, but a lot more people would

off the cuff

When someone really is ill, ough, it's no laughing matter. specially if the sick person is a Officend, girlfriend, or roommate hey somehow expect sympathy, davery and submission to the cause of their woe. Crankiness is to be allowed at times because it's not heir fault, so don't even think about aing angry when they throw tething at you because you woke frem up while checking to make tre they still breathed. They want They want their clothes whed. They want class notes. Of tese they don't very often deorices but you feel guilty if you disease called lazines on't offer complain and complain and moan and groan, but suggest that there is something wrong with them and you'll lose your head: "What, do you want me to be sick?" they snap.

Of course there is also the person who is sick and hides it, thus letting everyone around them in for what they have is equally charming. These people think they are doing everyone else a favor by not telling others that they are ill, when in fact they are doing their friends a greater disservice by needlessly exposing them to illness

And when you yourself are sick it seems as if no one else knows and wants you to go hiking (or whatever the Chestertown equivalent is) for two days. Callous, cruel people. It makes you wonder if you are indeed sick or if you're a hypochondriac. When you are sick and no one seems to be able to diagnose anything other than "it must be stress," making you feel, again, like a hypochrondriac, it is also demoral-

Again, there's the other extreme when you're feeling just a bit under the weather and well-meaning friends ask, "You look awful What happened?" and you suddenly feel ninety-nine years old

This is not to disparage those who are truly sick; but everyone knows someone who talked themselves out of attending something because they weren't feeling well or who covered up for an 'illegal' absence later on by claiming illness. these mental and physical In that case, illness is part of a bigger trays.

The only thing more frustrat- that strikes all at some point or other imperceptible high produced by the is when said person close to you in their lives. The flu strikes so effects of that crunchy white subwill not admit they are ill. They often in the springtime; those germs must be interconnected with blooms, buds and warm weather. Somehow, as soon as the first sixty degree day occurs, many students are struck down with this horrid ailment. Exposure to the elements is a known cure. Some wily though I'm sure well-intentioned professors have experimented with this treatment in conjunction with helping their classes to heal more rapidly. Nasty weather seems to have little effect on people's health, except for those mutants who manage to catch colds and other anomalies because of the cold wet weather Someone must figure this out.

Another thing that seems to induce illness in this way is the sicktray. Again, while there are those who are truly too ill to attend meals. and who have devoted friends who fetch them toast, broth and orange juice, there are those who inexplicably are too ill to attend meals yet can struggle all the way to Hodson Hall and procure their own sick trav How ill can one be if they can not only get their own sick tray, but also fill said sick tray with chocolate cake, Lucky Charms and food of that ilk? People must know that styrofoam has beneficial effects on one's immune system and thus. sick travs must not be meant to help one (except in special cases) already sick, but to prevent illness, People can feel whatever ailment coming on, and so rush to prevent its spread.

How clever they are, how crafty to know-to prevent illness get sick Of course there are those Laziness is a dread disease who become addicted to the amost stance. Before they know it, every to be, don't use something that will meal must be encased in that wondrous styrofoam. Sometimes "significant others" are sent to get the stantly and publicly cleaned their meals to allay suspicion of such an addiction. But after awhile, it becomes quite apparent that there is an addiction. Those trays stack up near garbage areas like towers. Refrigerators are filled with white contain ers filled with mysterious, often old food. Plastic-ware predominates and one forgets how to use real flatware and plates. The only food that is good to eat, it seems, is that which erode your sinuses and horrify onlookers. It's like if someone conears in or compulsively flossing their teeth. But there must be a reason.

why like the sick tray fiends and spring weather maniacs that nasal sprays must be beneficial: when the person rams that bottle up a nostril for the sixteenth time that day, a mysterious and invisible chemical is released through the pores of the skin causing healthful antibodies

"Crankiness is to be allowed at times because it's not their fault, so don't even think about getting angry if they throw something at you because you woke them up while checking to make sure they still breathed."

has been carried distances. Our Madonnas of the Sick Tray become increasingly hostile to the outside world and attempt to arrange for classes to be brought by tray as well

The only thing more annoying than a sick tray addiction is a nasal spray addiction. Seeing a person shove a bottle up their nose twenty times a day defies description, and when they squeeze the bottle to administer the drug, and then sniff, well it just dampens one's day. Aside from the concern one feels for the other person, there is a sentiment of horror, imagining why someone would do it. A lot of people seem to have this problem. If you're going to place something somewhere where it's not supposed

(or whatever the term is) to permeate the atmosphere causing the surrounding people to become healthier. Instantly.

Then there are people who feign sore throats or whatever in order to go into the back room of the Health Service in order to procure three for free undetected. It is difficult to see a connection between three for free and feigned sore throats, except for ones we can't print he Life is complicated enough without "sickness" and Sickness to contend with. Just be thankful for the Health Serivce, which dispenses help and medication those those needful of it. Then there was the girl with the drawer full of ...

SPORTS

Shoremen Are Good, But Not Lucky

Beat Hopkins to Gain Playoffs, Lose Coin Flip for Home Edge

by Don Steele

The Washington College Shoremen won when they had to win, Last Saturday, with the playoffs on the line and the Birthday Ball in high gear, the team came through by defeating John's Hopkins at Homewood, 84-76. The team ensured a playoff berth for the eigth consecutive year

The Shoremen were led by Andy Bauer who scored 18 points. The game also saw Bauer pass the career mark of 1,000 points. He is only the 19th player to achieve that feat, and the first junior since Joe Wilson in 1978.

Commenting on Bauer's accomplishment Coach Tom Finnegan said, "It is an attribute to his team's consistency. To score 1,000 points as a junior is quite an accomplishment had outstanding games as well Keehan scored 16 points and led the team in rebounding with 10 boards. Brandt came off the bench and shot six for seven to score 15 points in only 22 minutes. The forward tandem of Tom Auvil and Chris Jamke both had solid games with 13 and 12 points respectively and seven boards a piece seven at halftime, 40-33, and in creased their margin to sixteen in the second half. The Jayhawks, in front of a soldout crowd with their playoff hopes on the line, pulled to within six with three minutes left in the game but could never get any closer.

The win left the Shoremen tied with Ursinus atop the MAC Southeast region. Ursinus defeated Widener in overtime while the Shoremen and Jayhawks dueled. Ursinus' win kept them tied with Washington and eliminated Widener, who had been ranked earlier in the year.

Luck, however, didn't go the Shoremen's way, as they lost the coin toss for first place and home court advantage in the playoffs. Coach Finnegan was disappointed about his team's fate.

Now the team must to travel to Tim Keehan and Chris Brandt Franklin and Marshall, champs of the MAC Southwest, who have been ranked in the Division III Top Twenty all year. Franklin and Marshall is currently 21-4. The Shoremen played there last night. Ursinus played the Southwest's runner up, Moravian College, in Collegeville, PA. With Saturday's win, the Shoremen end the regualr season The game never really seemed 19-6, their sixth best record in W.C.

The Shoremen, helped here by Tank Duckett, may have beaten Ursinus on the hardwood the other week but when it comes to coin flipping Ursinus wins hands down. The lost toss cost the Shoremen hor advantage in the playoffs, as they were forced to head for nationally ranker Franklin and Marshall is

Catfish Bob Chases Channel Cats in Chester

Twenty feet below me, dark water swirls around cement pilings and a biting December wind whips the gentle Chester River into an ocean of foaming wavelets. A car passes behind me, and the bridge trembles slightly. Three fishing rods lean upright against the railing, their tops protruding over the side and the lines descending into the depths below. My face and hands are red and chapped from the cold

outdoors

One of the rod tips dips slightly and suddenly, then pops back into position. I reel the line in impatiently, hoping to feel the resistance of a tugging fish. Instead, I am left with two bare books and no bait. The bait has been stolen, but at least I can be sure that at least one fish down there is hungry.

After being rebaited with pieces of shrimp, the line is returned to the water, and soon, another rod tip twitches, then bends, and by the time I pick the rod up, it is curved like a "C" and the line is tight enough to play music with.

The fish feels determined to stay on the bottom of the Chester. After a few minutes of give and take battling, a black form appears near the surface, swimming in undecided circles. I let it swim and fight until finally I reel it up out of the water This is a dangerous point in the battle because there is no water and all the fish's weight is pulling on the line, not to mention the fact that the fish realizes it is in mortal danger and flops and twists accordingly. Soon, the channel catfish, a respecable three pounder, is squirming on the pavement at my feet and making those mysterious catfish croaking noises. The cold is bearable now that dinner is in the making. Little do many students realize, the Chester River ranks as one of the most fertile and productive in Maryland, and the Route 213 bridge provides fast angling within walking distance of the College. Successful angling does not depend entirely on the angler's luck, though, and an angler who uses the right tactics can catch fish after fish while the one beside him catches nothing is useless when it sits in the closet Most fish, especially catfish, can be caught anytime. It is best to fish during the changing tides, though, because the moving water at these times stirs up debris and food from the bottom, putting the fish in a feeding mood. If in doubt, the best time to fish is anytime you want.

In order to catch fish, one must take the time to go fishing. Even the large and they have delicious white most expensive fishing equipment meat.

For successful angling, one must have proper tackle (hooks, line etc.). If you are not familiar with fishing tackle, find someone who is; either someone you know, or someone at a bait and tackle shop. Unfortunately, Chestertown does not have a tackle store, but the Rite Aid in Kent Plaza does sell tackle.

Three types of fish are usually caught from the 213 bridge - channel catfish, white perch, and yellow perch. The most popular fish are the channel cats. They are not pretty, nor are they the hardest fighters for their size, but channel cats can grow

Word Processing Services

reports, term papers etc.prompt, accurate reasonable. Call Cathy 348-2126

My favorite outfit for catching cats is a medium action fishing rod with 15 pound test line. This outfit an be rigged with one or two size 1/0 hooks, and 1/4 ounce sinker. Although I enjoy fighting a fish on light tackle, I have found that too many fish are lost in the fifteen feet bridge. Many types of bait will catch catfish. My favorite bait is shrimp. They seem to work better than worms, they do not fall off the hook as easily as liver and they can be bought at the supermarket on the way to the river. I usually spend about three dollars on bait.

a bunch of fried perch makes a us If the shrimp are small, they can be used whole; otherwise, cut them into bite-sized portions. There is no need to waste bait. On an average three hour outing, I usually catch about three decent sized (fifteen inch) fish in addition to many smaller ones. Occasionally, they may be caught literally as fast as fishing experience cannot they can be reeled in. At other time they cannot be caught at all. Boho these are rare extremes.

Shrimp can be used to call perch also. The predominant sp cies is the white perch. These fit average much smaller than the cal fish, but they can be caught in large of air between the water and the numbers Light tackle makes these for more fun to catch. Four to six post test line and a five or six foot life action rod make a good outfit perch. These fish swim in school so it is a good idea to fish differ places until you find them. If y catch a perch, others will usu follow. Although they are not large

The most important element fishing success is the right anim Whether you fish on a blustery day or a lazy summer afternoon object is to have fun. Fish fillets always be bought at the store, bil

Colonial Motors

Rt. 213 south Next to Chesapeake Home Center 778 6018

Low Mileage and dependable cars and trucks A full service repair shop Quality trained technicians

> All work guaranteed with fair price 24 hour towing - 778-4022

The Best There Ever Was

and Michael S. McGinniss

One thing that is constantly fiscussed, regardless of the sport, is what would be the greatest team ever. Well, presented for your apgroval (or disapproval) is this, the All-Time College Basketball All-Star team, featuring the greatest clayers that have ever stepped onto he hardwood. In order to eliminate comparison with players of today, a nost-1980 team also has been included. Without further delay, here is the All-Time College Basketball All-Star team (and we bet you will

First Team players: Elvin Hayes (Forward), Houston; Pete Maravich (Shooting Guard), LSU; Lew Alcindor (Center), UCLA; Oscar Robertson (Point Guard). Cincinnati: and Bill Russell (Forward), San Francisco. Head Coach: John Wooden (UCLA), ably as sisted by Aldoph Rupp (Kentucky) and Bobby Knight (Indiana). Second Team players: Adrian

Dantley (Forward), Notre Dame Earvin Johnson (Point Guard), Michigan State; Bill Walton (Cener), UCLA; Jerry West (Shooting Guard), West Virginia: and John Havlicek (Forward), Ohio State.

By now, you are either willing to throw this away as a worthless piece of garbage or accept this as law. In keeping with the academic nature of this piece, we will now atempt to prove our conclusions let's begin by discussing the "big nan in the middle," or, to you nontasketball people, the Center.

Two players have dominated his position, both from UCLA: Lew Alcindor (a.k.a., Kareem Ab-(ul-Jabbar) and Bill Walton. This vas easy. Clearly, someone who has won three NCAA tournament MVP's deserves to start. Because Acindor accomplished this feat, he sarts ahead of Bill Walton Bill Russell and Elvin Hayes take a great pair of forwards, even hough Russell made his mark as a onter. (If you, the reader, can come with a better player than Bill Rissell, please come forward.) This taves the second team with the apable tandem of John Havlicek nd Adrian Dantley. The all-around by of Russell and Hayes make hem the clear choice here, but some rguments can be made for placing lavlicek in the First Team. If one fing is clear, it is that these are the ost dominant forwards in College Basketball history

Pete Maravich's record of 44.2 Dints per game over his college Greer stands out as the greatest firesive achievement in NCAA Pistol Pete clearly gets a Poton the starting five. Getting the to him will be the job of our ont guard, Oscar Robertson. If tese people ever get tired, the Secof Team guards will pick up where e "Big O" and Pistol Pete leave I Jerry West and Earvin "Magic" on will fill that secondary role. The key to any team is the

Clearly the most success

coach in College Basketball (10 tampionships in 12 years) is Rupp and Bobby Knight can work alongside Wooden to help this team reach its full potential (personal conflicts aside).

As promised, we have also devised an All-Star team of players in the 1980's. First Team: Len Bias (Forward), Maryland: Steve Alford (Shooting Guard), Indiana; David Robinson (Center), Navy; Dwayne Washington (Point Guard). Syracuse; and James Worthy (Forward), North Carolina

College's All-Time Rest Lew Alcinder, C Elvin Haves, F Bill Russell, F

Oscar Robertson, G

Pete Maravich, G

John Wooden, Coach On the Second Team: Walter Berry (Forward), St. John's; Johnny Dawkins (Point Guard), Duke; Patrick Ewing (Center), Georgetown: Michael Jordan (Shooting Guard), North Carolina; and Danny Manning (Forward), Kansas. Coaching this team will be: Jim Valvano (NC State), assisted by Dean Smith (North Carolina) and John Thompson (Georgetown)

When a coach is building the best possible basketball team, he is likely to start with the center position. Since 1980, the two dominant centers in college basketball have been David Robinson and Patrick Ewing. Problem: who gets to start on the first team and who sits on the bench with Dean Smith and John Thompson? Our decision is to start Robinson because he brought his Navy teams to a much higher level of play. The critical difference is that Georgetown without Ewing would still win. Take Robinson away from Navy and you are left with nothing. Navy's success in the mid-80's was a result of Robinson's leadership and immense athletic

Without a doubt, the Atlantic

UCLA's John Wooden. Adolph Coast Conference has recently produced some of the best forwards in the country. Our selections of Len Bias and James Worthy are representative of this trend. Walter Berry and Danny Manning will serve on the Second Team. Bias and Worthy provided some of the most exciting games that the ACC has ever seen. Placing those two on the First Team should provide solid scoring and effective inside play. Since the Second Team is more important to the All-80's team than to the All-Time team, Manning and Berry will get many opportunities to contrib-

The First Team point guard, Johnny Dawkins, is an obvious selection. Backing him up on the bench is Pearl Washington. Dawkins is the best passer on this team. and that is what you want out of a point guard (scoring points always comes in handy, even with point guards). Dawkins also possess a keen court-awareness which will vastly improve the team's quality of

Now for the most controversial

selection. At shooting guard, Steve Alford gets the nod over Michael Jordan. Reason One: it should be noted that selections are made strictly on the basis of COLLEGE play; professional performance is an entirely different matter Alford's four year career under Taskmaster Knight deserves more credit than Jordan's two years under Docile Dean, Reason Two: Alford contributed far more to his team's success than Jordan did to North Carolina's. Simply put, UNC would win without Jordan: Indiana would have trouble without Alford. Reason Three: With Bias and Worthy up front, Alford will only shoot from the perimeter and from the foul line. When the team needs a lift, i.e. great play, Jordan can enter and stay in. This position is the one with the most substitution. Probably both players will get equal time on the floor.

There you have it, our All-Time College Basketball Teams. We do not know how well these teams would work together. It is unfortunate that these teams will only play in the realm of the imagination

Shorewomen Hope to Make Splash at MAC Championships

by Bill Beekman

The women's swimming team finished their dual meet season on Saturday with a loss to Elizabethtown, 117-63. The loss put the Shorewomen's record at 5-7 for the regular season.

The women are in the tapering phase right now, resting up to prepare for the MAC championships which started yesterday at Widener University. They will swim the equivalent of five meets in three days in the championships which extend through Saturday

Against Elizabethtown, the Shorewomen failed to break any school marks for the first time this year. "Hopefully, we're saving our best times for this weekend." said Coach Dennis Berry. "We want to swim our best races in the championships, not before."

"A lot of the women had very good meets against Elizabethtown, explained Berry, "not their absolute best times, but right where they should be at this time. I'm optimistic about this weekend

Last year the Shorewomen placed twelth at the MAC championships with 28 points. Their goal this year is to beat last year's point total. The other colleges the Shorewomen are particularly gunning for include Western Maryland and Lycoming.

The Shorewomen's best chance for success is to swim well in the relays. Among individual swimmers, Jenny Korten in the 100 fly is Washington's best hope. "If she swims up to her level, she can place in the top six or seven," predicted Berry. Last year Korten finished

Casey Swim Center Earns Honors for Excellence in Aquatics

by Bill Beekman

The National Recreation and Parks Association (NRPA) recently honored the Casey Swim Center with the Excellence in Aquatics Award. The award recognizes effective and positive use of facilities in school and communitity over the

The NRPA measures several factors: program development and growth; facility use and growth; cost effective operations; revenue; and manner of daily operation.

The Casey Swim Center was particularly recognized for their use of computers to streamline operations and for steady growth since January, 1985, when the Swim Center first opened to the community with the WC Swim Club. Since then, the center has expanded its program from student recreational group swimming teams for the community, the College women's swimming team, and fifteen community based instructional programs. Additionally, the Casey Swim Center has served as a model program for other small colleges. This all came into bearing in the NRPA's decision

Casey Swim Center Director Dennis Berry said the award "reflects the hard work of a group of people over an extended period of time."Those people include Berry, former aquatic director Brian Bishop who left for Trenton State at the start of this year, current aquatic director Diane Klien, and Jeff Troester, who has worked for the Swim

Center as pool manager. This is the best kind of award we can get," added Berry. "It's not for what we look like, but for what use and community lap swim to age we've done.

La Vida Yacht Inc.

Employment Opportunity

Responsible Person Needed to work Part and or Full time Cleaning Sail Boats Duties will expand to other areas including maintenance of all boat systems Ability to work alone as well as manage other employees essential Call to arrange interview La Vida Yachts Inc. 778-6330

La Vida Yacht Inc.

Employment Opportunity Secretarial Position Available at Yacht Sale Chartering Offices

We are looking for an outgoing responsible individual who is capable of handling all areas of secretarial work and is willing to work weekend days

Call La Vida Yacht Inc. to arrange interview -778-6330

Enjoy America's Favorite Pan Pizza...for Less! Pizza Hut Pan Pizza.

The one with the thick, freshly baked crust. Smothered with 100% real mozzarella cheese, tangy sauce, all your favorite toppings, and a second layer of mozzarella. The one we bake to perfection, for our famous Pan Pizza flavor.

Order your favorite Pizza Hut* Pan Pizza today, and save!

Makin il gical.

Dine-in or Carryout
Check your local yellow pages for a Pizza Hut® restaurant nearest you.

$2.00 off any large Pan Pizza, or $1.00 off any medium Pan Pizza. Hurry! This special offer expires soon. One coupon per party per visit at participating Pizza Hut® restaurants.

Pizza Hut. $2 OFF

Rt. 213 Kent Plaza Chestertown 778-1070

Please present coupon when ordering. Not valid in combination with any other offer, 1/20 ce cash redemption value. p. 1983 Pizza Hut, Inc. Good only through. March 31, 1988

Kaylor Preserves His Craft

Printer Mike Kaylor calls himelf a "letterpress preservationist." Letterpress (printing) is my real we. I'm trying to preserve the opipment and the craft, which is abor intensive, and that's mainly why it's gone West over the years. of technological advances appened to kill letterpress as ecomically feasible." Kaylor is the ourneyman printer who has based imself in the press room that is diagent to the O'Neill Literary Letterpress is printing that is one from a raised paper surface sing individual metal characters to form a line of prose or poetry. In its nception, letterpress was used priarily to produce books, but also gained popularity as a commercial redium for printing cards and posters. By this century, however, leturpress was rendered nearly obsoete by technological advances such offset printing, photographic pesetting, and electronic printing, all of which are much quicker meth ods of printing than letterpress.

emore generic than those of letterabout the quality of (letterpress) printing of a poster or a chapbook of printing that is very valuable to me. poetry. Teaching letterpress has The sharpness of the type of metal given Kaylor the opportunity "to gives a definition that is very difficult to achieve with offset printing. In offset printing, the ink is generally floating on the surface (of the page). It doesn't really become integrated," unlike materials printed on letterpress, which Kaylor describes as "tactile Inklings Press is Kaylor's own commercial printing business that has taken on a number of projects from the College over the past six years, such as posters announcing the coming of some lecturer or another. For instance, the posters announcing the readings by John Barth and Michael Martone were produced by Inklings. Kaylor feels that letterpress itself is capable of conveying a certain character about the subject it advertises. "We try to make (the poster) reflect the work of the writer as much as we know. The type reflects their image or their personality, or how we perceive the

For the past three years, Kaylor has conducted a printing workshop Although these methods are that offers students the chance to laster, Kaylor feels that the results learn the intricacies of letterpress printing and allows them to underpress printing. "There is something take various projects, such as the

the kind of journalistic piece in which the writer takes up all his space explaining why he did not get the story," said NY Times reporter

Vincent Canby of Director Ross documentary was originally intended to examine the effects of General William Tecumseh

Sherman's scorched-earth march through the south towards the end of search of "the possibilty of romantic writing of that person."

preserve it in a way other than just getting hold of the equipment and finding a place to store it and cleaning it up; preserving it by creating a group of people who are interested and may pursue it."

Kaylor has at times been able to employ some of his students to work on some of Inkling's projects. Last semester, he and his students produced stationery and Christmas cards to be included in the catalogue of Cahill, a publishing company. "I was very pleased with them. It's really wonderful that (there are people) who appreciate how much hand workmanship goes into them."

At the moment. Kaylor is working on a poster for Cahill's next catalogue; he's also trying to get the Metropolitan Museum of Art to "commit to something. They want us to do some stationery." As yet, the terms of a deal have yet to be decided.

He has other projects he'd like to accomplish in the future. "We're not ambitious enough to (print) books, but that's in the back of our minds. I guess that's the ambition of all fine printers. The book is the ultimate expression of fine print-

"It is the movie equivalent to change in the course of "Sherman's March" was due to McElwee's girlfriend leaving him which helped him to channel his passions into making a film. McElwee more or less follows McElwee's Sherman's March. This Sherman's trail by primarily concentrating on picking up "pretty. oddball young women" or old girlfriends. His success with this film is found in getting these women to be unaffected in front of his camera. the Civil War but instead became From the ordinary to the eccentric, On Mr. McElwee's own march in the women talk about themselves, their relationships, and their lives love in the South today." This without hesitation. To appreciate this deadpan. dryly comic film one has to accept the filmmaker's pace and his tendency to take time out to cite his latest humiliation.

Sherman's March is the latest installment of the Washington College Film Series It will be shown on Feb. 26, 28, 29, at 7:30 p.m. in the Norman James Theater. Admission is $1 for students and faculty, $2 for

-researched by Maria Saravia

CAMPUS CALENDAR Friday, February 26th: The Drama Department Presents A BECKETT EVENING- Tawes Theatre (Limited Seating), 8p.m.

Saturday, February 27th: The Drama Department Presents A BECKETT EVENING- Tawes Theatre (Limited Seating), 8p.m. Monday, February 29th: The Film Series- SHERMAN'S MARCH. Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 2nd: Dance Club Film, "West Side Story", Coffee House, 6p.m.

Mike Kaylor demonstrates how to lock the printing presses in the O'Neill Literary House. Kaylor is devoted to the preservation of letterpress printing.

Filmmaker Marching to Give Lecture

McElwee, whose wacky movie Sherman's March took the film world by storm, will visit campus on Thursday, March 3. McElwee's discussion of his film and the art of filmmaking begins at 8:00 p.m. in Hynson Lounge, and is open to the public. Sherman's March will be shown in Norman James Theatre at 7:30 p.m. on February 26, 28, and ered one of the year's ten best films in 1986. Subtitled "An Improbable Search for Love," the film is a droll self-portrait of an anguished romantic. The Boston-based filmmaker was sidetracked from his initial intention to chronicle the modern day and a rock singer he meets in a sears repercussions of General parking lot. Sherman's devastating march through the South when his girlfriend abandoned him in New York. Devastated himself, McElwee goes home to North Carolina for solice.

Documentary filmmaker Ross With his broken heart no longer in the original project, he takes his sister's advice: use the camera as a way to meet women.

More or less, McElwee does retrace Sherman's route through Georgia and the Carolinas. What emerges, however, is the story of the brokenhearted filmmaker's ill-fated quest for love, and the portraits of nine real-life women he encounters, including old girlfriends and new acquaintances. Among them are: Sherman's March was consid- Pat, an aspiring actress with a passion for Burt Reynolds, Charleen, a former teacher of the filmmaker's with a lot of advice about his love life, a doctoral student living alone on an island, an interior esigner involved withat survivalist group,

Sherman's March, says the New York Times, "is something very different, a deadpan, dryly comic, movie equivalent to the kind of journalisite piece in which the armed with a camera, a microphone, writer takes up all his space explainand a $9,000 grant to make a film. ing why he did not get the story

Harbor City Ballet

Baltimore's Harbor City Ballet which the public is invited free of performance are $7 for adults and $4 sylvania Ballet. for students and children

The artistic director of the nine-

Company will perform in Tawes charge. Carmen, who co-founded Theatre on Saturday, March 5, be- the Company last summer with Dr. ginning at 7:30 p.m. Tickets for the Daniel Kane, danced with the Penn-

Harbor City Ballet is member Company, Phillip Carman, Baltimore's resident professional will be leading a ballet master class ballet company, performing at the in the College's Dance Studio on Baltimore Museum of art's Meyer-Friday, May 4, at 3:30 p.m., to hoff Auditorium.

The

Beat

Goes

Campus Paperback Bestsellers

- Windmills of the Gods, by Sidney Sheldon (Warner, $4.95.)
   Story of a woman trapped by international consoracy.
- Cahrin and Hobbes, by Bill Watterson (Andrews, McMeel & Parker, $5.95.) Carbons about the life of a little boy.
- The Far Side Observer, by Gary Larson. (Andrews, McMeel, & Parker, $5.95.) Latest Far Side carbons.
- Billy and the Boingers Bootleg, by Berke Breathed (Little, Brown, $7.95.) Latest Bloom County carbons.
- Garden of Shadows, by C.V. Andrews (Pocket $4.95).
   Beginning of the horror that besid the Dollanganger family.
- A Season on the Brink, by John Feinstein (Friesde, $4.50) Indiana University's backerbal learn during the 1985-86 season
- Catmopolitan, by liene Hochberg. (Pocket, $9.95.) Humorou look at cats using Cosmopolitan magazine as model. Red Storm Rising, by Torn Clancy (Berkley, $4.95.) Russians plan a major assault on the West.
- The Eyes of the Dragon, by Stephen King, (Signet/NAL, $4.50) Enthraling masterpiece of magical, evil and daring adventure.
- The Prince of Tides, by Pat Corroy (Burtam, $4.95.) The beaut of South Carolina and the dusty gitter of New York City.

New & Recommended

ump, by Winston Groom. (Berkley, $3.96.) Outrageous of turnly nuthouse of a book.

ENTERTAINMENT

Lloyd Cole & the Commotions Leap from the Mainstream

by Don Steele

Lloyd Cole and the Commotions are one of the most popular and critically acclaimed bands in England, but they have a very small American following, so they are heard only on those "other" (alternative) radio stations. Their most recent album, Mainstream, shows why their success is warranted. The album shows emotion, and each song conveys a message. The band has its own style which aids in transferring their message to the public.

from Scotland, where their success rivals another Scottish band, Simple Minds. Lloyd Cole, the lead singer of the hand that carries his name, has been hailed as a poet by some critics humor based on the song lyrics he writes and the manner in which he transfers "My Bag," deals with the problem what he wants to say to his audience. when listening to Mainstream is the humor prevalent throughout the songs. It is also obvious in the album how well the band knows its audience and the problems that they conformity is not the only answer. He uses the line "All you have to do is crawl." but the way he sings it implies that if you conform and crawl with the pack you will go nowhere.

The title song deals with the problem of conformity. Cole uses "Feels like prohibition baby give me joy.

One of the more humorous tune son the album is "Sean Penn Blues." The song was penned by Scottish comedian Robbie Coltrane about the famed Mr. Madonna going to a Minnesota college to read poetry. The premise and the title will cause This four-member band hails any listener to chuckle slightly. One interesting concept about this song is that it is written more as a dialogue than a song, so the lyrics and some of the voices Cole uses add to its

of drugs. The lyrics include some One thing which must be noted drug terms sung by Cole as if he were on drugs. You can hear the worsening state of the user throughout the song. At the start, he is coherent, and as the song progresses the speech worsens. Eventually, the speaker of the song talks only about drugs, the only thing he wants:

The first song on Mainstream, sarcasm to convey his feeling that the hard sell/ More give me more give me more more more."

The most emotional song on the album is called "Hey, Rusty." deals with a reunion of two school friends. One has made something of himself, while the other is doing little with his life. The friend who is not doing well can think only of the past, while the other just wants to go on with his life. The interesting aspect of the song is the repetition in the lyrics. The song opens with memories and closes with the friends trying to get together and be young again, trying to return to the

The rest of the songs on Mainstream all contain different messages with the same meaningful lyrics. Although each song has a message to convey, this does not detract from the listening pleasure.

Lloyd Cole and the Commotions are a band who have not compromised their beliefs; certainly, they just want to make good music They don't turn out a song that has nothing to say. So, if you want to take a leap off the Mainstream of pop music, treat yourself to Lloyd Cole and the Commotions and en-

Mainstream, the latest from Lloyd Cole and the Commotions, fee tures good music and meaningful lyrics, but has only received mismal attention in the United States

Chestertown Movie Theater WALL STREET

778-1575

Hang Fo. Sun 7898.19

- SECRET MORE SELF-HELP FILES -

Violet Standinge Of MININGS

then she swelle

like one

sank to the bottom PEOPLE ATE THEM FEROCIOUSLY

We paid her medical

we made that &

bills all in guarters that

CHEY SYS

Sherman's March

Washington College Film Series Norman James Theater Friday * Sunday * Monday 7:30 p.m.

$1 admission — students / faculty / staff $2 - all others

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 20

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, March 4, 1988

fee house

The Shoremen opened up their 1988 regular season impressively on Wednesday, romping Lynchburg. 28-4. Tomorrow they face Division I powerhouse University of North Carolina at unfriendly Chapel Hill, the first tough game of a hard schedule which includes Hopkins, Navy, and Hobart. (see story, p. 9)

Security Plagued With Excessive Complaints

Problems Attributed In Part To Weekend Campus Visitors

by Andrea Kehoe

bad" in the number of security violations that occurred on campus, according to director of security Jerry Roderick activity than we've seen in the past," said Roderick, adding that his office is trying to determine whether the increased violations are linked to the number of visiting groups on campus at the time One of the fights occurred on the main lawn area in front of Hodson Hall between individuals leaving Middle Hall at approximately 1:00 a.m. Saturday. A pushing match ensued and erapted into fighting; people in the crowd then jumped in, though it is undetermined whether to break up the fight or to get involved. The local police were called for assistance and helped to get the situation under control, Roderick

A second incident involved a Last weekend was "unusually fight in East Hall between two residents of the building in the early hours of Saturday morning. The incident was discovered by Security Officer Williams as he patrolled and

"We had more activity on the case has been forwarded to the tampus in the way of malicious Student Conduct Council for Another assault allegedly occurred Saturday night at the Lambda Pi Delta fratemity party in Cecil. Two nonstudents who attended the party reported to the Chestertown police that they were assaulted; an investigation is underway

"We're obviouslyconcerned when we start getting a lot of assault and battery cases reported," said Roderick. "We look for ways to defuse a situation before it reaches that point, but we need student cooperation with all of these problems.

In addition, a fire alarm was pulled in Worcester at 3:40 a.m. Saturday and a fire extinguisher later set off. In the Reid Hall parking lot, the antennae of several vehicles were bent, while several thefts from the hallways and common areas of Minta Martin also took place.

INSIDE: A Spy Story.....page 6 Lax Preview.....page 9 Shoremen Sampler.....page 11

Also, a female student awoke at approximately 1:30 a.m. Saturday morning to find a man in her room in Reid Hall. The intruder fled when the student screamed for help. Roderick reminded residents to avoid propping doors open, as this undermines security efforts.

The office is also currently investigating the spraypainting of obscenities around Kent House and East and Middle Halls Monday Anyone with information regarding any of these incidents should contact the security situation regarding the last Sig department at ext. 310.

Attributing the problems to the large number of visitors to the College, Dean of Students Maureen Kelley McIntire said, "It was a fairly hyper weekend."

McIntire said that in the last 18-24 months visits from outsiders -"people who don't feel particularly committed to our policies and procedures" - have emerged as potential trouble areas

"We've had a good year," she added, cautioning that an overreaction is unnecessary. "I hate for this to undo all the good work people dents and non-students, like this have done this year."

"Where the Party Went Wrong"

175 Students Attend Forum to Discuss Fighting at Campus Parties

by Tony Caligiuri

seventy five students, representing every fraternity, sorority, and campus organization, attended an open forum last Tuesday in the Coffee House to discuss the problems which plagued the party in East Hall after the Birthday Ball.

The forum, which was sponsored by the alcohol task force and

The idea to hold such a forum was the product of the alcohol task force meeting last week. There was discussion in that meeting about the

Sig party in East Hall following

Birthday Ball. After the meeting

Dean Edward Maxcy of Student Affairs announced his decision to write a letter to The Elm which effectively cancelled a party in East

Hall scheduled for last Friday. Following some dicussion, it was decided by the task force to hold an open forum to discuss how to prevent problems from arising during student parties. Because Romer was scheduled to talk during a Resident

Assistant meeting in the near future conduct the forum. Bodner was also lowing the argument, a fight broke out between the two resulting in an injury to the student from a broken bottle. A series of smaller brawls

There were a lot of people at the party that night who had been drinking since dinner, " said Bodner, "It was like most of the fights and incidents which happen at social functions. They take place between stu-

one. It's human nature, when you took place later in the evening.

see someone you don't know at a party who starts to get loud and obnoxious, you become defensive. Rodner said that it was this factor combined with the drinking and the closed-in space of the basement which created the tension.

Dr. Roemer raised the question of how to control a party, resulting in comments from several students that were present. Bodner as featured Counseling Psychologist well as fellow Phi Sigma member

"We need more outlets ... The weekend is the only time we have to blow off steam.."

Walter Roemer and Phi Sigma Sean Kennedy pointed out that both Kappa president John Bodner, denying entrance to a party and relasted for approximately one hour fusing to serve an intoxicated perand ranged in topics from problems son can lead to more fights, with fraternity parties to complaints "Breaking up fights usually about the alcohol policy in the cof-causes more fights," said Bodner, who continued. "Fraternities ultimately end up playing the part of Bouncers." Added Kennedy, "Refusing to serve someone who's already had enough is a sure way to problems which took place during a start a fight."

'We need more outlets," said iunior Rick Gerhardt, who blamed many of the problems of the weekend parties on the lack of a social life during the week, specifically on the strict stand of the Coffee House on the drinking age. "The weekend is the only time to blow off steam ... we can no longer go into the Coffee House during the week to enjoy a few beers in a comfortable atmosphere" said Gerhardt, who continued, "either take a risk on liability or see the social aspect of this school decline on a similar subject, he was asked to Other students shared in the invited to present his views on the frustration of the coffee house policies as one senior said, "There is more of a penalty for having a civilized beer in the Coffee House under According to Bodner, an alumni and a student began arguing age than there is for getting loaded in the basement of East Hall. Foland fighting at a frat party."

As Roemer asked for suggestions on how to improve the situations at weekend parties, several comments were offered.

The first suggestion was to provide a larger place to hold many of the fraternity parties. "Why can't the coffee house rent its facilities and give responsibility for organizing and conducting a party to the fraternity, as is done with the Dining Hall, " said student Frank Creegan.

continued on page 4

Editorial

Safe Drinking

In spite of the disheartening activities around campus last weekend, which resembled the events of an inner city neighborhood more than of an institution of higher education, the turnout at Tuesday night's forum "Why The Party Went Wrong" was impressive. Approximately 175 students - male and female, Greek and non Greek — lined the walls of the Student Center to join in a discussion led by Dr. Walter Roemer, a counseling psychologist on staff at Washington College, on how to control social function

The fact that so many are concerned about the effects of violence at events intended as harmless entertainment is commendable Realizing that alcohol can be consumed without blood being spilled is a milestone for a certain minority here. Nonetheless, a few of the opinions expressed at the forum were disturbing

Some students asserted that hosts are not responsible for denying entrance to parties or cutting off the consumption of those who are particularly intoxicated or for breaking up fights. Ouite simply, groups should not organize social functions that may erupt into violence if they are unwilling to accept the possible results - one does not create the potential for a certain set of consequences if one is not able to deal with them.

Obviously, party sponsors should not accept all of the responsibility for the actions of their guests, but groups can consider some of the suggestions made the other night aimed at reducing undesirable behavior. A certain number of frat members, for example, might remain sober to act as bouncers. Additionally, holding parties in crowded basements simply heightens tensions - admittedly, the number of other settings is limited, but not nonexistent. Locations such as Phoebe's (the basement of Tawes Theater), recently the scene of a very successful Blackhearts Ball, or the boathouse, which should be used more frequently than just during freshman orientation and the luau, need to be further explored, but certainly hold potential.

More importantly, though, groups on campus need to incorporate prohibitions against fighting as norms. Greek organizations sometimes fine members for missing meetings; likewise, those who damage the group's image by fighting should be fined, and if repeated incidents occur, terminated from membership.

Other comments made at the forum centered on the peer pressure to drink that teetotalers and student alcoholics face here. One assertion was that those who do not wish to drink should not attend parties. Aside from displaying a certain callousness towards peers who may be alcoholics, underlying this view is the assumption that not drinking is somehow freakish. Maybe the proponent of this perspective believes that the administration should stipulate that any student eccentric enough not to imbibe spend the remainder of his College career sitting in his dorm room

Most students at Washington College who elect to drink alcohol claim that they possess sufficient maturity to do so; perhaps they should channel some of this maturity into empathy for the situations of

At any rate, the very existence of debate over alcohol-related issues is a healthy sign that Washington College may be on its way to practicing safe drinking. Bottoms up.

Washington College Elm

| Editor                    | 京是是一种五年              |
|---------------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief           |                      |
| News Editor               |                      |
| Features Editor           | Jennifer M. Harrison |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekmar         |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Susan DiLeo          |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Balze        |
| Graphics Editor           | Todd Karr            |
| Manag                     |                      |
| Managing Editor           | Cathy Jewell         |
| Advertising Manager       | Erin Hodge-Williams  |
| Circulation Manager       |                      |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and exam weeks

taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editors cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departm Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mailed c/o The Elm, Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters become the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be considered for on in that week's issue.

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Anne dormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 12:00 Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 12:00 Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Lax Fence An Evesore To The Editor:

RE: The fence

I'm sure the Native Americans who originated the game of Lacrosse would find the new fence an exercise in absurdity

Actually. I think this is a clever ploy by the athletic department to have our lacrosse field declared a wildlife sanctuary in order to receive federal funding. Additionally, I certainly hope this new Washington College evesore is not perceived by Russian Satellites as a new missle site in violation of the I.M.F. treaty. On the other hand, why stop with the Lax field? Why not fence the entire campus? After all, fence is cheaper this year than next, and further, our government tells us that the "red threat" to our southern border is but a few years from reaching our homes and fami-

Let's keep Lacrosse safe for democracy!

Fifty Guineas For A Flag To the Editor

Walking around Washington

College, one cannot help but feel some sense of reverence for the historical significance which is so deeply imbedded in this campus. From a nine foot bronze statue of our namesake as well as one of the first architects and defenders of this nation, to the steps of William Smith Hall which served as a podium for some of the most historically respected statesmen of this country

HELP WANTED

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly as home! Write: P.O. Box 17, Clark NJ 07066

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM! Excellent income! Details send self-addressed, stamped envel-WEST, Box 5877, Hillside, N

mate ties with the history of the United States than most other colleges or universities.

Yet despite these ties we seem to have invested so much time and money into repeatedly proclaiming, we have allowed our banner and symbol of this nation to deteriorate. Any person visiting Washington College for the first time would be surprised to see that our Administra on allows an American Flag to be displayed in the center of this Campus in the condition that it is. With so much concern last week as to what the father of our nation would think of his investment of the Eastem Shore in this town of Chester, I ouldn't expect to see a smile on his face as he looked up to our battered and worn national banner displayed not thirty yards in front of his memorial. For his fifty guineas and his name. I believe we owe him a little more

Sincerely, Tony Caligiuri Preserve Film William Jones Series' Quality

> To the Editor: Since funding for the arts is > usually the first target of so-called budget-cutters in this country, I am not surprised at the SGA's proposal to stop underwriting the film series deficit. Still, I am angry. My consolation lies in the hope that this proposal will be rejected by either the faculty or the Board of Visitors and About the worse thing that > could happen if this proposal were passed would be the curtailment or vulgarization of the film series. Such a move would make the Col-

Washington College has more inti- lege a much duller place. Another possible consequence might be an increase in the admission fee. This would undermine one of the most important reasons for hosting the film series, which is the encouragement of an interest in film. The price at the door should be kept as low as possible in order to attract those students who might not otherwise watch these films What is most likely to happenif the proposal passes is that the student activities fee will be increased. I am uncomfortable with this, because I am uncertain whether the SGA will spend their extra thousand dollars in a way that contributes as much to the College.

Sincerely Mark Ambre '88 English

Don't Blame The Greeks To the Editor:

I would like to thank The Flm for printing the articles concerning Organizations. Bob Caldwell and Steve Leary presented readers with a much needed account of the good that can come from Greek Organizations. Also, Ryder Daniels should be commended for providing an unbiased, and honest evaluation of Greek Life as seen by a non Greek

Yes, I will agree with Daniels, that in the past there have been a few individuals who have gone over board while "training" pledges. The number of such incidents are slowly but surely decreasing. I can not speak for the Fraternities, but being a member of a Sorority, I recall attending a meeting conceming hazing with Dean McIntire. continued on page 5

OLD WHARF INN

Enjoy Waterfront Dining Located at the foot of Cannon Street

> Chestertown, Md. (301) 778-3566 Credit Cards Accepted

Film Series Enhances Intellectual Life In last week's Elm, there was some news different in film (different, used in this contuition, the Film Series would certainly have a films now shown, and fees w

which to me was quite distressing. It seems that our Student Government Association Senate is requesting a discontinuation of funding for the Washington College Film Series. The director of the Film Series, Martin Kabat, was surprised by this request, and so was I. Perhaps we both wrongly believe that one of the purposes of the SGA Senate is "to encourage student activities which contribute to knowledge and thought about contemporary issues" (SGA Constitution, Article 2, section 3f). The cultural value offered by the Film Series certainly befits this objective.

Admittedly, many of the Film Series presentations are not what one might call box claimed and sometimes obscure films now office hits, and this is one of the reasons I so enjoy them. One can always rent a popular film, or an old classic at a local video store, or see the latest 'smash hit' at a movie theater, but where can one go to find She's Gotta Have II, A Great Wall..., or Tampopo ? We at Washington College are lucky enough to be able to look to our Film Series for something text, does not have a derogatory undertone).

The Series also presents a number of popular films, for diversity or conformity, depending upon your viewpoint. Already this semester we have seen Platoon, and last semester there was About Last Night, Peggy Sue Got Married, and others which must have been familiar to many students. Yes, the Film Series could start bringing in only box office sell-outs, and they might bring in more money, but personally, I doubt that this would be the case at all. To begin with, popular films would be more expensive to contract. Also, those who regularly attend the critically acpresented would likely stop attending (a loss of revenue). Those who are not now spectators probably still would not have the incentive to see the movies, even if one of the Rambo series were played every week (Rambo is only an example-I admire Sly Stallone as much as anyone, I am sure). If better chance at breaking even each year: raised yet again to cover the added expense of more students would natronize the Series Currently, however, it does not, and it has not for over ten years. It should therefore not come unexpectedly to the SGA Senate that Dr. Kabat needs their support in covering the Series' deficit

Cathy Jewell

As Dr. Kabat said in last week's article. the Film Series was never meant to be a profitmaking program, and the deficit is an expected and accepted part of a non-profit program, which intends to further enhance the cultural and intellectual spirit behind the liberal arts education many students intend to receive at Washington College. If we force the program to cover its own expenses, its purpose will be thwarted. A raise in admission fees will inhibit many from attending the junior majoring in English and history.

more popular films, if the Series were to substitute these. Dr. Kabat could request an increase in the Student Activities fee, but I see no guarantee that the revenue from such an increase would necessarily go to the Film Series, and in light of ever-increasing tuition, this proposition would not be well-received among students. None of these proposals is a solution, and each will instigate negative changes in a program worth preserving in its extant format.

I believe the Film Series is one of the better ways the SGA spends our money, in support of a culturally enlightening, entertaining, and different selection of films. I hope that more students on campus will support the Film Series by attending the films different as they are, just for the fun of it. Take the chance, and you might be pleasantly surprised. The Swedish version of Rocky IV might even be showing. Cathy Jewell is a series due to the bad choice of films. Most of the people who go fall Funds." asleep anyway; the foreign films are terrible '

Imran Kahr

Dubai IlAE Freshman

there were 2,000 students attending this insti-Should the SGA continue to supplement the film series' budget?

Debbie Nahmias Roosevelt, NI Impior

"I don't see why the S.G.A. should "Since the Film Series is part of the "I don't believe the S.G.A. should "Yes, I do think they should concover the losses incurred by the film curriculum the money should come fund the Film Series, although I'm tinue but the students should have students opportunity to see quality from tuition rather than SGA not sure who else would, the administration perhaps. One thing I do movies to go see." know is that the foreign films blow As the Pharoh Ben Hinkle once said 'Import beer, not movies,' "

Leho Poldm: Baltimore, MD Sophomore

Shawn Prendergast Baltimore, MD Junior

some sort of say in the selection of

Amy Tidball Bucyrus, OH

"Yes, I think they should give the movies that they may not be able to see because of living in C-Town."

by Dave Johnson

Campus Voices

Raise Activities Fee To Benefit Series received from each of these sources varies tive increase would allow for greater funding solutions could solve this particular problem, valuable function that the Washington Col- from year to year, therefore funding is diffi- for The Elm, The Pegasus, the concert series, an across the board increase in the compre-

presents both critically acclaimed domestic and foreign films to the student body at a reasonable fee. However, this valuable function does not excuse the Series from financial responsibility

Each semester for the last decade or so, compromised. the series has consistently run a deficit. Rather than explore the possiblity for change, the Film Series has chosen annually to solicit funding from an already overburdened S.G.A. Treasury. This choice should not become an adversarial issue when I suggest this action not be allowed to continue. A realistic solution can be attained.

This Film Series is not totally to blame for the financial burden it represents. The deficit it creates annually is due largely to the way in which it is funded. Currently the Series receives money from the Maryland Arts Council, the Student Activities Fee, admission receipts, and the S.G.A. The amounts entire College community. Such an innovalege Film Series serves on our campus. It cult to predict. The Student Government's portion has always been used exclusively to cover losses already incurred, however this year there simply is not enough money in the S.G.A budget to warrant the funding of the Series. Consequently, this event is being

Rob Caldwell

A small, $100 increase in the comprehensive student activities fee would actually double the current fee, alleviating this and similar future problems; the comprehensive fees each student now pays amount to $98.00. This is NOT a radical solution. Rather, it is a pragmatic and fiscally responsible resolution that would benefit the student body and the the film series, the health service, the S.G.A., hensive fee is the most desirable and the most and subsequently all the clubs and organizations currently funded by our activities fee.

In the absence of such foresight and rethere are several other viable solutions to this current problem. An increase in the portion of our activities fee already earmarked for the Film Series would suffice. Currently each student pays approximately $4 (3.99). Expanding this figure by $2, upping it to the $6 mark, would give the Series at least an additional $1,400

Another solution envisions the Film Series increasing the admission price by a dollar. This change would also bring in about a thousand additional dollars to the Film Series. A third solution would suggest that the Series apply for funding just as any other club would at the beginning of each semester, enjoy, we MUST raise the student activities rather than imposing on the S.G.A. budget at fee. Bob Caldwell is a senior American Studits weakest point. Although each of these realistic solution to this problem.

The Film Series financial woes highlight the financial burden placed on any organizasponsibility utilized to raise the activities fee, tion trying to diversify our student life. More money allocated for this Series and the rest of the activities fee should not be objectionable to any person with the best interests of the student body in mind. We have traditionally ignored the problem illuminated by the Film Series deficit and simply footed the bill. It is foolhardy to continue in this manner. The Film Series, the S.G.A., and the other organizations on campus cannot, and should not, be forced to suffer the consequences being placed on them by the insufficient activities fee. In order to maintain and improve the quality of student life in general, without compromising the activities we currently

Space Consultant Visits Miller Library

by Greg Hay well as Bill Tubbs, Washington escorted about by Professor Tubbs On February 23 and 24, College's Library coordinator.

Professor David Kaser, an Kaerchadachmentalkumi Asserquickly noticed that most Academic Library Building students and find out exactly how Consultant, from Indiana University arrived on campus after being invited to come and view the type of library that Washington College offers its students. Kaser has worked with 130 different libraries around the world from they feel about the way the library is set up and if the space is well used. Kaser spent the better half of two days at Washington College also talking to faculty and staff members getting their views on the library. many different areas such as Saudi Arabia, the orient, and Africa.

The first step that Kaser proposed was "should we add on?" Kaser proposed an automation project, that will also account for the On Tuesday, Kaser had need of additional space. Kaser was the evenings. He was very interested and impressed in how heavily Washington College used its library

A few of the concerns that Kaser had with the library was that it does not have very many video. tape or other mechanical learning aids. He also noticed that the library does not have as much as it needs in the way of archives and special the airconditioning and heating systems in the library also need assistance. He took into account that over the years." there is a great need for acoustics especially around the circulation desk near the entrance.

Kaser will be writing a report of recommendation later about how the library should use its space bet-Tubbs says that Kaser "wished he had more time to hear other opinions of the students and that Kaser finals.

well as Bill Tubbs, Washington escorted about by Professor Tubbs collections. As well as realizing that praised our building, and that he felt it was well designed and equipped and that people have treated it well

> Kaser suggested that not only should the library be open til 2:a m during finals week before semester break but as well as the week before. This semester at Washington College, the library will be open til 2:a.m. from the 13th . 17th of May as well as the week of

lunch with a group of 6 students, as Super Tuesday: A Southern Cure

primary season is here. The Iowa shire, Iowa and Michigan: stealing Caucus and the New Hampshire the electoral thunder from the Primary are already behind us. On North. The second objective is to rule but has decided to accept March Tuesday, March 8, Maryland and increase the number of Southern much of the South will leave their presidential candidates and increase impressions on the Presidential their chances of winning. There are race. Albert Gore has bet his whole two Southern candidates, Albert Presidential tive is to compete with New Hamp- South Carolina is an exception because its primary is on March 5. The Republican Party has no such 8 as the Southern primary day largely because the GOP has very little power in Southern state govCareer Center Series

Career Center will sponsor a series of life/work planning workshops on beginning next Tuesday and Wednesday.

The workshop will focus on the process of self-assessment during career planning. It is intended to assist those who are unsure of their career intentions by analyzing and possible.

The Washington College evaluating student interests, skills, and long term goals.

The workshops are open to any interested students and will consist of a series of 90 minute sessions which meet once a week for four weeks. Any interested students can sign up with Dawn Baker in the Spanish House as soon as

political commentary

candidacy on this primary called Gore and Jesse Jackson, who are Robert Dole and Patrick Robertson each hope that Super Tuesday will hand them the Republican nomination

Super Tuesday, the after the Democratic disaster of candidates to focus on the South 1984 The Southern Legislative Conference, a bipartisan group made up mostly of Democrats decided to organize Southern state primaries in such a way as to give an effective voice to the Southern electorate. This has culminated in the one day multistate primary. There

George Bush, counting on Super Tuesday. They will be the signals of the second objective's success though Jesse Jackson does not fit the third objective. The third objective is to influence the nomination of a candidate with Conservative or Centrist Southern Primary, was organized views. The fourth objective is to get

March 8 was chosen as the date for the primary because of a Democratic Party rule which says that Democrats cannot hold primaries or caucuses before the second Tuesday in March. This day was called the window. New Hamp- Monte F. Bourjaily is a junior and primary. The primary's first objec considered exceptions, and now lege Republicans.

The March 8 Southern Primary is an important event in the 1988 primary season. Seventeen tates participate, and 803 of the 2249 or 1/3 of the available delegates are chosen next Tuesday. The primary may not choose who will be facing who come November, but it will tell you who will not be around, and if nominees are not chosen, it will make the rest of the primary season interesting to follow. The success of the primary may signal the start of a new trend, multistate or even national primaries, while its failure may merely signal the death of a curiosity.

are four principle objectives of this shire, Iowa and Michigan were president of the Washington Col-

Student Forum

continued from page 1 Both he and Chris Schanno, head of Several of the suggestions the alcohol task force, were very involved actions by the fratemity or organization. Some suggested that the fraternities designate several brothers to stay sober while others suggested that fraternities take it from entering the parties. There were several critical remarks about the school's party registration policies. Some complained that the parties are so crowded because the administration allows only one party per night on the weekends and is hesitant to al low smaller, hall parties, "We should ask the administration to drop that rule," said SGA vicepresident Perry Finney.

involved in fights as well as others

Those complaining about the lack of alternatives to drinking parties were criticized by others who pointed out the weekend movies in the coffee house or the concert and lecture series Think twice before causing trouble because the people who sign [the party registration forms] are risking themselves and their organizations to provide a good time for the students, " concluded Bodner,

Following the discussion, Roemer hoped that students would begin to think about what was said. The first step is communicating, people are starting to realize the responsibilities involved in holding a party, yet it doesn't seem like too upon themselves," said Roemer.

Both he and Chris Schanno, head of impressed with the turnout. "This campus, at the rate we're going now, cold very easily end up dry," commented Kappa Alpha President Andy Webb, who attended the forum.

upon themselves to bar brothers "I wouldn't want to see that happen, "responded Dean Maureen McIntire, who was also in attendance. "In a practical point of view, [a dry campus] would be the solution to the problem, yet realistically none of us would want that. It's a cop-out in an educational point of view " said McIntire She added that reasonable enforcement of a dry campus would only cut down on the quantity, but it could not stop drinking effectively.

> Mark Stenger, Student Manger of the Coffee House, said that he would have no problems with organizations using the Coffee House for social functions, yet be cause of the liquor license of the Student Center, the drinking age must be actively enforced. "Considering all the recent problems on campus. I'm impressed how two hundred people from every walk of life at WC could get together in such a friendly atmosphere," said junior Lynn Burris, following the forum. Concluded Burris, "When the College sponsors a discussion about the problems in outer Mongolia, only four or five students show many people are willing to take it up; yet when it's a discussion concerning our campus and the people

Campus Sponsors Health Fair

The Dining Service, Infirmary, Athletics Department and Lankford-Sysco Food Service will be sponsoring a health and fitness fair today from 10 am to 6 pm in the Student Center Sharon Crew, Dining Service

Supervisor, explained that the event is intended to "kick off National Nutrition Month and to aprise

in the areas of health and fitness

Tables in the Student Center will be decorated to resemble fair booths and will have both information on aspects of health and fitness, and names of people to contact for further information. Later this month there will be a

students and faculty of the options Citrus Day, Dairy Day, and a Health that are available to them on campus Choice Night (which will inform students about the pro's and con's of becoming a vegetarian)

> Roommate Register Janet Corgill

P.O. Box 2208 MBS Ocean City, Md. 21842

301-723-1609

Larrimore's Deli- Grocery

Breakfast, Subs, Sandwiches Dinner Platters South of Bridge, Chestertown 778-6022

Open 7 Days Foreign Car Specialist wagen and Imports Serivce & Repairs 778-1096

Need A Job?

Part time job at golf course Chester River Yacht and Country Club $4.00 pg hour

778-6765

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30-9:00 Closed Sundays & Holidays

Ironstone Cafe

236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

The author of The Science Question in Feminism, Sandra Harding, lectures at last Tuesday's William James Forum. The University of Delaware philosophy professor's award winning book discusses how male bias has shaped the natural and social sciences

Response Was Greek To Me

continued from page 2

was held, before Formal Rush hegan Lunderstand that students who have chosen not to pledge probably find it difficult to understand that activities which they conceive to be demeaning or humiliating, are actuthat way by the pledges. It is those events which make their pledgeships memorable

Some of the responses to the Campus Voices section of the paper were, however, completely absurd. I am curious how a freshman, who did not participate in Formal Rush could respond to the question with "there are many fraternities and some self-confidence sororities that have amazingly ridiculous standards for admitting rushees and even sadistical practices." Many people fail to realize This meeting was mandatory for all that the organizations are judged as members of the three sororities, and much, if not more so, than the potential members

Also, another response stated that Greek members "sometimes discriminate against those who elect not to belong, making them feel like second class citizens." At the risk of ally good, clean fun; and are taken in being an armchair psychologist, in order for Greeks to make you feel like second class citizens, you must feel Greeks are a class above the rest. I don't feel that I am any better for belonging to a sorority, nor do I feel other Greeks believe they are better. Instead of blaming the Greek Organizations for your insecurities, maybe you should gain

> Sincerely. Cathy Michels

778-5343 nal Winter Clearance 20% to 50% Off 14 1/2 to 52

Open m.-Thurs.: 10-5 Fri: 10-7 Sat.: 10-5

· English Literature American Literature Children's Books 778-6707 Mon - Thurs 11 AM to 3 PM Fri 11 AM to 4:30 PM 312A Park Row

Chestertown Md Word Processing

> not, accurate Call Cathy 348-2126

ris, term papers.

Letters to the Editor Don't Stamp Out Creative Criticism

Usually when I write an article like this, I'm po'd, a veritable Ed Anger in my own right, at something internal in nature and inconsequential to others. This time it's different. One of the main tenets of my life philosophy about everything is that life is not a picnic, reality is no bed of roses, etc., and that college is a time when you get prenared for the real world. It would seem logical, then, to get prepared for the real world at some point during these four years. Am I right, am I right??

Therefore, one should expect to face certain hardships and trials and tribulations here at WC. Hopefully, and most likely, one can gear one's life to balance out these hardships favorably with other college activities. After all Tom Larsen is coming tonight right?

It is a disservice, then, to constantly pander to others by endeavoring to stamp out any form of intelligent, creative criticism of them. A case in point: the W.C.C.P. issue. An old one, granted, but one that was brought out recently in an editorial. If any object of the Wicomico Committee for Competent Poetry's clever jibes makes it into the big leagues, they would be shocked by the harsh nature of present day literary criticism. Further, if anyone can be discouraged from writing as eas-

they probably don't have any burn- have a lot more guts than previous that the writing is either good or bad, because I'm sure everyone will be deeply saddened by one less pansy fact graduate here.

Conner Affair. I have nothing against the girl personally, and I wouldn't think of passing some cursory judgement on a person. Nevertheless, I was happy to see her publicly lambasted in poster fashion. It had been a long day and I really needed a good chuckle. It also showed signs of intelligent life forms on this campus that still manage to have a sense of humor. I have to commend the freshman lege community extremely wimpy class here, whether they took part in and lame. it or not. As a whole they seem to assed, wrist to the forehead poem in this world. Another example is the Brenda ing need to write. That's not to say classes, and hopefuly this trend towards wimpiness will die off as the old ones graduate, if people do in

Anyway, this wimpiness trend worries me. What people need to do around here is get together the occasional game of Greek Dodge in the halls. Tie up the RA's (if need be) and vent some frustrations. If you wind up being criticized, just bear in mind that the people doing it are trying to help. If they really hated you, they would hurt you physically it's much more satisfying

P.S.: This better get printed or I'll have to consider the paper, the editors thereof, and this entire col-

Philosophy Magazine Started The Maryland Delta chapter of for consideration and no writing

Phi Sigma Tau, the national philoso- style or form will be excluded.' phy honor society, is currently making plans to publish a review of the review, and items submitted for philosophical works. The review is to be called The Unicorn, and will pus mail to Ken Winkler or Andrea contain works by faculty, students, Kehoe. The works should be eight and former students short story, but feel you have ideas must be received by March 31, worth sharing, I encourage you to 1988. Due to limitations of finance, Journal Ken Some works in length. All stems. "No topic is too extravagant blind reviewed try this medium," said junior Ken Winkler, Phi Sigma Tau vice presi- length. All submissions will be

Questions or suggestions about publication should be sent via camto twelve hundred words, and may "If you are not a poet, and center on any topic. In order to be you've never been too handy with a considered for publication, they some works may be edited for

Under New Management-College Students Welcome

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT

Friday, March 4th

THECUTTERS

60's and 70's Music Funtime Rock -n- Roll

Saturday, March 5th

IR CLINE

25 LENT DRAFTS

9:00-10:30 on Band Nites in the Back 515 Washington St., Chestertown, MD 778-1984

FEATURES

The Trials of Alger Hiss to Show Tuesday:

Writer Recalls The Roots of McCarthyism

must not be lost. Those bastards can make this happen and can jail a guy like Hiss to prove it." says William Rodgers of the conviction of his friend Alger Hiss, a former State Department Official, for perjury in 1950.

Accused in 1948 before the House Un-American Activities Committee byTime magazine senior editor Whittaker Chambers. a self-confessed former Communist of working for the Washington, D.C. Communist underground, Hiss was alleged to have provided confidential State Department documents to the Soviet Union in the mid-1930s. Hiss, a Baltimore native whose family main tained homes in Chestertown and nearby St. Michaels, denied the charge "without qualification" and sued Chambers when the accusation was made without the protection of congressional immunity

In 1950, after a first trial ended in a hung jury, Hiss was found guilty of perjury under specific charges that he lied when he said he did not give Chambers any documents and when he said he did not speak to Chambers after January 1, 1937. A dramatic trial, which

York City. A formal introduction came when "The implications of...what's happened Rodgers, who had invited some friends from Manhattan to his countryhouse along the Hudson River, okayed the addition of some friends of his guests to the party. The guests brought Alger Hiss, his wife Priscilla, and their son Tony

Released from prison only six months before, Hiss and his family sought relief from the exposure of their life in the city. The ordeal of the trial was not far from Hiss' mind, however he asked Rodgers, who had edited books for Harcourt-Brace, to edit In the Court of Public Opinion, an account of his experi-

"I thought the book much too mild for the magnitude of what had been committed, remembered Rodgers, explaining why he turned down the offer. Nonetheless, the foundation was laid for a lifelong friendship; today, the 75 year old writer owns a file of morabilia of the case, which he has willed to Boston University. Only recently, Hiss and son Tony, a staff writer for The New Yorker. chartered a plane in Wilmington and flew to Easton, staying with Rodgers at the Captain's House in Centreville for a few days. While resulted in a five year sentence, helped to living in England in 1978-79 Rodgers and his

"...the most heinous crime of the century committed by the U.S. government against a role model citizen of international rank..."

Nixon and signaled the national paranois about communism that was to emerge more obviously soonafter with the McCarthy era.

Rodgers, an author and retired journalist, will introduce The Trials of Alger Hiss, a documentary that examines new evidence disclosed in the 1970s under the Freedom of Information Act, evidence that was suppressed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation during the trial. The film, which will be shown in Norman James Theater at 7:00 p.m. on Tuesday, includes interviews with Hiss, Robert E. Stripling (chief investigator for the House Un-American Activities Committee). and surviving jurors. One juror declares "There would have been no trial" had the FBI not suppressed information Chambers gave

Hiss was hardly a likely target for such accusations of espionage: At the time of the allegations he was president of the Carnegie Endowment, an organization for international peace, and a former State Department official who had joined the American delegation at the Yalta Conference in 1945. Indeed, President Franklin D. Roosevelt himself had asked that the former Harvard Law School graduate serve as the temporary Secretary General of the newly-formed United Nations. Perhaps the peak of a distinctive career begun as an assistant to Oliver Wendell Holmes came when Hiss successfully convinced much of the world to sign the U.N. charter

If the accused was a man of exemplary background, his accuser was not. Whittaker Chambers, a former Communist and an avowed homosexual, had attempted suicide. According to some reports, even his claim of a Communist past was a false one. Once ou of the Communist Party, he became not only anti-socialist but anti-liberal as well, seemingly the appropriate person to destroy a New Deal Roosevelt supporter such as Hiss

"Nodding Acquaintances" Though Rodgers did not know Hiss before the trial, the two were "nodding acquaintances" with offices in the same area of New launch the career of future President Richard wife attended a party for Hiss in London; about two years ago they went to New York City's Harvard Club for a reception for Hiss.

'I realized," says Rodgers, recalling the igh attendance at the functions honoring the former State Department official, "that this guy is well-thought of in many parts of the world

Similarly, Rodgers himself maintains the innocence of his friend, whom he calls in an essay in The Easton Star-Democrat (11-11-87) on the occasion of Hiss' 83rd birthday the heroic surviving victim of the most heinous crime of the century committed by the U.S. government against a role model citizen of ternational rank.

Pumpkin Papers

New evidence released under the Freedom of Information Act suggests that Hiss was indeed innocent. According to Rodgers, the documents said to verify that Hiss was a Soviet agent contained nothing incriminat-He quotes a former Hiss aide who testified at the first trial as to the content of the papers as saying, "The worst thing that (docunent) could have done for the Soviet Union is bored them to death."

Additionally, the typewriter displayed throughout the trial and alleged to be the machine on which Hiss typed top secret documents to send to the Soviets turns out, says Rodgers, to one completed unrelated to the

Even the celebrated Pumpkin Papers, rolls of microfilm hidden on Chambers' Carroll County (Md.) farm that Richard Nixon, then a California representative, declared so dangerous that even the jury must not see them, were later found to be harmless

"You know what was on it?" asks Rodg-"Instructions for a lifeboat drill. And one reel was absolutely empty. Chambers, the lone witness, altered his story numerous times, beginning by accusing others in the Roosevelt administration and even Hiss' own brother Donald; the accusation was altered from occurring in 1937 to 1938, as Chambers had documents only for

I don't believe this can go on being smothered," says Centreville resident Will Rodgers of the 1950 conviction of his friend Alger Hiss, a former State Department official, for perjury. Rodgers, an author and retired journalist, will introduce next week's showing of the film The Trials of Alger Hiss, which explores the espionage accusation which preceded the McCarthy era.

the latter year. His knowledge of Hiss' home life stemmed, Rodgers asserts, from the "pipeline from J. Edgar Hoover in the FBI to Nixon and the prosecutors" following four years of investigations of the Hiss family and tapping of phone conversations, the reports of which consisted of "only the most mundane details," Ironically, Chambers later denied that Hiss was ever a Communist or had ever passed secret documents.

What would motivate Chambers to make such accusations? Rodgers-speculates that the Columbia University dropout, whom he terms "a very gifted guy and very sleazy, sought the attention other confessed Commu nist sympathizers had received from the House Un-American Activities Committee which "scooped them up with open arms," even finding jobs for the repentent radicals. Other theories, such as the argument presented in William Howard Moore's book Two Foolish Men: The True Story of The Friendship Between Alger Hiss and Whittaker Chambers (Moorop Press, 1987) center on the accuser's supposed homosexual interest in Hiss

The Red Menace With Whitaker Chambers willing to point the finger, the mood of the nation was ripe for a conviction, says Rodgers. Hiss served as a scapegoat for the country's fears of the Communist government of the Soviet Union, fears that later were to erupt with the McCarthy era.

Rodgers says, however, that the "Red menace" was exaggerated. "I never could century."

find more than three people in any town who wanted the Communists to come and run us. he recalls. Even today, the Hiss case has importance beyond its effect on the convicted man's family, Rodgers explains, as the right wing continues to play on the same fears. President Ronald Reagan awarded Chambers, who died in 1961, the Medal of Free dom, posthumously.

There is a great movement to restore Richard Nixon," says Rodgers, explaining that the former president earned his "Commit credentials" with the conviction

Soon. Hiss will publish his account of the experiences that Rodgers says "destroyed" his friend's wife "I've been trying to get this man to write his memoirs for 30 years," he said, explaining that Hiss' memoirs, entitled Reflections on a Life, will be published by Henry Holt in early May. Hiss' efforts at overturning the convic tion have been thwarted by the fact that J. Edgar Hoover's private papers were de stroyed on the day of his death in 1972 by his private secretary.

Nonetheless, Rodgers continues his own efforts to clear Alger Hiss' name of the tainto infamy; after Tuesday's film, which is spon sored by the William James Forum and the American Studies program, he will address Professor Robert Fallaw's history class.

'I don't believe this can go on being smothered. Before I die I would like to see 8 full explanation of what I consider one of the most monstrous court miscarriages in this

March Into Spring Break

by Jennifer M. Harrison

Spring Break is the vacation made for the college student. With half of the semester over, it's time for a relaxing week, time to forget about school. There are hundreds of interesting places to visit, some, of course are more affordable than others. Listed below are some suggestions, and an idea of what to expect

Florida

One of the most popular Spring Break resorts, of course, is Florida. The most well known party places are Daytona Beach and Fort Lauderdale Roundtrip airfare and a one week stay (not including meals) is about 500 dollars. For a plane ticket only, though the cost varies, it is about 238 dollars.

Bermuda

An archipelago of about 150 small islands, Bermuda is an outcropping of coral stone located about 600 miles east of North Caro-

More calm than other spring break resorts, Bermuda revolves more around daytime activities than around nightlife. Golf and tennis, sailing and snorkeling, deepsea fishing and scuba-diving, windsurfing and horseback riding are the popular sports. Another daytime pleasure is shopping on Front Street; handsome high quality bargains such as Swiss watches, French perfumes, and British woolens. And, of course, there is always

The cost for a five day stay in Rermuda starts at 800 dollars including air fare and hotel stay, but not meals. Travellers are advised to bring a birth certificate or passport.

Cancun, Mexico Another island, Cancun is the number one resort in Mexico Known for its exquisite beaches, the former fishing village offers boat- can be as low as 89 dollars, and 37 there is always the Statue of Liberty. museums, shopping and fine dining ing, fishing and diving charters from dollars for each following night. the pier of Playa Tortugas, the city beach. In addition, the island has a wide selection of restaurants, shops and discos

Mayan ruins, including the most and cabarets featuring famous name famous sites in Mexico: Chichen entertainers. In addition, Reno fea-Itza and Uxmal. Visits to these tures skiing, hiking, dancing, and

With enough bright lights and spinning wheels to make you Also of interest are the dizzy, Reno entertains with casinos Nashville is the place to visit. Well nights runs about 175 dollars.

Nashville

the Country Music Hall of Fame and

For country music fans, known as the home of the Grand Ole Opry, this southern city also holds

A double room for two are also available

A double room for two nights is about 95 dollars.

St. Louis

Halfway down nation's largest river, the Mississippi, is this major business and shipping port. Symbolic of the Western Expansion is the Gateway Arch; a stainless steel structure that dominates the city's horizon, for it was from this city that the wagon trains departed for the west. Other interesting sights include museums and art galleries, tours of the Anheuser-Busch brewery, 19th century warehouses, and of course, the Mississippi River

Double rooms for two nights start at about 105 dollars.

San Antonio

Home of the Alamo, this Texan city mixes adobe buildings with cobblestone walks. Spanish missions, Mexican music, parks and gardens, an array of native arts, restaurants, galleries and shops that house artisans such as weavers, potters and glassblowers are among its features. In addition, you canvisit the historic Spanish Governor's Palace or follow the Mission Trail.

night stay in a double room is about

Air fare varies, but a two 89 dollars.

18th, and 19th

Chestertown

The Hermitage, home of Andrew For athletes who must stay in town to practice, seniors finishing their theses, or students too broke to travel, there are some things to do in Chestertown. The Women's Lacrosse Team play at home on March 18th at 3:00 P.M. and the Women's Tennis Team have a match on the 19th at 1:00 P.M. In addition, the Actors Community Theater present Arsenic and Lace in Norman James Theatre at 8:00 P.M. on the 17th.

archeological sites reveal some dining, not to mention Harrah's Opryland U.S.A. Theme Park. The facts about a civilization that myste- Automobile collection-the largest "Athens of the South", Nashville riously disapeared.

Including round trip air fare, and hotel stay, a three night

New Orleans

The Creole charm of New Orleans, and its southern location make it an ideal spot for a vacation. Picturesque street cars, spicy Cajun food, jazz and carnival museums make the "Crescent City" sparkle with activity.

Airfare varies, but hotel assembly of vintage cars in the also has Greek Revival Architecture

Again, airfare varies, but stay in Cancun costs 399 dollars and double rooms for two nights cost 75 Jackson dollars, 38 dollars for each extra

New York

From the shining mansions of Fifth Avenue to the pagodas Love is one of the most historical of Chinatown, New York is the cities in America. Betsy Ross once place where there is always something to do. Take a boat ride around Independence I tall still do. Statues Manhattan, visit galleries in Soho commemorate historical events, and on Museum Mile, attend the and art and anthropology collec-and historical plantations including A double room is approximately 95 dollars for two nights.

Philadelphia

The City of Brotherly lived here, the Liberty Bell and stay for a double room for two nights theater, see the Bronx Zoo. And tions are displayed in numerous

Stam Drug Co.

215 High Street 772-3030

Franklin & Marshall Thwarts Shore Netters MAC Title Quest. 75-61

by Don Steele

The Shoremen basketball team finished a successful season last week at Franklin and Marshall, losing 75-61 to be eliminated from the MAC playoffs. Although the team expected better things out of the season, the 87-88 campaign has to be looked upon as a very good one.

The loss at twelth-ranked Franklin and Marshall was much closer than the fourteen point margin indicates. The Shoremen were down by eight with three minutes left and then had to foul to stop the clock The team played well as a unit. It was the fifth time that the Shoreman had met Franklin and Marshall in the MAC playoffs, and the fifth time that they had lost

With neither team shooting well at the onset, the Shoremen jumped to an early six point lead. The Diplomats, however, bounced back, going on a run which gave them a six point lead. The first half closed with the Shoremen down by did well. The victories, of course, only two, 30-28

Steve Brody tied the game to start the second half, but the Shoremen could never capture the lead. Franklin and Marshall went on another run which stretched their lead to ten. After that, the Shoremen. never got closer than three. In the end, the Shoremen's only hope was to foul and hope that the Diplomats missed, which they didn't

Franklin and Marshall has now eliminated the Shoremen from the MAC playoffs in each of the last

Overall, the Shoremen's season can be marked down as one of beat Franklin and Marshall next the better ones in Washington Col-year

lege history. The overall record is 19-7. The team tied for first place in the MAC Southeast Division. They also captured two tournament victo ries, The Wild Goose Classic and the Drew Invitational. Never in the season did they lose more than two in a row and their losses were all to very good teams

We played a very competitive schedule and we played well. We improved tremendously as a team. We also played well as a team," said Coach Tom Finnegan.

The season also had a few personal accomplishments along the way. Coach Finnegan won his 200th game as a coach when the Shoremen blew out nationally ranked Widener at home in Decer ber. Andy Bauer became the 19th W.C. player to score 1,000 points.

The Shoremen also established a twelve game home winning streak that is still alive Statistically the team also are a fine statistic. But the team also had eight people average over five points per game. Andy Bauer, Chris Jamke and Tim Keehan were the only members of the team to average over 10 per game with 15.2, 12.7; and 12.6 ppg, respectively. In rebounding, Tom Auvil led the team with 193. Jamke had 166 and Bauer and Keehan both had 125 boards.

With Al Hepting being the only senior on the team, the Shoremen can now look towards next year to improve upon the very good season that was 1987-1988. And who knows, maybe the Shoremen will

a sa ammuning pulling in the property of the

The Shorewomen completed their 1987-88 campaign last weekend at Widener in the MAC Champion more school records and finished eleventh overall. ships, where the swimmers broke three

Swimmers Culminate Successful Season With Strong MAC Showing Drop More Records in Eleventh Place Finish

by Bill Beekman

women's swimming team wrapped day at the MAC championships held ninth at Widener. Competing against some teams which were nationally ranked, the Shorewomen finished eleventh, compiling 40 points, twelve more than last year.

By far, this was the best way 1:54.1. that we could have culminated the season," mentioned Coach Dennis Finneson came back that night to

Going into the meet, Berry hoped to find progress over last year ishing ninth. with regard to points scored, which he did with the Shorewomen's twelve point leap over last year. In compiling the points, the records On Thursday, Jenny Korten,

Elizabeth Rexon, Samatha Streamer, and Katherine Finneson finished eighth in the 200 medley relay, breaking the school record with a time of 2:09.9 while Liz Whelan, Kathy Carlson, Vicky The Washington College Carroll, and Dana Loy lowered the W.C. standard from 9:45.5 to 9:37.2 up their best season ever on Satur- in the 800 freestyle relay, finishing

Friday, Finneson, Streamer Carlson, and Carroll snapped another mark, shedding a second from the W.C. record books while finishing tenth in the 200 freestyle relay at

Korten, Rexon, Streamer, and slice 13 seconds from another record, in the 4000 medley, while fin-The Shorewomen finished the three day championships Saturday, with Korten finishing ninth in the conference in the 100 backstroke at Shorewomen broke several school 1:09.9. Last year she finished elev-Finally Whelan, Finneson, Streamer, and Carlson finished eleventh in the 400 freestyle relay in 4-14 not a record.

Overall, the Shorewomen com pleted their best season, registering their most-ever wins. The 1987-8 campaign broke all but three tear records, "No person left the year without some improvement," as cording to Berry. Seniors Whelan, Johnson, ar Hinson raced in their final mee Washington College. Whelan has been at the Casey Swim Center since it opened, serving as one of the first lifeguards and competing or the women's team for all of its year of existence.

Despite the losses, the future still holds promise with such women as Korten, who brought to team its first State Champion is month, and freshman Streams who competed in many of the diffe cult butterfly events.

Every swimmer improved it some way over the course of the season" added Berry, "and will hard work, contributed to the mendous improvement of the test from its first meet against May mount.

Miller Library

Reminder:

College ID's are Required for Free Admitance

to Washington College Home Lacrosse Games

Effective March 9th vs. Ithaca

Extended Hours Sunday, March 6 thru Thursday, March 10 8:15 a.m. - 2:00 a.m.

Drama Department Auditions for Madame Butterfly

One Act Play by David Belasco Tuesday, March 8, 1988 5:30-8:00 p.m. Stage of Tawes Theater

Help Wanted

Proofreader for Sunday Mornings, 9am-1pm

Call Jean Crowding Monday-Friday 9am 5pm at 778-6773

Florida Sun and Sho'men Runs Should Be Happy Marriage

Spring Training Dave Puskar and Scott Jones practice, preparing for the Shoremen's home opener versus Tufts College on March 24th. Over Spring Break, the team will travel to Sanford, Florida for final preparations for the regular season.

Shoremen Laxers Lynch Lynchburg to Open Season

Travel to UNC Tomorrow After Drubbing Lynchburg, 28-4

by Joe Van Name

The 1988 version of the Washington College Men's Lacrosse Team opened its campaign towards a Division III National Title by hosting Lynchburg College. Lynthburg came into the game inspired by a close 5-4 loss to the Shoremen in '87. However, this year the competition proved to be too much

Lynchburg, 28-4. WC opened the first quarter with 8 goals and did not let up the full 60 minutes. "We played hard and smart," Coach Terry Corcoran said of his team. He also emphasized the strong play of defensive midfielders Kevin Colbeck and Bob Martino

Leading the scoring for the Shoremen was sophomore Tim Hermes with 7 goals. Paul Deniken added 6 goals and 3 assists, while Mike McGuane notched 5 goals and assists and Paul Miller tallied 2 wals and 6 assists. Ten other WC players contributed with either gulls or assists. Corcoran was enthusiastic about the strong play of the defense despite limited play bon injured starter Terry Reynolds and the absence of veteran Matt season and hopefully the Division III title which has just barely eluded them for the last several years. With two returning All-American starters and twenty-four veterans, the Shoremen have the player strength to achieve this goal.

Matt Petz.

Corcoran described this Bond, and Steve Pursley, season's team as "the most intense" In goal the Shore. as the Shoremen trounced bunch" that he has ever had. With eleven seniors providing the leadership needed, Corcoran and the Shoremen are looking forward to surpassing last year's 10-7 record and placing higher than the third place ranking they received at the end of the 1987 regular season.

At attack the shoremen are led by sophomore Tim Hormes and seniors Paul Deniken and Paul Miller. Also contributing this season will be juniors Matt Kelly and Walter Spence. The freshmen to watch this year include Ben Lamanna and Ron Council. The midfield is led by seniors Mike McGuane, Chris Dollar, and Mike Woodfolk. Returning veterans include Mike Grieg, Mark Cavallaro, Pete Van Buren, Bob Martino, Kevin Colbeck, Rob Lavis, and Joe Muscalino. Provid-

Washington College is look- freshman Steve Klein, Kevin ing forward to another excellent Doyle, Bill Leahy, Stan Krause, and

> A veteran defense is lead by Brian Kelleher, Terry Reynolds, Matt Wilson, Jim Houtenbrink, and Pat Youngs. Contributing will be sophomore Brian Kelly along with freshman David Cromwell, Tim

> In goal the Shoremen have three seniors who will guard the net for 1988. Mark Mickum, last year's starter, is supported by Todd Emmons and Bill Carr.

Washington hopes to play its second home game against Ithaca on a newly reconditioned Kibler field. Since last season, the field has been equipped with an underground sprinkler system and fencing which will enable WC to host NCAA play-

Additionally, the fence will enable the College to charge admission fees to home lacrosse games, $1.00 for ages 6-21, $2.00 for adults 22-54 and free admission to adults over 55. Washington College students will be admitted free only with a valid student ID card.

The Shoremen go on the road to play Division I power North Carolina tomorrow, and return to ing added depth this season are host Ithaca Wednesday at 3pm.

While Washington College in his sophomore year. Senior Joe students head for home or vacation over Spring Break, the Shoremen baseball squad will travel to Sanford, FL to play six games in five days against other northern col-

Florida has served as a training ground for the Shoremen for the last eleven years. The Shoremen will return March 19th and open their regular season March 24th, hosting Tufts University

Coach Athey and assistants Streelman and Sandeback are faced with the task of replacing three key players from last year's team, Gone are standout pitcher Larry Brandt, and Dave Repko and Mike Amey who made up the left side of the infield

Still, the coaches feel that this year's team shows promise, especially in the ability to hit the ball. A mixture of speed and power should produce runs. The question marks are the pitching and defense.

Seniors Chris Rosfelder and Mike Hearn backed by freshman Keith Faust will handle the catching. Rothfelder and Hearn are both veterans who will be depended upon to guide the pitching corps. Faust is being groomed to handle the posiin the future. This year, Rothfelder is slated to bat clean-up.

Although Amey and Repko are gone, the infield is shaping up and has some depth. Senior Tom Auvil is back at first base for the fourth year and senior Bob Kuhn will reMcAleer, last year's second base man, is being shifted to shortstop. At third base freshmen Dave Levine and Grame Wildman and sophomore Chris Warren are all vying for playing time. All will be given a shot to prove themselves. Warren is also being used in the outfield and Wildman will see some action as pitcher. Infield reserves include Chris Driscoll, Matt Almony, and Chuck Johnson

The outfield is a veteran affair, with speed merchants senior Chip Bailey, juniors Dave Puskar, Alan Lerch, and Scott Jones, and sophomore Matt Almony. Senior Frank Davis, primarily a pitcher, can also be used in the outfield as well as third baseman Warren. Steve Huettner rounds out the outfielders.

Puskar, Jones, Davis, sophomores Chris Long and Chuck Johnson, and junior Eric Becker form the pitching staff. Becker was strong in his two previous years and will be counted on heavily when conference games come around. Puskar has proven that he can win in the past and will get planty of opportunities to do so this season. Davis throws hard and is free of the injuries which have plagued him in the past. Only a sophomore, Long has the best control of the group.

Jones and Johnson have just finished long basketball seasons and will need time to strengthen their arms. Both have good potential. McAleer, Kuhn, Wildman, and turn second, the position he played Auvil all can pitch when needed.

10 Visits for $40.00

Our SunTana SunSystem guarantees you a glorious radiant tan that you can keep all year long. A tan you achieve with soft, comfortable and SAFE U.V.A. light and without all the burning, peeling and flaking you get in natural sunlight. Our SunSystem is GUARANTEED to tan anyone who tans in the sun...while you relax in cool

The Beauty Lounge

Phone: 778-2635

Callus

Chestertown, MD 21620 NEXUS PRODUCTS AVAILABLE

come today.

La Vida Yacht Inc.

Employment Opportunity Secretarial Position Available at Yacht Sale Chartering Offices

We are looking for an outgoing responsible individual who is capable of handling all areas of secretarial work and is willing to work weekend days

Call La Vida Yacht Inc. to arrange interview -

778-6330

Small Camera Installed on Brain Reveals All - The Washington Capitals will XXII was just a super game. That

Here I am, writing in the space make playoff noise this year. Can second quarter would have to rank Magic Johnson and Larry Bird you about football in June? The snan where you have come to expect you say "Stanley Cup?" They will wonderful sports reportage. Right beat the Flyers! (editor's note: now, nothing really stands out as being worthy of filling an entire column about. Therefore, in the tradition of all sportswriters, I will and probably next May, too. But I now just spout things off of the top of my head. Call them Small Thoughts at Large:

chip shots

- The Winter Olympics in Calgary are over. That makes all the Dynasty fans of the world happy, no more Jim McKay on Wendsday nights. All in all, it was a good show, though a disapointment for the United States. Saving the B's (Bonnie Blair and Brian Boitano) there was no Gold in Calgary. Maybe George Steinbrenner's committee can rectify this situation though I doubt that Also, while on the subject, ABC's coverage of the games was poor. Not enough coverage of non-American athletes and events that would not be received well by the vast majority of Americans. The best thing about the coverage was the small camera that ABC used to give the viewer first-person feel for the action. Those shots were memorable. (If you put one of those things on someone's brain, you would probably see something like this owed in the Winter Olympics was the NHL All-Star game in St. Louis. Though it wasn't quite the Rendez-Vous games with the Soviets last year, the game was quite enjoyable. It was simply the Mario Lemieux show, as he scored points on all six Price of Wales goals. He is the only player that can even be compared to the great one, Wayne Gretzky

Wayne Gretzky is still the greatest hockey player in the world. any tradition left in the beautiful This week, he proved it by setting an all-time NHL record, for most assists in a career, surpassing Gordie Howe. Note: Gretzky achieved his Howe played 1,767 games

Sorry, but I had to do this. Everyone with any sense knows that the Flyers will win the Stanley Cup this May, guess that Caps fans need some sense of hope.)

Welcome to Spring Training. Yes, Baseball is just around the corner. Every Spring, the hearts of baseball fans turn towards their teams hopes for the upcoming season. For nearly six weeks, every team is tied for first and in the pennant race. Many teams will have new looks this season. Hopefully, the Orioles will not lose 95 games. My personal bias is for the Orioles. At least I admit it. I really feel that they have made strides towards turning the team around. The pitching will improve. It cannot get much worse. With Don Aase at full strength for the entire season, it must improve. - Billy Martin is back in New York. Does this make five or six times that Steinbrenner has hired (or fired) Billy? The Yankees will have an interesting team, with the added power of Jack Clark. Scoring runs will not be the Yankees problem. As usual, it will be pitching that causes the Yanks to finish in second.

Speaking of New York, the Mets won't win this year. Dissen sion will finally tear the team apart. Watch out for a healthy Philadel-- One thing that was overshad- phia Phillies team to make noise in the NL East

- Another team making noi this spring is the LA Dodgers. With the addition of free agent Kirk Gibson, they will improve their position in the standings.

- The "I'm mad as hell" department: The Chicago Cubs at Wrigley Field are scheduled to play a night game this season.! "Holy Cow," as Harry Caray would scream! Is there game or has it fallen into the clutches of ruthless, money-grubbing owners. Say it ain't so, Joe.

Isn't Brooks Robinson the mark in less than 700 games, Gordie greatest third baseman of all time? - Speaking as a lifelong Wash ington Redskins fan, Superbowl as the greatest fifteen minutes of football that I have ever seen Thirty-five points in six and a half minutes of offense by the Redskins was just incredible. And I was glad to see John Elway lose. No, I do not like Elway.

Isn't the NFL All-Star Game in Hawaii a joke?

My predictions about basketball usually are wrong, but I have one college basketball pick. Duke should win the ACC tournament next week. Also, Maryland had better get a bid to the 64 team NCAA tournament this spring. They deserve it. A Pro Basketball pick: Boston and Los Angeles in the Finals and isn't it Boston's turn to win it.

would have one awesome athlete.

Ido feel that college basketball is much more exciting its professional counterpart. The Washington College basketball team played some very exciting games this year. Given the circumstances, they played very well. But lady luck was not on their sides as they lost a coin toss and had to travel to nationally luck next year Indoor soccer is a funny game. I find it really difficult to like soccer when it is played indoors, but the sport is not that bad. In fact, the boards actually add something to the outdoor game.

ranked Franklin & Marshall. Better

Does anyone really like, or watch, arena football?

enjoying the great outdoors. There is something wrom about having the Summer Olympic in October. NBC is going to have trouble broadcasting them from Seoul, which is almost a whole da ahead (or is it behind) us. Fide Castro's decision not to send Cuba athletes is a shame. The Interna tional Olympic Committee had be ter do something about this. I als feel that the United States wi struggle just like they did in Calgary. We do not have the athless training systems that the Commi nists have. And I'm glad for that

- If you have read all of this, yo deserve a Gold Medal. (And a CAT

Fin Fur Feather Inn

424 Bayside Ave. Rock Hall, Md. 639-7454

We Specialize in Fresh Seafood

Special for this week is Live Steamed Lobster Priced According to Weight and Daily Market

We also have a Prime Rib Special for $12.95

PAYABLE UPON REQUEST ONE OUTRAGEOUS GOOD TIME

AT THE TOM LARSEN BLUES BANDS' NEXT PERFORMANCE IN THE COFFEE HOUSE FRIDAY MARCH FOURTH @ 9:00 PM!

ADVANCE TICKETS $2.00 IN STUDENT CENTER 9-5 DAILY $3.00 AT DOOR

Guarantee

ALCOHOL POLICY: VALID ID REQUIRED ONE AND ONLY ONE WRIST BAND GIVEN ORACE DISCONFISCATED UNDERAGE DRINKERS KICKED OUT WRIST BANDS WORN AT ALL TIMES

La Vida Yacht Inc.

Employment Opportunity

Responsible Person Needed to work Part and or Full time Cleaning Sail Boats Duties will expand to other areas including maintenance of all boat systems

Ability to work alone as well as manage other employees essential

> Call to arrange interview La Vida Yachts Inc. 778-6330

Book Samples Area Writers

by Rob Thompson

"Writing is at best a lonely uncertain profession and the praise of one's fellow artists is more precious than fine gold," writes author and screenwriter Lucille Fletcher. Her introduction aptly describes the motivating force behind the Shore Writers' Sampler, an anthology of poetry and prose from writers throughout Maryland's Eastern Shore. Edited in part at the O' Neill Literary House, this collection includes a poem by student Dean -Hebert, and a forward by Professor

Robert Day The introduction promises "only a smattering of Eastern Shore color." The first story, however, an excerpt from an unfinished novel by the late Douglass Wallop, is a nostalgic look at a turn of the century totel on the shore. A picture is worth a thousand words. This story is the thousand words. The following story, titled "When George and I Swam the Choptank River," still leaves the eader on the shore. One cannot deny that the prose has more than a mattering of Eastern Shore flavor. Seven of the collection's eighteen prose pieces and about half the poems occur on the Eastern Shore. The quality found in the literature varies from light and entertaining to tedious: Blinded - Dean-Hebert's poem istinguishes itself in the collection by providing a refreshing youthful point of view. On a college campus, this view is not so refreshing, but following the already mentioned tostalgic story, the poem pulls the pearance of her child in a boating while reading.

reader back to 1987, a good placement on the part of the editors

Shock Trauma - A poem by ennie Woodall, graduate of St. Michael's High School, relays a sense of sorrow from the point of view of a dying accident victim. The emphasis on the sorrow of surviving loved ones in addition to the painful hospital images gives depth to an already emotional situation.

'A Secret Place" - In this story. uthor Bruce Jones tries to convey the sacredness of nature. The piece turns into a how-to article, though, and the lack of plot or character does not mix well with the overused Biblical imagery at the end.

'Making a Friend" - The setting of this story deserves attention. It occurs in Tanzania from the point of view of an anthropologist's wife. As the beginning of a book about Africa, her topic is interesting in that it involves the interrelationships of two widely varying cultures.

"The Pigeon Hunt" - An intriguing tale of journalism overseas, the story is interesting in that the plot twists abruptly at the end, leaving the main character back in Maryland. George Howard Gillelan's tale has a sleek spy story quality that makes the Eastern Shore ending all

Sheep Mountain - This poem by Salisbury State graduate Leslie Lovelace strikes the reader with stark desert imagery, realistic yet fantastic at the same time

"Last Boat Before Drydock" -Betty K. Gardner's story tells of a mother's suffering over the disaptrip. Interesting to the reader is the author's emphasis on the pain of waiting - not knowing whether a loved one is dead or alive. By telling the story in the chronological order of its occurrence, she effectively conveys that anxiety.

'Watermen" - Written by Nan DeVincentis Hayes, this story of a young boy from the city and his grandfather, a waterman, impresses the reader with the size of the generation gap by contrasting the characters' values. The ending bridges that gap, leaving the reader satisfied with the style and trusting in its believability.

"The Thirteenth Assault" - An excerpt from a novel-in-progress by Joan Heavey, this story has all the elements of entertaining reading: love, hate, violence, death, interesting plot twists, and an incredible ironic ending in a World War II

Love Flower - This poem uses overworked imagery to convey how Charlie Brown probably feels about the little redheaded girl

'Friends For Life" - A moving story about two elderly ladies, "Friends for Life" shows the reader the physical and emotional trials that come with age. The story's ending may surprise some readers.

These stories and others give the Shore Writers' Sampler a wide variety of materials under one cover. It will not be found on the New York Times best seller list, but the Sampler does provide worth-

The Harbor City Ballet will perform at Tawes Theatre tomorrow night. Admission is $4 for students and children, $7 for adults.

Film Preview My Life as a Dog

dog which the Russians sent into space, thus the title

Throughout the film Ingmar's shown as part of the Washington ruminations over his fate are juxtaposed with both his hilarious antics and Monday. Tickets are $1.00 for and the sadness of his mothers illness. The largest portion of the film

The film My Life as a Dog, Ingmar is sent to stay with his uncle directed by Lasse Hallestrom, is the It is here that Ingmar completes the excellently portrayed story of Ing- most visible portion of his maturing mar Johanson's life in Sweden dur- during the film, and it is also one of ing the mid to late-1950's. Eleven- the most entertaining portions of the year old Anton Glanzellus plays film. The interplay between Ingmar, Ingmar Johanson, a pre-pubescent his uncle (played by Thomas von boy who is shifted around from one Brommsenn), and Didrik Gusrelative to the next when his mother taysonn, who plays an old man livfalls ill to tuberculosis. Ingmar ing with his uncle's family, brings compares his fate to that of Laika, a humor to what could otherwise be a very dry story.

My Life as a Dog is being College Film Series Friday, Sunday

students, faculty and staff; all others, $2.00.

Gender in Broadway Show Tunes

by Mary Saravia When asked what inspired him logive a presentation on Traditional Gender Roles in Broadway Show Tunes, Dr. Weissman admitted Besides the fact that I'm an incurable ham, I was walking along singing a show tune and I thought 'My God, that's outrageous!' The lyrics ires how frequently he strikes me?

I'll fetch his slippers with my arm in has been a featured artist at clubs in a sling, just for the priviledge of wearing his ring."

Dr. Weissman's audience will have been performed in Toronto and not only hear about the structure of New York musicals but they will also get to hear the actual show tunes from pianist Peter Robinson. Both have 6 in the O'Neill Literary House at 3 backrounds in music: Mr. Robinson, D.m.

than six musicals," some of which The talk will be given on March

the Washington D.C. area and Dr.

Weissman has written "... no less

Campus Calendar

Band-Coffee House, 9pm to 1am turday, 5th: The Dance Club for City Ballet-Tawes Theatre, Tuesday, 8th: William James Fo-

F SOPHISTICATION, CHAM-AGNE AND SHOW TUNES, Ed Wednesday, 9th: The Sophie Kerr issman and Peter Robinson-Neill Literary House, 3:00 p.m.

PIN SMOKE: MEMORY AND Room, 8:00 p.m.
HE TOBACCO HABIT- George day, 7th: Literary House Talk blich, Speaker, O'Neill Literary use, Tea at 4;00 p.m., Talk at 4:30

inday, 4th: Tom Larsen's Blues LIFE AS A DOG, Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m.

rum and the American Studies Pro gram, FILM: "The Trials of Alge Inday, 6th: SHALL WE JOIN Hiss", Norman James Theatre, 7:00
HE LADIES: AN AFTERNOON p.m.

> Lecture Seeries- WILLIAM FAULKNER AND HIS INDOM-ITABLE OLD LADIES, Donald Duclos, Speaker, Sophic Kerr

Thursday, 10th: The Sophie Kern Lecture Series- IRONY IN THE CANTERBURY TALES, Sophic The Film Series- MY Kerr Room, 8:00 p.m

Art Show continued from page 12

good that we don't recognize the onion, but we don't care what it is either. The second prize, Untitled Figure 1986, by H.L.F., in black and white, is a nude shot that should get points for ambition. There is a feel for the texture of the skin. Third prize Madison Bay Emporium, by Anne McKay Liles, in color, has some atmosphere but really has little else to offer it. Some of the photos are even more maddening: Squash, by Nancy Buckley, is just a patch of boring squash, for example. One photo, Serene Conclusion, by Frank Elburn, is an orangely sunset at the beach scene that looks just like a poster fromdare I say it-the Bookstore.

More intriguing work: Jacky, by Anne Kleinfelter, a watercolochild's head, refreshing and not too sweet. Quail Covey in Floral Patch, an oil by M. Joyce Zeilgler, is wonderful in the richness and depth conveyed. This Old House, an oil painting by Anna Roberts, is a haunting, Gothic house that leans and moans in a wind. It is really eerie and cool.

Another work that is eerie but not cool is an untitled work by Ravi Singh, an oil work that is a scary pseudo-Cubist nightmare with it seems body parts flailing all over in a maelstom of horror. I backed painting. away from that one

All in all is was a rather charming show. I was incredibly sick of the Eastern shore by the end, although some works, like Maggie Lee III (winner of Best of Eastern rist, is an engaging portait of a Shore) by Martha Hudson are nearly flawless in execution, if not passion The thing to remember is these are works by people who enjoy their art who sometimes make a living off of it. They depict what they want and sometims appear clumsy and or amatuerish. That doesn't mean that there isn't a spirit to them, though.

There were many satisfying and indeed wonderful works on the show. There is a medium for everyone: oil, wild life, watercolor, graphic design, photo, pastels, mixed media and Oriental brush

Interested Arts Writers Contact Susan Di Leo 778-9880

ENTERTAINMENT

Taking in the Brushstrokes of Local Talent

by Kelly Lamoree

Those who complain about the lack of art and/or literary life on campus and indeed in the area are in for a rare treat, that is, if they can get themselves over to Gibson Fine Arts Center before March 11. There, the 40th Annual Juried Show of the Chestertown Arts League is on display. For those who wonder, the Chestertown Arts League is composed of people from the area who are interested in and practice the fine arts, primarily painting. Some are professionals, some do it just for the love of it, rather than for profit. One thing that the members have in common, whether professional or amateur, is the camaraderie and willingness to talk about their work. Informality is the hallmark to the Chestertown Arts League, I think. They are not snobbish about their work because they do it because they love it, not because they want to be in a textbook someday. A juried show is one in which members submit work to the commmittee, who then judge the work and award prizes. Part of the fun of attending this show is to see whether or not you agree with the judge's choices and to see work that is not part of a class assignment, the usual fare here at W.C. The hours of the show are 12 noon to 4: 00 p.m., Monday through Thursday, and 12 noon until 3:00 p.m. on Friday.

The show is arranged interestingly. Occasionally a group of award winners is grouped together, sometimes you'll come across one unexpectedly. While this method common is that they are all from the Eastern Shore, expect to see a lot of bay-scenes and one might be put off by the initial impression of all of those similiar landscapes and not give them the chance that some of them deserve.

One of the first paintings you'll notice is a big rectangular picture that won Judge's Choice. It is entitled Tinicum, and is of mixed media by James M. Ryan. This is a very striking picture, because of the dark palette the artist used, with occasional vibrant shades that deepen and strengthen the scene of a man, cars, a shack and a spot by water. The brushstrokes are rather expressionistic, in that leads to the feeling that one is not quite sure what is going on, but one is sure that something is.

Near that painting are the watercolor inners. First prize went to Indigo II, by Libby Keer. It is an abstract work, of indigos and grays. Second prize when to Tea Time, by Eleanor Peacock. It is a standard still life, depicting a tea cup and pot against a rather bland yellow background, next to an Orientallooking figure. Third prize went to Peggy Blades, for Jaw's III, a largish work with water lilies and ferocious-looking goldfish, that is slightly repulsive. Honorable Mention was the most effective one of the lot, Pond, by Sinh Ja An. It directly recalls the Nymphéas series by Monet, only is more pleasing than the usual Monet water lily. The medium lends itself very well to the subject and the artist's treatment gives the water and the flower a wet, light feeling. Light travels through the

The pastel awards features some very landscapes. If they were all grouped together, nice work. First prize went to Marcie Dunn for her Crumpton Auction-The Egg Lady, a pretty straightforward representation of a character. Second prize went to our own Sarah Luke, for Jealousy/Love. A man's face is seen twice in this rather abstract yet coherent piece, in each depiction of the face different colors in areas of the face and background > change to indicate each of the states One interesting thing to note in shows like this, where artists are free to paint what they wish and how they wish, is not surprisingly the various subjects and techniques employed. It is easy to see, after a look around, there there are a few Renoir fans, a couple of Monet fans, and lots of Wyeth-y type artists. Roses, by Joan Bassett-Powell, is clearly reminiscent of the Impressionistic style of Renoir, a watercolor that looks very much like an oil painting. There is a real texture to the world, which seems inappropriate for a watercolor but had the impasto of an oil. Because the qualities of local terrain, the subject of many of the works, lends itself to pseudo-Monet landscapes and pseudo-Wyeth landscapes, there is a great proliferation of these. These are often the most satisfying of the landscapes, certainly much more so than the clichéd, saccharine landscapes reminiscent of a doctor's office print. One of them, an untitled work by Ellen McCown, is especially lovely. The subject of this small work is a water scene, wth a sailboat and some trees. The high horizon line accentuates the water thing that the members of the League have in this, one of the most satisfying pieces of the and creates the sensation of great distance and space. The lavendar and indigo tomes of the oil painting are charming without being common or cute. One landscape that is not nearly so satisfying is Crumpton Farm, an acrylic work by William F. Creager. The large painting, in an oddly ornate frame, tries to represent a stark scene with fields and farmhouse with some trees, much in the style of a Wyeth. A lot of things are irritating about this work. For example, the farmhouse sits or top of the field like a child sitting on a fence The field seems to be a mountain upon which the house rests. The fields and house have no perspective, even less that one would imagin for this style of work. The lighting seems the same throughout. And the most distracting thing is the surface of the painting, which appears as slick as a just-frosted cake. It was tempting to touch it and see if varnish cam > off on the finger A similar kind of scene that is much more successful is Before the Corn, an oil painting by Thomas E. Little, which not surprisingly won second place for that medium. Large volumes of space are accurately described Light and shade seem perfect. Color and line is also used to great effect. The scene of a wide things in the show Some of the less satisfying things in the show can come in whole categories. For example, the photography entries just don't cut it. First place went to Onion Eulogy, by Cynthia Ramsey. It portrays an onion, which doesn't look really like an onion, against a abstract blue background. It's all well and

continued on page !!

my life as a dog

Washington College Film Series

Norman James Theater

Friday * Sunday * Monday 7:30 p.m.

$1 admission — students / faculty / staff $2 - all others

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 21

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, March 11, 1988

Spilich Presents Results of Research

Last Monday, Dr. George Spilich presented a talk entitled, "Up in that which you already know. And Smoke: Memory and the Tobacco Habit," as part of the Monday series. Spilich, an Associate Professor of the past learning experiences one Psychology and Chairman of the Department of Psychology, has been conducting research on the this desktop that your brain has, heavily dependent on your long term memory, previous knowledge. it will affect what you might call; the desktop of mental operation," " or, uses in everyday life. "It was our idea that nicotine might be affecting effects of cigarette smoking on said Spilich. His idea was that al-

'We're changing something in the way the brain works when we (use) nicotine"

impair the recall of the smoker.

six years ago, when a student approached him with the idea that performance in comprehension with this observation, since the literature written on the subject claimed that nicotine had "a facilitaperformance," he said.

with his hypothesis, so the two designed a series of experiments to test the effect of nicotine upon mental performance. For three months, the that perhaps there were adverse effects from tobacco use. In reading journals regarding nicotine research, Spilich found that "everyone who had ever looked at performance with just one or two exmight call a very simple task," involving a list of reactions, such as the playing of a video game.

'So,' we said, 'let's look at more complex tasks, let's look at real world types of tasks,' and that's exactly what we started to do. We said to ourselves, 'Cigarette smoking affects only those operations

Spilich's experiments though nicotine might not have all suggest that smoking does indeed effect on a simple reactionary task - indeed, that it might have an Spilich became interested in improving effect - nicotine will nicotine effects on the brain about have an adverse outcome an more complex comprehensive tasks. Working with a group of stucigarette smoking affected one's dents, Spilich conducted a series of experiments ranging from the tasks. At the time, Spilich disagreed simple to the more complex tasks which require thought. Students were classified into three groups: Non-smokers, (those who had not tive or soothing effect upon mental smoked seriously in the previous eighteen months, and not more than But Spilich's student persisted a pack of cigarettes a day), smokers (people who had been smoking at least a pack of cigarettes a day for at least a year and were brought into the laboratory to smoke) and smokstudent conducted tests and found ers abstaining (those who were asked to refrain from tobacco and caffeine for two hours prior to the experiments). The students performed a series of tests which increased in difficulty successively.

In a menial task, such as a test in ceptions focused on what you and I which an array of 96 letters are placed on a computer screen, the individual's job was to read the screen as quickly as possible. The results were unimpressive: smokers performed most efficiently, followed by smokers abstaining and non-smokers, with a small margin between the three. However, the continued on page 4

| 8 wholes only alose operations | continued on page |
|--------------------------------|-------------------|
| INSIDE:                        |                   |
| Classical Pianist              | page 4            |
| off the cuff                   | page 5            |
| Fife and Drum Corps.           |                   |
| Softball Problems              | page 6            |
| Lax's First Loss               |                   |
| Women's Lacrosse Pre           |                   |
| On the Double Planet           |                   |
| on the Double I lance.         | puse o            |

Junior Rob Albers'hacking is not due to a springtime cold. The philosophy major joined a hackey sack game on the porch of the Literary House Tuesday as temperatures upheld the groundhog's promise. The warm weather found other students throwing frisbees and soaking up some sun in anticipation of next week's

Pearsall To Speak On Geoffrey Chaucer

Harvard University's Gurney Professor of English, Derek Pearsall, will discuss Geoffrey Chaucer and his Canterbury Tales today and tomorrow. A public lecture on "Irony in The Canterbury Tales" is scheduled for tonight at 8:00 p.m. in the Sophie Kerr Room of Miller Library. Pearsall will discuss the medieval author tomorrow morning at 10:30, in the

The Elm will not English Prose. publish next week due to Spring Break. Look for our lacrosse supplement on March 25.

Sophie Kerr Room. The public is cordially invited to both events.

The British-born Pearsall came to Harvard from the University of York as a visiting professor. He is president-elect of the New Chaucer Society, and has published extensively on Chaucer. He is a member of the advisory board for Modern Language Review and Yearbook of English Studies., and serves as chairman of the advisory committee for Index of Middle

He has written with Elizabeth Salter Landscapes and Seasons of the Medieval World. His most Part 9 of A Variorum Edition of the cism Works of Geoffrey Chaucer.

the College's Sophie Kerr Lecture Forum and the William James Fo-Series, now in its 20th year.

Washington Post Editor To Speak

"Sex, Sin, and the News Media" will be the topic of discussion when Richard Harwood. the deputy managing editor of The Washington Post, visits on Tuesday, March 22. Harwood's talk begins at 7:30 p.m. in Hynson Lounge, and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Harwood is the third-ranking news executive at The Washington Post, having joined the news organization in 1966 from the Louisville Courier-Journal. His assignments have included national politics and public affairs reporting. corresponding from Vietnam, and serving as national editor and assistant Managing Editor for national news. In 1970 Harwood became the paper's first media critic and ombudsman, and in 1974 he was named editor of The Trenton Evening Times and Sunday Times, a subsidiary of The Washington Post Company. He returned to The Post in 1976 as Deputy Managing Editor.

Harwood has written for several national magazines and has coauthored and contributed to a number of books, including "Lyndon," a biographical essay on the late President Lyndon B. Johnson: "Of the Press, By the Press, For the Press (And Others, Too)," a collection of essays on journalism; and "Fall of a President," the story of the ill-fated Jonestown colony, "The Pursuit of the Presidency: 1980," and "The Wounded Generation: America After Vietnam." He also wrote two volumes on the life and career of Robert F. Kennedy and a screenplay for NRC

He was appointed a Nieman Fellow at Harvard University in 1955 and was the first Carnegie Fellow in Journalism at Columbia University in 1965.

He has won many journalrecent book, The Canterbury Tales: istic awards, including two Sigma A Critical Study, was published in Delta Chi medals and the George 1985. Pearsall also is the editor of Polk Award for national reporting, Chaucer: The Nun's Priest's Tale, and a second Polk award for criti-

Harwood's visit Pearsall's visit is sponsored by is sponsored by The President's nım

Why Didn't You Vote?

Super Tuesday is history, George Bush is a shoo-in to win the Republican nomination and lose the Presidential election, and the Democrats, still, are pygmies waiting to grow into giants. But after Tuesday's elections, the question which should be asked to Washington College students is not whom did you vote for on Tuesday, but why

We fear that a very small percentage of the Washington College population voted on Tuesday, or, if they are from New York or New Jersey of some other state which has not held its primary yet, will vote in their state's upcoming primary. Some do not even know who the candidates are, and few know where the candidates stand on issues which involve them directly. This is sad

Since 18 to 21 year olds were granted the right to vote in 1971 with the ratification of the 26th amendment, they have consistently been the group with the poorest voter participation in elections. An average turnout for this age group falls within the thirty percent range, with the average partication for all voters an unimpressive fifty to fifty-five percent. Perhaps this is because young people are new to the election process. Or perhaps students are simply lazy and apathetic and willing to take the short amount of time necessary to send notice to Washington D.C. that they care about what goes on in their country.

In an election year such as 1988 when the results promise to be close, it is stupid to remain silent. Although college or Mommy and Daddy's pocketbook may serve as a cocoon at present, the President who is elected this year, barring death or impeachment, will be the President who is serving the United States when we enter the so-called "real world," trying to find jobs in a shaky economy, hoping to avoid war in an unbalanced world. The quality of the President who we elect now will determine the quality of the life which we face when our home is no longer Washington College.

The point is that we should use our voting privilege to influence our future. While one vote may or may not make much of a difference, a concerted voice from college students that we care about issues that affect our age group - such as federal financial aid, insane budget deficits, and the job market - will make a difference.

If we must answer "Who would you vote for?," then we endorse Democratic Senator Albert Gore, Ir. for his economic skills and plans and his foreign policy and national defense expertise, and Republican Senator Robert Dole, because he is a lot more sane and trustworthy and practical than Vice President What's-His-Name.

And if we must tell you that George Bush (oh, that's it) has virtually ensured the Republican nomination and that Michael Dukakis, Albert Gore, Jr., and Jesse Jackson are in a tight race for the Democrats which could lead to a brokered convention this July, then start taking about twenty minutes a day from your schedule to read the Washington Post and learn about the issues and events outside of Washington College

College is a learning experience; learn to vote and you will learn how to have a say in your world.

William Beekman

Washington College Elm

| Proped                    | PR DOM               |
|---------------------------|----------------------|
| Edi                       | tors                 |
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Kehoe         |
| News Editor               | Tony Caligiuri       |
| Features Editor           | Jennifer M. Harrison |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekman         |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Susan DiLeo          |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Balze        |
| Graphics Editor           | Todd Karr            |
| Man                       | ager                 |
| Managing Editor           | Cathy Jewell         |
| Advertising Manager       | Erin Hodge-Williams  |
| Circulation Manager       | William Fauct        |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and orials are the responsibility of the Editor-In-chief. Signed colu taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editors cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that cannot aways pausine every fetter received and some must be shortened. I hold that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, pountenation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments. nit letters to 600 words or less and include day and eve ming phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be dep the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mailed c'o The Elm Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters become the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be considered for publication in that week's issue.

publication in that week's issue.

The Eim's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Ar dormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

THE 1988 PRESIDENTIAL HOOPIA: It'S THE GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH! WE THE PEOPLE ETC., DEMANIE TESCE OUR FAIR SHARE OF NAME-C FORGE CALLING BACK-STARBING SCAN-BUSH! LL GET THE POPCORN, SOME-ONE GRAB THE DAI-RIDDEN POLITICOS ROBERTSON BALLOTS HART AMERICA YA GOTTA LOVE IT

TO THE EDITOR

Friends Can Help Curb Problems With Alcohol

Tuesday evening last week there was a strong showing of Washington College students who turned out and actively participated in the all-campus open forum discussion about the infamous East Hall party following the Birthday Ball which "went wrong". The strong turnout and active discussion which ensued are strong indicators that there is a genuine interest among the students of this campus to preserve the future of campus social events involving alcohol. Throughout the entire discus-

on Dr. Roemer leaned towards two very gloomy facts that have been definite factors in student related violence on this campus. The first of these that Dr. Roemer continually hinted at was that there does appear to be a definite relationship between excessive alcohol consumption and violence. This I believe we all agree upon. The other point which Dr. Roemer touched upon is the possibility that there are individuals on this campus that are more inclined than others to carry out acts of violence when drinking excessively. (i.e. Individuals who possess drink ing disorders, or problems, whichever term you prefer). I believe this point is both true and extremely terrifying in regards to the well being of the future of campus social functions involving alcohol. It is this point which I wish to address in

All questions asked by Dr. Roemer about how to effectively deal with the problems presently facing student drinking related vio lence drew an abundance of replies and comments posing true observa tions and effective solutions to these problems. All questions that is, except for the one which concerned

PART TIME - HOME

MAILING PROGRAM!

ont income! Details send does one deal with the individuals who constantly pose a threat of alcohol related violence at campus social events?" In response to this question I was the sole respondent in saving that here the individual's friends have the capability of playing a strong role. Dr. Roemer quickly pointed out that although true, this approach poses a tough task for the "friend" who wishes to confront one about his behavior. Nothing personal Dr. Roemer, but I felt that answer is a con out and do. not buy it for one moment. Friends not only possess a capability of curbing ones alcohol related miseries, more importantly, friends are obligated by a strong responsibility to do such. Sure there is the Alcohol. Task Force, and the Alcohol Awareness Committee designed with the intent to deal with policies regarding alcohol on campus, but one friend can make the difference of a dozen committees

There are students on this campus who have friends with definite alcohol related problems, and it is sad. I find that the most convenient and sad choice is also the most common and that is to simply ignore that a problem exists and carry on with the party. You know, "Let the good times roll, for the party must go on". I strongly disagree with this policy and do not agree with the "difficulty" factor one bit as a reason for neglecting to confront any persons problem, because when the problem surfaces the party stops rolling for good.

The difficultly and pain experienced by the individual confronting a friends' or loved ones drinking problem, and it is painful, is greatly dwarfed by what can be the ensuing pain experienced by the individual who must answer to the consequences of the problem getting out of control

From personal experiences I ow this for a fact.

Mind you the consequences I talking about can range any-

> HELP WANTED e! Write: P.O. Box 17. Clark, NJ 07066

where from facing disappointed friends and parents, to Monday morning appointments with per turbed college officials, to waking up five days after the "party" in a Maryland Shock trauma unit with your head swollen to the size of a hasketball, looking like a telephone switchhoard with multicolored wires running in and out of your body, and not knowing how the hell you got there. Or even worse vel death. I can relate well with all but one of the above. Each time I recollect where I once was I cry a little and die a little. This I have to live with for the rest of my life, yet I am

The point is that the consequences can be dire and if one turns his/her back on a potential problem there will occur a snowball effect and the burden of regret will fall on our community, and then its too late to turn your back. Each time I awake to the ecream of an ambulance sizes outside my window on 213 I wonder if the pain is all beginning, or ending for some other unlucky soul and his family. One moment of poor decision making can lead to a lifetime of

The point of this long winded letter is to say that to preserve the safe future of social drinking activities on our campus, we must exercise responsible attitudes and actions towards alcohol. We must have an eye out for the other person who may be going through hard times and dealing with mounting pressures, something not uncommon at college. Communication is all I'm talking about. When a person drinks with pent up pressures he is often driven to mass consumption and prone to make irrational decisions. If this is where he is led he soon becomes engaged in a game as I was, governed by the law of averages and it is only a matter of time before he gets hurt. It's true that it is only fun until someone gets hurt, and if so the next time someone gets hurt the game just may be over

EMPLOYMENT HOMEMAKERS WANTED! TOP PAY! C.L. 121 24th Ave. an Otto ite 222 Non

continued on page 4

for good. 73060

Swing the Pendulum to the Right Successfully

I would vote for on Super Tuesday I thought wow! what an easy question, but now things have changed. In the beginning I supported Bruce Babbit for the nomination. He's so honest, that's something we really need in the president who is to follow Reagan and the Iran-Contra Affair. But, then Babbit became raising taxes. Since then he has withdrawn from the race because of lack of funds and I've had to find another candidate to support.

Well, my next choice became Paul Simon. I found him to have many of the same qualities as Babbit such as honesty and a desire to help those that are less fortunate something that hasn't been a concern these past eight years. He seemed to be a good old fashioned liberal and the ideal person for the Democratic nomination. Well, as I should

Tuesday. Now that he is almost out of the race I must once again start searching for a worthy candidate. This has been a difficult process since Super Tuesday includes twenty Southem states. The candidates have had to spread themselves thin and voters, like myself, have 100 honest and said that he would consider not had the opportunity to learn more about them and their policies. Our only chances to learn more were the primaries and caucuses in the small states such as New Hampshire and Iowa, but even then the most the voters saw was candidates stabbing each other in the back to win a race After doing a little extra reading I've come across another choice for my vote. This time I've chosen Albert Gore. I don't like to say he's my third choice because I really didn't know anything about him until few have expected he is having financial difficul- weeks ago. He was the only Democratic canties and has decided to not run in Super didate to send a representative to my home town which is on the Eastern Shore. I have to say that that is what first got me interested in him as a possible choice on Super Tuesday: I think it is important for a candidate to recognize that there are possible voters elsewhere in the state, and not just in Baltimore. After reading the brochure that his representative left in my father's office I became even more impressed with this candidate. He supports the American farmer and cleaning up the environment. He cares about this country's elderly by working to provide long term care for them and protecting the Social Security system. He also strongly supports the Equal Rights Amendment. Best of all, he does not support military aid to the Contras! This man doesn't even seem to have any skeletons in his closet - he's just a really nice guy

Laura Kerbin

I consider myself a liberal, but at this point in time I think it is advantageous for the Democratic party to nominate someone who is a moderate. He would have a better chance of winning in November because he would also have the support of the more conservative Democrats. If Al Gore can prove to be electable in the Southern primary I think he could also be electable in November against any Rebublican. It's time for the political pedulum in this nation to start swinging back towards the left, but a swing too far too soon by the Democratic party could send it back once again to the right, which would damage this nation permanently.

ISSUE: Who did you vote for (or who do you intend to vote for) in the presidential primary elections?

Senio Camp Hill, Pa.

Tipa Smith Sophomore Andover, Mass

Dawn Dams Junior Pasadena, MD.

Sheila Nash Sonhomore Pasadena, Md.

Cliff Schroeder Frechman Dichmond Va

for George Bush. Since I have to people. listen to one of these fellows for the next four years, he seems to be the least annoying of the bunch."

had the opportunity though, I'd vote eral, bright person interested in the

with the people."

"I'm a registered Independent. If I "Mike Dukakis because he's a lib. "Mike Dukakis because as governor "I won't reveal that confidential "In this year's Republican presidenof Mass. he initiated an impressive information, but I will tell you who tial race, George Bush is the obvious economic recovery program and I definitely would not vote for and choice. His history in public office supports the INF treaty. He seems that is Bush. I would not trust a man as well as his job as former head of truly interested in what is going on who completely changed his plat- the CIA has been one of impeccable form in '80 just to be Reagan's run- performance." ning mate.

Campus Voices

by Susan H. Stobbart

"Gore Gamble" To Change Future Nominations This does not mean that Gore is against a Glasnost policy. Gore also rejects the isolanessee Albert Gore Ir Thelieve that Senator

When confronted with the question, Primary?," most people will answer with the candidate who they most recently heard about, whether it is through the media or from their friends. The average voter makes this important decision on issues of style and glitz, ignoring the important issues that confront the country. This Tuesday, after primaries and caucuses in smaller states, the bulk of delegales to each parties nominating convention will be assigned to the various candidates. Voters Tuesday will have, arguably, the most power until the general presidential election in November.

Since I am a registered Democrat and the state of Maryland conducts closed primaries (where you only vote in the primary of the Party in which you are registered), I will only discuss the Democratic Party candidates. My favorite in the field is the Senator from Ten-nation out of the Reagan era. Wait! Isn't that term "vision," a bit overused when discussing political aspirants. True, but let's look at the sues facing the country.

First, the dire economic straits that the country is in now. Most Democratic candi-

Arian

Ravanbakhsh

dates do not support the balanced-budget amendment. It should be clear to everyone that this is where we have to start. Of the two that do Senators Simon and Gore, Senator Gore has the best policy to go along with this amendment. Gore would decrease the Department of Defense's already bloated budget. Simon would freeze it, but not necessarily cut

Who would you vote for in the presidential Gore has the vision and ability to lead this strong defense. Senator Gore is the only Democrat who realizes that the arms control agreements between the superpowers are a result of the increase in the American arsenal. When we can deal with the Soviets from a position of equality, agreements between Moscow and Washington are easier to reach and mutually-beneficial. Senator Gore also is in favor of a stronger Navy, deploying 14 aircraft carriers and building two more. On the nuclear side of the ledger, Gore is against the poorly reaserched and idealistic Strategic Defense Initiative but in favor of the MX and Minuteman missile systems.

In foreign policy affairs, Gore supports the Arias peace plan for Central America and also nonlethal aid to the Nicaraguan Contras. Senator Gore also supported the administration's Persian Gulf policy and is optimistic, but cautious toward Gorbachev's nist stance of most Democrats

That is where Senator Gore stands on most of the major issues facing the country. It is obvious, without much thought, that this plan is also the most reasonable course of action to follow. Also, a word here about Senator Gore's strategy. Gore realized that he would not do well in either the Iowa or New Hampshire contests. To enter those campaigns and fail to meet expectations usually means you have to withdraw from the race (like Pete DuPont and Al Haig). Gore has concentrated on "Super Tuesday", hoping to collect support from his native South. If the "Gore Gamble" works, it will change the course of future nomination campaigns. For this pleasant change and Gore's visionary future, he gets my vote.

Arian Ravanbakhsh is a junior majoring in political science.

Spilich Researchs Effects Of Nicotine Use On Memory

results changed slightly when the individual was instructed to hit the space bar each time a letter changed: this time, non-smokers finished hest followed by smokers and smokers abstaining

The outcome of these experiments resulted in a complete turn around when students were asked to complete tests of comprehension. such as reading a passage of literature which involves the manipulation of information and the use of short-term memory. Non-smokers completed the test best, followed by smokers abstaining and non-smok ers. Spilich concluded that "we're changing something in the way the brain works when we (use) nicotine It's not enough to say that smoking causes you to recall less. I think there's something more important going on here, and that is while the (non-smokers) can tell what is im-

Classical Pianist Set To Perform

(smoker) cannot." The inability of questions involving understanding some smokers to recall important themes as well as details in a passage of reading mimics the results seen in the performance of people who suffer from senility

- A study just completed by Spilich consists of 24 reading passages eight involving history, eight in science, eight in familiar subjectssuggests that smokers are more likely to forget details than nonsmokers. "Smokers are in trouble when the material is unfamiliar and of less importance. This suggests that they have a problem holding onto imformation," explained Spil-

In another recall exercise, students listened to a story on tape. Throughout the story, questions involving fact and inference were asked: the time between each question varied. Smokers performed giving an American premiere of a collection of classical music on Tuesday, March 22. This free concert, co-sponsored by the College's Denartment of Music and the Washington College Concert Series, begins at 4:30 p.m. in Norman James Theatre.

of Manchester College, Oxford, England, played the first Mr. Hill.

or when a significant amount of time passed between each question. Spilich said, "What I find most interesting is that there are no differences between smokers and nonsmokers when there are questions within the same paragraph." Yet smokers seem to have difficulty when they must scan a different paragraph which includes a new

Cigarette smoking generates carbon monoxide, causing hypoxia, which is when the flow of oxygen to the brain is hindered, much like the effect caused by holding one's Spilich suggested that hypoxia is not the only effect of nicotine on the brain: "Maybe nicotine changes the way the brain works." He current research aims to prove this hyperformance of this program at Wigmore Hall in London. The program will include sonata in C major, 330 (Mozart); Estampes (Debussy); Prelude and Fugue on a Theme by Cyril Scott, op. 69 and Fantasty Fugue, op. 161 (Rubbra); and Fantasia quasi Sonata apres une Lecture de Dante (Liszt). The Hill, a member of the faculty Fantasy Fugue by the English composer Rubbra is dedicated to

Dr. George Spilich lectures on the detrimental effects of cigarette smoking on memory at the last O'Neill Literary House Monday Series talk. The psychology professor found that the performance of some smokers in reading recollection tests mimicked that of people suffer-

Mom's Cookie Iar

Letters: Party Stops When Problems Surface continued from page 2 sibility and accountability. When Editor's Note: The previous letter

This is our community and it will end up to be what we make of it. so look out for one another and exercise judgment with all possible consequences and alternatives in mind. It all comes down to respon unfortunate incidents occur as a was not printed in last week's issue must look to ourselves for answers, running out of answers result of alcohol consumption we of The Elm due to deadline and space restrictions. Therefore, the and it appears to me that we are Tuesday night forum referred to is the open discussion "Why The Party Carter Boatner Went Wrong," held on March I

Don't Replace Art Films With Mediocrity

In my desperate search for causes to believe in. I've abandoned Human Rights in Central America in favor of trying to get people to see how great our film series really is. Speaking critically, many of the movies shown by Dr. Kabat during the past few years are the best current works available, not just in the U.S., but world-wide. These are not dusty, esoteric art films, but contemporary and sometimes controversial art films. Tampopo, shown two weeks ago, is playing now at the Key Theater in D.C., and My Life As A Dog played last semester at the Outer Circle. This has been the situation since I have been here. Kabar has always presented us with the As for those who object to not cutting edge of the genre

Nerds II (a perfect choice for a precan't understand why a liberal arts college shouldn't be a place for intellectual and artistic films, made for reasons other than box office draw. If you absolutely hate having to read subtitles, there are at least two other film series. The Alumni House shows current mainstream movies (Robocop, Lost Boys), and even asks for suggestions, and the Dance Club shows timeless classics in the coffee house. Also, the Literary House has a VCR available, as does the library

The real question, I guess, is SGA funding. I have always thought the SGA was an actually useful organization here - not so much for bringing back Jr. Cline and being able to see Revenge of the the Recliners every year, but for funding the multitude of Student Spring Break orgy of culture), I clubs and college institutions that exist. I think the film series is one of the best of these, and this year, without any (school sponsored) art exhibits and only the usual mimaginative concert series, the SGA has co-sponsored one of the few examples of the arts left at this liberal arts college

Students taking more control of the education they're paying for is important, and its something that doesn't happen enough at this school, but why start by changing one of the few things here that works? Is the SGA really representing the students by suggesting the current film series he replaced by just that much more mediocrity? Chas. Foster

My special thanks and apprecia- may I say "Thank You" to the stuo Mrs. Betty Schaub er Mrs dente who have been utilizing the Cindy Seiffert, Geoffrey Miller, Dennis Berry, Jay Meranchik, Charlotte Post, Carter Boatner, Mary Brown and the Dining Service staff. Your efforts and hard work made the W C Health and Fitness Fair a big success. For those of you who attended the fair, I hope you got something positive from it.

Congratulations to the winners of the door prize drawings: Holly Walbert, First Aid Kit; Anna Wheeler, Softbell weights; Mary Lorraine Sexton, free dental clean-

Napkin Board. The Dining Service Management Staff enjoy hearing from you - even when the comments aren't too nice. Keep writing to us, or stop by the office and talk to one of the Supervisors. Let us know what your problem is or what you comment might be - good, bad or indifferent A reminder to those of you interested in summer employment with the W.C.D.S., applications are being accepted through today.

I hope you all have a good break!!

While I am in a grateful mood, Until the next edition......MOM

OLD WHARF INN

Enjoy Waterfront Dining Located at the foot of Cannon Street

> Chestertown, Md. (301) 778-3566

> > Credit Cards Accepted

Amily Bakery and Coffee Shop Donuts, French Loaves & Italian Breads Rolls, Pies, Cookies, Special Occasion Cakes On Order

Breakfast S A.M.-11 A.M Lunch - Soups & Sandwiche Kent Plaza, Chestertown 778-2228

312A Park Roy

Chestertown Md

or of High & Queen Str 778-5343 Winter Clearance SALE 0% to 50% Off 14 1/2 to 52

Carge Is Covely

Open Thurn: 10-5 Pri: 10-7 Sat.: 10-5

FEATURES

off the cuff:

Renovate Film Series For Master Plan

According to the campus Diary of a Washington College Pick offers exciting possibilities for vari-redress would give special attention cigarettes. Who can expect indires section of last week's Elm, a Up, showing the events from the rain Pharaoh suggests importing meeting of eyes across a freshly or rather than movies. At the risk tapped keg to the post-liasion writoffending a College deity freently quoted in this publication, e propose that the current film ries controversy be resolved with this is a family film series little Yankee ingenuity. For those who agree with one adventures in the art house, showing ing on the bathroom wall. The plot would follow the usual WC fashion documentary following the productences uninterrupted), as these the campus social stratification sysof boy meets girl, boy ... Maybe not,

Yet another flick would depict

Diary of a WC Pick Up would show the events from the meeting of eves across a freshly -tapped keg to the post-liaison writings on the bathroom wall ident's assertion that "foreign rodents making pottery in the basemshlow." domestic movies could manufactured right here at Washton College. Certainly, they ents piece would reveal the latest pledge pranks and tortures, probsuch vital questions as "What do Lambdas really do with all those as of Old Bay?" and "Why does shared experience of regurgitatg cheap beer foster friendship?"

Less weighty but just as heartming, exclusive footage of a ority candlelight would spread AOPi/Alpha Chi/Zeta love around world. And viewing a few nHel (or rather, PanHell) tea skits of songs will explain why vaudele died ment. After all, rumor has it that rats outnumber majors in McAlpin. Adventures in magic would also be uld be both enriching and enter- entertaining. Certainly, a showing of how to manipulate a car through For instance, one current the Reid Hall parking lot would not only amaze viewers, in many cases it would ease the burdens of daily

> A revisionist history of the French Revolution would be set in Hodson Hall, substituting the main dining room for the palace of Versailles. The film's climax would feature the WCDS divine (or is that divan?) right despots, when the purchase of a new jewelled beverage bar has precluded replenishing the bread bar for hungry students, declaring "Let them eat little brown Sherman's March too long, the and colleagues (the one fortunate nars? series would include a 35-hour enough to complete a series of senety in entertainment. For those who to the scenes in which faculty corviduals under such stress to ever thought Ross McElwee's rect the grammar of administrators defeat the fascistic writing semi-

Appealing to another layer in tion of one issue of The Elm. An-motherly corrections have particu-tem would be films of SGA senate other lengthy nonfiction feature would consist of footage of actual campus crimes. Audiences might be dissuaded from attending, however, by the fact that this would probably take the better part of the

Rivaling this production in length would be the account of a faculty meeting, complete with close ups of each professor taking his rightful turn to support, criticize or qualify the comments of the othlar bearing on the proceedings As riveting conversation goes, an interview piece showing the many facets of the Sophomore Writing Seminar controversy would prove fresh and original. It's the kind of issue you just can't hear too much about Another talk film would focus on the Literary House hangers on. Questioning of just a sampling of the writers would reveal shocking details - some barely have suffi-

too) the Tench Tilghman Fife and Drum Corps has been playing since1975. They started informally

as a way of kicking off the Tea Party festival, before becoming the official corps of the Tea Party celebration, according to Claudine Odell, whose mother organises the corps in Chestertown's past quite seriously.

paying close attention to historical fact in terms of their colonia instru ments and costumes. All are in the Odell states that the corps takes their role as a representation of cooperation with Pat Gladu.

meetings. Granted, there'd be no senators in attendance.

With alternatives like these, who can even think of Mona Lisa, Platoon or My Life as a Dog? What are insightful probings of the problems of human existence when you can have shallow depictions of tedious and repetitive events? Better yet, you can look for that rare and delicate combination of both, as in the Porky's or the Rambo sagas. Now 1' 1's entertainment.

Reviving Colonial History Through Music

Revolutionary cities such as Phila-fledged fife and drum corps. Party, (yes, Chestertown had one, Though Chestertown is delphia or Gettysburg, not many Formed by a few friends as a means comparison to other pre- towns its size can boast a full- of celebrating Chestertown's Tea

Mark Mumford, president of the Chestertown Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the Tea Party Committee adds that they return a deeper colonial atmosthat the fife and drum corps first was sponsored by the festival before tradition of the colonial era.

becoming independant of the festi-The 1988 corps raise its

the east coast at fife and drum musters, or "jam sessions" in the spirit of the colonial era and friendship. Such an event will take place the weekend of the Tea Party (May 28th) where invited corps' from other states will participate in a parade and the Tea Party activites. While the Tench Tilghman Fife and Drum Corns are not performing due to one members' involvement in the Kent County High School's Graduation, they have organised the event by inviting the other groups.

The Fife and Drum Corns play an integral part of Chestertown's history, while at the same time, according to Mumford act as "little ambassadors" and "represent the county very well wherever they go."

In this sense the size of phere to the festival" and explains Chestertown grows each time they perform, as more and more people become aware, through the Tench Tilghman Fife and Drum Corps, of the history of Chestertown, and its role in the Revolutionary War.

An historical cannon rests in the center of Chestertown, not far from the memorial of the Civil War. own money and performs all over

Tar Heels Hand Sho'men Season's First Setback

College's Washington Men's Lacrosse Team suffered its first loss of the season Saturday to drop to 1-1 for the season.

After defeating Lynchburg last Wednesday, 28-4, the Shore man traveled to Division I powerhouse University of North Carolina. North Carolina, ranked number three in the Division I preseason polls, proved too tough as the Shoreman fell by the score of 17-5

While Coach Corcoran was pleased with his team's performance, he was infumed at the officiating. WC had some bad penalties called against them early in the game, which contributed to their falling behind early in the game. As Coach Corcoran stated, it is still "tough to play down there." Paul Deniken led the Shoremen in scoring with two goals and counted for WC's final tally. Tim Hormes and Mike Woodfolk added one assist a piece

The Shoremen were outscore 5:0 in the first quarter, and down 11-2 at the end of the first half.

For all those who will be in the neighborhood, the Men's Lacrosse Team has three games over spring break. The first game is this Saturday at 1:30pm on Kibler Field against defending Division I chamnion Johns Honkins, Washington College also travels to the Naval Acadamy on Wednesday to face Division I Navy. The last game of break will be on the Sunday before we return, when the Shoreman face Guilford College in a game that is being played at Boy's Latin High School in Baltimore.

A reminder for all students to bring your ID card to the games for free admission. Admission for all one assist. Paul Miller had two adults 22-54 will be $2.00, for ages

Women's Lacrosse Preview

Sho'women Hope Talent Will Overcome Youth and Inexperience

by Bill Beekman

The Shorewomen lacrosse team will escape from across the railroad tracks to travel to Hollins College this weekend to scrimmage against other Women's Lacrosse teams from the East Coast

Coach Diane Guinan hopes to use this weekend to guage the progress of her team to date. The Shorewomen's season officially opens on March 18th against Johns Hopkins.

In its third year of intercollegiate competition, only six players from last year's 2-9 squad will be returning

"We've lost a lot of people from last year's team, but we've retained the core group plus added a lot of talented freshman," according

Returning players include jun ior Beth Matthews, last year's MVP and a MAC All star Honorable Mention in 1987, and Angela Henneman, the Shorewomen's Most Improved Player from last year. Others include Linda Anders, Jill Bland, Mary Beth Enright, and Carole Reece. Ten new players will compliment these veterans.

Among the freshmen, Sarah Coste, Lee Anne Ledwin, and Erin O'Neal were all MVP's at their high schools. Donna White was selected successful."

to her All-County All Star Second Team. Laura Bilger, Stephanie Bauer, Kim Clinton, Alix Goode, Wendy Kerr, and Amy Tichel are

Relative to the Women's La crosse program's short past, the "Shorewomen are stronger this year based on raw talent. The wins and losses may not show that, however because this year we have a tough schedule which includes four of the eight teams which were in the NCAA quarterfinals last year," remarked Guinan

Goalie Anders expressed optimism for the upcoming season. "We have fun when we play, which make us play even better.

Added Anders, "there are a lot of strong shooters with raw talent on this team," a fact which Guinan reinforced. "There's a lot of raw talent out there. The key is whether we can put it together. I think they can."

The Shorewomen's main weakness is lack of college experience. With more than half of the group being new, they have not worked together as a team for long.

"A lot of people come from schools which emphasize an individualistic style of play," according to Guinan. "As soon as we adjust, with our raw talent, we should be

Intramural Indoor Soccer Organizational Meeting

meeting tonight, March 10th, of the Intramural Indoor Soccer League at 7 PM in the Cain Athletic Center. Team names and a refundable $10 good faith deposit are required.

Spring Break and will be played on cepted

There will be an organizational Tuesdays, Thursdays and Sundays in the Gym

Team members must be either a full time student, a full time faculty member, a full time staff member, or a member of the athletic staff. Games will begin soon after Late applications will not be ac-

After two regular season games, not including yeasterdays game against ithica, the Shoremen stand a 1-1. Tough games agianst NCAA division I champion Johns Hopkins on March 12 and Navy on March 1 loom ahead, before Washington College returns to Division III territory against Athletic Director Geoffee Miller's old team, Guilford, on March 20

Revolving Door Coaches Distract Stability in Softball Program

by Shari Golden

This year, along with five new freshman players, the women's softball team will be sporting a new coach. Joe Gladu is taking over this position due to the sabbatical leave of the former coach, Penny Fall. Gladu is the third new coach the team has had over the past three

Having a different coach every year not only presents problems for the veterans of the team, but also deters from the recruitment of new players. When individual players can't settle down to one style of coaching, it creates inconsistencies for the team as a whole. According to sophomore team member Sheri Christopher these problems "make it difficult for the players to learn to work together as a team." Jackie Langdon, a four year veteran of strong program can never be built when the program itself is in constant change

Problems such as these make it difficult for the team to get the respect they need as a good team. Consequently, a cycle is created: without this respect it becomes harder to recruit talented new players for the school and without these talented players it becomes harder to earn respect

Hopefully this year's team members will be able to break the cycle by combining their individual talents to create a strong team. By working together for success the team hopes to improve their conference and overall record. The season begins on Sunday, March 20th with the girls traveling to Lebanon Valley. The first home women's softball remarked "a game will be Thursday March 24th versus Widener University, somake your way across the railroad tracks and cheer the team on to victory

> Roommate Register Janet Corgill

P.O. Box 2208 MBS Ocean City, MD 21842

301-723-1609

Positive Thinking Can Produce Positive Results

ways for you to bring your mind into designed to boost performance, calm your nerves, bolster self-confidence and otherwise improve your

DR. JOCK

Take Harry, for instance. He used to scream and yell at himself and his wife every time they did something stupid on the tennis court. Then he learned to exercise some control over his emotions. He thought only positive thoughts and said only sweet, complimentary things. His game improved (not to mention his marriage) and he felt energized instead of exhausted after

Marie is another example. She skied Aspen for years but couldn't conquer the expert runs until a visiting sports psychologist taught her to visualize. Now she's able to ski the scariest slopes secure in the knowledge that she has done it already. . . safely. . .in her mind your mind into play when you exer play when you exercise, all of them cise? The October issue of OMNI magazine featured sixteen mental exercises you can use to improve your mind control. It's basic mindover-matter stuff, but what really matters is how much you can benefit from trying. Here's a sampling of some recommended techniques:

Visualization = Relaxation Sports psychologists have been pushing this with the pros for years and, happily, the technique is beginning to trickle down to the masses To achieve inner calm (a prerequisite for improving performance), recall a time and a place when you felt totally at ease. See the beach. Feel the sunshine. Smell the woods . . whatever is meaningful and calming to you. (The more details the better!) Experts say every time you recall the scene mentally, physical changes including breathing, hormone level and muscle tension can all occur in your favor

Think High Energy. If your sport calls for bursts of high energy - ice-skating, basketball, diving, etc visualization can help here, too. The trick is to find an image that personally pumps you up and makes you feel super-energized. A skater the intuitive, creative right side of daily for a few weeks and associatsays she imagines she swallows a the brain. The result is called flow, ing it with a cue word to help you star and feels the energy surging a sense of being on automatic pilot, through her body during her per- an ability to play well immersed in formance. A runner conjures up a the experience without needing to rubber band of light pulling him analyze your every step. from start to finish. Find the one that works for you. . .and use it!

Accentuate the positive. Negative thinking can have a disastrous effect on your sports perform- laxed relaxation, learning to tense and release virtually every muscle in your body until you are totally re-

"Negative thinking can have a disastrous effect on your sports performance. If you constantly tell yourself you're going to ... blow the free throw, you probably will."

Step 2 involves recalling in

Step 3 is practicing Step 1 and 2

ance. If you constantly tell yourself you're going to miss the putt, or pure and vivid detail of a scene of blow the free throw, etc., you probatotal relaxation (your "visual manbly will. Learn to stop all negative tra," described above). thoughts and, instead, put yourself in a positive, can-do frame of mind. Right Brain Power. Many athletes perform better once they learn to quiet the practical, analytical left side of the brain and activate clench your fists and tense your Step 1 involves progressive arms and legs. Jerk your shoulders as high as you can, and hold them up for 10-15 seconds. Close you eyes and imagine huge, heavy weights have been placed on your shoulders.

Repeat a few times until you feel tension is eased and your energy increased Other helpful techniques discussed in the October OMNI include controlled dreaming, setting longrange goals, dreaming for endurance, and instant pick-me-ups. In addition, there are many books and self-help courses available now to enter this relaxed state of flow any-

Releasing Tension. Stand up, help you exercise mind control REMEMBER: Mental fitness is a key to achieving physical fitness. Your emotions, attitudes, and ability to relax and enjoy relate directly to your ability to be the best athlete you can be.

C-House Winners Compete

W.V.U. Bound!

Recently, the Coffee House sponsored a trip to the Association of College Unions International (ACU-I) regional competitions at West Virginia University. There, winners from the Coffee House Challenge Series in Backgammon, Ping Pong, and Chess competed against students from other colleges in the region, such as Penn State, WVU, and Maryland. Competing for Washington College were Tim Walbert, who was 2-2 in men's singles table tennis, Chris Wallenberg in women's singles table tennis, Mike Johnson, who placed third out of 21 in chess, and Dave Tysinger, who competed in backgammon. Pictured from left to right: Chris Wallenberg (sitting), Mike Johnson, Dave Tysinger, and Student Center Manager Mark Stenger, and Student Center Director of Student Activities Phil Jackson. The Coffe House plans to continue the Challenger Series this semester, and send more students to ACU-I competitions next fall.

10 Visits for $40 00

Our SunTana SunSystem guarantees you a glorious Our Sun lana Sunsystem guarantees you a glorious, radiant tan that you can keep all year long. A tan you achieve with soft, comfortable and SAFE U.V.A. light and without all the burning, peeling and flaking you get in natural sunlight. Our SunSystem is GUARANTEED to anyone who tans in the sun...while you relax in cool comfor.

> The Beauty Lounge Calling

Phone: 778-2635

NEXUS PRODUCTS AVAILABLE

Campus Volleyball Tournament Scheduled

A one-day campus wide volleyball tournament will take place from 2 to 6 PM on Sunday, March 27 on the front lawn of the College. The tournament is intended to preview the upcoming intranural volleyball

Teams will be coed, with a maximum of six players, at least two male and two female. On each hit over the net, both genders must touch the hall

Sign up sheets will be posted outside of the mail room, the Dining Hall and inside the Cain Athletic Center. Individuals are welcome to sign up and will be asigned to teams. Those with questions should contact either Geoffrey Miller or Diane Guinar

Stam Drug Co.

216 High Street

MARGARETHE VON TROTTA Norman James Theater Friday * Sunday * Monday

7:30 p.m.

Album Review:

Guitarist from a Double Planet

by John White/Marc Harfeld (The Tune Men)

On his new album, Live on the Double Planet, Michael Hedges gives an incredible display of the raw energy of his own style of acoustic guitar music. He has been Ackerman, head of Windham Hill Records, as "the guitar player from another planet." Hedges' live performance bears proof to that claim.

Coming onto the stage, hair in dreadlocks, relaxed and informal. he casually jokes with the crowd, he lets the music come. He wraps his left hand around the neck and the single guitar emits an amazing variety of sounds from alternate tunings and harmonics. The unique rhythms the finest songs on the album. and the complexity of sound leads one to believe that there are back up the Sheila E. tune "A Love Bizarre. musicians just offstage, out of view, but it is just one man "from another planet" and his guitar

The first song, "All Along the Watchtower" is a credit to its crea tor, Bob Dylan. Hedges' style and skill shine as bass line, rhythm guitar, harmonic twangs and vocals blend and weave together, creating a distinct impression as this performer's trademark.

"Because it's There" presents Hedges playing harp guitar. While captive playing the bass line on the harp strings, he executes a precise fingertap melody, including the harmonics indigenous to his style. Once again he gives the impression of a larger ensemble

"Silent Anticipations" is andescribed by his colleague, William other example of Hedges' unique work with the harp guitar as he the previous song. moves from a mellow introduction to an almost maniacally rhythmic

"Ready or Not" is a Hedges penned vocal tune. The lyrics suggest a helplessness felt by the performer in the business of music Although slightly overshadowed by the quality of the music, the lyrics stand up well and make for one of

The next song is a take-off on It demonstrates Hedges' talent and sense of humor as he creates an excellent acoustical arrangement from a mindless pop tune.

Hedges' works a haunted melody from minor chords in "Breakfast in the Field." A contrast to the previous song, the tempo is slower with more repetition of simple chord patterns. Between these chords a blues style lead drifts in the background holding the listener

Featuring Michael Manring on fretless bass, "Rikki's Shuffle" is almost dominated by his playing. Hedges takes the back seat and provides strong support to Manring, The soft sound of the bass mixed with Hedges' acoustic background work extends the relaxed feeling of Vocals reappear in his original composition "Woman of the World. The song begins as a sad tale of lost The woman of the world love turns slowly days are drawn, seasons start to change . . . I slowly turn away from the woman of the world." The strange rhythms and distant harmonics create a longing and wistful mood. The longing ends as true love is realized: woman of the world shows me the secret seed she planted in my heart...My love runs leaf and vine, through the woman of the world."

Hedges carries over the sad feeling from "Woman of the World" to "The Double Planet" as he begins to incorporate the rhythms and harmonics which were prolific at the beginning of the album. He ties the themes of the previous songs, pre- jamming, having fun. paring to move in a new direction.

The new theme is described quite accurately by Hedges when he song is a remake of the popular anyone looking for creativity says, "This piece starts off with a Beatles' single "Come Together." It music.

Michael Hedges' new album, Live on the Double Planet, feature his intricate guitar style. It is available on the Windham Hi Records label into hard rock, and ends up in a fit of but is set up as a crowd pleasers disco fury." More lively and up tempo, "The Funky Avocado" sets the new direction for the cycle of the album, not seriously technical, but quietly thanks the audience almost danceable. He's just up there

Continuing this mode, the next medium R&B tempo, and eases out is by no means a technical we concert draws to a finish.

> The concert at a close, Hay walks off the stage. Hedges's creates a unique impression or performances. This album is an for the acoustic guitar enthusia

Chestertown Movie Theater

SHOOT TO KILL

Hours Fr. Sun 789p.

778-1575

SECRET MORE SELF-HELP FILES

BAR MENU AVAIlable Monday thru Wednesday 6 'till 10 Friday and Saturday 'till 11

Nightly Happy Ho 4 - 6:30 Friday - 5:30 Free Hors D'Oeur

STAYING ON CAMPUS OVER BREAK? COME AND RELAX AT THE PUB

MONDAY $1.00 All Imports "Import Night"

TUESDAY $2.00 frozen margueritas Tequila $1.00 a shot Free Nachos at Bar "Mexican Night"

WEDNESDAY Lucky Bingo Nig Win Your Drink

FRIDAYS AND SATURDAYS WE'VE GOT

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT

AND

25 CENTS DRAFTS ON BAND NITE

9 - 10:30

778-1984

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 22

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, March 25, 1988

Richard Harwood, deputy managing editor of The Washington Post<sub>er</sub> visited campus last week to address "Sex, Sin and the New Media" at Tuesday night's William James Forum. The veteran journalist also met with students interested in the field to discuss career apportunities

Lambdas Organize Career Night

by Tony Caligiuri Lambda Pi Delta Fraternity in cooperation with the Career Development Office will sponsor a two night Career Night/Majors Series on Monday, March 28 and Tuesday, March 29 in Hynson Lounge and the Sophie Kerr Room of Miller Library

During the Series, faculty representatives of each of the twenty recognized Washington College majors will be on hand to discuss aspects of the particular major including prerequisites and Kerr Room, majors in Business requirements, how that major fits into a liberal arts education, and how the major at WC will help prepare students for later in life. Each major will include a five to seven minute presentation by the faculty member followed by a question and answer session.

During the first night in Hynson Lounge, majors in Chemistry, Physics, Mathematics, Biology, and Psychology will be discussed while at the same time in the Sonhie

Economics, Political Science, International Studies, and American Studies will be covered. On Tues day in Hynson Lounge, majors in Art, English, Music, Drama, and Modern Language will be discussed while representatives from majors in Education, History, Humanities, Sociology, and Philosophy will be on hand in the Sophie Kerr Room. The sessions will run approximately two hours, from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. each night.

Alumni representing many of the majors will speak each night sharing insights into how a liberal arts education helped or hurt them, courses that should or should not be taken, and how to make the most out of the opportunities available at Washington College

Robert Caldwell, of the Lambdas said that the administration has expressed a great deal of interest and support in the program. now in its second year. President and Mrs. Cater were invited to deliver opening remarks in Hynson Lounge on Monday.

This is a great opportunity for Washington College Students to clarify their career goals. With the support we've received from everyone, this should prove not only to be a great opportunity, but a very interesting experience", said Caldwell He went on to express his appreciation for the tremendous effort put forth by Linda Cades and Vicky Sawyer in the Career Development Office in organizing the event.

PoetLaureate To Visit Campus

by Susan DiLeo

President Douglass Cater calls him "one of the very few outstanding lyric poets in America. Professor Robert day asserts that he is "one of the great lyric poets of our time."

Throughout his forty years of writing poetry, Richard Wilbur has garnered extensive praise for his precision of language and expression within the confines of form. Intelligent and witty, says critic Randall Jarrell, Wilbur's poetry is the "lyric calling-to-life of the things of this world."

In addition to poetry, Wilbur is an accomplished translator of French playwright Moliere and the work of Russian poet Joseph Brodsky. He wrote the lyrics for Cater became President. Cater says. When he was here, he stayed with us. He was one of the first visitor we had at Hynson-Ringgold House." During the Christmas break each year, the Caters usually visit the Wilburs at their winter home in Key West, Florida.

Last April, Wilbur was named second official poet laureate of the nation, succeeding Robert Penn Warren. His other honors include Bolligin prizes for poetry and translation, a National Book Award, a Pulitzer prize and the Aiken Taylor Award for Modern American Poetry

Wilbur's presentation coincides intentionally with the twentieth anniversary of the Sophie Kerr Lecture Series. According to Cater,

'We are going to set up a small scholarship at the College in his name [which we are pleased about]

We are doing our best to honor [Richard Wilbur]"

College Budget Passed

Tuition Increase Announcement Expected Next Week

by Tony Caligiuri The 1988-89 Washington

College budget was passed by the executive council of the Board of Visitors and Governors during their last monthly meeting. announcement specifying tuition, from, and board fee increases is expected to come from President Douglass Cater's office by the beginning of next week, according to Finance Officer Martin Kabat.

Although Vice President for Finance Gene Hessey could not be reached for comment, Kabat felt that it should be up to Cater's office to formally announce a tuition increase. Kabat said that a formal announcement would be made to The Elm at the same time President Cater sends a letter to the students' parents. Cater's office indicated that a letter would be drafted and sent by next week The budget was in fact passed and a tuition increase was approved, although it was not as much as last year. The fact is that tuition has become a very sensitive issue and it should be handled in a way so it is not taken out of context... The President and the Board would like to announce it in their own way, rather than have it come out first in the student newspaper", said Kabat.

He indicated in a later conversation that the tuition hike would be in the hundreds of dollars. It was further pointed out by Kabat that because of recent increases in costs, more emphasis was placed on room and board fees.

Leonard Berstein's musical production of Candide on Broadway, and had edited Shakespeare and various modern poets. His other work includes literary criticism and books

President Cater has maintained a longstanding friendship with Wilbur, beginning in the early 1960s, when Cater worked at Westem University and Wilbur was a professor at Wesleyan College in Connecticut. "Our paths crossed, but not very often," Cater recalls. The Caters and the Wilburs renewed their friendship when, by coincidence. Wilbur was scheduled to sneak at the college at the time that it was also the idea of the Sophie Kerr Committee to have Wilbur's reading at a time when the candidates for the Sophie Kerr Scholarshins would be on campus

The reading will be held this afternoon at 4:30 p.m. in the Norman James Theater. At that time Wilbur will be presented with two awards: the Trustees' Award for Excellence and the Washington College Library Award. In addition, Cater says, "We are going to set up a small scholarship at the College in his name, [which] we are pleased about. We are doing our best to honor [Mr. Wilbur]

INSIDE: Political Commentary.....page 2 Message from the Governor......page 5 Tennis Victory page 6 WC-Hobart Rivalry.....page7 All-American Profiles.....page 9 Students on Religion.....page 13 Photography Review.....page 15 Christians' Review.....page 16

OPINION

Making WC Better

On page five, Governor William Donald Shaefer spells out some of his plans for making Maryland's colleges better. They are noble thoughts, but we feel that the consequences of government interference in adacemics may outweigh the potential benefits.

We wonder, for example, how Governor Shaefer plans to make "a system that is more accountable to the citizens and the taxpayers of the state." Does this mean that there will have to be a consensus from outsiders whenever a funded college wants to spend money? That does not sound practical

The governor also talks about reducing "the duplication and waste that mark many of the programs we now have in place." Again, this may lead to bad results. Just who determines what is wasteful to the college experience, and what is not? Outsiders'

We trust Governor Shaefer's intentions, but his rhetoric suggests that government knows what is best for colleges and universities, not the schools themselves. This is like The Elm claiming to know better than Terry Corcoran how to beat Hobart next Saturday.

So to Governor Schaefer we say this: Yes, the idea of improving Maryland's higher education system is fine, but added governmental interference or bureaucratic morass will not bring about this end. Since Washington College is a private school, however, the Governor's current thoughts will have little effect upon our school.

Nevertheless, we think we have a duty to follow Shaefer's lead and make our college better. And, as insiders, we just may have a sensible understanding of what really needs to be done. Here are some suggestions to those who run our school, and to those who pay the bills: Keep tuition stable for each class. This does not mean that tuition cannot be raised each year, but rather that when a freshmen enters

Washington College, he or she is guaranteed a set rate for each of his or her four years of undergraduate enrollment. We chose WC for a variety of reasons, one of which is cost. Not long ago the College was among the Best Buys, but we doubt that is true today when a student who enterred Washington College in 1985 with a tuition, room, and board bill of $9,800 will leave with one which has increased about 40%, to between $13,0000 and $14,000

Put emphasis on substance, not style. Sometimes Washington College follows this cliché, but sometimes the priorities of this college are appalling. Remember when all of the trees behind Cullen were uprooted, and new, expensive landscaping was done. Expenditures like this can not be excused when the art house is in a state of disrepair and the physics department is in need of new equipment. And so on

And so on. That is directed toward you, the student. You are the reason that there is a Washington College, yet you have little say in the College's decision-making process. Often, you do not even know what decisions have been made until they have already been implemented. How can you change this? By speaking up, sending letters to

Editor, or, better vet, to the deans and President Cater. You did a good job in expressing your opinion of the Sophomore Writing Seminar. Now extend that to other facets of the college, and make a difference

If you don't, you have no right to complain when your tuition increases one thousand dollars yet you still can't get into that History of the US Since 1945 class that you were frozen out of last semester.

Washington College Elm

| Editors                   |                      |
|---------------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Kehoe         |
| News Editor               | Tony Caligirri       |
| Features Editor           | Jennifer M. Harrison |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekman         |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Susan DiLeo          |
| Photography Editor        |                      |
| Graphics Editor           | Todd Karr            |
| Manager                   |                      |
| Managing Editor           | Cathy Jewell         |
| Advertising Manager       | Erin Hodge-Williams  |
| Circulation Manager       | William Faust        |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the acad

Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed columns, come aries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their aut and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the dilutions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the dilutional staff.

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editor cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments. Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mailed c/o Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters become the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be considered for publication in that week's issue.

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Anne dormitior. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

WITH THE POSSIBILITY OF A TUITION HIKE HANGING ABOVE OUR HEADS LIKE A DOOM DAY CLOUD I'D LIKE TO PRESENT MY VISION OF THE FUTURE OF WASHINGTON COLLEGE I DON'T HAVE ANY CHECKS FRIEND BUFFY BORROWED THEM TO GO SHOPPING. CAN I CHARGE ON MY VISA? GOOD, OH SECU GOOD, OH, SECURITY TOLD ME IT WOULD COST YOU STILL OWE TEN GRAND, STEVEN TWO HUNDRED FOR A PARK-ING PERMIT, BUT I DIDN'T HAVE ANY CHANGE COULD YOU JUST ADD IT ON TO THE CHARGE? THANKS

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR Daniel Ortega's Big Mistake ington Post expired or whether he the invasior

Mr. Ortega is probably ne of the most inept world leaders of our time. Instead of allowing the unsupported Contra force to whither away from a lack of American money and materials, Daniel Ortega's Sandinista Army has invaded Honduras, a separate sovereign country friendly with the U.S., to deal the Contras a death blow

political commentary

This, shortly after the United States House of Representatives had dealt the Contras a strikingly similar

To all who were dismayed then the House voted to cut the Contra Force's throat, this action by Ortega was a welcome surprise One has to wonder whether Daniel Ortega's subscription to The Wash-feels he can tempt the Fates when ever he wishes without fear of reprisal Peace talks between the Contras and the Sandinistas started on Monday despite last Wednesday's field trip. Daniel Ortega hoped to strengthen the Sandinista bargaining position by crushing the Contras, but instead brought two battalions each of the United States 82nd Airborne and the 7th Infantry into Honduras for training exercises, at the verbal and written request of the Honduran president Jose Azcona The Sandinistas have also brought condemnation from Oscar Arias, of the only honorable leaders in the president of Costa Rica, and one Latin America. Daniel Ortega has also caused the magnanimous U.S. Congress to rethink the U.S. position on support of the Contras. A $48 million bipartisan aid proposal has been put together in the wake of The peace talks are underway between the Contras and the Sandinistas and reports are positive thus far, but one has to wonder if Ortega will learn from his mistakes and if he does, will he just be a little more crafty next time. Contra aid should be supported to give the Contras a position of strength to negotiate from and to keep Daniel Ortega honest. He has proven untrustworthy and militarily aggressive Contra aid should be sunported as well to keep the fighting among Nicaraguans instead of drawing in American young men should the peace talks breakdown

Monte Bourjaily, IV WC Republicans

THARR

The Elm will not publish next week due to religious holidays.

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM Excellent income! Details, sens self-addressed, stamped envelor WEST, Box 5877, Hillside, NJ

Running for SGA office?

Send an essay detailing your qualifications and platform to The Elm's election guide

> 500 words in length on disc in Macwrite due Mon. April 4 8:00 p.m Elm office, Queen Anne Lounge

contact Andrea Kehoe (ext. 321) with questions

SGA Election to be held on Wednesday, April 13

HELP WANTED

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17. Clark, NJ 07066

Computer Wanted

GETTING RID OF YOUR MAC PLUS OR SE?

> call Mike 778-2860

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.

107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD, 21620 Drive-in Window Service

301-778-3181

Dethroning "Goliath" Not An Easy

Washington College lacrosse te

Beating Hobart will be difficult. It can be done, but will take a physical and mental arritude on the part of Washington College that can come only with hardwork, patience and discipline.

Hobart College is the class of Division III, but even the Statesmen are fair game for a division that is improving in the caliber of topflight teams.

Hobart, meanwhile, may be looking toward Division I, so Washington College, long a bridesmaid, better get in its licks now I like this year's team. I think it has the potential to make a run for the title. Now that the three Division I teams (North Carolina, Johns Hopkins and Navy) are behind us, the Shoremen can concentrate on Division III opponents. The first meeting with Hobart looms Saturday, April 2 in Geneva, New York. That is too close, but a great deal can be learned in that contest that could help in the stretch run late in the season.

Right now the close attack of Tim even a better and more cohesive unit

The heart of their game will be the tran sition or unsettled situation; the groundball that can rebound into a fastbreak and the momentum phase of lacrosse that has long been the mark of good Washington College

Through the years it was the fastbreak that carried the Shoremen to the finals.

In the early 1970's it was the attack of Greg Lane, Tom George and "Cactus" Jack Copeland and the midfield duo of Bob Shriver and Peter Boggs that sparked Don Kelly's juggemaut

In the mid-1970's it was the grease lightening attack of Peter Jenkins, Paul Hooper and Jeff Kauffman and the dazzling dexterity of Dickie Grieves that spearheaded Bryan Matthew's forces.

Ricky Sowell was the heart and soul of Terry Corcoran's near-miss teams of the mid 1980's

Tall, rangy Mike McGuane, tough, solid Chris Dollar and quick and agile Mike Hormes, Paul Deniken and Paul Miller is Woodfolk can "take it to the cage" and as the season progresses they are going to have to do has a dedicated coach, whose temperament

Mike Greig has the potential to be a scorer. I like the freshman I have seen at midfield; Steve Klein, Kevin Doyle, Bill

H. Hurtt Deringer

Leahy and others

Corcoran and his good young coaching staff of Larry Boehm and John Nostrant had setbacks on close defense with Matt Wilson coming out late from basketball and Terry Reynolds getting hurt. Freshmen Tim Bond and David Cromwell got a pretty bruising baptismal having to go against the Tar Heeles. Blue Jays and the Midshipmen early in the season, but they will be better for it. Jim Houtenbrink, Brian Kelleher, Kevin Colbeck and Pat Youngs are all capable defensivemen.

In the goal Mark "Muggsy" Mickum had a setback with the flu, but he can produce big games and will have to, if W.C. is to go to the matches the color of his hair. He is fiery, but he has to be Washington College will need to rise to e occasion more than once from here on out. Corcoran will be harping on smart, intelligent play. He will be looking for leaders. He will be looking for players who listen and play his Lacrosse today is played in the fast lane. It is up-tempo, run-and-gun. Transition is the name of the game.

But, for Washington College six-on-six will not be their game

The Shoremen to go all the way, must look for the ball on the ground and make the unsettled situation be their catalyst

Opportunistic midfielders, a fluid, cohesive attack that can score a fastbreak goal in the dark, a defense that will bend, but not break, and a goaltender who can produce the super game - those ingredients are needed for underdog Washington College to dethrone the Goliath that has become Hobart College in NCAA Division III lacrosse H. Hurtt Deringer is the editor and publisher

In Terry Corcoran Washington College of The Kent County News.

ISSUE: What are the chances of Washington College beating Hobart in lacrosse this year?

Walter Spence Junior killer team spirit, Hobart should be more of a unit compared to last year.

scared that we are coming to invade I think that if they continue to play as their neck of the woods. It's gonna they have they will definitely win.

Chris Sartor

Suzanne Hewes Freshmer With various position changes and a The team this year seems to be much After last Wednesday's game Hopefully W.C. will win. Because I think the question should be what

Lisa Peterson

Sophomore

against Navy, I would sure love to the game is at Hobart, they may have are Hobart's chances to beat W.C. a little advantage, but I'm sure W.C. this year. will pull through and play with their

be a sad day for the little fellas. Campus Voices

Win Will Recall 1985 Victory Someday, we shall overcome beating the Shoremen in the playoffs and the in overtime

For eight consecutive years, the Hobart

Statesmen have stood above the rest of the pack at season's end, winning the NCAA Division III Lacrosse Championship each year since its inception in 1980.

And throughout those eight years, the Shoremen have consistently finished a notch or two below Hobart. Washington lost championship games to Hobart in 1982, 1984. 1985, and 1986. Last year, the third-ranked Shoremen were eliminated from the playoffs in the quarterfinals by Ohio-Wesleyan, a new challenger for the top spot in Division III Men's Lacrosse. In essence, we are the Dodgers and Hobart is the Yankees and one of these years we are going to dethrone those Damn Yankees. And maybe 1988 is that Golden Year, the year that the little school on the Eastern ore finally wins a National Championship.

But hold on! Division III Lacrosse isn't that simple anymore, as 1987 showed when Ohio-Wesleyan enterred the equation by Statesmen earlier in the season, becoming the only Division III team besides WC to accomplish that. And Washigton & Lee held the top spot for a while, too, until the Shoremen beat them, 12-9

Nevertheless, the key to finishing Number One still starts with defeating that perennial nuisance. Hobart.

Carter Boatner

Historically, the Shoreman have not been able to do that. In eleven meetings between the Division III powerhouses, the Statesmen have won ten times. The lone exception is an 8-7 overtime victory for the Shoremen in March of 1985 in Chestertown

On that day, All-American Ricky Sowell led the Shoremen through the rain and mud, scoring five goals, including the game-winner

Sweet revenge came for the Statesmen, however, in the Championship game that year in Chestertown. With perhaps its best oppornity to win the crown, WC fell, 15-8

nenal skill

1986 saw the Shoremen drop their regular season contest at Hobart, 20-4, when ten Shoremen were suspended by Coach Corcoran for drinking. In the playoffs, however, the 12-3 Shoremen again faced the Statesmen for the Championship, this time in Geneva.

While the Class of 1986 was celebrating graduation, the Shoremen jumped to a 5-1 lead in the first quarter and the Shoremen's first national championship seemed to have arrived. But the Statesmen clawed back, tightening the score to 6-5 at the half, and overcoming the Shoremen 8-6 by the end of the third period.

Current senior MIke McGuane, though led a Shomen comeback early in the fourth period with three quicks goals, and the Shoremen took the lead again, 9-8. It didn't stick, however, Statesmen midfielder Mike Guy led the Statesmen back to the lead, and an eventual 13-10 triumph over WC. The 1986 loss was almost as heart-breaking as the double overtime loss to Hobart in 1982; 9-8, when the Shoremen again had to settle for runners-up. The 1984 Championship provided a similar outcome, with WC falling 12-5. Last year the Shoremen met the Statesmen only once, in a 19-8 regular season

And what will 1988 bring? We will find out on April 2nd, when the Shoremen travel to Geneva, to try to make the series two wins in twelve in tries, and then again, hopefully, in Chestertown in May, to make it one for five in Championship Games.

And someday, we shall overcome. Hopefully, that someday has finally arrived. Junior Carter Boatner is a history major

> Write op-ed for The Elm Call 778-2800 (ext. 321) or stop by our office in Queen Anne lounge

Board Member Increases Campaign Gift to One Million

byTony Caligiuri Alonzo G. Decker, Jr., chairman of the executive committee of Black & Decker in Baltimore, has committed one million dollars towards Washington College's Campaign for Excellence, a $41 million fund raising drive for improved facilities, student scholarships, and endowments

Decker, who co-chairs the College's Campaign with another Baltimorean, James Price IV of Alex. Brown & Sons, has given $775,000 towards capital improvements and $225,000 in annual gifts. A new science laboratory center now under construction will bear his name. Decker has been a member of the College's Board of Visitors and Governors since 1983. His efforts on behalf of the college resulted in the early completion of Phase one of the campaign. More than $28.4 million was raised in three years, two years ahead of schedule. That figure represents one of the largest and most successful fundraising campaigns

Washington College's most ambitious fundraising drive in its

205 year history the construction of the Alonzo G. wise. The 'joy of giving' is very real Decker, Jr. Science Laboratory to Al Decker, and for his selfless Center, several repovation projects are underway, including an Academic Resources Center, the implementation of an academic computer program, and enhanced endowment for more student come to the support of the College." financial aid. In December of 1987 the College launched Phase II of the campaign, calling for an additional ton College's Campaign for Excel-$17.5 million endeavor to raise the funds needed goods, and urging others to do likefor a new athletic fieldhouse and a creative arts studio, automation of increase in committment, "you the card catalog system and other should never try to raise money improvements in the College Library, additional renovation ashamed to ask for money now that projects, and increased endowment I have given. Washington College to sustain adequate student is a rare gem among independent assistance and faculty salaries

Washington President Douglass Cater points tory."

ever undertaken by any of with pride to the accomplishments Maryland's small colleges, and of the Campaign so far, giving a great deal of credit to the leadership of Al Decker. "Al has a most rermarkable ability to give himself, With full funding in hand for and to persuade others to do likeacts we are eternally grateful." Cater continued, "Al Decker is a real pace setter for Washington College. Even though he was not an alumn, he is one of the best men to Decker, 80, says "Washinglence invigorated me and got me started again with the purpose of Phase II of the campaign will giving myself, giving of my wordly wise." Decker said of his recent without first giving. I would not be colleges and I think that it is making College a very determined turn in its his-

La Vida Yacht Inc.

Employment Opportunity

Responsible Person Needed to work Part and or Full time Cleaning Sail Boats Duties will expand to other areas including maintenance of all boat systems Ability to work alone as well as manage other employees essential Call to arrange interview La Vida Yachts Inc. 778-6336

Word Processi Services

reports, term papers, etc.-

prompt, accurate, reasonable.

Call Cathy 348-2126

STEAKS - SEAPORE - COCKYAME

BUFFET EVERY SUMBAY 12-6 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 6:30-4

AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD

778-1222

Handmade Crafts Craft Supplies

113 Cross Street Chestertown, Md. 2162-

EASTER CARDS AND GIFTS ON SALE NOW STOP BY ...

P.L'S HALLMARK SHOP

Kent Plaza Chestertown, MD Phone: 778-5100

Washington College Bookstore

Monday and Friday 8:30 - 4:30 Saturday 9:30 - 1:00

Sale litems for the week of March 28th through April 2nd

All Cards - 25% off Trade Books - 20% to 50% off

Saturday, April 2nd ONLY: "Miller Screening" Sweats and Tee's

The View From the Governor's Mansion:

Let's Make Maryland's Colleges Number One Editor's Note: The following column is Maryland's universities and colleges are not Higher Education Con

"Improving our colleges begins with improving the way we run them.

We must make them more efficient.

We must give them better leadership.

We must reduce the duplication and waste that mark many of the programs we now have in place"

one in a series sent to Maryland newspapers by Governor William Donald Schaefer.

ture higher education governance. " I cannot stration of state colleges and universities. think of a duller-sound ing topic that is more important to all of us What's really going on here? What are we trying to do, and what does it mean to you? What will "the restructuring of higher education" mean to the citizens of Maryland? Those are my first questions and probably = yours. It is not nearly as complicated - or as dull - as it sounds. In fact, I think this is one of the most important - and one of the most exciting - opportunities we have had since the election.

We have the chance to move Maryland's colleges and universities to the top rank of higher education systems in the United States. It is that simple. And that is why this proposal is so important to each of us, and to the state of Maryland. Better education means better jobs. A stronger educational system means more opportunities for your and your chil-

you so anxious to change things? We have a good educational system now." I did not just wake up one morning and decide that we had to remake higher education in Maryland. Many of our best thinkers and leaders have been concerned that our schools are not the best we can make them. They worry that ate a new coordinating board, the Maryland ranked among the best even though the state is the higher education needs of the entire state ing, so we have proposed the largest funding clearly one of the country's best. Just two and to help plan the programs of all our increases for higher education in the state's years ago, this concern prompted both houses schools, both public and private. This would history every school and thus, of every citizen.

Second, our proposal would bring together the five campuses of the University of Maryland with the six schools currently under the Board of Trustees of State Universities and Colleges to form a new University of

M:aryland system. We have too many different boards and offices running our schools.

Perhaps the most-debated topic before of the General Assembly to pass resolutions result in better planning and less duplication. We are asking for an increase of $63.5 me legislature right now is a plan to "restruc-asking the governor to analyze the adminiariation and it would strengthen the overall program at million to fund new scholarships, to repair every school. It would give us the tools to do and construct facilities and to establish new programs and centers. Significantly, we are also asking for a large increase for community colleges. I am committed to a strong community college system and this is an important part of our overall plan for higher education in the state.

Dull? No way, unless you regard a bright future as dull. It is Maryland moving forward gaining that special momentum I owe it to our future and to the future of all those who come behind us.

As always, I look forward to hearing from you. Write to me: Governor William Donald Schaefer, State House, Annapolis, MD 21414.

William Donald Schaefer is the Governor of

This way we would have one system of eleven the State of Maryland

OLD WHARF INN ON THE CHESTER RIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

We have found that there are many very a better job in meeting the individual needs of cannot afford to miss this opportunity. We good colleges and universities in Maryland, but, overall, we cannot say that we have an excellent system. No Maryland public college is consistently recognized as among the very best in the nation. And they should be. That's where the governance part comes Improving our colleges begins with improving the way we run them. We must make them more efficient. We must give them better leadership. We must reduce the duplication and waste that mark many of the programs we now have in place. Before we allocate more money for our schools, we must Some people have said to me, "Why are create a system to get the most for that money, a system that is accountable to the citizens and the taxpayers of the state. That is why we have started with how the schools are governed. Each of these schools has a very As a beginning, our proposal would make two significant changes in the state's unique history and higher education system. First, it would cre-

We recogn

schools. Two state schools, Morgan

State University

and St. Mary's

College, would retain their independent status

PRICE SLICED

one just for you-with dough we make fresh every day, tangy sauce, pure mozzarella cheese and your choice of delicious toppings. Pizza lovers never had it so good!

What's better than a fresh hot Pan Pizza from your home town Pizza Hut* restaurant? One that saves you money!

Come on over, bring the coupon below and let us make

$2.00 off any large Pan Pizza, or $1.00 off any medium Pan Pizza. Hurry! This special offer expires soon. One coupon per party per visit at participating Pizza Hut® restaurants.

Kent Plaza Chestertown 778-1070

e present coupen when ordering. Not valid in combi-redemption value. © 1983 Pinna Hut, Inc. Good only

SPORTS

Shoremen Clip Clemson, Defend No. 2 Ranking

Washington College men's tennis team has headed south as the "hunters." This spring, however, the Shore Netters trekked to Carolina as the "hunted." With their #2 national ranking at stake the Shoremen fought off the challenge of two nationally ranked teams and returned to Chestertown unscathed in Division III and with a 4-1 record overall.

After bowing to Division I foe, Davidson College, 8-1 in their first match, the WC netmen reeled off four straight triumphs. The Shoremen upended Clemson University, 5-4, and eased by Principia College (Mo.) and Ripon College (Wis.) by identical 8-1 scores, before conclud ing their spring trip by shuting out Averett College 9-0.

Dramatic come from behind three set victories by Larry Gewer and Claudio Gonzalez gave the Shoremen a 4-2 advantage after singles in WC's surprise win over Clemson. After dropping the first set, 6-3, to freshmen Jim Spencer, Gewer won seven straight three-all games to overcome the Tigers highly touted freshman, 6-4, 6-3

In an equally as exciting match Claudio Gonzalez saved a total of eight match points to defeat Thad Langford, 3-6, 7-6, 7-6, the strength of Brian Schumacher blanked Caldwell 6-0 in the second

Marshall and Gonzalez, the doubles tandem of Scott Flippin-Read and Gewer clinched the victory for Washington, nipping Langford and Spencer, 3-6, 7-5, 6

Using the momentum for their surprise victory over Clemson, the Washington netmen ripped eighth ranked Principia College and seventeenth ranked Ripon College on consecutive days Both matches were decided after the completion of the singles as WC won five of six singles against over Zsolt Juhasz. Juhasz was Principia and swept all six singles versus Ripon

Larry Gewer came within three games of upsetting the reigning National Champion, Toby Clark, in the Principia match Holding a 6-0, 3-1 lead over the two-time national champion, Gewer was unable to prevent Clark's comeback. The Panthers #1 player won the next 11 of 14 games to preserve his #1 ranking with a 0-6, 6-3, 6-3 victory.

While Gewer was unable to hold his lead over Clark, Principia's #2 player, Chris Caldwell (20th in the nation), could not fight off WC's talented freshman Scott Flippin-Read. Flippin-After the Tigers pulled to 4-3 on Read dropped the first set 6-2 but break in the fourth game of the third set Flippin-Read held serve in the next two service games to clinch the win 6-3

Unable to savor their victory for long the Shore Netmen were challenged by yet another nation ally ranked team as Ripon College invaded the Clemson Stadium Courts. Washington withstood the test sweeping all six singles matches in straight sets. The most significant victory was Flippin-Read's 6-1,6-0 triumph ranked 37th in the nation prior to the match. Flippin-Read whipped two players in two days that were ranked above him in the national rankings. The Texas native was ranked 41.

In doubles Gewer and Flippin Read rallied to edge Mark Balladad and Juhasz, 3-6, 7-5, 7-6. Down 5-3 in the second set and 6-5 in the tiebreaker. WC's #2 ranked duo won the next three points of the tiebreaker to squelch Ripon's upset hid Balladad and Juhasz were fifth ranked in doubles in Division III

After a rain out at UNC-Greensboro, Washington blanked South Atlantic regional foe Averett College, 9-0 in Danville, Va. The victory completed a highly successful spring trip for the Shoremen. Senior David Marshall was the only Shore netter to go undefeated Claudio Gonzalez were 4-1. on the trip winning all five of his Marshall's victories upped his ca singles matches. Rich Phoebus and reer record to 107-21

Claudio Gonzales, a key contributor in turning the men's tel program around, helped the Shoremen defend their Number Two ranking by going 4-1 while down South this Spring Break.

Women Hope to Mimic Men's Success

Lack of match experience proved to be the difference as Washington College's women's tennis team bowed to Ursinus College 9-0 in Collegeville, Pa. Tuesday.

Returning to Middle Atlantic Conference play after a ten year hiatus, Holly Bramble's young netters (five freshman) were competitive in every match, however, with five matches already under their belt the Lady Bears were one shot better than the Shorewomen.

Emily Bishop and Kristen Callazzo nearly scored victories at #1 and #4 singles, respectively, only to lose in three sets. Bishop fell to Sue Mockus 6-2, 5-7, 6-2, while Cindy Robbin edged Callazzo, 1-6, 6-3.6-2 Bishop and Callazzo teaming at #1 doubles had their chances against Tobin Asplundh and Mockus but were unable to take the three-all games, bowing 6-4, 7-5.

Playing in their first collegiate matches, Karen Lee, Ann Downing and Christina Gall went down in straight sets. Lee succumbed to Asolundh 6-1, 6-2. Downing fell to Michelle McGabe, 6-2, 6-0, and Gall lost a hard fought match to Jen Mauro 6-2, 7-5

Despite the, 6-2, 6-2 result, senior Lindsay Tanton was another Shorewomen who could just have easily won as lost. Playing marathon points, Tanton was unable to get Michele Davies out of the "trees" as the Ursinus sophomore came up with the "great" shot when she needed it.

Flakes and Officiating Cost Softball Team Three Games

by Shari Golden Members of the Women's Soft-hall team were amoung those returning early from Spring Break to prepare for the season at hand. The double-header, however, scheduled for Sunday the 20th at Lebanon Valley, was cancelled due to snow in that area

The women travelled to Cecil Community College, on Tuesday the 22nd, for what was to be the second game of the season. The game, though, was reduced to a scrimmage due to the absence of the officials. But the scrimmage gave the girls an excellent oppurtunity to experience a game situation, and also gave everyone a chance to play. The girls clearly demonstrated that they have the capacity to be a winning team this season.

This Saturday the girls challenge Franklin and Marshall in a double-header at home. Please come out and support the team!

LIVE MUSIC Sat. 26th

Sue Matthews, John star, Dick Durham Jazz at its finest

Wed, 30th The Nixon Brothers Beatles, Etc.

Thursdays are Ladies Nights

Proper ID Required

337 1/2 HIGH STREET (301) 778-6779

Stop in and see our New Spring Merchandise Shipments Arriving Daily

> 335 High Street 778-6090

Sho'men '88

Hobart Holds Shoremen's Best Chances

by Bill Beekman

Someday, we shall overcome For eight consecutive years, the Hobart Statesmen have stood above the rest of the pack at season's end, winning the NCAA Division III Lacrosse Championship each year since its inception in 1980

And throughout those eight years, the Shoremen have consistently finished a notch or two below Hobart. Washington lost chamnionship games to Hobart in 1982, 1984. 1985, and 1986. Last year, the third-ranked Shoremen were eliminated from the playoffs in the quarterfinals by Ohio-Wesleyan, a new challenger for the top spot in Division III

Hobart also erased the Shoremen from the Championship in Division II days, when the Statesmen, led by All-American Terry Corcoran, cruised by the Shoremen in the final, 14-5

In essence, we are the Dodgers and Hobart is the Yankees and one of these years we are going to dethrone those Damn Yankees. And maybe 1988 is that Golden Year, the year that the little school on the Eastern Shore finally wins a National Championship.

But hold on! Division III Lacrosse isn't that simple anymore, as 1987 showed when Ohio-Wesleyan entered the equation by beating the Shoremen in the playoffs and the Statesmen earlier in the season, becoming the only Division III team besides WC to accomplish that. And Washington & Lee held the top spot for a while, too, until the Shoremen beat them. 12-9

Nevertheless, the key to finishing Number One still starts with defeating that perennial nuisance, Hobart. Then we can worry about the growing list of other contenders. Historically, the Shoremen have not been able to do that. In eleven meetings between the Division III powerhouses, the Statesmen have won ten times. The lone exception is an 8-7 overtime victory for WC in March of 1985 in Chestertown. On that day, All-American Ricky Sowell led the Shoremen through the rain and mud, scoring five goals, including the game-winner in overtime Sweet revenge came for the Statesmen, however, in the Championship game that year in Chestertown. With perhaps its best opportunity to win the crown, WC fell, 15-8.

1986 saw the Shoremen drop their regu lar season contest at Hobart, 20-4, when ten Shoremen were suspended by Coach Corcoran for drinking. In the playoffs, however, the 12-3 Shoremen again faced the Statesmen for tual 13-10 triumph over WC. the Championship, this time in Geneva While the Class of 1986 was celebrating graduation, the Shoremen jumped to a 5-1 lead in the first quarter and WC's first national championship seemed to have arrived. But the Statesmen clawed back, tightening the score to 6-5 at the half, and overcoming the Shoremen 8-6 by the end of the third period.

Current senior Mike McGuane, though led a Sho'men comeback early in the fourth period with three quicks goals, and the Shoremen took the lead again, 9-8. It didn't stick, however, Statesmen midfielder Mike Guy led the Statesmen back to the lead, and an even-pionship Games versus Hobart.

The 1986 loss was almost as heart-breaking as the sudden death overtime loss to Hobart in 1982, 9-8, when the Shoremen again had to settle for runners-up. The 1984 Championship provided a similar outcome, with WC falling 12-5. Last year the Shoremen met the Statesmen only once, in a 19-8 regular season loss

And what will 1988 bring? We will find out on April 2nd, when the Shoremen travel to Geneva, to try to make the series two wins in twelve tries, and then again, hopefully, in May, when we shoot for one for six in Cham-

Lacrosse is an integral part of the Washington College experience. Three years ago when I first came to Washington College, I knew very little about this game invented by Indians which used to be played to settle land rights. Three years later, however, I know what lacrosse is, and I appreciate its importance to this school. Like so many others, after I graduate I'm sure that I'll be back to witness the Shoremen-Hobart classics of the future.

To help you get adjusted to the sport, the team, the rivalry, and the role of lacrosse at this small town liberal arts school, The Elm has prepared this supplement. And if lacrosse fever hasn't yet spread to you, come on down to Kibler Field and see what you've been missing.

And one other thing: Kick Hobart's assi

Bill Beekman, Elm Sports editor

Why Do We Make a Fuss About an Indian Game?

A brief history of Lacrosse at Washington

by Bill Beekman

Lacrosse. Have you ever wondered why such a big deal is made out of this rather obscure sports at this rather obscure school on 19 Maryland's Eastern Shore? Well 1 bave. And after some digging think that I understand why Washington College's favorite sport is the Indian stick game, lacrosse.

There are actually two reasons. One is simple: since the reactivation of lacrosse at Washington College in 1948, the team has consistently ranked as one of the top in the na-troublesome: with the near professionalization of College Athletics and move toward bigness started around mid-century, the small

Washington College has been squeezed out of the picture of more common college pasttimes such as football, basketball, and baseball. When you choose to be small in numbers, sadly, you can not expect to compete at the top level in Col-

And in lacrosse, the best has pro duced sustained success from day

But we do the best that we can

lege Athletics today

one. Well, almost.

The second, however, is more

An Awkward Start for Greatness

The true beginning for WC Learnesse stems back to the late 1920's, when football, soccer, and baseball were the dominant sports. But, believe it or not, lacrosse never really caught on, and enjoyed only lukewarm success at best. Learnesse's first attempt a WC flopped, and the team was disbanded by 1934.

But, you say, that was long ago, and things have changed. True, things have changed. And the people who initiated the changes were the STUDENTS.

Perhaps in the 80's, the decade

"if it doesn't effect me, I don't give a damn," student activism is not appreciated. But during the 1947-48 academic year, the voice of the students is what brought lacrosse to Washington College. In particular, the voice of one Charlie

One Voice

Makes a Difference

petitioned to the Athletic Council of Washington College for the forma-

In the fall of 1947, Hoffman

"The success of the Shoremen is directly related to the strength and commitment of their coaches.

from Dr. Clack to Don Kelly

to Terry Corcoran today."

tion of a 'Men's Lacrosse Club. Hoffman was successful, as a Lacrosse Club was sanctioned by the Athletic Council. But, since the athletic budget had already been allocated, with about half of the money going to WC's favoritie sport, football, no money was given to support lacrosse and the team was only a club, not an official recognized team.

So with the Club practicing on the High School field and donning uniforms donated by an Annapolis man, Eddie Leonard, WC lacrosse was born.

Rag Tag Group Makes Good

But, naturally, they did not have a chance. This inexperienced, unfunded team couldn't just expect to waltz in and start beating up on bigger, established lacrosse programs. Or could they?

The reactivated lacrose program lots is first to the Annapolis Athletic Clob, and then never looked back: The Clob won eight of its final nine; games that year, losing only to the Annapolic Athletic Clob again, while knocking of such schools as Delaware and the University of Pennsylvania to finish ceivisty of Pennsylvania to finish their first season 8-2 and undefeated the top, sower in Maryland for the year, noy Wood, who posted 40 year, noy Wood, who posted 40 pear, noy Wood, who posted 40 pears.

The next two years brought simple of the results as Washington College began quickly building its national recognition in lacroses. The team registered records of 12-2 in 1949 and 10-3 in 1950, when they were rated 13th in the nation, the entire nation, as lacrosse was not divided into Division I and III programs as it is today. But still, they were only recognized by the College as a club solve.

Feeding Off of the Death of Football

The big break for the Lacrosse Club, however, came the next year, and it had nothing to do with their ability to defeat North Carolina and Duke. Rather, Lacrosse became the big sport when its chief rivals, foot-all and baseball, were suspended in the winter of '51. Football, the proposed by headling grabber, never came tack. Baseball took only a year's histus.

With the top two sports gone, the official status of lacrosse was elevated. The Club was now an official Washington College team. And a winning team at that.

W.C.'s First

1951 saw a national ranking of and spif for the Shortenen, and a 10-3 Shore score for WC through these initial successful years, was named a First class scalar career in which he scored 188 goals. He can be called WC's first player the lacrosse here are considered to the constraint of the constraint

Through the eightles, the Shoremen have clawed at Hobart's backs, but only once have we beenable to knock them down.

The Hobarts

The Fifties brought sustained lacrosse success and support, with a top ranking of 5th in the nation, tied with Syracuse, in 1954, while the Shoremen continued to conquer other, bigger schools, such as North Carolina, Penn, Hófstra, Harvard, and Duke. They could not, however, topple the dynasties, Navy and Johns Hopkins, who they dropped to year after year.

Coach Clark, who built the program from scratch, left the College after the 1955 season to work for the Adomic Energy Commission. Coach Don Kelly, however, cagably took the reigns. Kelly guided the Shoremen until 1977, through some of its most fruitful seasons. The success of the Shoremen is directly related to the strength and commitment of their coaches, from Dr. Clack to Don Kelly to Terry Corcorant today.

The Best There Ever Was?

But regardless of how good the coaches are, the players are still the ones who win the games. And from 1954 through 1958, Washington College had, arguably, its best player of all time, midfielder Joey Scivold. Seivold received First Team

All-American honors in his junior and senior years, and is the only Shoremen to be inducted into the Lacrosse Hall of Fame in Baltimore. A Theta Chi and the senior class president. Seivold's scoring ability was reknown, but has defensive ability made him a rounded player.

Other greats also settled in

see LAX, page 12

Chestertown for four years: G.P. "Geoper" Lindsday, who led the Shoremen to their only slaying of the Johns Hopkins Blue Jays; Dickey Grieves, poetry with a last stick, who led the Shoremen in the eary eighties; and, recently, Ricky Sowell, a throwback to Seivoda's days who played well both offensively and defensively, and heriocally led the Shoremen with five goals in their only triumph over

> A Piece of the Big Time

The sixties and seventies saw a continuation of the success, with a few lapses. The Shoremen were only 6-6 in 1960 when John F. Kennedy stopped by on the campaign trail, and fell to 3-7 the next year.

But to give you a taste of the next years, the Shoremen, just as today,regularly won nine or ten games while dropping only three or four to the likes of Navy and Johns Hopkins, Regularly, the Shoremen were tops in their division, the Strohbar Division. And like today, they were among the top one or two small college lacrosse teams in the nation, and among the top ten in the nation, regardless of size. The basic difference between then and now is the names: Ron Regan and Dave Svec and Carl Ortman and Bruce Yaeger and John Cheeks and a se ries of All-Americans, instead of today's stars.

While we were being born, Sports Illustrated gave a spread to Washington College in 1967, a year in which the Shoremen went a best

Defeat is all the more difficult when you can smell the championship, but not taste it

Consistently Improving, McGuane Winning for Corcoran Leads With Heart and Brains

by Joe Van Name

All-American Mike McGuane nims for his fourth season at WC and will be counted on heavily for is leadership.

The senior from Waterloo. lew York has been a consistant player for the Shoremen. He attribues his developement to Coach Corcoran. McGuane is sure that his ime on the B-team and the efforts of Corroran transformed him from an Mare into a lacrosse player

McGuane is really looking forward to this season. The team is totally different from last year's." The difference this season, according to McGuane, is that the players "willing to change for the team and are not concerned with their wn glory

This season, with all the experice and the young talent, McGuane hopes to see the team reach its full

W&I is Mikes answer when sked about his most memorable rame. In that game last year, the oremen knocked off the tonanked team in the nation while guaranteeing their own playoff spot. The game against Washington & Lee was a truly gutsy perform nce. Kibler Field that day was turned into a giant mud pie

The game that McGuane is tinterested in, however, has not shot tiken place vet. This year's Hobart ame will be the one that he is going nember most

Last season McGuane was the cond leading scorer for the Shorenen, with 27 goals and 16 assists. McGuane has to "rely on intellience because I don't have the same speed that others do." He also beni- crosse after this season. Like former fits from being 6'4" and 195 lbs which is bigger than most of the people who cover him.

Mike McGuane

The thing that most goalies have come to fear is seeing McGuane coming in front of them. getting ready for his powerful lefty

This season McGuane, along with Chris Dollar, will be counted on to stabilize a somewhat young midfield and provide it with the balanced scoring that is his stan-

McGuane a Rusiness Manage ment major, hopes to continue lastars Larry Bohem and Mike Papa, McGuane would like to travel to Australia to coach and play next March through September. Mike's only concern right now, however, is the present season.

With this season being his last, McGuane hopes to enjoy it

Considering the way that the Shoremen have been playing he may help take them far into the playoffs, perhaps back to the championship. While not possessing the best abilities McGuane uses what he has to make himself a leader and outstanding lacrosse player.

All-American

Work Ethics Make

Dollar a Big Man by Joe Van Name Senior Co-Captain Chris Dollar may be small in stature, but don't let that fool you. Last season Dollar was named an All-American while being one of the key players for the Shoremen. This season Dollar has become one of the dominant faceoff men while exerting his offensive abilities. Dollar was the third leading scorer for the 1987 Shoremen

Being an outstanding player is nothing new to Dollar, who was a two-time All-County and All-Mertro Lacrosse player while attending Annapolis High School. Dollar enjoys playing for Coach Corcoran because he "makes you work," which is what it takes to build a strong team facing-off. Dollar is the type of Also, Dollar comments that Corcoran "works on the details" which make each player improve his individual performance

This year's team has a lot more going for it than last year's. "We're more mature and therefore play together better." With these factors and a "better attitude, with people working harder," the team should by Joe Van Name

Started at Hobart

had one of the top Lacrosse programs in the country Since 1929 when Lacrosse first started here, the Shoremen have experience that last year's team accumulated a total of 305 victories. In competition with Division II-III teams, WC has an impressive record of 214 victories to only 51 losses over the last 35 years

This type of tradition is only built with great coaching. In 1983 Terry Corcoran became Washington Colleges 8th coach and has taken it to even new hights.

In his five years here Coach Corcoran has accumulated a record of 56-23, while playing one of the toughest schedules in the country. Having taken his 1983 team to the NCAA semi-finals and the next three to the finals, Corcoran has established himself as one of the top coaches in the nation

By taking last year's young team to the NCAA quarter-finals, the Shoremen have now gone to the playoffs every year since Corcoran has taken over the helm.

Winning is something that is common to Corcoran. A three time All-American attackman at Hobart College, Corcoran was also named the top attackman in Division II-III in1978. In 1976 and 1977 Corcoran lead the Statesmen to Division II-III championships.

After his collegiate playing career, Corcoran became an assistant to his father in his hometown of Corning, NY, Corcoran then became an assistant at Hobart for two years, and then one at Princeton before coming to Chestertown.

ove on last season's 10-7 rec-

The Shoremen have a "good opportunity for a better season, according to Dollar. This team possesses a lot of "game" experience which has helped it to mature faster than last year's bunch. With the number of veterans and their ability to bring along the young players,

Dollar says that all it will take to win is "hard work and being prepared."

looking for Dollar on the Lacrosse

5'6" tall, he uses all of this when player who has no regard for his body and will do whatever it takes to help his team win.

looks most forward to every year.

He related the rivalry to the old

Steelers-Raiders games with their blood and intensity. The Hobart games are what he remembers most.

Hobart is the game that Dollar

his body around

As a player, Dollar possess a

Coach Corcoran is looking for-Washington College has long ward to hopefully another successful with two All-Americans and twenty-four veterans on this years team. The 1988 Shoremen have the lacked

> "Washington College has long had one of the top Lacrosse programs in the country...this type of tradition is only built with great coaching."

as his "most intense bunch" which should help in their strive toward a Division III championship.

Success can be attributed to Corcoran's style of recruiting and play. His teams are traditionaly the type the are not afraid to get a little dirty. These teams are always scrappy, never giving up.

By continuing to draw some of the top high school talent in the nation to Chestertown, Corcoran should expect his tradition to con-

While not in the limelight anymore, Corcoran's assistant coaches also contribute to the tradition. Larry Boehm and John Nostrant. both 1986 WC graduates, know what it takes to win and thus help the team with their experience

As Washington College gets into the "meat of it," Corcoran can expect tough competition in its comming games. Tough games at home include RIT. Salisbury. Roanoke, Nazareth, and the season finale versus West Chester on May 4th. On the road the Shoremen face Franklin & Marshall, Washington & Lee, Gettysburg, and, of course, the game of the year on April 2nd against Hobart.

most unique style, which he de-scribed as "on the ground." When Under the leadership of Corcoran, Washington College can be field, the easiest way to find him is to look for the player who is throwing counted on to be one of the top teams in the nation Even though Dollar is only

Like others, Dollar hopes to repeat what WC did during his freshman year, when the Shoremen defeated the Statesmen. With this being his last Hobart game expect Dollar to give it his all.

Presently, Dollar has no future plans, but expect to see him using his talents even after college. The only thing on Chris' mind now is this season and making it his best.

Chris Dollar

Name

31

19

11 Mark 39 Kevin 18 Ron Co 23 David 28 Paul D 17 Chris I 27 Kevin 38 Todd I 24 Mike ( 33 Tim H 34 Jim He 20 Brian 45 Brian 21 Matt F 26 Steve I 41 Stan K 36 Ben La 14 Rob L 35 Bill Le 12 Bob M 16 Mike 32 Mark 15 Paul N

42

46

37

44

10

25

29

22

30

Matt Petz

Steve Pursley

Terry Reynolds

Walter Spence

Matt Wilson

Pat Youngs

Peter Van Buren

Mike Woodfolk

The 1988 Shoremen

Wt.

| Tim Bond        | Fr. | D   | Edgewood, MD      | 6'1"  | 185 |
|-----------------|-----|-----|-------------------|-------|-----|
| Bill Carr       | Sr. | G/D | Guilderland, NY   | 6'4"  | 215 |
| Mark Cavallaro  | So. | A   | Corning, NY       | 5'9"  | 165 |
| Kevin Colbeck   | Jr. | M   | Towson, MD        | 5'10" | 175 |
| Ron Council     | Fr. | A   | Annapolis, MD     | 5'9"  | 160 |
| David Cromwell  | Fr. | D   | Rockville, MD     | 5'11" | 175 |
| Paul Deniken    | Sr. | A   | West Chester, PA  | 5'10" | 180 |
| Chris Dollar    | Sr. | M   | Annapolis, MD     | 5'6"  | 155 |
| Kevin Doyle     | Fr. | M   | Cockeysville, MD  | 6'0"  | 185 |
| Todd Emmons     | Sr. | G   | Towson, MD        | 5'7"  | 150 |
| Mike Greig      | Jr. | M   | Bel Air, MD       | 6'1"  | 185 |
| Tim Hormes      | So. | A   | Kingsvile, MD     | 5'10" | 155 |
| Jim Houtenbrink | Sr. | D   | Waterloo, MD      | 6'2"  | 190 |
| Brian Kelleher  | Sr. | D   | Bel Air, MD       | 6'1"  | 175 |
| Brian Kelly     | So. | D   | Ellicott City, MD | 6'3"  | 190 |
| Matt Kelly      | So. | A   | South Salem, NY   | 6'0"  | 180 |
| Steve Klein     | Fr. | M   | Forest Hill, MD   | 6'2"  | 185 |
| Stan Krause     | Fr. | M   | Farmingdale, NY   | 6'0"  | 175 |
| Ben Lamana      | Fr. | A   | Camillus, NY      | 5'9"  | 170 |
| Rob Lavis       | Jr. | M   | Severna Park, MD  | 5'11  | 180 |
| Bill Leahy      | Fr. | M   | Towson, MD        | 5'7"  | 140 |
| Bob Martino     | So. | M   | Canadaigua, NY    | 5'6"  | 160 |
| Mike McGuane    | Sr. | M   | Waterloo, NY      | 6'4"  | 195 |
| Mark Mickum     | Sr. | G   | Chevy Chase, MD   | 6'0"  | 180 |
| Paul Miller     | Sr. | A   | Corning, NY       | 6'0"  | 165 |
| Joe Muscolino   | So. | M   | Baldwinsville, NY | 5'8"  | 160 |
|                 |     |     |                   |       |     |

Webster, NY 6'0"

Meadowbrook, PA

Dix Hills, NY 6'2"

Charlottesville, VA

Farmingdale, NY

Baltimore, MD

Lutherville, MD

Richmond, VA

185

6'3" 185 6'1"

6'0" 185

6'0"

185

5'7" 160

5'10" 185

200

175

Pos. Home

Year

Fr.

Fr.

Sr. D

Jr.

So.

Jr.

Sr. M

Jr.

M

D

A

M

D

D

| WC |  | Opp |
|----|--|-----|
| 28 | Lynchburgh                                     | 4   |
| 5  | North Carolina                                 | 17  |
| 15 | Ithaca   | 5   |
| 8  | Johns Hokpins                                  | 12  |
| 7  | Navy   | 17  |
| 19 | Guilford                                       | 8   |
| 28 | Fairleigh Dickinson                            | 3   |
|    | R.I.T., March 26, 1:30 pm                      |     |
|    | Hobart, April 2, 2:00 pm                       |     |
|    | Salisbury State, April 9, 1:30 pm              |     |
|    | F &M, April 13, 3:00 pm                        |     |
|    | Roanoke, April 16, 1:30 pm                     |     |
|    | W & L, April 23, 2:00 pm                       |     |
|    | Gettysburg, April 27, 3:00 pm                  |     |
|    | Nazareth, April 30, 1:30 pm                    |     |
|    | West Chester, May 4, 3:00 pm                   |     |
|    | NCAA Playoffs, May 11NCAA Playoffs, May 15 |     |
|    | NCAA Piayotis, May 15NCAA Finals; May 21   |     |

Florida Trip Turns into Shoremen Steamroll Over Power Trip For Athey's Trio of Division III Foes Baseball Bunch But Fall to Powerhouses Hopkins and Navy to go 3-2 Over Break

regular season.

The Shoremen played seven games and came back with a 4-3 record. The games do not count on the record, but, like major league baseball's spring training, they are important in making final decisions and determining the strengths and weaknesses of the club

WC's first game was against Merrimack, and ended with the Shoremen on the wrong end of an 8-1 score. Eric Becker was dealt the

"...the trip displayed the offensive weapons which the Shoremen hope will guide

Next, the Shoremen met Bucks Community College. The team was powered by Tom Auvil with a home nn and four RBI's. Joe Macaleer also contributed some power with a home run. Chuck Johnson was the winning pitcher in the offensive duel, as the Shoremen won 11-9.

them this year."

Frank Davis pitched strong, leading the Shoremen to a 13-2 victory. Chris Rosfelder hit a home run and also had four RBI's. Joe Macaleer also knocked in four runs, while Dave Puskar scored four times in the victory

Facing Merrimack again, pitcher Dave Puskar knocked in two nus but lost a 9-5 decision. Joe Macaleer continued on his torrid RBI pace with another two. Rosfelder hit another round tripper in the loss

Against Tunxis Community Coach Ed Athey's baseball College, the Shoremen prevailed ream is back from the sun and fun of 12-5. Chuck Johnson upped his Florida and ready to embark on its spring record to 2-0 with the win Alan Lerch provided some power with a three run home run

The team dropped their next game to Western Connecticut. The Shoremen could only piece together two hits in the game

The team bounced back in their game to crush Mount Community College. Frank Davis upped his record to 2-0 with a win, pitching a spectacular two hit for five innings. Tom Auvil and Frank Wildman both hit three run home runs and Chris Rosfelder added two RBI's.

All in all, with the exception of the Western Conecticut game, the trip displayed the offensive weapons which the Shoremen hope will guide them this year. Macaleer's clutch hitting provided a bundle of runs, while Auvil, Wildman, Rosfelder, and Macaleer all showed the ability to knock the ball out of the park. At times - Frank Davis' performance against Mount Community, for example - the pitching showed great promise. The Atheymen are now poised for their regular season, which began yesterday against Tufts College. Tomorrow the Shoremen host Western Maryland in a 1 pm game

by John Van Name

Washington College's men's lacrosse team had a successful last five games. Their record over the last five was 3-2, but their competition was top-notch. Both of their losses were to Division I powerhouses. The Shoremen's record is coming to top Division I teams The Shoremen started this last stretch off right with a 15-5 win over visiting Ithaca College on March 9th. A young team, Ithica was not able to keep up with WC as the Shoremen outscored Ithaca 11-1 in the first half

now 4-3, with all three of their losses

Coach Corcoran was pleased with his team's effort which allowed him to get everyone playing

Corcoran attributed the success to the good weather which has allowed the Shoremen to practice outside for the last 6 weeks

W.C.'s next challenge came from perenial power Johns Hopkins on the 12th. Coming of a loss to Syracuse, the Blue Jays were hungry for the Shoremen. Trailing 5-3 at half, WC was withing striking distance and nearly pulled off the upset, falling by the score of 12-8.

As coach Corcoran said, "we

this proved the difference in the Doller and Paul Deniken.

After being out scored 6-0 in one stretch, the Shoremen would not "Give WC a lot of credit. They kept coming back," said Hopkins' Coach Zimmerman.

On Wednesday the 16th the Shoremen faced a very strong Naval Acadamy team. Navy is one of the top teams in the country, and they proved it as they defeated WC by the

men's lacrosse

The Shoremen were led in scoring by Tim Hormes with 2 goals and In emphasizing his team's play 2 assists. Paul Deniken also added 2

> Finishing up spring break, WC battled Guilford College on Sunday. With the game being played at Boy's Latin H.S. in Baltimore, the Shoremen put in a good performance in a 19-8 win.

Guilford, by chance, happens to be the team the Athletic Director Geoffrey Miller formerly coached.

In the win the Shoremen were led in scoring by Tim Hormes, who had 5 goals. Also contributing with did not convert our fast breaks" and 4 goals and 1 assist were both Chris

Closing out these last five games the men routed Fairleigh Dickinson, 28-3. After comming out slow, W.C. put its offense in high gear and outscored FD 24-1 after the mid-point of the first quar-

The blowout allowed the younger players to get some more experience as the Shoremen move into the meat of their schedule. WC was led in scoring by Paul Miller's 7 goals and 3 assists, and Paul Deniken, who had 6 goals and 3 assists.

Washington College faces Rochester Institute of Technology tomorrow at 1:30 on Kibler Field. Rochester is a top-ranked team in Division III and should be a tough opponent.

Volleyball Tournament

A reminder On Sundey March 27 there will be a one day campus wide volleyball tournament from 2 to 5 pm. Teams are coed, with a maximum of six players, at least two male and two female

Anyone interested in playing who has not yet signed up should get their rosters in to Diane Guinan or Geoff Miller as soon as possible

Fourth Annual Kent Athletic Club Biathlon

Location: Wilmer Park Lelia Hynson Pavilion S. Queen St.

Saturday, April 16, 1988 10:00 a m

Run 6.2 m., Bike 24.8m. Entry Fee Team - $20 Individual - $10 Prizes Awarded 778-3148

Chestertown, MD 21620

Phone (301) 778-1501

TOWNE SPORTING GOODS

Kent Plaza

GO SHOREMEN!!!

COLOR ON THE COURT

Nylites for Women Smart enough to take on any tournament, Li, cool, 100% cotton uppers are tuly, insed with right country of the country of the country of seek Yvanna and with growing country seek Yvanna and with your parked to mix and the country of warriodes. Terrycloth interest warriodes. Terrycloth interest on the it cushions the country of the country of trim colors for women,

PAUL'S SHOE STORE DOWNTOWN C.TOWN

THE ULTIMATE TENNIS SHOE

"Our Youth and

Us More Than

Simple Exercises Can Ease the Pain of Couch Potato Syndrome

TV is not a fitness sport. It lulls the ness. Over time, the muscles can mind and dulle the senses and does nothing whatsoever to boost your strength or flexibility. It is, however, a very popular activity.

DR. JOCK

The average American adu spends upward of three and a half hours a day watching TV. Most of that time is spent in a semi-reclined back slumped position, lounging on a soft sofa or cushy chair, with the lower back slumped and the head and neck rolled forward

We have names for people like that. Some call them "couch potatoes." The American Physical Therany Association (APTA) calls them "hypokinetics," people who suffer from stiffness, weakness, and pain caused by inadequate muscular activity. In short, too much time in front of the tube

Couch Potatoes Need Help. If people watched TV sitting erect in a supportive chair, and took a few minutes every hour to stretch. there'd be no problem. But they don't. And there is. The problem, physical therapists say, is that after a half-hour of poor TV-watching posture, the muscles, ligaments. joints and connectibe tissues begin weaken and atrophy, causing hypokinetics to walk with their head forward, their shoulders rounded, their abdomens protruding. Not a pretty picture Morning Stiffness is a Symp ton. If you wake up in the morning with pain or stiffness in your lower back and neck, you may be suffering

"Waking up stiff is your body's way of telling you that vou are risking serious injury if vou don't do something to bolster your strength and flexibility." from the couch potato syndrome. Too many people think that feeling this way is a normal part of the aging process. It isn't. Waking up stiff is your body's way of telling you that you are risking serious injury if you strength and flexibility

The APTA has come up with some simple stretches you can do to pre vent the strain and stiffness of too much TV watching:

head with your chin pulled in. Position your head directly over your shoulders. Tilt your head from side to side, ear toward shoulder. Hold for cound of 5. Relax and breath deeply. Repeat three times on each side

Upper Back Extension: Stand with your back against the wall, your feet separated and at a distance of about 2 or 3 feet from the wall. With palms facing up, raise your arms over your head. Then slowly lower. Breathe in slowly when rais ing arms; exhale slowly when lowering. Repeat 10 times or more.

Partial Curl-Ups: Lie on your back with your knees bent and your haands behing your head. Dlowly curl up your head and shoulders until the shoulder blades are lifted. then lowered. Keep your lower back flat through the motion. Repeat 15 times or so

Cat and Camel: Get down on your hands and knees. Lower your head and then round your back. Pull in your abdomen, then raise your head and release your back. Keep your elbows straight. Repeat 10

Inexperience Hurt

Couch Potatoe Exercises

"Well, we've experienced a bit-Neck Stretches: Look straight of a slower start than we anticipated.

nore than I had expected." That is Coach Diane Guinan's xplanation for the slow start of the Women's Lacrosse season, which opened up with losses to Johns Hopkins, 26-7, and Notre Dame, 15-

"We've got the talent there," adds Guinan, "but with a mostly freshmen squad we just haven't learned how to work with each other yet. We're getting there, though.

Over Spring Break, the Shoreomen hosted the Lady Blue Jays, who like their male counterparts are among the top lacrosse teams in the nation. Last season Hopkins went to the NCAA playoffs The Shorewomen stayed with Hopkins through the opening of the game, evening the score at 4-4 on Sarah Coste's second of five goals with 17:21 remaining in the first half.

Hopkins, however, notched five unanswered goals to pull ahead 9-4, until Coste broke the scoring spell ten minutes after her second goal. Hopkins led at the end of the half 12-6

I Had Expected" were drubbed 14-1. "They have moments throughout the game Our youth and inexperience hurt us explained Guinan, "but they haves nuite learned to put it together over the whole game. That's key." Tuesday, the Shorewomer traveled to face undefeated Norm Dame. The first half, however, we a repeat of their second half again Hopkins, as they were outscored to 1. WC played better in the score half, scoring three to Notre Dame

Sarah Coste netted all four the Shorewomen's goals, giving he nine of WC's eleven goals so farth season. Coste is one of the mar freshmen on this year's squad. Yesterday, the Shorewome played at Widener.

The Shorewomen will try bounce back against Franklin ! Marshall tomorrow. F&M is onth level of Hopkins. Coach Guine hopes the women play tough an maintain the level of intensity the the Shorewomen displayed early against Hopkins.

The talent is present. That he been evidenced with some brigh flashes. With some seasoning av determination, the Shoreworn Inexperience however burt in plan to translate talent in victors

A Tradition of Success is Safe With 1988 Shoremen Laxers

LAX, from page 8

ever 11-1 and outscored their opponents 166-75. There only loss: Johns Hopkins, who, along with Navy, they had never been able to beat since lacrosse first came to Chester-

Upset of the Decade

But on March 30, 1976, that would change. Led by the Geeper, the Shoremen defeated the Johns Hopkins Blue Jays for the first and only time

"Before Corcoran arrived, however. he contributed to the woes of the Washinton College as a player for Hobart College"

Geeper led the scoring with four goals, while WC goalie Clint Evans kept the Blue Jays down in a game which stayed close through-

Unlike other years in which the the end, and then lose, the Shoremen hung tough until the end and WON ensure that another "upset of the decade" does not occur.

> The Tradition Lives On

And what about the eighties? The Don Kelly era ended in 1977 when the car salesman retired after twenty-one years of coaching New coaches included Mickey DiMaggio and then Bryan Matthews, until Corcoran arrived in

Before Corcoran arrived, how ever, he contributed to the woes of the Washinton College as a player for Hobart College. In the 1977 Division II Championship, Corcoran led Hobart past Washington College, 14-5. Corcoran also led the nation in scoring in 1978

By 1979, with Geeper and most of the rest of the previous year's crew gone, the Shoremen slumped to 3-8. But they rebounded to make the playoffs the following year. By 1982, they met Hobart for the Divi sion III Championship again, and lost, 9-8 in overtime, a mere good bounce from the National Championship

Terry Corcoran arrived in 1983 and directed the Shoremen toward three more Championship appearances, in 1984, 1985, and 1986, each Shoremen would hang tough until against his alma mater, each time

The best chance for victory Even today, Blue Jays coach Don was in 1985, when the Number One Zimmerman hangs an account of ranked Shoremen hosted Hobart in that game on the lockerroom wall to the Championship game. Earlier that year the Shoremen had defeated Navy 10-9, on a last second goal The rematch, however, brought no such luck, with Hobart spoiling the day, and the year, 15-8. Despite the Championship defeats, the Shoremen did accomplish its first upset of Navy, a 14-10 verdict in 1982. After more than thirty years of trying, the Shoremen finally sank the traditional powerhouse Navy

Three years later, the Shoremen repeated the feat, knocking off ington College lacrosse lore

the Statesmen for the first time, 8-7. from Rick Cote, assisted by Mike So, the tradition is rich, and that rich tradition explains the annual furor which lacrosse creates on the Eastern Shore The eighties has brought its own special characters - Ricky Sowell, Bruce Yancey, Walker Taylor, Steve Beville, Larry Boehm, David Hilliard, John Nostrant, and so on - to add to Wash-

Meanwhile today's mrz -Mike McGuane, Chris Dollar, Miz Woodfolk, Tim Hormes, Ten Reynolds, Bob Martino, Kevi Colbeck, Paul Deniken, etc. strive to capture the elusive champ onship, while adding their on chapters to the storybook historyd Washington College lacrosse

They have a tough act to follow but from the looks of things, they at making their predecessors prod With a few wins this May, ix could steal the show entirely

With parity arriving in Division III Lacrosse and Hobert possibly moving to the big time, WC better lies?

Does God Exist? And Other Religious Questions

by Anne Lindenbaum

Many students entering college find themselves challenged in a way they haven't encountered before, a challenge that goes beyond academics, and into personal and theistic beliefs. Students grappling with the question of religion find it is a timeconsuming and sometimes troublecome one. For some, it is a matter of deciding where religion fits into their lives, while for others it is a matter of deciding if religion fits into their lives at all

"I'm still learning"

For senior Ruth Davidson, coming to school opened her mind to new knowledge. "I had gone to church here and there - once in awhile - but it wasn't a regular part of my life," Davidson said. "I believed in God, but I'd never had any information given to me about what the Christian life was like." Although her father was a Catholic and her mother was an Episcopalian, Davidson was not raised in a specific denomination, and rarely attended church. This began to change, however, when she met people actively involved with the Campus Christian Fellowship.

"I met some people who became really good friends of mine, and told me about the Fellowship and what they got out of it. They invited me to the Fellowship and what I found there was a supportive group of people who had a lot to give, and who I could talk to openly carious about at the best arguments wanted to for and against."

learn about Bible study and the support of the Fellowship members, Davidson's faith began to grow to the point explore different churches or relitions there, but there are no judgements and no doctrines about which sophomore year, Fragomeni no church you should attend," longer considered himself a Chris-Davidson related. "But I'm not tian and began to think of himself as committed to any one church be- an atheist. In doing so, he found that use I'm still learning."

After graduation, Davidson does plan on choosing a specific church and denomination. "School and the Fellowship really changed my life," she said. "I was impressed by the people in the group who had given testimony and found a new way of life for themsleves. They were really about giving and sharing in their lives.

Whereas Davidson was able to find that religion and God could fulfill her, senior Jim Fragomeni found that they could not fulfill him Fragomeni, who was raised as a Roman Catholic and attended Catholic schools, says that his religious upbringing was, "essentially windowdressing. Nobody was very serious about it. It was something that was assumed. I was involved in Catholisicm in that I was in a Christian atmosphere and I was learning Fragomeni came to school with many questions about Catholicism. and discovered a lot of his answers through his studies of philosophy. "Once I began reading and studying, I found a lot of answers, and they seemed very practical." It was at this point that Fragomeni started moving away from Christianity. "A lot of philosophy is a very good critique of what's wrong with Christiand honestly.

Because I In class we ask, Does anity, and basically when was a Chris-tian, I was God exist?, and we look you study begin to see the problems in religious beliefs very anything that had to do with Christi- blatantly. They become very obvi Through the Fellowship's ous and you can no longer believe in Fragomeni never felt a need to where she began attending different gious clubs to help him answer his questions, "When I was a Christian. 'I haven't really picked a de- I never regarded going to church as nomination per se, and that's what I part of being a good Christian. So like about the Fellowhsip because because I didn't think it was importhere are many different denomina- tant. I didn't pursue that kind of moving away from Christianity was not a struggle.

scholars in religion," Newell stated. tantly, it places emphasis on strong got here, I went to church, but there arguments, which are evidentiary, Newell explained. "The evidence his religious options during his sec-"Secondly, and more impor- ond year of college. "When I first wasn't the big impetus to go that there was at home." Like Fragomfor the point of view in philosophy eni, Winkler found other options "You begin to realize your op- of religion is the logic of arguments through his studies. "I think the big

Symbols of religion that decorated homes in the past, today are reduced to books and symbols kept more privately

tions and just in being able to per- and the ability to reason. so if you thing that changed it was the Comceive those options, you move away precede that with conceptual analyfrom religious beliefs and the desire to want to cling to them," explained Fragomeni. "Some people spend their whole lives going to church and celebrating Christmas, and never look at the questions, and that to me is unacceptable. . . What I understand now is what I consider to be the truth. It's very plain and I can't deny or contradict the criticisms I have of Christianity.

Dr. J. David Newell, who chairs the Philosophy Department, and has taught at the College for twenty years, feels that the role of philosophy in relation to religion is an important one. "The advantage of the philosophical study of religion is that it helps to clarify concepts. Philosophers seem to be more interested in defining terms and sorting out concepts and saying,

sis and then you develop good argu ments, premises and conclusions, the ability to do that is very important. We understand religious notions through the analysis of the concepts and terms and that's philosophical. Then we put our understandings into good form by the drafting of sound arguments for religious points of view," he concluded

"But I think it is my obligation as a teacher not to tell the students what position to take. In class we ask, Does God exist?, and we look at the best arguments for and against. and then I leave the students alone to decide for themselves which of these cases is the strongest," said raised as a Catholic and attended

Callus

01

parative Religion course that I took last year. All these other people thought these different things and I asked myself, 'Why do I believe what I believe?' and I decided that the only way to get a good perspective on Catholicism and Christianity was to experience it from without

Though Winkler is not leaning towards atheism, he is still unsure of where he stands. "I still believe in the ideals of Christianity and I always will, but as far as the doctrines go, I don't really disbelieve or believe them at this point. They're more or less floating. I have to find out where they fit in with my life and with what I really believe," emphasized Winkler

Not all students, however, find that their studies or campus clubs

Continued on page 14

KEEP YOUR SUMMER TAN WITH OUR SUNTANA SUN SYSTEM

EMILY HAIRDRESSER

Rt. 213 across from Bowling Lanes

Complete line of REDKEN & PAUL MITCHELL Full Service Salon

Call 778-3886

Complete Hair Care 10 Visits for $40.00

Our SunTana SunSystem guarantees you a glorious, radiant tan that you can keep all year long. A tan you achieve with sort, comfortable and SAFE UV.A. light and without all the burning, peeling and flaking you get in an unique sunlight. Our SunSystem is GUARANTEED to tan anyone who tans in the sun....while you relax in cool

We'd like to tell you more about this exciting new way to tan. A single visit will convince you.

The Beauty Lounge

Phone: 778-2635

Midtown Mall Chestertown, MD 21620 NEXUS PRODUCTS AVAILABLE

In the home the more

Passover: Celebrating Man's Freedom

by Jennifer M. Harrison

spring and keep the passover unto the Lord thy God, for in the spring month the Lord thy God brought thee out of Egypt by night" (Deuteronomy 16:1). Passover, or Pesach is the Jewish holiday commemorating the emancipation of the forefathers from Egyptian slavery. It is also the celebration of the birthday of the Jewish people, because as the people left Egypt they left as one people united by Moses and God's

The story behind Passover is related to its name. Moses asked the Pharoah for the freedom of his people, when this was denied, God sent plagues on Egypt. After each plague, the Pharoah still refused to let the Hebrews go. The final affliction God sent to the Egyptians was the Angel of Death

Instructed beforehand each Hebrew family sacrificed a lamb to God, and smeared blood on the door of their homes. When the Angel of Death came through Egypt, he passed over the homes protected by the blood of the lamb.

continued from page 13

make matters any clearer. Junior Genie Auchincloss, who attended Northeastern University in Boston her freshman year, did not find the philosophy course she took there helpful. "I could see, once the philosphers reached their conclusions, how they got there, but if I was given two things and was asked to come up with a conclusion, I had trouble with it. I couldn't quite make the connec-

Auchincloss

"Growing up in and religious who was raised with an informal a community that activities pro-Episcopalian background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish, I tance for oth background, also was 85% Jewish ers, although experimented didn't realize that some students with going to have not made a with going to coming here would have not made a church with her coming here would final decision cousins in Boston and are still ex-That experience be any different." ploring their religious options.

made me think : 'Well, it's important to them so maybe there is some kind of value in it,' but I don't like people who are fanatical about it or treat church as a social occasion. I feel if you have praying to do you can do it any-

45 minutes away Students who were comfortable with their beliefs but found that their religion was a minority on campus had different dilemmas to

Since coming to Washington face. Junior Debbie Nahmias, a Restaurant

Now Accepting Applications for All Positons

Call 778-2100 EOE

In the houses of the Egyptians, sermons tell of the Egyptian bond "Observe the month of however, the first born of each age and deliverance family was killed Frightened and bereaved elaborate part of the holiday occurs. at the loss of his son, the Pharoah On the first evening of Passover ordered the Jews out of Egypt. They Jewish homes give the seder, or the hurried to leave before the Pharoah order of the meal served to usher in changed his mind. As soon as they the holiday. The father of the house left the Pharoah did change his mind. He sent his army after the refugees, and cornered them at the Red Sea. Moses lifted his rod and the Red most elaborate of Jewish holidays.

The Celebration

Beginning on the evening of the first day, it is observed both at home and College. Auchincloss has attended other church services, and though she favors the Episcopalian church,

she still has not made a definite decision. "I think the most important thing is to educate people on where religion fit into their lives, if at all, using various means to do so.

Philosophy provided insights for while experimentation with

When the nearest temple is Sea parted allow ing the Jews to in the synagoges

is the host, and before him are sev- Elijah. pass through. The Egyptians drowned when they tried to follow. eral symbols:

Celebrated in the spring- ened bread, is called the bread of time, Passover is the happiest and affliction to remind the celebrants of the hurried way their fathers left > reminder of the bitter lives the book of the Passover. Hebrews had in Egypt. Roasted shank-bone of Special services are held in the synagoges on the eve of the first and last days of the holiday. The theme of the prayers, songs and Conservative Jew, experienced a slight culture shock when she came to school. "Growing up in a community that was 85% Jewish, I didn't realize that coming here would be any different." Nahmias realized it was different however when she what religion is so they don't feel wanted to celebrate Kosh Hashanah. misguided and lost, the way I felt." These students had to decide the Jewish New Year

> "My freshman year I couldn't go home for Rosh Hashanah, so Student Affairs located a temple in the area and provided us with transportation. I went to the synagogue vith another boy to celebrate Rosh Hashanah, which was nice, but the fact that it's 45 minutes to an hour away doesn't make me want to go all the time," said Nahmias. "Some

First, using the chant and The matsoh, or unleav- translations taught to him, the youngest child asks the traditional four questions about the meaning of the evening and its customs. His father answers him, continuing the Horseradish serves as a service in the Haggadah, the prayer joy of freedom.

where they served as slaves.

Next, is the eating of the food with appropriate blessings. lamb is reminiscent of the sacrificed The feast ends with the eating of the afikomon, the half-matsoh that the made me feel neglected - like at the Convocations they always have a priest or reverend or a minister, never a rabbi."

Despite these somewhat disheartening encounters, coming to school was a positive experience, she said. "Sometimes being a minority was fun. My freshman year the girl who lived next door to me had never met a Jewish person in her life, and I got to answer a lot of questions. I've definitely changed since I came here. I think I have more of a sense of who I am and where I came from now than I did. Coming here opened my mind to a lot of things about myself but, by the same token, I was also very ignorant

Charoses, a combination father has hidden from the children If the children successfully find and of apples, almonds, raisins, cinnamon and wine, looks like clay and is steal the afikomon, then the father meant to remind the Jews of the clay must offer a gift for its return.

used in the Egyptian brickyards The final part of the seds consists of various prayers and songs. The main feature is the pour. A hard boiled egg repreing of a cup of wine for Elijah, the sents the free-will offerings brought to the Temple the door is opened so he may con-

during Pesach in and drink On the following tiel Wine is days. Pesach is observed by earn symbolic of the of matsoh, and other foods. On the evening of the last day all the special sweetness and Pesach dishes are packed awayaw the ordinary dishes are brought on the table is a large All the matsoh must be eaten before cup of wine for any leavened bread can be bakedo prophet bought.

> The story of the Jewis people is the historical basis of both Christianity and Judaism, it is als part of the history of mankind Thus, the celebration of Passon can be important to more than practicing Jews. A symbolic festivals freedom, Passover teaches to great lessons: right will triump over might, and it teaches that ma was born to be free and not a slav

Christian premises. I've learned

Junior Tina Brumbley. Mormon, encountered one of it same problems that Nahmias til "The closest meeting house is a minutes away and I don't have car," says Brumbley, who was is to going every week at hone Though her activity in the chur decreased somewhat during hi school, Brumbley does miss t comfort of being around on Mormons. "I do wonder how would act differently if I had a go friend here who was a Mormon they were following it and I was I think maybe I'd act differently. in that way, I'm a little lonely, bu don't feel like an outsider or

FREE HORS D'OEUVRES 5:30-??? 25¢ Drafts in Back 9:00-10:30

Friday, March 25th

Demetri & the Flashbacks

515 Washington St. Chestertown, MD

778-1984 *****************

Photo Perspectives on Exhibit

by Michele Balze Washington College's Gibson Fine Arts Center is hosting a traving exhibition of photographs om Maryland Art Place juried by ionally known photographer hn Pfahl. "Landscape: A Photoaphic Perspective" opened March 3rd and will run through Wednes-tay April 6. Selected Ectochrome prints Pfahl's recently published Picture Windows" series appear in term te show in addition to the photoranhs of six other Mid-Atlantic mographers. Pfahl's prints are mes through which he shoots. In sphotographs, the horizontal lines mountain ranges resemble the rips of color found in color field "Balance Rock Drive, pringdale, Utah" especially renbles a painting because the mes appear roughly painted and on the screens in the windows we the vista a canvas-like texture. Like Pfahl, many of the other irony which allows photographers to capture what is real in a very surreal manner. Although titled pragmatically, Dave Orback's 360degree color panoramas possess an element of fantasy created by the mirror reflections and subtle distortion present in panoramic photographs. In contrast to Orback's allencompassing views, Kim Kirkpatrick asserts a sense of two-dimensional space through her use of pat-

Jennifer Bishop, whose black and white photographs of urban scenes appear in the Baltimore City notics formed by the window Paper uses a wide-angle lens to create scenes in which people appear lost in a vaste environment. Her travelogue series shows man overwhelmed or lost in nature. In "The Rockies," the lens assists in an even more surreal leap of imagination in which a prop car appears to soar above ragged cliffs and a cloudy melt into Jennifer Bishop's western sisplay with traditional concepts plains assert themselves in Jeff phy which he explains in his "From a Series of One-Acts ... #10a." The text is both conversational and introspective, yet appears in bold type, suggesting the impersonal quality of advertising or magazine

The use of the printed word also appears in Wayne Neild's "Aqua Dreams of Valley Streams," which he stresses the Pop Art element by creating a series of huge simulated post-cards. Like Gates, Neild incorporates a text with a talky but poetic feel. Although Neild has harnessed the wilderness by capturing it on the cards, there is still the sense that man is a overwhelmed by nature. One passage reads"... we have become lost in this place and it is not because of all the trees!". In the photograph man has chopped down the trees to tame the land, but fails.

"Landscape: A Photographic The man-made elements that Perspective" is open from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. For private viewing times, contact Robert Jansonpictorial space, revelling in the Gates' photographs. Gates prints LaPalme at (301) 778-2800.

A scene from On the Verge, Joanna Wilson's senior project. Wilson's project includes set design, lighting, and costumes. On the Verge is directed by Gina Braden and will be performed tonight and tomorrow night on the stage of Tawes Theater at 8:00 p.m

Romantic Poets, Decadent Lives

The lifestyles of the Romantic poets are often as interesting as the actual poetry which was produced Shelley. "The stories of Byron's life during that era. On Monday, March alone are amazing," says Gillin. 28. Dr. Richard Gillin of the English Department will present a talk aptly entitled "Lifestyles of the Debauched and Poetic: The Roman-the cuff and informal," centering primarily on the scandalous lives of Lord Byron and Percy Bysse

Dr. Gillin's presentation is part of the Monday Series and will be held in the O'Neill Literary House Tea will be served at 4 p.m.; the talk

Gillin describes the talk as "off will begin at 4:30 p.m. Dance Performance

The Washington College em, jazz, and musical theater. The Dance Company will present its annual dance concert on March 30 fessor Karen Lynn Smith, students and 31 in Tawes Theatre at 8 p.m. Bob Haralambakis, Leah Peterson, The concert includes ballet, mod- Lynda Buettner, and April Dean.

pieces are choreographed by Pro-

ebe's, beginning at 8:00p.m. For reservations, call extension 268 Journalism Workshop

ucted by juniors Andrea Kehoe lennifer Harrison next Wednesto discuss sessions they atdiscuss sessions de la convensponsored by Columbia Schoat Press Association last week. e, the editor-in-chief of The and Harrison, the Elm's feaeditor, received grants from Ginnett fund to attend the four-

A journalism workshop will be day spring break conference The workshop, which will begin at 7:00 in the Elm office in Queen Anne dormitory, will cover ntha Streamer, above, flourishes during a rehearsal of Vinegar Tom. The play is directed by Ryder emains streamer, above, nourisnes during arenears and rineger from will be performed on April 6 and 7 in > interviewing, reporting and design skills. Other topics will include reviews of the arts and job hunting in the communications fields

To sign up, contact Andrea Kehoe at 778-2800 (ext. 321) by Tuesday, March 29

Laura Audra Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists

A & P Parking Loi Stertown, Maryland 21620

Applications for editor-in-chief of The Elm or The Pegasus are due to Prof. Robert Day (Literary House) by Monday

April 4, 1988

American Academy of Dramatic Arts

America's first conservatory for actors, the Academy has trained more professional actors than any other school or college in the country. Alumni have won nominations for 84 Oscars, 58 Tonys and 104 Emmys.

Two-year Professional Program Six-week Summer Program

For an application and further information call THE AMERICAN ACADEMY OF DRAMATIC ARTS

Britain's Christians Play Music Aimed Toward the Common Man

The self-titled album by the three-member British group, The Christians, was released recently but is only now beginning to show up in record stores and get radio airplay in America. The band's name does not have religious implications: three members of the band are brothers with the surname "Christian." Their music differs from the mainstream in that they stress vocals before music: many songs have an a cappella section in which the backing vocals provide the time One aspect that has a great influence on the Christians' music is that they hail from the northern area of England, which is not very welloff economically. Consequently, many of their songs are not bright and cheery, but often dark and somber. This tone is very obvious in "Ideal World." which deals with the problem of economic and racial prejudice (two members of the band We'd be free to choose/ But in my real world/ You can bet we're going to lose." This song echoes the feelings of the youth in Northern England; they want the chance to go out and do what they please, but the times don't allow them that oppor-

"Hooverville." which concerns unemployment. There is little hope, according to this song, for a person shows anger toward the come true."
government's aid to unemploy- "When gold/ Oh Hooverville/ and they promised us a roof above our heads/ Oh Hooverville/ and like fools we believed every last word they said." This song is really an anthem used by the unemployed Britons. "One in a Million" has a happier message in that it dictates to the audience, telling people that their souls and what they have to offer are just as worthy as what anyone else is offering: "Re-inject some self-respect/ It's the one thing you must never lose/ And with your confidence intact/ You've now a second chance, so much to prove," a message people often forget when are black): "In the Ideal World/ they're down and out, but one that everyone needs to remember at one time or another

the theme of depression, and is getting the most airplay of all of the songs on the album. The song is not specifically directed at any one person, but to both the people who

Another song stating the prob-suffer from it and those who cause it. lems of the English youth is The song says that if people are given the chance to get out the position they are in, then, the song professes, they should work and strive to advance himself. The song also until they make "a thousand wishes

"When the Finger Points" turns ment: "In Hooverville/ said the attention to the trouble of rumors streets were paved with silver and and opinion. The narration deals with not being able to hide from rumor's wrath and its effects on its

> The Christians is an excellent album with a different musical selection. The album is at once meaningful and a pleasure to the ear.

Lit. House Happenings The Performance Art Class will

present two videos on Saturday, March 26th: "Victory Over the Sun A Futurist Opera" and "Man and Mask: Oskar Schlemmer and the Bauhaus Stage." The videos will be shown at the O'Neill Literary House

The poet Frank Stewart will "Forgotten Town" deals with give a poetry reading this Sunday at 3 p. m. The reading will be held at the O'Neill Literary House, Stewart is the Poet-in-Residence at the Unithe Whitman Award.

versity of Hawaii and is a winner of The British group Christians' self-titled album is beginning to ga airplay in America. It is available on Island Records

Chestertown Movie Theater

Senior Receives Fulbright Scholarship

When Sean Ireton's mother called him over spring break to tell him he had won a Fulbright scholarship for graduate study abroad, he was unruffled. "[My reaction] was one of pleasant surprise," Ireton smiles. He is the twelfth Fulbright winner from Washington College.

Ireton plans to study in West burg"-where he will research the theme of "the struggle of power and spirit" in the work of author Klaus Mann. Germany is not new to him.

however; he spent part of sopho- specifics of study," he states. more year and all of junior year wrote about three or four drafts of studying there, where he became acquainted with the work of Mann The experience also helped Ireton to set up connections in Germany. which helped when he wrote his proposal of study for the Fulbright scholarship

The proposal of study is possi-Germany-"probably Ham- bly the most important part of the dense application for the Fulbright. Ireton used his connections in Germany to bring his proposal together. "In Fulbright you have to name the proposal."

The committee which reviewed students' proposals included Dean Baer, Professor Tapke. Professor Shivers, and Professor Scholz. Dr. Tapke stresses the importance of specifics in a proposal of study: "The committee wants evidence of a well-thought out project [with] specific names and places.

I tional. [He had] a very clear-eyed Dean Baer lauds. "He has an York with the committee's evaluextraordinary academic record here ation. The Institute then has its own and is very well thought of by the faculty and his peers."

that this was an unusually wellworked proposal. He's very tallike a native. His qualifications are made. were very strong."

Once the committee at the col-application is sent to the Institute of International Education committees to review the applications it receives, which is followed Tapke has similar praise in by a weeding out process. After the regard to Ireton's proposal: "We felt committees make their choices, the applications are sent to the Fulbright commissions in the appropriate ented in language...speaks German countries, where the final decisions

"We eagerly supported [Ireton's] application and are de-'Sean's application was exceplege recommends a candidate, the lighted with the result," says Tapke.

The

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 23

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, April 8, 1988

Last week, the Washington College Dance Company gave its annual dance concert. The performance included modern, ballet, jazz, and musical theater.

Cater Announces Tuition Increase

by Tony Caligiuri

In a letter from President Douglass Cater's office, it was innounced that Washington College's Board of Visitors and Governors voted to raise tuition for the 1988-89 academic year $890 to $4000, bringing the total cost up to ulty and administrative salaries,

In the letter, which was received by most parents early this week, Cater went on to explain exactly what tuition does and does not pay for. Included in the costs $9,500 and room and board $460 to that are covered by tuition are facinstructional costs, operation of the library, the athletic department. student activities and current maintenance costs. Costs which are not covered by tutition include building renovations, landscaping, the mas ter plan, new construction, and other capital construction costs. Cater further pointed out that tuition increases are considered fourth in a series of incomes which are reviewed in the projected budget. Before tuition increases are considered the board looks at projected income from state and federal. grants, annual giving, and estimated yield on endowment funds.

Some of the costs that have increased over the past year have been faculty and administrative salaries, costs in health insurance benefits, and student financial aid.

Committee Names Participants For Year Abroad

by Susan Di Leo

When the selection committee reviewed the applications of the candidates for the year abroad at Manchester College in England and St. Andrews University in Scotland, they used a number of criteria. Committee member Dean Baer portfolios are reviewed, the selecnotes two particular factors which tion committee conducts interviews played a major role in the decisionmaking process: "how the student would benefit to study abroad in sists of faculty members of different terms of academic performance and areas of study. The committee life experience," and how he would members this year were Dean Baer, represent Washington College as Professor Fallaw, Mr. Lamond well as the nation. "If they've done well at Washington College, that gives us an indication that they have the wear-with-all" to excel in a study abroad program.

"wear-with-all" are Gina Braden, Esther Diamondstone, Jennifer Vervier, Brent Hopkins, Lisa Boggs, and Steven Gregory, all of whom will attend Manchester College next year. The three students who will attend St. Andrews University are Catherine Raskin, Sean Murphy, and Stuart Collins.

The process of applying to these programs involves a number of steps. First, the student must express his interest in the fall semester; he has the option to attend meetings organized by Dean Sansing and Professor Tapke, which are designed to acquaint the prospective candidate with academic life abroad through discussions with students who have recently completed a year at Manchester.

Following winter break, those students who are still enthusiastic about the program are asked to compile a portfolio consisting of a statement of interest, which is a one what [the students] make it.'

page essay explaining the student's reason for interest in the program what he hopes to accomplish, and what he feels he can contribute to the program. The candidates must submit three letters of recommendation from the faculty. After their with each of the applicants.

The selections committee con-Professor Pelchat, Professor Roat, Professor Taylor, and Professor According to Dean Baer, the decisions of the committee are based The students who exhibit such on factors such as academic performance, the student's motivation for wanting to study abroad, and the impression the student makes on the committee. "We have to make sure that the students have the flexibility [not only] to make the changes necessary in terms of moving to a foreign country and adapting, but also in terms of different academic sys-

> The Manchester study system is one of intense study of one topic. Each week, the student turns in a ten page paper to his tutor. The tutor then reviews the paper and discusses it with the student on a oneon-one basis

Dr. Tapke says, "Grades are by no means the main criteria" in choosing the students who will study at Manchester and St. Andrews. Rather, the committee looks for students "who are involved, who will contribute, and are self-motivated. In both schools, the year is

INSIDE:

Halstead Retires.....page 5 The Incorrigibles.....page 6 SGA Election Guide....page 7 Off the Cuff.....page 11 Tennis is #1.....page 12 Occaquan Days.....page13 Authors, Mentors .....page 15

Editorial

Party Barn Problems

No Student Government Association election would be com plete without some discussion of alcohol. Typically, the issue is the threat of a dry campus: this year, the alcohol-related topic is the proposal to erect a "Party Barn," a building specifically intended for social functions, with the suggestion that it be located near the haseball fields

In many ways the Party Barn is a great idea. Placing social functions away from the dormitories will greatly reduce vandalism, not to mention noise, in the residence halls. A building of sufficient size may also help to cut down on fighting at parties by reducing the crowding and resulting tensions that occur when hundreds of drunken neonle gather in a small basement.

Once the initial novelty of the idea wears off, though, some problems surface. Washington College has given much attention and money to its master plan - to selecting flowers and trees, to negotiating with town officials about closing Gibson Avenue, even to choosing the mortar that best coordinates with the brick of the soonto-be-built Academic Resource Center

Are College officials and the Board of Visitors and Governors likely to okay the construction of a "barn"? We doubt it. It is easy to imagine some administrator objecting to the probable appearance of such a building on this carefully-planned campus. It is easy to imagine some administrator pointing out that students currently have a variety of places in which to hold parties: the Coffee House, the dining hall, the pavilion, Phoebe's, and dormitory basements or commons rooms

Given the prohibitive cost of constructing an entirely new facility, perhaps students should investigate better ways to use existing areas, such as the Coffee House. Though the Student Center remains virtually empty on "herbal tea" nights, the lack of alcohol availability need not be a permanent barrier. Reaching an agreement with the administration about monitoring drinking and controlling fights is not easy, but it does not require a new building as a solution to the old problem

Spending the money for the Party Barn, no matter whose budget it comes from, is difficult to justify when next year's tuition, just as last year and the year before that, has been raised. It's also hard to understand why we would have money for a Party Barn if the SGA does not have the money to fund the film series and when the art house is essentially a barn itself.

Certainly, these problems are not insurmountable. We would like to see the Party Barn proposal work, and we don't expect students to iron out all of the difficulties themselves.

Before students begin planning for social functions to be held in the Party Barn, though, they should address these concerns. Only then can we head on out to the barn.

Washington College Elm

| Frankel Pt                | 344                  |
|---------------------------|----------------------|
| Editors                   |                      |
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Keho          |
| News Editor               | Tony Caligiuri       |
| Features Editor           | Jennifer M. Harrison |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekman         |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Susan DiLec          |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Balz         |
| Graphics Editor           | Todd Kar             |
| Manager                   |                      |
| Managing Editor           | Cathy Jewel          |
| Advertising Manager       |                      |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and am weeks Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed colu

taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editors

cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments.

Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mailed clo The Elm Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters become the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be considered for publication in that week's issue.

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen An dormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wodnesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WCDS Should Allow For Special Diets

To the Editor: I observe the Jewish dietary laws that prohibit the consumption of pork or seafood. At least one night a week the WCDS serves both these entrees during the same meal. Last year, in the fall of '86, I asked Ms. Mary Lorraine Sexton, Food Production Manager for the Washington College Dining Service, if there was any way to schedule the entrees so that pork and seafood dichee did not fall within the same meal. She told me that the meals were arranged several months in advance and that nothing could be changed for that year. As an alternative. Ms. Sexton offered to prepare me special kosher meals, like beef or chicken, anytime that I found the mentioned conflict. She also sent me a letter assuring me that she would try to be 'aware of my situ ation in the future,' although to date,

I have not seen any changes

Ms. Sexton's solution to the problem satisfied me for that moment, but I later decided not to take advantage of her offer. I did not and still don't - think I should have to ask for special meals. I merely want the WCDS to consider my point of view, instead of ignoring it, when they formulate the menus. I'm not asking the WCDS to stop serving pork and seafood products. I'm asking them to stop serving pork and seafood products together, a request I think is reasonable and could be easily accomplished, especially since, as I was told by a Food Service Committee member, the meals are arranged seven weeks in advance, not 'several months.' When the problem can be solved this simply, special treatment becomes unnecessary as an option, and should no longer be viewed as the only available one. I did not inform Ms. Sexton of my decision last year not to take advan tage of her offer, and perhaps I should have. Had I done so, the matter might have been cleared up a lot sooner Still, this does not excuse Ms.

> EMPLOYMENT HOMEMAKERS WANTED! TOP PAY! C.I. 121 24th Ave. N.W. Suite 222 Norman, Okla-

homa 73069

Sexton's rude and insensitive behavior when I approached her once again, April 4, 1988. I had reiterated my concern on the recent food survey, and she asked me to explain why I would not accept the alternate meal offer. I explained my position stated above and added that since she was in charge of putting the menus together, I did not understand what would be so hard about making sure that a beef or chicken entree was paired with a pork entree, instead of serving pork and seafood entrees together. The fact that there are two entrees for each meal should make it easy to do this. I asked Ms. Sexton point-blank why she did not do this and why she couldn't seem to fathom ever doing it. During the entire exchange. Ms. Sexton never gave me a straight answer; rather, she circled around the question, emphasizing over and over again that she would be more than happy to fix me special meals. It seemed

I realize that the WCDS menu selection presents problems for others as well, such as vegetarians, and Catholics who observe meatless Fridays It was for exactly this reason that the College initiated a dualentree menu system years ago - to avoid having to prepare special meals for Catholics and Jews I don't understand why the Dining Service hasn't carried through on this. I understand that the Dining Service works to serve the general college community, but Catholics Jews, and vegetarians are a part of that general college community, and like everyone else, deserve to be considered as such, and not as a few exceptions. We don't want or need to be treated specially. We just want our views to be considered and to be like she was missing the point delib-

HELP WANTED TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17, Clark, NJ 07066

taken seriously

Precident Cater stated in recent Sun Magazine article that he wants to attract students from other countries to the school. Obviously some of these students might also observe certain dietary laws or m strictions. If such a diverse student body is to exist, and the College is to survive, the WCDS must open its mind to the fact that changes within its system are inevitable, and that those changes must start now

Anne Lindenbaum

Contra Aid Argument Forgets People

To The Editor:

In the political commentary in the last issue of The Elm, Monte gave us two reasons to support mili tary aid for the Contras. The first was in favor of peace. Ortega cannot be trusted, and is "militarily aggressive." Reagan is also militarily aggressive, but when he invades another nation, it is to protect our country's vital interests. We intend to crush any foothold an enemy gains near our border, and this is exactly what Daniel Ortega was trying to do it Honduras. Neither of these leaders was justified. I am not arguing for Ortega: just against blind jingoism and a communist phobia. The idea of supplying arms to the Contras so they can reach a peace agreement is a ridiculous one. An end to the hostilities would leave the Contras without a reason for existence They want, and require, a victory,

Letters continued on page 9

Correction In the March 29 issue of The Elm, Carter Boatner's opinion piece on the Shoremen's chance of winning the Hobart game was mistakenly replaced by an article by Bill Beekman that appeared in the lacrosse supplement that issue. The Elm regrets the error.

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM! Excellent income! Details, send self-addressed, stamped envelop WEST, Box 5877, Hillaide, N

Truth Be Beauty and Beauty, Difficulty

Washington College? Perhaps a more appropriate way to begin is to establish what is encompassed in the term "Fine Arts." The fine arts are one main branch of a liberal arts education. This branch includes painting, sculpture, music, dance, theater and even poetry. Fine art is concerned primarily with the creation of anything beautiful. Now, I have come to the crux of the matter. If fine art is the creation of beautiful objects, the facilities at WC turn this creation into a struggle a fitful fight with adverse conditions

First, the facilities of the Fine Art Departments can be qualified as acceptable, tolerable or ridiculously inadequate. As a potential theater major, I find Tawes Theater, the experimental theater and the preparatory rooms (green room, women's dress etc.) comparable, if not competitive, with those of other small colleges. The drama majors do complain about insufficient lighting equipment and campus/community support. But, part of being involved in theater is creating the best production from what materials are available, discouraging. For example, the Dance De- a Liberal Arts college can be put on the "back partment has a fine studio for rehearsal but lacks a decent flooring for performance. The Music Department also makes a tireless effort to produce quality, creative groups with its equally acceptable facilities. However, it would be nice if the department could provide more practice rooms and perhaps even a separate rehearsal area near the fine arts building for members of campus bands to practice without fear of disturbing others or theft.

However, the WC Art Department is a completely different and desperate situation. Its facilities are the worst on campus. WC artists are forced to work in close, cramped quarters with insufficient lighting and equipment. The area which needs the most attention is being sadly ignored by both the administration and the students. Many art majors are completely disappointed with the recent decisions to create a new academic building and possibly a new field house. Indeed, the additions and renovations to Dunning Hall are greatly needed and appreciated, but I do not burner" until the burden of other resposibili-

In addition to the problems with facilities, the Fine Art Departments are faced with staffing problems. There are only two applied/studio art professors and only one art

Jacque Collins

his or her limitations and thus the students are apt to lack a complete or even basic knowledge of all art forms. The English Department has professors who are specifically trained in literature from the 18th century or in creative writing, and I feel that every department should have professors who are as equally trained so that a few professors need not be overburdened

The same holds true for the other departments. Three drama professors, one who is is a freshman intending to major in drama.

In addition, WC has only one dance instructor who doubles as a physical education professor. The Music Department fairs the best in this area as they have six active professors and teachers who offer a variety of music principles in performance, theory and history. The staffing and curriculum problem are what anger me above all else. How can a liberal arts college lack depth? Why are there six physical education professors teaching seventeen physical education courses and only eight theater courses optimistically taught by three professors? For some reason, am beginning to believe that WC has lost focus, that the college has changed its priorities. If WC wants to continue to attract intelligent, talented, creative students, it needs to reevaluate these priorities. An art is a skill acquired by experience, study or observation. I deserve, we all deserve an equal chance to improve our own individual art, whether it be drama, chemistry or athletics. Jacque Collins

What is the status of the fine arts at Washington College?

Jennifer Casev Chesapeake City, MD Freshman

"I know nothing about it. I have no "I feel more money should be used opinion

Jennifer Jefferson Milton, DE Freshman

to improve the present situation because we are a liberal arts college, it is important to have a strong Fine Arts Dept."

Andy Chandler Boston, Mass. Sophomore

Fine Arts through an increase in about the Fine Arts if they were funding thereby attracting more better supported by the College." prospective majors."

Dawn Schmidt Planet K.

"The college should strengthen the "Jennifer Casey would know more

Steve Brody Vincentown, New Jersey Junior

"Fine Arts is a necessity at a Liberal arts College Without them the title of Liberal Arts would not be valid. More funds should be given to the Fine Arts."

Campus Voices

by David Johnson

College Kept Promise of Arts Activity

me make my decision to attend Washington College was the promise that this college would offer to me an artistic experiance above and beyond the classroom. Unlike most of its promises, the College has kept this one.

That is not to say that the College itself is always responsibly inclined towards artistic endeaver. For instance, the visual arts department possesses some dedicated students who are talented and knowledgeable in their particular field of interest. However, the College, for some inexplicable reason, seems unwilling to invest any serious amount of time, money, or interest to help maintain the department and encourage the students involved. Thank God most of the art majors on this campus have enough self-confidence and self-respect to survive without the College's encouragement.

The music department, on the other hand, is flourishing. Courses are offered ranging from music theory, to music history, to ap-

so often, as well as concerts offered by the Early Music Consort And of course there is the Concert Series, which offers five outstanding concerts every year. In this case, where so much is being offered, it is solely up to the student to decide to what extent he or she is willing to become involved with the music department.

> Todd Karr

The drama department offers a wide the technical and theoretical aspects of drama. of the energy and enthusiasm for writing Every semester, plays are performed by the department, very often directed by students themselves. This semester alone has seen four plays performed, and a fifth is in the works. The students involved take their work mands the theatre makes. It is a credit to this school and the students themselves that the type of professionalism required to make a show work well exists on this campus. The proof is demonstrated quite clearly in the number of outstanding plays that I have seen since first coming to Washington College

And then there are the writers, and there is quite a large number of them. Although nominally falling under the guidance of the English department, the writers are an inde pendent bunch who have somehow managed to accomplish great things in their art. The creative writing course, which is offered every fall to freshmen, and every spring to range of courses, from acting and directing to upperclassmen is the core from which much enringe

Every semester, the Writer's Union allocates funds to produce literary magazines which showcase student talent. The Broadsides series provides a chance for poets and Every so often, a notable scholar, poet or writer is invited to the campus to share with students their knowledge and skill in the field of writing. The students themselves scrutinize quite carefully each other's works and the works of great writers, allowing subtlety and maturity to breathe life into their own writing. It is fascinating to watch the excellent works of such a private art form develop from a sense of community. When I think of the status of fine arts on this campus, I realize that for such a small school, there is an overwhelming amount of activity. This can only reflect that student interest and participation in the fine arts is high, and if the energy and enthusiasm for art, music, drama, or writing maintains its current level, then Washington College cannot help to make quite a name for itself as a true liberal arts school. Junior Todd Karr is majoring in English and minoring in music.

From the President

The following is a letter sent to parents and students inform-ing them of a fee increase:

Dear Student and Parent

Washington College's Board of Visitors and Governors has voted to adopt an operating budget for the 1988-89 academic year that will include increases in tuition and fees of $890, dormitory rental of $205 and full board charges of $225. This means that next year's tuition will total $9, 600, with dormitory and full board totalling $4,000. I would like the opportunity to explain why our College continues to be a good investment for the student and parent

Washington College sets its student charges as the final act of balancing the annual budget. The Board and I have worked diligently to limit next year's spending without compromising the quality of the College's academic and campus life. Please note that despite these necessary increases, Washington College students will continue to pay only two of every three dollars of operating cost. Our charges will remain in the lowest quintile of selective liberal arts colleges in the United States.

It is also important to recognize that dollars to implement the Campus Master Plan (including construction of the Decker Science Center, Casey Academic Resource Center, and the new Studio Arts Center plus renovations to Hodson Hall, William Smith Hall, and several residence halls) as well as other enhancements to our grounds and physical plant are not paid from student fees. These capital projects are supported by the generous gifts of foundations, Board members, alumni, parents and other friends of Washington College. Annual giving, which goes directly into the College budget, has more than quadrupled over the past five years. Our endowment, nearly doubled during this period, also provides earnings for scholarships and faculty salaries.

Today, there is a partnership to support excellence at Wash ington College. By prudent use of our student fees, we make it possible to recruit and retain a first-rate faculty and to offer academic programs of distinction. On the other hand, gifts from our many friends and benefactors make it possible to build a strong and certain future for the College. This partnership between fees and gifts, between consumer and benefactor, is the foundation of independent higher education in America. It has served the best interests of Washington College for more than two centuries. On behalf of my fellow trustees. I wish to thank you for your understanding and support.

Douglass Cater President, Washington College

| (with totals)         | · Twition           | Room & Board       |
|-----------------------|---------------------|--------------------|
| Hood                  | $9,770             | $5,230            |
| $15,000              |                     |                    |
| Johns Hopkins         | 12,000              | 4,830              |
| 16,830                | the horizon defined | and State on the e |
| Goucher The Admin and | 9,975               | 4,760              |
| 14.735                |                     |                    |
| St. Johns             | 11,000              | 3,700              |
| 14,700                |                     |                    |
| Washington            | 9,600               | 4,000              |
| 13.600                |                     |                    |
| Western Maryland      | not yet ava         | itable             |
|                       |                     |                    |

TUITION ROOM AND BOARD FEES

| HELPS FUND:                | DOES NOT FUND:       |
|----------------------------|----------------------|
| faculty and administrative | building renovations | instructional costs library arbletica

master plan new construction other capital costs enident activities correct mainte

FOOT OF CANNON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD, 21620

301-778-3568

The Story Of The Hynson-Ringgold House

Nathaniel Hynson, Jr., up to and social events that took place in the by Tony Caligiuri When Elizabeth Duvall through its purchase by Washing- house. According to Meredith Da ton College in 1944. The book tells not only of vies, Director of College Relations wrote "This grand old house has had a long and very busy life", she was not exaggerating. In her one hundred page book entitled "The 'This grand old house has had Story of the Hynson-Ringgold House" which is expected to be in print by this May, Duvall tells a lively and colorful history of the house and its long list of owners and occupants of the structure itself from the time

once occupied it. Included in this commencement this May. The book covers the history collection of history are records of births and deaths, epitaphs, and the lot was purchased in 1735 by tales of the different private and

Mom's Cookie Jar

I would like to thank everyone who applied for positions with the Summer Conference Program. We had the largest college student re-

Filling the available positions has not been an easy task, because the applicants were all so qualified "Congratulations" to all of you who have been hired to work for the WCDS Summer Conference Program, this summer. Welcome aboard!!

Upcoming events scheduled for this month are:

Anril 13 - MANAGER'S SPOT-LIGHT DINNER April 20 - SPRING BUFFET April 27 - INTERNATIONAL BUFFET

Food throwing in the Main Dining Room is occurring, again. This is just to let you know your fellow students are not accepting this type of behavior and are turning in names. Those students whos names have been given to the Supervisor will receive a fine of $25.00 for their misconduct.

Are you finding it easier to get at the items in the center of the salad bar, now that the new rack has been installed? Thanks to the efforts of Mr. Howard Schultz, those once hard to reach center items are now reachable

Many thanks to the S.G.A. Food Service Committee for conducting the Dining Survey last Tuesday week. To those of you who took the time to participate in the survey, "Thank You." Your input is instrumental in enabling the W.C.D.S. to improve its service to you, our valned clients

Amily Bakery and Coffee Shop Donuts, French Loaves & Italian Breads Rolls, Pies, Cookies, ccial Occasion Cakes On Orde

Breaklast 5 A.M.-11 A.M. Lunch - Soups & Sandwiche Kent Plaza, Chestertown 778,9998

In closing, I would like to leave you with a suggestion. If any of you are interested in shedding a few pounds, try cleaning your room. You'll burn up 100 extra calories by cleaning for half an

until MOM week

the house, but of the families who the book is expected to be in print by manuscript is presently prepared for production. The layout of the book was done using the Page Maker® system on the Apple Macintosh® by sonhomore Erin Mumby

The book's production came about as the result of several efforts including the Office of Public Relations and the Friends of the Hynson Ringgold House, although Duvall began the actual manuscript at a much earlier date. According to Libby Cater, several local architects and historians were involved in the discovery of many points of historical interest. Cater praised the efforts next of Duvall by explaining that "the book is an accurate and interesting history of the house while it has enough about the families to make it a lively jewel."

News Briefs

a long and very busy life"

Gibson Ave. Closes

Campus Avenue was closed to traffic. Vice President of Finance Gene Hessey explained that because the town decided to use concrete barriers instead of wood, there were delays in aquiring the materials. Hessey said that al- Gibson Avenue.

After a week of delays, the though the delay in closing the street intersection of Gibson Avenue and will not affect the construction schedule of the Academic Resource Center, other delays in contracting and bidding will prevent construction from beginning before June. Over the next several weeks, power and water lines will be placed across

Housing Approved

Governors approved a plan by the administration to build a series of Hessey. The units will be conmodular housing units to combat structed by Cardinal Industries the present housing crunch on cam- over the summer on the north side pus. The units, which will contain of the baseball diamond. Addififty singles, will be ready for occu- tional details are forthcoming.

The Board of Visitors and pancy by fall of 1988, according to

Gender Bias Debate Scheduled

A debate on the question of students from the "Perspectives gender bias in thinking will be held Male/Female" class, an honors phi in the O'Neill Literary House next losophy and anthropology course Thursday night at 7:30 p.m. Sponsored by Phi Sigma Tau (the philosophy honor society) and the de- members. Refreshments will be bate club, the debate will include

Professors Kevin Brien and Jeanette Sherbondy are coaching the team

Mustard Seed Bookshop English Literature
 American Literature

· Children's Books 778-6707 Von - Thurs 11 AM to 3 PM Fri 11 AM to 4:30 PM 312A Park Row Chestertown Md.

Word Processing Servicesreports, term papers, etc.prompt, accurate, reasonable. Call Cathy 348-2126

Halstead Announces Retirement Plans

to a close, so does the career of one postage stamps. I want to pursue of its professors. After twenty-five these hobbies with a greater gusto. years here at Washington College as And I also hope to do things I have a European History professor, Dr. never quite found time to do in the Charles Halstead is retiring. The fol- past: sailing endlessly on the Bay, lowing questions were posed to. Halstead, and his reactions are as

WHY DID YOU DECIDE TO RETIRE?

Early retirement seems to be the trend these days, especially in the business community. I perceived several years ago that the present College administration was interested in such a scheme, although I realized that the policy was embryonic. However, two years ago, a colleague sought and obtained early retirement. I know that if I had the requisite vintage and sufficient funds in several ammenities. I was a great candidate. And so it proved! Washington College made a generous settlement with me as an inducement. Early retirement can be advantageous to an institution. It offers the hope of bringing fresh ideas and energies into an academic faculty and it may save this College money Some people look forward to retirement. Others do not. I have al ways found the notion appealing. I can add, in frankness, that as I have grown older, I seem to possess less stamina and, perhaps, a lower level of resourcefulness, flexibility and

WHAT DO YOU PLAN TO DO NOW? I've lots of plans up my sleeve, I used to be an inveterate fisherman and gardener. I want to get back to EXPERIENCES HERE BEEN happiness has been due to the fact especially the teaching of history, is gion. Great!

becoming a gourmet cook and baker, learning to play a musical instrument and golf. I want to continue traveling abroad.(I have seen forty countries but want to visit

I'm going to retain my "research library" for a while. I have an obligation to prepare an article for a setting, yet have easy access to sev-

I came to Washington College in 1963. It seemed irresistible at the time. I was correctly assured that my course load and student enrollments would be substantially lower then they had been at the institution in Pennsylvannia where I was teaching. The College library's holdings impressed me. So did the faculty and the administrative personnel who met with me as interviewers. Chestertown and the region were seductive, of course, especially since I knew I might live in a rural committed to my work here. I have nonetheless tried to give my life other dimensions and other meanings. Putting it in another way, I didn't want the College to be the entire focus of my life. That is, I didn't want the Cillege to "consume" me. I don't think it has ANY OTHER THOUGHTS

OR COMMENTS? Teaching is a truly noble profession. For a college or university professor, it offers numerous rewards:

the chance to help open and shape minds, particularly the minds of

'Teaching is truly a noble profession... my experiences at Washington College have been quite rewarding."

scholarly journal in France this summer and I'll probably do a fair amount of writing thereafter. (I am a scheduled participant in a panel at American Historical Association's convention next December.) But I really am retiring! If you think I'm kidding, check my office this summer. The books in it will be gone. And they won't be at my house. I'm selling my "working

I plan to stay in the Chestertown community for a while. A singular advantage of this is that I can still bask in the warmth of the friendships I have established at the College and elsewhere over the past quarter of a century

WHEN AND WHY DID YOU COME TO WASHINGTON COLLEGE? HAVE YOUR

eral cities. I might add that I underwent a demotion from the rank of associate professor to that of assistant professor, as part of my transition! I was secretly a trifle bitter about this but I knew that my advancement to associate professor had been, probably, too swift and too casually conducted in the other school

My experiences at Washington College have been quite rewarding. The physical plant has grown to an astounding degree in twenty-five years. And the curriculum and faculty have been enlarged. There are more students and they presumably enjoy far more opportunitiesto achieve fulfillment here. Of course, no institution is perfect, and I have sustained an occasional blow, perhaps justifiable. I think part of my future community leaders and. hopefully, to enhance our national culture. There is time, often as much as four months a year, in which a teacher can contemplate, research creatively and draw closer to the intellectual discipline to which one is committed. On the other hand, the financial rewards in the teaching profession are absurdly low. This situation, I might add, is due to much more than the operations of the marketplace for labor. It is also a reflection of our national system of values. I wish I knew what the answer to this problem is. It could be unionization, a thought that does not repel me after having worked thirtythree years for a salary about the same as that of a clerk in the post full impact of instruction upon a student, at present or in the future. I suppose we can only hope we enrich the lives or those who pass through Washington College. The physician usually has a knowledge of the success or failure of his ministrations That means a lot.

DO YOU HAVE ANY REAL REGRETS ABOUT YOUR TIME HERE AT WASHING-TON COLLEGE?

Washington College is like hundreds of other small colleges in this country. I had taught at two of these institutions before I laid eyes on Chestertown. Virtually all these academic facilities are starved for funds and this grim reality weakens their effectiveness and their capacity to fulfill their stated and other goals. Laboring in such an environment creates a whole range of frustrations among teachers.

To be more specific, I wish I had had access to more funds for building the College Library's collection of books, periodicals and audiovisual materials

With regard to my faculty collegues, I regret the fact that there is not more intellectual interaction between us. There is a truly remarkable reservoir of information in the minds of this College's teachers, but, in my opinion, we have never drawn sufficiently upon each other's knowledge, wisdom and specialized skills. I envy the Department of Philosophy which has begun to lunch together several times a month. I've been told they discuss not only departmental mat-Another feature of teaching, ters, but also philosophy and reli-

INF Treaty Could Help Control Nuclear Genie

Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev signed the historic Intermediate-Range Nuclear Force (INF) Treaty on December 8, 1987, when General Secretary Gorbachev was in Washington for the third summit between the two world leaders. The treaty was view hearings. The U.S. Senate, because it has the Constitutional

political commentary

reviewing the treaty intensely. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved the treaty with an overwhelming vote of 17-2, on March 30. This means it is now ready to be reviewed and voted on by the full Senate, which must approve the treaty with a twothirds majority of the current one hundred elected senators. The only opposition is from any relationship form with the Soviet Union even if the result is the elimination of a complete class of nuclear weapons. They have fought, unsuccessfully, to attach "killer" approved in the Soviet Union after brief re- amendments to the treaty to keep it from being approved. Helm's trust the Reagan trusted even with the intrusive verification measures that are the cornerstone of the treaty. It is agreed by many that the Russians cannot be trusted, but it is felt that the measures in this treaty make trust a nonissue. The Western Europeans, from the West Germans to the British, support the treaty and they are the ones who have to live with it. This American soil. The treaty does little to alter a hand full of radical conservatives led by treaty effectively takes away the NATO nu-Jesse Helms (R-NC), who do not want to see clear deterrent excluding British and French independent nuclear forces. Their agreement was what allowed the treaty to be negotiated in the first place. The Western Europeans do expect increased conventional support to counteract the loss of the security provided by the INF

President Reagan will be in Moscow for group is unwilling to an unprecedented fourth summit meeting on May 29. The President and General Secretary will probably not be signing a Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START) as some, including the Soviets had hoped but it is predicted that the INF Treaty will be approved by the Senate so that they can have a formal ratifica-The INF Treaty alone tion exchange. amounts to very little. It eliminates a small number of missiles that would never strike the nuclear balance, though the Soviets gave up almost double the number of missiles the United States gave up. The treaty is good for three reasons. First, as stated earlier, it climinates a whole class of nuclear weapons. Second, it is the first reduction of nuclear weapons in our Nuclear Age. Third, the INF Treaty marks the beginning of a possible nuclear reduction to within sane limits. This means the potential end of Mutually Assured Destruction (MAD), and also the potential end to the fear of the first strike capability. Conventional weapons do enough damage without the aid of the totally destructive nature of nuclear weapons entiring the battlefield. The Nuclear genie can never be put back in the bottle but at least it can be controlled by our not requesting that final wish. Monte F. Bourjaily, IV

The Washington College Republicans

Sophie Kerr Prize

The Sophie Kerr Prize is awarded to the senior deemed by the Sophie Kerr Committee to have "the best ability and promise for future fulfillment in the field of literary endeavor." Studente wishing to submit samples of their writing are invited to do so Submissions may be poetry, fiction or non-fiction. All submission Should be in the hands of the committee by May 2 and may be brought to the office of the Acting Chairman of the English depart ment, Bennett Lamond, for convenience and safekeeping. Manu scripts will be returned to their owners after commencement. All graduating seniors are eligible recipients of the award.

The accounting for the Birthday Ball is completed and ...

Congratulations to the Freshman Class for raising a record $7,000 for the Washington College Scholarship Fund!

Special "thanks" to officers Geoff Nelson, Beth Karukas, Kristy Schminger, and Jeff Hopkins and to mural artist Thomas Andrews. from the Alumni Office

The Incorrigibles: A New Band Debuts

by Jennifer M. Harrison

"Getting together was no big deal," says Todd Deitelbaum, drummer of The Incorrigibles, a band of Washington College students that performed for the first time last night. "We just started out jamming together and then it went from there, musicians do this - they get together and jam."

Practicing since September, there guitarist and vocals; Jeff Cessna, bass guitar; Todd Karr, keyboards and vocals; Todd Winkler remembers the beginning, "Jeff and I decided to live together this year.

low."

it'd be fun., a drummer kind of dropped into our midst and how often do you get a guitarist, that all know each other?"

would get together ... get together and have fun: it was a fortunate coincidence that Deitelbaum lived on the same hall as Winkler and Cessna. Then

Todd [Deitelbaum] came and knocked on our door and said, 'hey, I'm a drummer,' and I'd known Deanna for a while, as a singer in my church at = Winkler continues, "It seemed like grounds in music, starting from a young age. Deitelbaum jokes, "I wanted to do something to irritate my parents, so I started playing drums. My mother told me I couldn't set them up because it would ruin her floors - she said set up your drums outside. It was twenty below

Cessna, who started learning guitar are five Incorrigibles - Ken Winkler, lead on an upright bass in the sixth grade. "I started the electric bass in the twelfth grade, much to the chagrin of my neighbor Mr. Doolittle, who Deitelbaum, drums and Deanna Houle, doesn'tlike loud amplifiers." He now plays for the Washington College Jazz Band.

Deitelbaum's beginnings were in junior high school where he played in the and we figured that he and Todd [Karr] and I school band, moved on to a snare drum in a "The trio just wanted to marching band and then to a drum and bugle

"I wanted to do something to irritate my parents, so I started playing drums. My mother told me I couldn't set them up because it would ruin her floors -

she said set up your drums outside. It was twenty be-corps. He first played a drum set in a jazz band, "Jazz is in my roots," he says "both Jeff and I started out in jazz bands."

years of classical piano lessons that he took on and off since childhood, Todd

Karr became part of his first band last year. "I bought a keyboard last year, and my roommate at the time, Jim Doran, asked me to play in his band Shy At Parties. Tagreed to do it. But, their music was more guitar and bass oriented - and a bass player, a drummer and a keyboardist not keyboards. I decided it was in my best interest and their best interest to quit the band."

This year, in The Incorrigibles, Karr The Incorrigibles picked it up from has found greater satisfaction in his musical here, practicing every Tuesday and Thursday exploits. Because of his expertise in music in the basement of Caroline House. They theory, and his attempts to learn to play the were most interested in instrumentals, not acoustic guitar, Karr has brought a valuable vocals, so in the beginning they played skill to the band. He writes original songs. without microphones. "The goal was to Winkler also started out on the piano.

concentrates on melodies instead of chords. clude in their performances next year. His parents urged him to choose another was more accessible and more fun. "Any- those stylistic experiments" says Karr. It

body can learn three chards and play almost any folk or heavy metal song ever written Presently taking voice lessons at Washington College, fresh man Deanna Houle began singing in high school musicals and madrigal choir Herinter. est in the band "just started one day, we were singing in the room and Ken said 'why don't you come down and sing with us?"" In reference to voice lessons, and the mucic che cinge in choir she says "That kind of singing-that's what I'm trained for, so it's easier but this is more fun.

The Incorrigibles look at their future together pragmatically. "I want to go as far as we can go ... Once we buy our own jet we're set," says Winkler. "Let's risk it all, who cares about living," Karr jokes. Cessna states "I'd like to play in the band for as long as I can but I don't think we can make a living at it." And Houle notes, "It's kind of hard to say because three of the mem bers are graduating next year. we're just getting ourselves settled... but next year defi-With no real leader, the band tries to make decisions democratically. "Whoever whines and pouts the most [makes the decisions], Karrjokes, And Winkler adds. "Everybody's input is taken into consideration, although Todd [Karr] did pick our name."

The musical repetoire of The Incorrigibles is about as varied as the group is," says Houle. They play songs ranging from Steppenwolf to U2 to parts of movie soundtracks like Rocky Horror Picture Show.

Not satisfied with just imitating the artists they

All five musicians have strong back- Bored with an instrument he believed to be admire, The Incorrigibles are working on limiting because in its beginning stages it several original songs which they hope to in-

"Tuesday Morning" a song written instrument. He chose the guitar because it by Karr is new wave, progressive, "one of

Keyboardist Todd Karr was loing on the cake for The Incorrigibles, adding a new dimension to their music. starts out with a laid back beat and slowly gets punk, but Karr adds that it was "not written with a drummer in mind." More songs by Karr are in the works.

> Cessna is writing another song, this one without a title, that he describes as a mellow acoustic piece. At present, it does not have lyrics. "I can't seem to come up with any lyrics for it," he notes. "It just came from some chords I was playing around with on the

With their next performance at the Literary House Picnic on April 16th, the band looks forward to getting a reaction from the students. Cessna says, "We have a wide enough variety of music to please everyone. Houle adds "We're going to have fun with it it will probably show through, and we hope they'll have fun, too,"

Winkler concludes with "We're bigger than Jesus."

Don't miss The Incorrigibles, performing at the Literary House on April 16th at noon

On the lead guitar, Ken Winkler is joined by his roommate and bass guitarist, Jeff Cess Originating with the two guitar players, and Todd Karr on keyboards, the musiclans developed a five person band.

S.G.A. Elections '88

A Special Supplement to The Elm

photos by Michele Balzé

Bob Caldwell

Before I submit my proposal on what I will do if elected, I would like to tell the student body what I have already done that helps qualify me for the job of S.G.A. President. I am a resident assistant, Vice-president of the Lambda Fraternity, organizer of the Career Night/Major Series, Maryland Gen-

In my three years experience in the SGA at WC I have come to observe that there are few prerequsites for the job of president. First and foremost the President must have a working knowledge of the infrastructure of the SGA and College. Without this, the task of organizing and managing the complex array of issues that confront the President cannot be done effectively. Also, the President must be responsive to student opinions and feedback. Perhaps their most vital role is as the liason between students and the college governing bodies. The President need not search out and create issues in a vain effort to echo the student's concerns. Existing concerns and obligations should consume the majority of a responsible President's time. This is not to rule out change and evolution, this is always welcome. However, a President must be able to dedicate oneself to the most basic issues that confront the SGA.

The job of President, is by in large, a manager's job. An effective President is capable of organizing and co-ordinating the Executive council so as to effectively and eral Assembly Intern, 3 year honor roll stu- Pegasus, and the Film Series must receive dent, S.G.A. Athletic committee representative, tour guide, and participant in numerous other clubs and organizations on campus.

In my three years at W. C. I have seen people come and go, I've heard ideas thought of and later forgotten, and I've witnessed a student body overrun by an administration that has developed a wonderful 30 million dollar Master Plan for the school, and left the students out in the cold. Less than 10% of this money has been specifically earmarked for student use and facilities. With this action, the students have been effectively left out of their own future. I remind you that students are the sole reason for the existence of this institution. If I am elected, the student body can be guaranteed that we will put the students back into the future of this College.

To show what needs to be done I will offer here a network of ideas that are absolutely necessary to the natural evolution of our student government and the best interests of the student body

The Student Government and various ident organizations, such as The Elm, The prudently deal with the multitude of issues that will inevitably confront them. These issues range from tuition increases to parking availability on the campus. These issues have and will include such items as the fate of the SWS, the raising of the Student Activities Fee, the fate of housing for the campus greek organizations as well as the role of the SCC on the WC campus. This is just an example of a few of the extraordinary issues that confront the SGA today. Beyond this lies the daily routine which is essential for the proper running of the SGA. These items include such things as presiding over the senate to the funding of various campus organizations to ensuring student participation in the variety of campus committes

The Executive Council functions are where a good president earns a reputation. This body includes the offices of SCC chairman, the Social Chairman, as well as the other tradi tional SGA offices. The president is also responsible for overseeing the operation of these offices. Effectively consolidating and managing the exchange of ideas in order to more money from student activities fees. This would allow a burden to be lifted from the S.G.A. Budget and simultaneously increase the club funding on campus. Naturally, this means a wider range of diverse all-campus events and correspondingly, an increase in student participation. The S.G.A. must initiate a comprehensive scheduling plan in conjunction with the administration to examine the effect of the scheduling of athletic, social, and other events on academic life of students. This would naturally include a study to see what could be done to increase attendance at events such as Convocation, William James Forum, and the Concert Series. Student Government must also utilize the Program Council, a group already initiated by the Greek Council, to oversee the scheduling and diversity of social functions

The students body must become more actively involved in the long range planning on campus. Issues such as increased enrollment, tuition hikes, and academic programs continued on page 8

make proper decisions based on the student's interest is, and should be, the most important concern. The resolution of pertinent student es, as well as the division of labor within the SGA, all take place within the executive council and it's associated bodies. The performance of the executive council is a crucial determinant in everyday student life. Obviously, the President is only as effective as the Executive Council.

The President also makes a reputation on the type of social atmosphere the administration provides. This may or may not be good. that is not certain. What is certain is that the social life at WC requires constant attention and augmentation. Both the students and the College benefit from an active social environ ment. If it requires the construction of more facilities or greater allocation of funds to reach these ends, then so be it. Presidents must be responsible to the electorate and they must constantly be aware of student concerns. The first avenue of approach for students confronted with an the President's Office. In this canacity the

FOR PRESIDENT

The President Shall: -preside over Senate meetings appoint Senate committees and their chairmen, and fill vacancies in those committees, on College committees, and in the Senate with the approval of the Senate; -serve as a non-voting representative to the Board of Visitors and Governors, at faculty meetings, and to the Alumni Council;

-give greetings from the student body at Fall and Spring Convocations;

-oversee cooperation between the Senate, SAB, and SCC

Perry Finney

President serves as a bridge between the student body and the College's governing bodies. As the President forms this bridge, he/she must be cognizant of the true wishes and continued on page 8

Steve Leary

The President of the Student Government Association has many responsibilities. Besides presiding over Senate meetings, office on a number of programs appointing Senate committees and their chairmen, the President must first and fore- part, has presented a proposal to have the most represent the students of Washington College. In my three years here at school, I increase not only the S.G.A.'s budget, but The have met many students and have a wide Elms' and The Pegusus' as well. Doing this variety of friends. I believe this variety will allow me to best represent all of the students further cater to all student needs. Lisa Buckey of Washington College and served as a Senator for my dorms. In my fraternity Council, one that can be relied sophomore year I also served as the sopho- upon. One that has brought you the Fall more class treasurer. This year as a junior I am concert and will be bringing you, on April 9, treasurer of the S.G.A. and also hold the the double band Spring Concert. Along with Resident Assistant position for Cecil House. Bob Caldwell, I am currently working to Through this constant building of responsibil- include the students of Washington College in ity, I have worked closely with the student body, Student Affairs and the President's

The Executive Board, of which I am a Student Activities Fee increased. This would would enable next year's organizations to and I. representing the S.G.A., have built a My first and second year I was elected, strong working relationship with the Inter-> the Master Plan of the school We have submitted a proposal to build a "Party Barn." so called for lack of a better name. The main idea behind this is to have a place to hold social functions, without being stuck in a small basement or destroying a dorm. This will be run by the students, for the students.

The problems are evident in the S.G.A. Traditionally the executive officers of the S.G.A. change drastically every year. This leads to instability. We need officers who have been on the executive board, and have dealt with both the students and the administration. We also need students with experience that are able to see problems that have risen in the past and can deal with them effectively. Experience is needed.

The Student Conduct Council has also had trouble working with the students towards what should be a common goal, campus unity. The S.C.C. should not take an interest where it is not needed. I agree that fighting should be severely punished, but incidents that do not involve the school should be kept independent of the school. The S.G. A. must also be more readily available to the students it serves. Vote for people that are easily reachable. We must bring the student back into Student Government Asso-

Certain aspects of the college have gone untouched by the school for years. The Art

The Elm's 1988 Election Guide aims at informing the student electorate of the qualifications and platforms emic year. All candidates

The Line 1 1988 Election Guide aims at informing the student electronic of the qualifications and platfore running for Student Government Association offices for the upcoming academic year. All candidate to tubulitated exacts before the announced deadline are listed alphabetically by office.

The Elm wreps students to read this guide carefully to evaluate the platforms of those running for officiallo hope you will further your knowledge of the issues in this year's race by attending the candidate speech school produced and the students of the students

For Vice President

The Vice President Shall: -chair the SAB and preside over meetings of that body:

-chair the Senate in the event of the absence of the President:

-serve as vice chairman of the All-Campus Judiciary and as a member of the Academic Council me I should tell you what to expect if I am elected to the office of SGA Vice-President. According to the Student Government Constitution, as Vice-President my responsibilities would include chairing the Student Academic Board, serving as vice chairman of the All-Campus Judiciary, and serving as a member of the Academic Council. As well as fulfilling the responsibilities of the office I would do my best to increase the dialogue between the students and the administration.

Other than that I don't really know what the student body would want me to do. For that reason I would be quite open to suggestion. If there are complaints about the school or the operations of the SGA I would certainly Experience: SGA Senator 1987-88. SGA Elections Committee, 1987-February 1988. Lecture Series Committee, 1987-1988. SGA Food Service Committee, 1988. Editor-inchief, Washington College Pegasus; 1987, 1988. Board of Publications 1986-88. Peer Advisor, Fall 1987. Executive Council of the International Relations Club, 1985-88, Writers Union 1988. Debating Club 1986-88. Phi Sigma Tau (National Honor Society for Phi-

I suppose that if I want anyone to vote for see what I could do to resolve the problems. It shouldn't be too hard for you to express you feelings: the SGA meetings are open, and anyone who has something to say is more than welcome to attend. The school isn't that big; so if you see me you could stop me and tell me what is on your mind - you could even do that if I'm not elected

What I want to do is encourage the student body to express their feelings about the school. I believe that this is an activity which would ultimately enhance the students ability to influence the way that the school is run. After all W.C. is our school. So-if you want to elect someone who would do the job and listen to what you've got to say - vote for me

Platform: In my opinion, the most important executive office of the SGA is the Vice-Presidency. It is the duty of the Vice-President to act as a liason between the students and the administration in regard to the student's academic concerns. The Vice-President serves on a number of very important committees, such as the Academic Council, Student Academic Board (as Chairman), and the All-Campus Judiciary

Arian Rayanbakhsh

The qualifications necessary to fullfill these roles are many. Not only must the Vice-President be experienced and have a keen awareness of student concerns, he (she) must also be able to effectively articulate them. I strongly believe that I am clearly the best choice for this position.

Washington College students elect Student Government Association officers. Ideally, they elect the most experienced, worthy candidates, since the elected officers are responsible to the student body. Last spring the student body elected their leaders with the desire to see a united, efficient SGA, and they

The 1987-88 term has been a building vear for the SGA. The leaders have earned the respect of the administrators, the faculty, and the student body. This respect has lead to the unification of the students on issues such as student representation on college committees, Sophomore Writing Seminar, and Student Activities Fee. This respect also lays the foundation for future student governments to carry on the new tradition of student activism on campus. The leaders of next year's SGA must be aware of where we have been, where we are, and where we should be going. The 1988-89 term cannot afford to lose the progress that has been made The next few years at Washington College are going to bring a great number of changes, many of which will alter the face of Washington College permanently. The one thing that will remain certain is that the students must be included in these plans for the future of our college. Student leaders should not be content to have the present needs of students-such as expanded parking-addressed five years down the road. As Student

Rob Albers

I have served as a Senator of the SGA and on its various committees. From this vantage point, I have had the opportunity to familarize myself with the concerns of students and the resources available to implement positive changes. These include the discussions about the Sophomore Writing Seminar and the complex discussions involving the allocation of Student Fees

My work on completing the Pegasus has shown my commitment to working for the betterment of life at Washington College. I have been able to complete the book on time and within financial, and staff limits. The vearbook is as effective as it can be - within those limits - and I will make the Vice-Presidency as effective as it can be

From this position as Pegasus editor and as SGA Senator, I have seen how college committees operate. This knowledge is valu able to accomplishing what you set out to do. Also, I have been impressed with a strong impresssion of the importance of having student representatives on the many faculty committees. We have an unique opportunity to make this college everything we pay forand more - through the use of these committees. It is important that we elect a Vice-President that will continue to put this opportunity to its best use. I will uphold this unique tradition and work to improve it for future generations of students.

My work on the Pegasus proves that when I give myself to a project I give it my best. That is what you will receive should you elect me to serve in this vital position

Government Vice President, I would work to have the present needs of the students addressed when they need it, not when they are

While everyone would agree that the Master Plan addresses the needs of the students of the future very nicely, it does little to solve these problems for the students presently at WC. Having three years' experience in the SGA, I know that one criterion desired in any leader is the ability to grasp the needs of the students. To do so, as Vice President, I would propose to reinstate the "Student continued on page 9

Rachel Smith

Rob Caldwell - President

continued from page 7

like the Sophomore Writing Seminar must be actively researched and responsibly commented upon by students. We must examine the possibilities for new dormitories, parking lots, campus landscaping, athletic fields, and a Sports Field House

A new student "Party Barn" must be erected to relieve the dormitories of their social use and offer a sturdy alternative to the Coffee House. This necessary idea envisions a student building with a concrete floor with drains, solid walls and a high ceiling, and obviously bathrooms for males and females. It would have a bar with soda and beer taps, a lit stage, and a usable storage area. Its location to be worth-while

Perry Finney — President

continued from page 7

desires of their constituencies The SGA is beginning to regain respect and clout on the WC campus. To continue on this course the student body needs a President that is capable of accurately representing the stu dents, and doing it in a manner that exhibits concern and responsibility on their behalf; for these are the essential ingredients in doing the president's job right. It is not imagination or creativity (although these attributes certainly do help) that allows one to do this job well. It is responsibility, dedication, concern and experience that makes a person into a good president

I believe my record in the SGA this year alone speaks for itself. Whether fighting in the Academic Council to renovate the SWS, first time

continued from page 7 house is in sad shape. The new lab that neighbors the building is a step in the right direction, but we need more. More of the school must be directed to the student. The students make up the quality of the institution, so lets please the student. Lights out over the tennis courts and the paddle courts would be a great step in keeping the students busy. It seems as if the administration believes all we do is drink and fight. If they would offer us other alternatives, such as night paddle and night tennis, then some of the tension built up during the week could easily be let off. The basketball nets put up behind Cecil are a great idea, but, again, we must continue to press the ernment.

removed from the main campus for student functions and it could also service athletic events with facilities

The Coffee House is the Washington College Student Center and it should be run by students. It should house Student Govern ment and other club offices, the ride board and other central student needs in a central location for easy access. The "Party Bam" will take the beer parties and large bands out of the C-House and allow it to become the student center and meeting place it should be and only the occasional location of parties. Students must oversee these changes for them lobbying for a Student Activities Fee increase or dutifully fullfilling the everyday needs of the SGA and specifically the VP's office, I believe that I have carried out my duties faithfully and in the best interest of the students of WC

The issues do not require searching out, they surround us. Responsibility and experience is what is required to deal with them,. because the way we deal with these issues today is the way we live in the future. If you can't imagine it any different at WC, then don't look twice, but the future at WC begins now. Decisions are being made and plans implemented that mold the class of 1989 as well as the class of 2000. Wrong decisions cannot be corrected. Vote for a President who has the experience and insight to make them right the

Steve Leary — President school for more.

My ideas have come from a great interaction with the whole student body, and I plan on continuing this relationship. Most of the ideas that come up, arise during the school year. Next year if elected I will listen and open up the S.G.A. for everyone. I would continue to present ideas such as the "Party Barn," and basketball nets, and lights for tennis and paddle. I would go forth with my proposals of better working areas for art students, and bringing student organizations more money. We must receive what we deserve. Let's bring the student back into the Student Gov-

Letters To The Editor

continued from page 2 not an agreement. Both sides are fought them, Communism would now concerned more about whether the present government will continue than whether the bloodshed will continue. This does not allow a compromise. The second justification for support the fighting, and suggest Nicaragua, our boys can stay here at home, where its safe. This assumes that if the Contras could no longer fight the Sandinistas, we would have to fight them. If NO ONE Career Night/ flourish, right in our own back yard. Actually, if no one fought the Sandinistas, they could use the money they are now pouring into the war to get their country back on its feet, and improve the living condi-Contraaid negates the first one. The tions of its citizens. We don't know W.C. Republicans now seem to if this is what they would really do; we haven't ever given them the that if we continue the killing in chance. It seems we should be less concerned with this country's ideology, and more concerned with its human lives

Major Series A Success

On behalf of Lambda President special thanks to the Career Devel Pat Youngs and the entire Lambda Pi Delta Fraternity, I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who supported our Career Night/Major Series. We have received a great deal of positive feedback from students who partici- our problems. The Career Develop-Chas. Foster pated on the fine presentations ment staff is a valuable resource to pleased to have the support of Presi- opportunities they can offer. dent and Mrs. Cater, the Dean's Office, student Affairs, and Jeff Chaffin

We wish to express our very opment office. Dr. Linda Cades, Mrs. Vicky Sawyer, and Dawn Baker worked extremely hard to make this function successful. As always these ladies took time out of their busy schedules to help us with given by the Alumni and faculty this campus and we hope that more who spoke. We were also very students will take advantage of the Bob Caldwell

Vice-president Lambda Pi Delta

Write op-ed for The Elm. Next week's question: "Should Washington College establish a radio station?" Length is approximately 500 words. Articles due Tuesday nights at 7:00 p.m. Call Andrea Kehoe, 778-9839, if interested in writing opinion pieces.

The Social Chairman Shall: Be responsible for all social activities sponsored by the Senate and shall take the necessary steps to coordinate these activities on campus. He shall also chair the Social Committee

As I will be completing my sophomore year as Dorm Senator of Queen Anne at the close of this semester. I have chosen to avail myself to the position of Social Chairman of the Student Government Association because I feel that I have gained the needed experience to meet the challenge of providing a diverse

The task that the social chairmen at Washington College must face is in direct correlation with those tasks of the administration, student deans, and security hounds.

and creative social calendar for the entire playa vital role in the success of our academic. Through my involvement in the S.G.A. this student body. While I am well aware that this lives. Because I think that achieving this past year I have seen what works and what task is extremely time consuming, I feel that I am in a position to make it one of my primary Social Chairman to see what I, along with the couldn't, what we as students need and what importances. As a junior, I will not be immediately responsible for fulfilling a senior oblimix gation or preparing for post graduation careers. Thus, I will have more time to devote to my position as social chairman.

I am not denying that academics and career goals are the major purposes for our undergraduate stay here at Washington College. Without a doubt these challenges should rank highest among our college list of priorities. However, with proper planning and careful consideration, our social outlets can college by state and local authorities. The college is in a precarious situation because it deals directly with the student body and with into successful parties; parties that can safely satisfy both the student and the college. Thus the social chairmen must be the middle men

Buckey and the current SGA. We feel that this past year has been successful. For example,

Tawes in the fall, the comedy show, the up-pavilion

between the students and administration.

integration is important, I am running for

I plan to further prepare myself for serving as Social Chairman through my involvement in the planning of the S.G.A. Luau scheduled for later this month. This school function will be yet another addition to my working at other S.G.A. functions this year as well as the experiences that I previously gained in high school.

I truly believe that a Social Chairman is one of the students greatest representatives.

we are from different areas. This will provide us with access to a variety of shows and bands.

Bill Bertles: I have been elected Theta the authorities. While the college has ac-Chi social chairman for the past four semes cepted this responsibility, it has turned over to ters. Being social chairman in a frat has led to the SGA the additional responsibility of being working relationship with student affairs the group which channels the attitudes of the and the administration, one that as social student body and transforms these attitudes chairman is needed prior to attaining office. As well I am currently social chairman on the 1988 SGA Luau; a position which gives me great insight into how the SGA works and how to make it work. I will be a senior major-As Social Chairmen we hope to continue ing in political science and minoring in his-

the success that has been enjoyed by Lisa Tiffany Quell: As Bill's running partner, I also feel a good relationship between the SGA and Greek sponsored party behind students and administration regarding the social aspect of college is imperative. I will coming Heineken party on Saturday with two also be a senior majoring in political science. bands outside, and the 1988 SGA Luau at the Besides student government experience in high school, I feel after three years I have a good knowledge of what students would like their government to accomplish. I have also individual. We become easier to reach for realized the Washington College student body is one with a variety of tastes and we will feel for the college as a whole. Furthermore, do our best to satisfy everyone.

doesn't, what could be possible and what input of my peers, can do about achieving this we don't. Through my experience and effort, our 1988-89 social life can only get better.

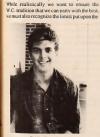

Mary Beth Enright

Don't forget to vote

Wednesday

during lunch and dinner in the dining hall

Bill Bertles

comment and critisism, and can get a better Rachel Smith — Vice President

We believe that a male/female chairmen.

ship is able to accomplish more than an

continued from page &

State of the College". Several years ago the SGA prepared a statement citing student problems and the solutions they desired. In prepared. I suggest that, in light of the master" plans for the future, we will need to have written proof of our demands along with That is what SGA is about our proposed answers.

Having identified the concerns of the students, a good officer should be able to take those concerns and propose workable soluons. For example, in the Fall of 1985, when was Clerk of the Student Judicial Board, the SIB sent a letter to the administrators citing an reident in which a student was charged with andalism after driving on the lawn of the Cullen Complex he student claimed he was ruble to get cl enough to his dorm to inload his poss ons and, thus, had driven on the lawn

College build an access road from the fire seen the importance of initiating programs entrance in back of Hodson Hall to the front of and seeing them through, in spite of outside the Cullen and Kent dorms so as to facilitate pressure. students' loading and unloading their ve hicles. Today, the Master Plan calls for the ecent years however, this report has not been construction of such a roadway in the next five

A student problem. A student solution.

My experiences as former President of the Class of 1989, member of the Senate, and Chairman of the Conduct Screening Board have taught me how to get things done for Washington College. As class President, in organizing the most successful Blood Drive in the history of Washington College (signing up over 250 donors for the American Red Cross), I learned that Washington College tudents are willing to work together approached rationally. As a member of the student judicial system for three years (first as SJB proposed that the Clerk, then as Juror, then as Chairman) I have to do the job and to do it well.

Students have a right to expect that their officers are reliable, responsible, and dedicated. Without these qualities, any SGA officer will be unable to accurately represent the needs of the students. I can. Students have a right to expect that their officers understand the structure of the College. Without this basic knowlege, the officer will be unable to function in the necessary forums. I can. Students have a right to expect that their officers will get things done. I will. My past performance at Washington College has shown that I possess each of the attributes, and I am eager to put them to further use as your Student Government Vice President. In the next few days, you are likely to hear and read many promises, the only promises I make are

Fourth Annual Kent Athletic Club Biathlon

Location: Wilmer Park Lelia Hynson Pavilion S. Queen St.

Saturday, April 16, 1988 10:00 a m

Run 6.2 m., Bike 24.8m. Entry Fee Team - $20 Individual - $10 Prizes Awarded 778-3148

The Sophie Kerr Committee and the National Endowment for the Arts present

Writers in Residence

JAMESTATE MARIANNE BORUCH

- April 13 - April 15, 1988 -

Tate and Boruch: Reading from their Poetry Wednesday, April 13, 1988 8:00 p.m. Authors and Mentors: A Conversation between James Tate and Marianne Boruch Thursday, April 14, 1988 4:00 p.m.

Sophie Kerr Room Clifton M. Miller Library

WASHINGTON COLLEGE

$Serving \, Award \, Winning \, Special \, Meals$

by Kelly Lamoree

tradition over the years is the rejoiced beforehand! practice of denigrating the dining hall and the food served.

I find this difficult to believe.

But to get down to the Best Thing about the Dining Hall is of precludes eating only one or two especially on the Eastern Shore? course the food. Not the food itself, dishes! It must be very severe, so the observing one's faith.

informing us of those wonderful there? Certainly not. People here I guess) be allergic to The Good One of the pet pastimes on things before the fact: had we want only fancy meals and a fancy. Earth's food? How can there be an campus that has remained a known, oh how we could have dining room. Forget about allegy to milk, how can there be a

Then there are those fickle

But the Dining Hall no doubt realizes that there are people with granted, the person must ask one of these unutterable and bizarre problems/whims. That's why they have crab and chili nights.

If people were that upset, they would say so on SGA food surveys and on that paragon of communication arts, The Napkin Board.

So, since there aren't too many interested people, the Menu People felt perfectly free to serve not one but two meated entreés on Fridays during Lent, and at another time served two pork dishes on the same night during a time when Jewish students were observing their holidays.

Clearly the Dining Hall felt that if there was so much of a big deal about these holidays there would have been a big deal made out of it. do on taco night, or oriental night, or and in any case the offended students could have asked for

for one on the day(s) in question. asking a Dining Hall Person - back negative reaction to anything dairy? in the Private Dining Room - for How can there be an allergy to And imagine a dietary need that shellfish or other seafoods, > involved: letters from everyone but the Pope and President Reagan, and people who call themselves interrogations in front of anyone vegetarians... else in the vicinity,

> > Once (and if) the special meal is the charming line servers for it at mealtime (no comment there

Special Meals involve asking

Usually there is a big hassle

Thereupon said Special Student can go and enjoy his/her Special Meal in the beautifully decorated dining hall.

Isn't the world - as observed

off the cuff

in the heavenly heights of the Dining Hall - a wonderful place? When people who follow their faith and cater to their dietary concerns are labelled as Special. When a major religion is ignored - except when there is an excuse to have a theme dinner (Anyone remember something called Easter Dinner? Christmas Dinner? There was probably even a Valentine's Day

If these award winning meals are really getting better, how about making it so that people other than atheists can eat them. I'm sure the Special Meals which the Special Students eat are just as award winning and getting better as the Regular Meals which Regular Students eat; perhaps one could not subject these Special Students to such roughshod treatment: i.e. by not making them grovel in order to hat the author may in fact be in the all of us lucky patrons not only one, and cereal. Yum, Yum. but two charming entreés. Clearly the management feels guarters right). Why this is so, when that its menus are carefully selected and that anyone who cannot find something to like from either must have something wrong with them. Such people, despite the fact that they must be incredibly difficult to please, nevertheless can still be accomodated via a Special Meal prepared for them when they can or more to the point will not-eat uted Expanded and Improved that day's meal.

everage Bar (How this can be so These incredibly difficult people are so-called difficult shough there is diet sprite — is because of religious reasons and/or explicable), not to mention the health reasons. Notable examples of appeing and ever so comfortable this phenomenon are the laws of the Jewish religion that forbid the These facets of the dining hall eating of pork and other foods, and nd the peculiar fascination they lif for some are well known. But forbid the eating of meat on certain e must think of all the delicious days. Recently, religious holidays igs that we weren't told about, in both religions occurred which tenjoy: the flags, the smiling line feature special rules about eating. ners, and the easy and fun ID process of attempting such a tere are such wholesome topics as de Sophomore Writing Seminar, perdiscuss, is beyond me.

tire, and the Alcohol Policy to Be that as it may, people do find ings wrong within the environs of odson Hall. There was the much aled Salad Bar, the somewhat hen there is no orange soda -

The Reader is three

Well, there aren't that many The Dining Hall Press Office students here who follow their faith et be reprimanded for not so closely as to follow its rules, are

Imagine a student who cannot eat spicy or greasy food: oh what to

"What of the student who is - is this actually possible? - allergic to some food? Can it be? Food comes from the earth, from the sea! how can people from the earth (or the sea, I guess) be allergic to The Good Earth's food?"

What of the student who is - is this Special Meals (since they are can people from the earth (or the sea, Right?

actually possible? - allergic to Special Students). These special some food? Can it be? Food comes students should get Special meals tenets of Christian religion that from the earth, from the seal how because of their Special needs.

Restaurant Now Accepting Applications for All Positons

> Call 778-2100 FOE

Finn Fur Feather

424 Bayside Ave. Rock Hall, Md 639-7454

Friday and Saturday Nights

live piano performance by MickeyDulin

Prime Rib Special

Stam Drug Co. 215 High Street

Chestertown. Maryland 778-3030

 Greeting Cards

 Cosmetics · Russell Stover

Candy • Soda

Fountain

horemen Netters Rise to Number O

forever etched in the memories of nine athletes, their coach, and fifwhich the top two teams in the nation fought for the priveleged position of Number One

Even though their athletic contest was played on a spring afternoon, the sport, contrary to popular belief was not the provincial sport of lacrosse. It was the international sport of tennis

March 27th was the day that Washington College would defeat Washington & Lee University, 5-4, thus becoming the top ranked team in Division III tennis for the first time in the school's history.

March 27, 1988 will be a day David Marshall gave the team an norly 2.0 lead

Gewer defeated 3rd ranked teen local supporters. It was a day in Robert Haley, 6-1,6-4, while thews stopped freshman ace Scott Flippin-Read, 6-1, 6-3, to make the score 2-1; however, sophomore All-

American Peter Maller's straight set

"Flippin-Read ripped a forehand volley into the chest of McLeod to win the game, the set, and the match. Washington College had now become the Number One team in the nation."

Marshall halted John Morris' 12 match win streak while extending his own record to 7-0. Marshall downed the big serve and volleyer

Wyman called the national office in Chicago to find out why. The answert to get ranked, he had beat searching for ranked teams who would add WC to their schedule. He found a willing Emery, Washington willing to build with him. He found

Ross Coleman and David Marshall program, bringing people they very happy at Maryland..." or "A friend of my friend knows someone in Mexico who's a hell of a tennis player and would love to go to col-

produced a team with both an international and a winning flavor. The result: a victory over nationally ranked Emory, 7-2, and close matches with nationally ranked

Swarthmore (3-6) and Washington

lege in the States.

knew or knew of to the school.

and in turn they helped to build the T've got a friend who's not

The hard work and cooperation

& Lee, and Swarthmore.

So he got on the phone again,

Then Wyman needed recruits ranked teams

7-5, 6-3.

triumph over Bill Meadows put the Shoremen up 3-1.

Washington & Lee's Chris Wiman and David McLeod knotted

the team score at at 3-3 by narrowly

6, 6-4) and Claudio Gonzales (5-7, 6.2 6.2)

Washington regained the lead 4-3, as the reliable duo of Gonzales and Marshall crushed Haley and Meadows, 6-0, 6-4. The Generals countered with a win at #2 doubles, as Wiman and Morris downed Phoebus and Maller. Now, with the top two net powers in the nation deadlocked at 4-4, the stage was set for the countries two ton doubles teams to duel for the ranking of Number One. Gewer and Flippin-Read, ranked #2, cruised to a 6-2 first set

But Washington & Lee's top ington College had now become set, 6-1. Once again, the two tea were even, now with only one

The Generals quickly bri Gewer's serve to open the final WC's freshman-sophomore cre nation were not to be dea though, as they immediately be back to get back on serve.

Tied at 3-3, Gewer and Fline Read fought off two break point go up 4-3, and then won a cre service break to lead 5-3. Up 3-2 in the ninth game, B pin-Read ripped a forehand vo into the chest of McLeod to win game, the set, and the match. Wa ranked tandem of Matthews and Number One team in the nation

Wyman and Co. Yield True National Powerhouse

by Bill Beekman

The weather turned cold on Wednesday, and the wind blew strong in the wrong direction, as fifth ranked Swarthmore spoiled the Washington College Men's Tennis team's new Number One ranking.

But the loss and the cold cannot change this team. They have arrived as a powerhouse in the international sport of tennis

Not long ago, the Shoremen netters were nothing in the national scene. They played a weak schedule: they were an easy 9-0 romp for a good team, such as Swarthmore who had to play its best to temporarily set back the 1988 team. But things began to change.

The miracle, however, was not started by a fairy godmother, but by a dentist

Local dentist and tennis freak Fred Wyman now in his fifth season as WC's Men's Tennis Coach. inherited a team which was far from Prime Time. The men played only eleven matches against mostly noname teams. They played only in the Spring, avoiding valuable seasoning time in the Fall, and started working out just before the opening of the season. For a team that just wanted to play the game, that was all right; but for a team that wanted to become a powerhouse, changes had to be made

"I knew that this was going to be hard coming in," says Wyman, but I decided, 'if I'm going to do it, I'm going to do it right, schedule which wasn't snickered at by the men who rank the nation's top teams. Doing it right meant finding players capable of winning matches against tougher competition A Spring Trip, which has beof his own friends, Enrique Leal and come an annual event, a final record of 17-7, and a final ranking of third in the region marked Wyman's first year. But when the national rankings came out in May, Washington College was nowhere to be found among the top eight team's in the nation for Washington College's first trip to the nationals The friend of a friend in Mexico turned out to be Claudio Gonzales, and he later brought some Alejandro Hernandez, to keep the Tennis Team growing, Hernandez blossomed into an All-American and WC's #1 player last year.

A friend from South Carolina

Doing it right meant devising a & Lee (4-5), and a final ranking nothing-but henever loses, 'I said that's good enough for me.'

The two from South Africa are alwart Peter Maller and this year #1 player, Larry Gewer. Adding to that a trasnsfer from Towson State, Rich Phoebus, the team was now strong and deep, and ready to make return performances at the Tennis Nationals in 1986 and 1987. Losing Coleman and Hernandez at the end of 1987, Wyman needed a blue chip recruitment to fill

"We realize that tennis does not have the tradition here like lacrosse, but we are maturing rapidly, building that tradition. Ouite frankly, though, nothing has been done for us...we've gone from nothing to Number One in the nation, vet our tennis facilities have not changed since the day I arrived."

and some advice from a South Afri- the gap, and he found it in Texan can college player led Wyman to Scott Flippin-Read. The freshman gamble on some players he'd never een before

"I asked this guy from South Africa who I didn't know if he had ever heard of Peter Maller or Larry Gewer. It turns out that they were best friends. When he described sensation plays at number two for the Shoremen, and matches with Gewer in doubles to form a top team in the nation in doubles play.

Next year the Shoremen will have the large shoes of Gonzales, Marshall, and Phoebus to replace, Larry as someone who 'looks like but they will still have their number one and two players in sopho Gewer and freshman Flippin-B

Despite the loss to number Swarthmore and probable in from number one in the ranks the Shoreman should return to nationals this year to go for National Championship.

The nationals are an int exhausting experience, with tained challanges from the took ers in the nation. They are a tennis fan's haven. Wins own tionally ranked Principia, Rig guarantee Wyman and Compa return trip "I don't know if we can wi National Championship," Wyman. "The competition is damn tough. But playing for hi ber One is something that well always look back on, that our can tell their grandkids. 'Hey, played for the Number One Cole Tennis team in the nation."

"We realize that tennisdoes have the tradition here like lact but we are maturing rapidly, bi ing that tradition. Quite fra though, nothing has been down us...we've gone from nothing Number One in the nation, ye tennis facilities have not char since the day I arrived.' With a national champ in an international sport a dis possibility, that should chart Washington College is enough to want to hold on good thing that it has got. Imbalance of up just like the weather. The team is now 7-2 and has beaten some of its bigger rivals, while showing they can win any way and that the whole roster can come through with steady play to win games

Balanced by Don Steels

Most recently, on Wednes day, the team schooled Galludet in sweeping a double header. Eric Becker pitched a four hitter to pick up the win in an 18-4 schallacking of Galludet. Joe Mcaleer and Matt Almony had homeruns in the contest, and four and three RBI's re spectively. Almony was also one of four players to score two runs. Robert Kuhn led the team by scoring Shoremen baseball is heating three runs. The game was virtually over by the third inning with the Shoremen leading 11-1.

The second game saw much of the same, with the Shoremen bettering Galludet, 12-2. Dave Puskar pitched an excellent game, tossing a three hitter. Tom Auvil scored three runs and had two Scott Jones also had knocked in two runs. A seven run third inning put the game in the men's hands

Saturday, the Shoremen met first game with a two-hitter in a 6-1 loss, but the Shoremen's power awakened in the second game to provide a 10-8 win

Effort Produces an

Alan Lerch hit a three run home run that travelled more than 400 feet Chris Rosfelder also hit a blast that knocked in two runs. Joe Mcaleer knocked in Dave Puskar and Scott Jones in the first inning. By the end of the second inning the Shoremen were up 7-1, and they held on for the Showing that they can either MAC rival Haverford twice. Haver- pitch or hit when needed, the Shore- erun that started the Shoremen on to ford dominated the Shoremen in the men have won a 17-16 slugfest and two 4-2 pitching duels

On the Wednesday before Easter, the squad split a double header with Western Maryland. The team lost the first fame 10-2. Chris Long was the losing pitcher, as Western Maryland tallied six runs in the first two innings. Chip Bailey and Chris Rosfelder knocked in the Shoremen's only runs.

Dave Puskar threw another superb game to avoid the sweep, holding Wastern Maryland to just five hits in a 4-2 victory. Tom Auvil hit a towering second inning homvictory. When the game was sixth 2-2, the Shoremen through with wo crucial ruts the game on .co

Earlier that week, the St men swept Drew, 9-6, 4-2, with Becker and Frank Davis picki

The regular season of provided lots of fireworks and 16 win. Alan Lerch knockedit runs, including an eigh double that scored Chris Rose Frank 1 to win the game. picked up the win. Tom Art counted for six runs with RBI's and three runs scored

Statesmen Continue To Rule Shoremen

by Joe Van Name

Splitting their last two games identical 15-9 scores, the Men's erosse Team now stands at 5-4, ith three of the losses coming at the eds of Division I foes. The other oss came Saturday in Geneva, New ak, to Hobart, winner of the Divion III lacrosse crown for the last eight years irday March 26th on rain soaked whiler field, with Washington facgoff against Rochester Institute of chnology (RIT), a perennial wer in Division III. At the opening it looked as if ir experience and battled back to se within a couple of goals at the nd of the third quarter. But in the orth quarter, the Shoremen pulled way to finish with a 15-9 win.

Shoremen would walk away th an easy win, but RIT proved

Kibler field starting at 1:30 pm. Crew Opens Strong at LaSalle

by Carter Boatner

The Men's and Women's Crew on started two weekends ago on Schuylkill river at the LaSalle tational Regattta

Under nearly ideal rowing conon three of the eight boats enterdemerged with easy victories er opposing crews from LaSalle versity, Franklin & Marshall Joseph's, Stocton State, Temple ersity, and Hobart College.

In the first race of the day the n's Varsity and Junior Varsity ht were placed in the same event compete against the Varsity sys from F&M, Stocton state, St. ph's and LaSalle. The Varsity a fared well, easily winning the their perennial rival, the Hobart one win in four tries, but that isn't Statesmen. Like always, the game about to stop Coach Diane Guinan's was tight, with the final decision not women from trying and growing coming untill the fourth quarter.

The first quarter ended in a 4-4 tie and at the half WC trailed by 2 goals, 7-5. The Statesmen poured it on in the second half, though, outscoring the Shoremen by four The first game took place on goals to give the Statesmen the six point win

> Leading the Shoremen in scoring were Paul Miller with 4 goals and Paul Deniken with a pair. Mike McGuane added three assists for Goalie Mugsy Mickum finished the day with 23 saves and they had nice stick work." helped to keep the Shoremen in the fifth ranked Salisbury State on race, several boatlengths ahead of F& M's Varsity. The JV eight, racing in a Varsity race, finished only 4 tenths of a second. The Women's Novice eight, won their race by an large margin in front of two boats from LaSalle and one from St. Joseph's, 19 seconds in front of the second place finisher.

At the end of the day WC entered two fours made up of members in the Varsity Eight. Against La-Salle, Stocton State, and F & M, the two WC fours finished 1-2.

The final WC boat to compete was the Men's Novice eight. Coached by Don Chattilier the boat finished third, eight seconds behind the winner.

Women Laxters Drop Three of Four

by Bill Beekman

The Easter bunny brought the April 2nd the Shoreman faced Shorewomen Lacrosse team only together as a team.

We "continue to take one game at a time. The schedule is tough and we will be underdogs in each game...

Tuesday, the Shorewomen's record fell to 1-6 at the hands off Western Maryland, a semi-finalist in the 1987 NCAA playoffs

"Of the major characteristics we had trouble dealing with," says Guinan, "was their speed. They were very quick and strong. That was compounded by the fact that

Sarah Coste netted two of the Shorewomen's three goals, Beth Tomorrow the Shoremen face Matthews added the other goal, assisted by Amy Tichel, in WC's 15-3

> Saturday against Dickenson provided as similar result, although a much closer score.

The Shorewomen played strongly in the first half, which ended with the home team up 3-2. strongly, missing second place by WC and Dickenson exchanged goals to start the second half, but then Dickenson netted five unanswered goals to pull away from the Shorewomen over the next ten minutes, until Lee Anne Ledwin broke the drought with 4:17 left in regulation. It was too little too late, however, as WC fell, 8-5.

"In the second half we seemed to lose something. We weren't as sharp - physically speaking - and then we lost our edge mentally. I think that our biggest problem is that we struggle with our throws and plications."

Building takes time, as Shorewomen are learning

thews, and Tiehel recorded assists.

Against Franklin and Marshall, e six freshmen and new goalie on the field for WC fell 16-5. The scoring punch was again provided by Matthews, with three goals, and Coste, with the other two. Erin O'Neal played well on defense.

The brightest spot in the young catches, which leads to other com- team's season came in a 9-8 win

Coste scored two goals, and second half goals by Matthews and Tiehel, Ledwin, and Mary Beth three goals by Coste, with Tiehel Enright each had one. Ledwin, Mat- and Angela Henneman adding one apiece, the Shoremen survived a slow start post their first win. "I was excited because we were able to straighten out some things we have been struggling with," says Guinan. "The defense covered their responsibilities better and worked as a unit. The attack has started to move the ball better. Linda Anders did a tremendous job as goalie and over Widener. Buoyed by four goals kept 22 shots out of the goal." WC Rumble on Occoquan

George Mason and by Carter Boatner

Following a strong season ng performance in Philadelthe Men's and Women's crews elled south to the George Mason tational regatta on the Occo-reservoir in Virginia. For many rowers on the WC v. the Occoquan harbors many asant memories of poor rowconditions. Last Saturday, ever, novices and veterans alike greeted with ideal rowing ions for the first collegiate held on the Occoquan this year. emperatures were in the 80's since there was no tide to row st, the course was a good deal ous week The first race of the day in ed the Women's Novice Eight onfident coming off a strong the previous week. This week, et, they would be up against tition unlike that faced in hlphia. The race included did finish in front of George Mason. m Mary Washington, Hopkins, George Washingini George Mason.

than it was in Philadelphia the hitially, the race appeared to be contest between WC and pack and finish with a convincing lead in the time of 7:08.20, ahead of second place WC at 7:26.10. Although WC lost, the women finished well ahead of the other crews.

Next it was up to the Men's Novice Eight to correct upon their previous week's performance where on three strokes oarsmen caught "crabs."

In this race the men faced competition from George Washington and Johns Hopkins. George Washington finished well ahead of all others, with WC coming in third. The two crews fighting it out for second were uncertain of the results until the official times were re-

This race came down to the line between Johns Hopkins and WC, with Johns Hopkins clinching a close second place finish in the time of 6:33.70, seven tenths of a second out in front of third place WC, which

The Men's JV Eight was paired off with an inexperienced crew from George Mason that had three rowers and a coxswain who started rowing the time of 7:28. just a month and a half ago. The WC Note that the tween WC and just a month and a half ago. The WC The Women's Novechourage proves the rate out was a month and a half ago. The WC The Women's Novechourage proves the reason behind in take to the road none more, venturthat he crew from George Ma Bonne with Stewart Barroll, a 1972 with the women coming in second rushing their slides (rowing at a rate ing to Laffayette, Pennsylvania.

nearby Middleton Delaware Novices or no novices, the George Mason crew managed a well rowed race. The two hoats came off the line at a rate of 38 strokes per minute as the WC crew pulled ahead for the first 600 meters. Then, as the two crews settled their stroke rate to an even 32 strokes per minute, the George Mason crew began to pull ahead and by the 1000 meter mark the two crews were even with George Mason beginning to pull George Mason never let up as they finished first with the time of 6:17.80, a flat 9 seconds ahead of the WC. 6 man substitute Stewart Barroll is currently training for the upcoming Masters Nationals which are to be held in August.

Immediately following the Novice races was the Women's Varsity Four race, where WC met George Mason, Franklin and Marshall, Mary Washington, and Johns Hopkins. The WC crew finished fifth in the time of 8:42.93, with George Mason prevailing in the time of 7:54.80. The final race of the day was the much anticipated showdown be tween the varsity crews of WC and George Mason. Also in this race were George Washington, and Franklin & Marshall.

The Women's Novice four race

George Mason's top oarsman suffered a slight injury to his feathering hand (the hand which rotates the oar for release out of the water). and developed blood poisoning. He was withdrawn from the race and a port side rower was put in his place as another rower was moved up from a lower boat to replace him. This was a questionable move which led many people to doubt the overall ability of the George Mason crew to row a competitive race

Both the WC and George Mason crews got off to an even start with the stroke rates even at about 40-41 strokes per minute. After twenty strokes the two crews then settled their rates. WC to a 36 and George Mason to a 31.

Stroke Sean Kennedy mentioned afterwards that he wanted to son was able to pull away from the gradute of St. Andrews School in out of three in the time of 8:46.30, to high forcing the stroke to main well behind F & M who finished in tain a high rate). The two crew were well out in front of the rest but still neck and neck among themselves.

With Mason at a relatively low rate they were able to provide more pressure through the water while maintaining a low rate prior to the sprint at the end off the race when the crews raise their stroke rates in an attempt to overcome the opposing crews. With the two crews still even at about 1700 meters, George Mason raised their rate to a 38 and were able to break away from WC to win in the time of 5:49.50, just slightly in front of WC who finished in 5:53,10.

Kennedy said that with a lower rate perhaps the results would have been different. The entire crew noted that they need to improve their racing skills and develop their confidence under racing conditions

The two crew will have out at ne another in two weeks for what promises to be blood bath. This time the race will take place on the Chester River and a crucial factor could be a strong showing a support by WC students, facult and friends. Tommorrow, the WC crews

Hockey Heaven is Here and Go Caps Go Calgary Flames facing the Los Wingswillrunright.overthe Maple thing happen. Unfortunatly, for Devils will be awed by their firm

Each year, the National Hockey League Playoffs bring much more excitement than the games that run during the regular season. This is true in spite of the fact that 16 of the league's 21 teams make it to the post-season tourna-

CHIP SHOTS

Right now, the playoff selection system seems unfair. Take the Pittsburgh Penguins and the New York Rangers. Both of those teams finished above .500 and failed to make the Patrick Division Playoffs. Compare that with the St. Louis Blues, Chicago Blackhawks, and Toronto Maple Leafs, teams that finished below .500 and still qualified for the Norris Division Play-

But enough of that. The playoff system is a topic for someone else to write about. Here are some of the things to look forward to in each of the divisional playoff series. (Note: this piece was written on Wednesday Afternoon, before any playoff game had been played.) In the Smythe Division, the two matchups are the Edmonton Oilers against the Winnipeg Jets, and the

Stanley Cup Champion Edmonton Oilers should have no trouble surpassing the Jets. It should be noted that the Winnipeg Jets have not beaten the Oilers in any playoff game since 1982, a 0-15 drought This trend will continue, with the Oilers easily surpassing the Jets in four, maybe five, quick and painless

The other series in the divison, between Calgary and Los Angeles will be more exciting only to see how many goals that the powerful Flames can score on the worst defense in the playoffs. Led by Hakan Loob, Mike and Rookie Joe Bullard Nieuwendyk, the Flames scored the most goals in the league this year. Meanwhile, the King's goaltending trio of Roland Melanson, Glenn Healy, and Bob Janecyk allowed the most goals in the league. The Flames should easily join the Oilers as winners in the first round of the Smythe Division Playoffs

Moving east, the Norris Division always provides exciting (and often bad) hockey and long, penalty-filled games. This year's playoff series pits the divison Champion Detroit Red Wings against the Toronto Maple Laughs (uh... Leafs) and the St. Louis Blues against Chicago. I believe that the Red

With or without their captain, Steve Yzerman, the Red Wings combination of a potent offense and solid defense will be more than John Brophy's Maple Leafs can handle.

For excitement in this division, keep your eye on the series between the Chicago and St. Louis. These rivals play exciting games that tend to go well into the third period without being decided. The key matchup between the two teams will be between Chicago's Denis Savard and Bernie Federko of St. Louis. Savard will have the better series and the Blackhawks should win, but not before the teams have played seven close and exciting contests. In the Adams Divison, the series between Montreal and Hartford is another mismatch. All-around, Montreal is the best team in the league, with an offense that is underrated and a defense that is superior to Calgary's

Bobby Smith, Mats Naslund, and Stephanie Richer are the Canadiens leaders on offense and the goaltending duo of Brian Hayward and Patrick Roy won the Jennings Trophy as the team that gave up the least number of goals over the course of the season. Meanwhile, last year's division winner Hartford had a disappointing regular season and will be trying to make some-

Angeles Kings. The defending Leafs and into the Divison Final. Whalers fans, they will not fair all playoff game in many years and that well. Look for Montreal to sween the series The other Adams Divison pair matches the Boston Bruins against the Buffalo Sabres. The Bruins have escaped a first round matchup against their playoff nemeisis, the Canadians. But, the Bruins will meet up with the Montreal team in the division final. I do not think that the inconsistent Buffalo Sabres will be able to seriously threaten the The Bruins under new Bruing coach Terry O'Reilly (who should win the Jack Adams Award as the Coach of the Year), are playing similar to the way the did when Bobby Orr led the team to Stanley Cups in the early 70's. This Bruins team has the potential to go far, if they can get around Montreal.

vear...maybe not. By far, the most exciting divisonal race of the season took place in the Patrick Divison. At season's end, only seven points separated the First Place New York Islanders and the last place Pittsburgh Penguins (Mario Lemieux, Pittsburgh's star center, will be the first player ever to win the League's Most Valuable Player and finish on a last place team). This will bode well for the

Maybe this could be the upcoming playoff games. The surprising New Jersey against the Islanders. However over the course of seven games the Pat Lafontaine led New York lt. landers should emerge from the series as the winners. As for the other series, the Washington Capitals and the Phila delphia Flyers, I can say one thin the games will be very exciting Anyone who knows me will realize that I can not be objective looking at this series. I have been Capitals fan since Yvon Labre, Bri Sirois, Guy Charron, and Gen Meehan, and Peter Scamurra playe for the Red, White and Blue, Will this Capital spirit running deep brings rise to an acute dislike of orange and black, the Philadelphi

Flyers, the "Broad Street Bullies." That dislike, I admit, has real-never left me I always feel that this is the year that the Washington Capitals will able to realize the promise that he surrounded the team. Who know Maybe this year, the Capitals wi win the Cup. Maybe they will le in the first round to the Flyers.

All I am certain of is: In support the team, regardless of it outcome. That is the mark of the true fan. So, let some bias sh through my text... LET'S CAPSIII

WE DO IT LIKE YOU'D DO IT. Burger King* is putting the heat on the competition

with flame-broiled burgers. Cooked the way you like to cook them at home. And for the same reason, taste.

OPPER SANDWICH HEN YOU BUY ONE.

offer ourses APRIL 16, 1988

BURGER KING RTS 213 & 291

701 WASHINGTON AVENUE CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620

SPECIALOFFER

SPECIAL OFFER FOR ONLY $0.99

offer expres APRIL 25, 1988

STORE ADDRESSIES BURGER KING RTS 213 & 291

701 WASHINGTON AVENUE CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620

WE DO IT

I IKE YOU'D DOIT

Tate, Boruch to Speak on the Art of Writing

by Susan Di Leo

The poet James Tate once told Contemporary Authors: "Poets are almost pathologically concerned with good and evil, beauty and ugliness: they do not want to let it pass by, either extreme, unnoticed. I suppose poets have a greater sense of evil than most people; they want to order the world for a moment, freeze it, understand it. And the language, of course, is the music which can make the painful truths palpable. It's fear, it's love, love of intensity, obsession with beauty... Mentors project, Tate and his protégé Marianne Boruch will be the Writers-in-Residence on cameight volumes of poetry since 1967. mong them The Oblivion Ha-Ha, Absences, Hints to Pilgrims, Viper Jazz, Riven Doggeries, Constant book, The Lost Pilot, won the Yale Series of Younger Poets Award.

abook of short prose, Hottentot Ossaary, and has contributed to eminent publications such as the Paris Review, Poetry, and The New Yorker

Julian Moynahan reviewed Tate's Absences in the New York Times Book Review in 1972: '[Tate] is an impressive writer Latin America, Canada and the growth is through that deliberate extinction of personality which T.S. Eliot once called for as the indispensible means of turning a man or woman of powerful personality into a writer of powerful means. He sonal poets look a little sick. They pus.' could do worse than read Tate and shape up.

Tate has lived in Sweden, Ireand, and Spain, as well as the versity of Massachusetts.

Marianne Boruch attended the University of Illinois-Urbana, where she received her Bachelor's degree in Science and received her Master's degree in Fine Arts at the University of Massachusetts Amherst. Boruch has taught American literature at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and received Artist-in-Residence and Project grants from the Wisconsin Arts Board. In addition, the National Endowment for the Arts has granted her a fellowship. Presently, Boruch As part of the Writers and is the Director of the Graduate Writing Program at Purdue University.

On Wednesday, April 13, Tate pus next week. Tate has published and Boruch will present a poetry reading, which will be held in the Sophie Kerr Room at 8:00 p.m. On the following day, April 14, the two poets will have a conversation in the Defender, and Reckoner. His first Sophie Kerr Room at 4:00 p.m. These events are sponsored by the Sophie Kerr Committee and the In addition, Tate has published National Endowment for the Arts.

Concert Series: Orchestra Masters

by Ben Jacobs After touring much of Europe, whose process of imaginative United States, The Masterplayers, a chamber orchestra of seventeen players, will perform on campus tonight. Music professor Garry Clarke commented, "The concert will be a rare chance for the college and Chestertown to see and hear an makes the current school of confes- orchestra performing live on cam-

The Masterplayers are composed of fine musicians from throughout Europe and is led by renown Swiss conductor, Richard United States. He has taught at the Schumacher. They have been criti-University of California, Berkeley, cally acclaimed for their virtuosity Columbia University, and the Uniof string and wood players and the

Campus Calendar

Colors Colors Washington MASTERPLAYERS, Gibson he Arts Center, 8:00 p.m May April 10: The Washing College Music Department FARLY MUSIC CONSORT, from James Theatre, 4:00 p.m. May, April 11: Literary House IL THE AESTHETICS OF ILM, Martin Kabat, Speaker, ONeill Literary House, Tea at 100 p.m., Talk at 4:30 p.m. The Sophie Kerr Lecture S- A LITERARY HISTORY

PROETRY MAGAZINE, Joe si, Speaker, Sophie Kerr om, 7:30 p.m. The Film Series- THE ECLINE OF THE AMERICAN PIRE, Norman James Theatre, Wednesday, April 13: The O'Neill mary House- WRITERS IN RESIDENCE: JAMES TATE AND MARIANNE BORUCH, Poetry Rerading, Sophie Kerr Room, 8:00 p.m

The Dance Club Film Series-THAT'S DANCIN', Coffee House, 6:00 p.m

Thursday, April 14: The O'Neill Literary House-AUTHORS AND MENTORS: A CONVERSA TION BETWEEN JAMES TATE AND MARIANNE BORUCH, Sophie Kerr Room, 4:00 p.m.

Kent County Historical Society- MARYLAND'S RATI-FICATION OF THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION, LO Goldstein, Comparoller of Mary land, Hynson Lounge, 8:30 p.m.

Eggos on the way! Sophomore Jim Sobczak and senior Chas. Foster serve freshman Kevin Holland a buttered waffle with syrup. The entrepeneurs sold "Eggograms" singing message, toasted walfle, paper plate, and plastic fork — last week, with "Eggogram" t-shirts to follow. quality of their ensemble playing, as Everyone's a Critic by Susan Di Leo well as the attention they pay to many of the lesser known works of great masters of the past

Baroque music will be held tonight sonable judgments about movies? at 8:00 p.m. in Tawes Theatre and is Are our judgments based on the the concluding event in this year's film, or on ourselves? Washington College Concert Se-

What are the aesthetic criteria The Masterplayers' concert of of a good film? Can we make rea-

These are some of the questions ries. Tickests are $7.00 for adults, Dr. Martin Kabat plans to address in of the Monday Series. It will be held and children under 18 and Washing- his talk entitled "The Aesthetics of a popular art form, can undermine our ability to treat it as an artistic medium. "If a film does well at the box office, the people have spoken. in which case what the critic says means very little," Kabat says

"The Aesthetics of Film" is part in the O'Neill Literary House on ton College students are admitted Film." Kabat contends that "movies April 11. Tea will be served at 4 raise special questions," and, being p.m.; the talk will begin at 4:30 p.m.

FREE HORS D'OEUVRES 5:30 TIL

25¢ DRAFTS in the BACK 9 - 10:30

FRIDAY, APRIL 8

STEVE TAYLOR (NO COVER)

* SATURDAY, APRIL 9 *

BOBBY & THE BELIEVERS

515 WASHINGTON ST.

778-1984

ENTERTAINMENT

D'Arby Introduces the Hardline

cording To Terence Trent D'Arby is imitative nature shows up in several a culmination of soulful poetry and other D'Arby songs such as "Dance social message. Hardline, at num- Little Sister," highlighting James more than in any other D'Arby ber eight on Rolling Stone's Top Brown screams in his 'don't give up Fifty Album Chart, blends R&B the fight' theme, and "I'll Never sentiment with hip, bohemian style resulting in a confident yet poignant provisational vocals reminiscent of album. D'Arby's confidence seems Stevie Wonder to be drawn from painful revelations depicted throughout Hardline.

the album with an even, almost earns his newly-acclaimed status Indian rhythm. "... old mens' cigars with songs such as "Wishing Well" puff up the wars, to protect their and "As Yet Untitled." The first fuck-ups again/young men must die single off of Hardline, "Wishing to keep the old ones alive and to prove they're studs once again." label given by D'Arby as a 'tone This is one of several D'Arby songs that focus on social injustice. He distinct voice complement this uses almost explosive lyrics to at- impressionistic piece ("kissing like tract attention to unnecessary war a bandit stealing time, underneath a and death while urging the listener sycamore tree/ cupid by the hour

You All Get To Heaven" is quickly The Rolling Stones. An unexpected put aside

Let Me Stay" in it's light rhythm and titled" is a promising song seemics. Complete with spoken preface sion hymn. It's completely a cap-("sweetheart listen, i know the last pella and done by D'Arby alone ok?"), this song echoes the early river where things grow green/the Introducing The Hardline Ac- difficult to take too seriously. This Turn My Back On You" with im-

If some of his music is predict-"If You All Get To Heaven" begins able and imitative, he more than Well," is innovative and earns the poem.' His unique harmony and to"...say a prayer for my brother, but sends valentines, to my sweet lover most of all please say a prayer for and me") and shows why D'Arby is attracting impressive audiences in-The serious mood set in "If cluding Bono of U2 and members of yet impressive song shows up near with D'Arby's next song "If You the end of the album, "As Yet Unless- than-thought-provoking lyr- ingly styled after a funeral procesfew pages haven't been good for with complicated harmony and both of us/ and i've caused you alot meaningful lyrics "out by a shanty of grief/but put those bags down where the dust hangs high/far from a seventies Jackson Five music that's flowers weep and they lean away/ from the blood stained soil beneath my feet." A sense of unsettled conflict shadows this song, perhaps

Other notable songs on Hardline are "Seven More Days," a blues piece about a prisoner's homecoming ("...teardrops rusting on a steel bar/harmonica blues/ heartblood thick enough for pine tar/i've got a hole in my delta shoes"); "Let's Go Forward", a jazzy love song ("and in your private moments/when all the world's asleep/i watch you as you toss and turn and pray my soul you'll keep"); "Rain", a heavy beat and light verse song ("...cue up the james brown, and jack up the funky sound now") and "Sign Your Name", a sensual love song with a slow raggae beat ("stranger blue leaves us alone/we don't want to deal with you/we'll shed our stains showering/in the room that makes the rain")

The album is an impressive venture mostly because of its versatility in being a social reminder as well as a light-hearted recording, and so it seems appropriate that D'Arby ends his album, after "As Yet Untitled", with "Who's Lovin You," an old blues song by William Robinson. Hardline is an exceptional album that explores Terence Trent D'Arby as a lyricist and earns its newfound popularity.

Introducing the Hardline According to Terence Trent D'Arby has been described by D'Arby himself as "the best album ever made by me or by anyone." It is available on Columbia Records.

WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Chestertown, MD 21620

U.S. Postage PAID Non-Profit Org Chestertown, MD Permit No. 2

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 24

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, April 15, 1988

slightly over 50 percent of the total Ravanbakhsh

Finney Elected President

omore Kevin Allen mops water out of the stairwell in East Hall efter a broken water valve flooded the building last weekend.

Waterline Rupture Floods East Hall

Extent of damage still unknown as building dries out by Tony Caligiuri Hundreds of gallons of water flowed through the halls of East Hall mately two inches of water on the the first an second floor will have to when a waterline broke in the second floor bathroom during the early Roderick and security reports. morning hours of Saturday, April 8.

According to Joe Cathers, Assistant Superintendent of Building and Maintenance, he responded ceiling from the second floor. The to a 1:09 A.M., call from Jeff Newell, an East Hall resident, who re- determined, yet because of the ported that the flush valve on one quantity of water which was present to Caters. For the present time, cer Williams observed "approxi-Williams further observed water flowing freely down the stairwell as well as water seeping through the exact time of the rupture was not ing the front door of East Hall, offi- tiles are popping off from trapped moisture. Because of this, much of first floor landing", according to be ripped up and new floor boards and tiles will have to be put down The electrical wiring will have to be inspected and the entire building may have to be rewired due to corrosion of the wires. Lighting and smoke detector systems will also be inspected and replaced, according

'This effort (of the residents) probably saved the building from worse damage"

toilet had broken and that water was at 1:05, both Caters and Roderick flowing freely. Cathers then called Louis Sanders who arrived at the scene along with WC Security Officer Jake Williams, who was notified at approximately 1:00 A.M.

According to Jerry Roderick, Security, officer Williams arrived at

Director of Washington College the scene at 1:05 A.M... Upon open-votes at 306, followed by 107 votes president, Rob Albers won with 189 for former SGA Treasurer Steve votes, followed by 114 votes for his of the SGA officer election on Leary and 72 Votes for Bob Rachel Smith, 105 votes for John Bodner, and 41 votes for Arian Brooks Durkee ran an uncontested race for the office of SGA For the office of SGA vice secretary, receiving 383 votes for the office. The only name under write in's to receive any significant

> In the closest race of the day, Phil-Tom Jackson won the office of Treasurer with only a two vote lead over Alan Lerch's 237 votes. According to the present SGA president Richard MacKnight, the race for treasurer was the only race to

In the final race, the double ticket of William Bertles and Tiffany Quell won the office of Social Chairman, followed by 169 votes election were tabulated following Beta memoribilia. Included in the dinner on Wednesday night and posted by 10:00 P.M. that evening. Petitions for the office of SGA Jenator will be made available next were inclined to believe that the break had occurred several minutes the disruption which would take previous their notification.

As Cathers arrived at 1:30 A.M., the water was turned off from ment in May the main valve as well as all electrical breakers, according to Cathers. At that point, there was approximately three quarters of an inch of water covering the second, first, and basement floors as well as water sceping through first floor and basement ceilings. Cathers observed residents bailing water out of the second story bathroom window and sweeping water down the stairwells. Caters pointed out that this effort probably saved the building from much worse damage than did actu-

The source of the water was determined to be the one inch valve for cold water intake which feeds number of votes was Peter Van water into the toilet. According to Roderick, several witnesses interviewed that night stated that the valve had a small leak which ruptured suddenly. Although the cause of the incident is officially undetermined at this time, both Cathers and Clint Baer, director of college planning, have examined the broken valve and observed that there was no corrosion or "slow deterioration" to the pipe. Further investigation led Baer and Cathers to conclude that the mechanics of East Hall's pluming are in "pretty good" condition.

> case "open, but not actively pur-Cathers pointed out several repairs that will have to be done after students vacate the building. Presently the floors are warping and the Security has not assigned any blame to the incident and considers the Cathers indicated that the building would "livable" mainly because of place in the repairs. Work will most likely begin following commence-

At this point no one would estimate the cost of the damage which occurred. According to Baer, an insurance representative is expected to give damage estimates in the near future. As far as damage to personal property, again no estimates could be made because only those rooms reporting specific problems were inspected. In addition the Resident Assistant from East Hall, Mark Mickum, could not he reached for comment.

Said Baer, "It was quite a

Zeta Tau Alpha Celebrates Anniversary

Wednesday, April 13 following a Caldwell. A total of 485 students,

Deformer SGA vice President won office of SGA president the office with a total number of For the office of

For the Office of President, student body cast a ballot for the

by Melanie Wade The Gamma Beta Chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha announces its 50th

The SGA announced the re-day of elections birthday. Installed on April 30, 1938, the chapter at Washington College has been flourishing ever This weekend, alumni will gather in Hynson Lounge to celethe birthday of ZTA's 75th Zeta Tau Alpha was founded in October of 1898 at Longwood College in Farmville, Virgina. It rently has 210 chapters making it the 3rd largest sorority in the Nalonal Panhellenic Council. ZTA is in international fraternity boasting opters in Canada as well as all over the United States

The birthday celebration this weekend has been arranged and receive a re-count coordinated by the alumni, involving the current collegiate members somewhat, but mainly organized by Barbara Cromwell '55 and Emily Russell '56. The Celebration will for Mary Beth Enright and 71 votes consist of a brunch, a slide presentation a fashion show of clothins from the 1930's to the 1970's, and displays of many items of Gamma celebration will be a visit from

ZTA's National President Becky

Kerwin '70, a Washington College and Gamma Beta Alumnae

for Travis Aldous The official results of the

INSIDE: MacKnight

Page 5 WC History Page 6 Book Bar

Page 7 MAC Woes

Page 8 Crew

Page 9 Dr. Jock

Page 10

Editorial

Debate Debacle

This week's Student Government Association election brought not only a sea of MacIntosh flyers and a variety of victory parties. but a good bit of mud as well.

While Tuesday night's forum for candidate speeches elicited numerous intelligent questions, some students made inquiries that can hardly be termed questions at all. Instead, members of a fraternity which includes one of the presidential candidates seized the opportunity to attempt to embarrass their brother's opponents. Some questions were not "asked" in the normal sense of the word, but read from a previously prepared sheet.

Unfortunately, this scenario is all too typical of elections at Washington College; sometimes students need to be reminded that they have the floor to ask a question, not to make a diatribe against a particular candidate. We believe that the candidates themselves do not request or initiate such questions from their friends; typically, the competitors in any one race have worked together in some aspect of student government. The misbehavior, then, stems from overzealous political fans.

Asking tough questions is desired - candidates must be able to verbally face the kinds of sticky situations they will encounter in actuality if elected to office. Inquiries made to humiliate one candidate and enhance the image of another, however, are counteractive to the political process.

Mudslinging occurs in any political race, but it stands out as particularly unwelcome in a small community. Students need to realize that competition need not be an act of war; that a political opponent is not an enemy. The hostility that marks these events inhibits the unity of the various groups on campus that is required once the election is simply last week's news in The Elm. This ideal unity is necessary for students to effectively voice their concerns to the administration

In addition to the violation of "fair play", the asking of "rigged" questions seems to indicate a lack of faith in one's candidate, a fear that he can't do it on his own merit. In this sense it is the least flattering form of political support.

Moreover, the prepared questions take time and attention away from the legitimate questions of the student constituency. Relevant issues are obvious - modular housing, academic and athletic facilities, parking, tuition, the Student Conduct Council, even (God forbid) the recurring debates concerning the alcohol policy and the Sophomore Writing Seminar.

Much time that could be devoted to discussion of such pressing matters, however, is spent on a more subtle form of stuffing the ballot box

The Elm congratulates all of new members of the Student Government Association executive board, and wishes them a productive year ahead. We just hope that their friends will as supportive when it's time to clean up after Homecoming next year.

Washington College Elm

| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Keho          |
|---------------------------|----------------------|
| News Editor               | Tony Caligiuri       |
| Features Editor           | Jennifer M. Harrison |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekman         |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Susan DiLec          |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Balz         |
| Graphics Editor           | Todd Karı            |
| Manager                   |                      |
| Managing Editor.          | Cathy Jewel          |
| Advertising Manager       | Erin Hodge-Williams  |
| Circulation Manager       | William Faus         |
|                           |                      |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacati-Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed colum

taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff. All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editor cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or ar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by disclosure of his name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments. Limit letters to 600 words or less and include day and evening phore numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be depo the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mailed c'o The Elm Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters become the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be considered for

The Eim's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Annidormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Confederate Flag Recalls Hate, Injustice To the Editor:

I am writing to protest the display of the Confederate flag which currently adorns the rear face of Middle Hall. I protest because this banner represented and continues to represent as repulsive an ideology as has ever existed in America namely the subordination and enslavemment of an entire race, thought to be "inferior," to serve the selfish interests of another

'Tradition!!" will no doubt be the defensive cry of those students who put up the flag. Much as some state governors in the Deep South have recently done, these students may support the display as a harmless exhibition celebrating the chivalric "Southern way of life." Such obfuscation only distorts and conceals the truth. For what kind of tradition are they commemorating? A heritage of injustice, hate, and oppression? The flag which hangs from Middle Hall flew to support the Confederacy, a system dedicated to the proposition that all men are not created equal, established on the principle of racism, and devoted to preserving despotism of the ma-iority The Middle Hall flag is all the more offensive because it is openly. even ostentatiously, exhibited in the center of campus for all to see. So displayed, the flag is not only a flagrant insult to black people, but is a Americans who cherish individual freedom and justice. It slurs the honor of the hundreds of thousands of Americans who fought and died during the Civil War and after, to preserve the world's "last best hope" of liberty

The Confederate flag, a symbol of malevolent ignorance, does not deserve a place in an institution which claims to be a bastion of en-

HELP WANTED

TYPISTS - Hundreds weekly at home! Write: P.O. Box 17, Clark, NJ 07066

should be relegated to the dark memory of the past, monument only to man's capacity for evil. I know the residents of Middle Hall are not racists and did not mean to hurt anyone by a display which they must have honestly thought to be harmless. I urge them to recognize their mistake and remove the flag.

Jonathan Sarris Senior Major, History

Compromise Needed In

To the Editor:

I do not often feel motivated to express my opinions in this particular forum, but perhaps it may be appropriate. During this semester your paper has printed several letters to the editor discussing the alcohol policy and enforcement in the Coffee House. This open exchange of ideas is always beneficial, and the results can often be very positive.

Herbert Spenser writes ' there is a principle, which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument and which cannot fail to keep man in everlasting ignorance. , that being contempt prior to investigation. With this in mind I have listened patiently, and with an open mind to lightenment and higher learning. It by your readers. I am new to the campus, and the last few month have been very enlightening. I an proud to be a part of this commun in any capacity. There is not for compromise and change, but we need to initiate changes with forsight and with responsibility towar the future. There is obviously wide range of opinion on how bests resolve the issues revolving aroun alcohol use and abuse on campu These issues ar not unique to u campus. They are a reflection issues our society at large is we tling with, and no easy absolu solutions exist. However, it is pos sible to arrive at an equitable cor Alcohol Debate promise. To do this, we need alway place principles above personal ties. We must balance our police against the principles involve those of individual freedom versu

> Perhaps the central issues confronting us in our policy consider tions are those of law. Without regard for our personal opinions, the law calls for enforcement of the drinking age where a state license held, as is the case in the Coffee House. We cannot arbitrarily di cide not to obey this law, but we can initiate actions directed toward changing it. Many unpopular state utes have been repealed or amendo as a result of unified and appropri ately directed action. The key hot

Letters continued on page 5

Occupation Damages blemish on the conscience of all Israeli Image, Security

Old women are beaten in the cember. Confronted with casualti on both sides and a dramatic escale street for throwing stones. A young man has his arm broken by rock- tion in Palestinian-Israeli tension wielding soldiers. A 15-year old the Israeli government is facing entirely new 28 Jewish girl is shot political to death. These commentary are the horrifying scenes which have been coming out of the West Bank and the Gaza strip since De-

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAM! Excellent income! Details, send self-addressed, stamped envelopment west; Box 5877, Hillside, NI

ation in its occ pied territoria action, retaliating against civilization unrest with force. The occupied to ritories are perceived by the people as vital to Israel's security and the very defense of the could is synonymous with continued per ence in the West Bank and Gara The government refuses to nego continued on page dangerous sit-

All That Glitters Is Not College Radio

adio industry, entertain the college community and broaden our already stretching and idea! bursting horizons further." In the face of such glorious enthusiasm, it seems mean-spirited joinduce a mood of calm rationality into. But someone has to realize that not all that glitters

A radio station, while seeming to increase the prestige of the college, will not in act do anything of the kind. The airwaves will Music that many people would rather not hear; that is why there is an on/off button on one's radio. If we want to hear such music, we people at viving. We could provide so much completed, there will be nothing left. Unless feeling that there won't be too much variation buildings. gaining for fledgling entrepreneurs in the of course we could put the radio station where the art people are supposed to be. That's an

But the idea for building a whole new building for it is really the best. There is too much green grassy lawn on this campus; the best way to eradicate the relaxed, country feel is gold, and not all words are promises that of this place is to build things on the remaining land. We all long for the crowded dirty feel of the city anyway. Who wants to stretch out of the grass on a warm spring day?

Also, if we build a new building it will be about, regarding a college radio station, station, We always need more buildings and WC music to listen to, as prescribed by the Resources Center is group who plays the music. Somehow I have reason to raise more funds and to build new

Kellv Lamoree

among the deejays. They will play music that is either: U2, more than fifteen years old, or incompatible with the description of music as I see it: something that is usually pleasant to clone. the ear and when accompanied by words, an interesting evocation of a feeling or situation. While this description can fit many types of only further be clogged with music that is yet more place to receive the divine services music, let's make it clear that head-banging aready being played on HFS and 98 Rock. of the Maintenance Deptartment, which is so screaming drug heads are not included. Anyone within listening distance of the station Another asset to the Radio Station (part will be able to hear what truly awful taste of the Minor Plan?) is that one can prove that exists, that is, anyone within listening dis-clientele of those who can pay the whole there is indeed no end to the depth of the tance can hear anything not less than fifteen thirteen thou in cash. Kelly Lamoree is a But there are some benefits. Why, we shallow sea that we shall all drown in one of years old, thus giving anyone who truly loves senior majoring in art history.

This idea of an official playlist, rather like an official language, could be beneficial to those unfamiliar with the ways of WC. Freshman who seek to be cool can learn quickly and easily by listening to the radio station. That way all Freshmen can be equally ignorant as to the way to develop one's own personality and how to more resemble a

Another tuition increase due to cost of inning and maintaining said radio station. This is always a good thing, especially if the increase is announced after the Financial Aid form Deadline and it is too late to acquire funds for the next year until, sorry, it's too late. Thus the College can build up a stronger

ISSUE:

Should Washington College establish a college radio station?

James Plaskitt Freshman

I think it would be fun, but not aken seriously. I think the money tould go towards new academic

Wendy Snow Cumberland, Maryland Sophomore

Benjamin T. Hinkle Valley of the Kings Senior ence of working in a real radio sta- constructed for the pleasure of myself and my dominions."

Rob Albers New Jersey Junior

Nitza Morgan Chestertown, Maryland Sophomore

"Oh yes! I think it would be good for "As sure as the sun rises in the East "Yes, a lot of people got their broad-"I'm not saying a radio station is W.C. students to have the experi- I decree that a radio station will be casting licenses at Kent County bad, but academic funding, like for High School. That shows there is a the arts, is more important. No one lot of interest in getting the radio is about to graduate from here with a communications major."

by David Johnson

Campus Voices

Station Would Inform And Entertain

The students and community of Wash-Ulon College deserve to have a radio station. campus radio station would bind the comtrity to the college, enhance the student it, improve communications within the tollege, and add to the positive changes the litge is undergoing. Besides playing music, be radio station can inform students about: tiletic events, drama performances, lecis, social events, and club meetings. The could set up a news program, includweather and sports updates, as well as talk s over current events.

With the initial help from Rich Machight, Bob Polk, and Chris Strong, the status he station is showing progress. Recently addents have completed a five week Seat the Kent County High School Radio a slow process to establish a station, but once lion (W.K.H.S.). All the students are curmy licensed under the F.C.C. (Federal mications Commissions). The course about the operations of the equip-to the college administration and the proposal months. is being well received. The type of station the school is looking to establish would be a 100 a watt educational FM system. This system would be received in all the buildings on campus as well as part of the community. It is proofing.

John Bodnar

the proposal is approved, work will be in

The first step, which hopefully could be maby June Fox included "hands-on" train-done over the summer would be a frequency with the station equipment. The students search. An independent consultant would

Of course, a station on campus would be rimeters within which our station can broadexpensive, but a proposal has been presented cast. This process takes approximately 6 to 8

Second, the college would have to locate station site. Such a place might be: the student center, or Hodson Hall. The station would broadcast up to a 5 to 10 mile radius and would have to be large enough to accomodate storage, and must have appropriate sound

> The third step would be to purchase the station hardware: soundboards, turntables, stalled, the college will have to hire someone to help operate the station who would be able to fix electrical problems.

The total cost of building a radio station can range from 50,000, to 100,000 dollars. With the college undergoing the "Master Plan", why not do it right and include a campus radio station in those plans. A radio station is something that the entire college can enjoy and take part in. With continued student support and interest this can become a reality cassette and C.D. players, microphones, John Bodnar is a junior English major.

Esndmade Crafts

113 Cross Street Chestertown, Md. 21620 Ellen Bunting 778-0249

News In Brief

Steam Leak Causes Problems In Dunning

lems in Dunning Science Center have recently been causing problams for WC Maintenance evening initiating a response from the Chment last week. The problems are caused by great amounts of steam which are released as a result of a leak in the heating pipes located under the front stairs of the building, according to Joe Cathers, assistant

Heating and plumbing prob- College for several months, is in a location which the front steps of Dunning Hall would have to be removed to make repairs. Instead, the new pipes which will be put into estertown Volunteer Fire Depart- place for the new science wing will allow the present pipes to be re-

Cathers does not expect the leak to become any worse before the new pipes are put into place. Until then, the lines will be used only to director of Building and Grounds. heat Dunning for short periods

Notes From The Dining Hall:

Mom's Cookie Jar

ercises the heart at 120-1130 eats per minute for half-an-hour. days a week, that person could undergo what is known as a raining effect

That person, all else being constant, would lose weight, have lower loodd pressure, be less tired during he day, tend to stop smoking if a moker have lower cholestoral levels inn thee blood, be less prone to heart attacks and strokes, and have a tronger sense of well being People who exercise regularly tend to live longer and lead more fulfillng lives. SO EXERCISE ing lives. SO I

Spotlight Dinner last Wednesday. Next Wednesday is the Spring Buf-

Part of my job with the Dining Service demands a good bit of reading. The other day I came across an article I would like to pass along to the young ladies in my reading audience. The article I speak of was in the Family Circle Magazine, March 3, 1987 edition. The article dealt with hypoglycemia. Hypoclycemia, or low blood sugar, can affect otherwise healthy people - typically, young women who develope poor eating habits. When a woman starts her day with a cup of sugar-

Palestinian Question Represents

Hope you all enjoyed the Manager's laced coffee or tea, and a sweet no doughnut or other sugary food h blood sugar (glucose) level sh rockets. To clear the blood of a excess sugar, the pancreas pours high levels of insulin, which can glucose levels to plummet. Hunge light-headedness, irritability a other symptoms can appear. The temptation is to reach for a mi sugar fix, because more sugar wi temporarily ease the symptoms. B the only way to get off this rol coaster of too-high/too-low ble sugar levels is to change yourcan habite

Well, I guess that's it until a

The leak, which has plagued the when needed Campus Construction

Clint Baer, Director of College planning, has announced that the process of replacing the present telephone and electrical lines with new underground cables will begin sometime over the next few weeks.

As a result, there will be a considerable amount of trenching taking place on the perimeter of campus. Because of this, Baer asks students and faculty to be patient and avoid walking near the areas under construction

The initial trenching will ter and the maintenance building Later work will continue south on Gibson Avenue, going east on Campus Avenue, the north on Washington Avenue to East Hall. The completion of this project is expected be in November.

The work is not expected to cause much inconvenience to pedestrian or vehicular traffic since the work will be repaired as it progresses. In addition, Baer does not anticipate any further disruption in

take place between the athletic cen- the use of electricity on campus. Editors Appointed

Pegasus for the 1988-89 academic been appointed editor-in-chief of year have been selected, announced The Elm; junior Arian Ravan-Professor Robert Day, chairman of bakhsh will continue his editorship the Board of Publications

Positions Available

The following positions are available on The Washington College Elm for the 1988-89 school students are available. Pick up an Sports Editor, Arts and Entertainment Editor, Business Manager, return it to the office, or to Jennifer Advertising Manager, Circulation Manager and Collegian Editor. Additional positions for work study year: News Editor, Features Editor, application on the door of The Elm office in Queen Anne's Lounge, and ate with the PLO, for it is a terrorist organization with which there can be no compromise. The choice is seen as either surrender or victory. This position, embraced by nany people of good will in Israel and in both American political parties, has serious flaws. How, for instance, do the occupied territories represent security for Israel? Before they took the land in 1967, they had certainly been faced with invasion and intimidatiion from Arab neighbors. But Israel has fought two major wars since 1967; the West Bank did not provide a buffer against these hostilities. On the contrary, the occupation presents a dire security threat to Israel. It has resulted in a hostile population. incresed tension, and now a bloody five-month rebellion which damages Israel's image as a democratic state and polarizes the situation. Many in the Israeli government say that an independent Palestinian state will create an aggressive, hostile border nation. But what is the Battle For Israel's Democratic Soul tained behind defensible borders, or an even more draining internal rehellion which will eventually evis-

> cerate Israel Moreover, the PLO, which admittedly engages in deplorable terrorist actions, is also the only organization which the majority of Palestianian people recognize as representative of their interests. For Israel to ignore this fact, no matter how righteous its intention, is simply as unrealiste as America's refusal to recognize communist China for 25 years. It is a stumbling block for a negotiated peace.

Israel would seem therefore to be in a no-win situation, and in a way it ie But there is a viable ontion Israel should support the initiatve currently being pressed by the U.S. State Department as the lesser of two evils. This calls for an international peace conference to provide a forum for face-to-face talks between Israel and the Palestinians, the granting of gradual autonomy for the West Bank and Gaza through local elections, and the ultimate alternative - a hostile occupied granting of full Palestinian indepopulation. Either an external enated peace. This policy would, in long run, be most benificial to raeli security and decrease viole and tension in the area. The U government should continue press the plan, regardless of who elected here in November, until i accepted by all parties.

Israel prides itself on being of the world's rare true democ cies, and the only one in the Mid East. This pride is rightly justil But in the Palestinian crisis lies elemental test for Israeli den racy. The Israeli government is a inherently just or more magna mous with power than any of nation. It can, and does, maken takes. The true sign of a democr is its ability to rise above its en and, with respect for individ rights and popular will, correction peacefully. The Palestinian qu tion is nothing less than a battle Israel's soul, the resolution of whi will determine whether this trot led nation will remain a just, ope and democratic society.

Jonathan Sam College Democra

Harrison in Wicomico 211

FREE HORS D'OEUVRES 5:30-???

Friday, April 15th

The Magnetics

25 cent Draft of Your Choice 9:00 - 10:30 on Band Nites in the Back

778-1984

Live Entertainment Saturday 16th Fiddlesticks

CONGRATULATIONS MRS. D! STOP BY AFTER MRS. D'S RECEPTION PROPER ID REQUIRED . 337 1/2 HIGH ST. . 778-6779

SGA President Richard MacKnight Recalls Year

run for the office? To me it seemed the s.G.A. was becoming somewhat unglued during the tail end of the 1986-87 year. The S.G.A. administration was constantly at battle with the college administration, and the S.I.B., of which I was a member, had to handle a substantial amount of cases as well as respond to unceasing criticism. The S.G.A. needed to focus on existing concerns while keeping in mind the actual capabilities of the S.G.A. and how they are exercised. I felt I could fulfill that need, and thus I peti#### tioned for candidacy Was it what you expected?

Yes and no. I expected to recieve constant student opinion regarding all matters, but didn't expect to be stereotyped as a fast talking bureaucrat wanna be. I also expected to befriend and work with the college asministration, but did not expect that before begining I would have to try to lower a shield of residual callousness left by the previos S.G.A. administration, Many expectations were fulfilled, many

What were your goals that you set for yourself in the office. Do you think you accomplished them?

Besides following us on the progress of a few specific matters. I had no goal but to efficiently deal with the concerns of the students. I would not say that I effec- history, the first to seemingly exist. tively remedied every student prob- Instead of recieving a milk crate full tempt tp distane myself from issues tempt ot solve it.

What do you consider your big- What did you find most frustratgest accomplishment(s) during ing/rewarding about the job?

this year on the S.W.S., and the S.A.F., the student government, but I knew I S.G.A. has realized a crucial need, would have to accept that fact that it and that is the need for continuity. was and always will be present. Although it is not yet an accom- Also sometimes, as a respected plishment, this year's S.G.A. plans professor pointed out to me, I would on handing over to the new execu- be in constant contact with students, is to direct our actions toward those individuals responsible to us as elected officials. We are all (I would hope) registered voters, and our ence over those who would seek our tinue to discuss issues rationally, and where necessary, agree to disagree amicably. Policy attacks in merely exacerbate our problems.

Become members of committees addressing these issues - all of us

tions - take the time to explore

Coffee House/Student Center

Mark R. Stenger

structively for change.

In the interim we should con-

continued from page 2

lem, but if a problem was brought to of incomplete information, like we the senate it was discussed and did, the executive board will turn proper measures were taken in at- over the most tangible S.G.A. information available to date

Student apathy is defi Besides the actions taken nitely a frustrating factor in any tive board a complete year-long but as a result a feeling of alienation in an obfective fashion. The many facets of my position sometimes made me feel flaky. Rewards were Well, I did get a large room!

What would be some advice that you would give to next year's ocre to pretty good rating. I think

I will tell the next administration to continue following up on invisible is that we did not battle the the present actions taken by the administration, thus we did not suf-S.G.A. that are in process. Inevita- fer adverse publicity. Also we did bly, issues never before considered not directly battle with this publicawill arise, and these issues will be of tion, which seemed to be a favorite much importance to the senate of previous administrations.

extent. Organization is crucial Thorough, and concise information will greatly benefit the future of the so few I can hardly remember any. If you were evaluated as an S.G.A. president, what kind of evalu ation do you think you would get? I think I would ger a menithis becarse nobody is perfect. The reason we seemed

Letters to #### Give Trees A Chance

strength lies in exercising our influ- To the Editor:

Ms. Mary Hamilton, the campus groundkeeper, has informed me that some damage has been done to the young trees planted on the front side of Cullen Hall. I assured her that this is not the result of vandalprint are counter productive and ism, but the enthusiasm of ball play ing by the residents of the buildings in this part of the campus.

She said that my suggestion to should become involved in our soluprotect the trees with stakes was not about the films thrust at them, at a realistic one; therefore, I am sugalternatives and work together congesting to her that the College paint had a film - plus a speaker billing a couple of signs requesting that there be no ball playing in the imme-Head Student Manager diate area of these young trees

I have already asked the RAs in residents, asking for their coopera- ton College brainwash can be retion. I hope that The Elm and those versed by spending some time with students concerned about the trees Allen Weinstein's book, Perjury. will rally to help these trees have the chance to grow

Sincerely, Edward E. Maxey Associate Dean of Students Series Includes

Leftist Film To The Editor:

No wonder students complain their own expense. In March, you himself as a personal friend of Alger Hiss - all intended to convince you of something that is not true.

Alger Hiss was indeed an im-

Cullen to spread the word among the portant Soviet spy. Your Washing-The Hiss-Chambers Case, which is in the library Next on the March list of alltime hits was the German leftist cult-film about Comrade Rosa Luxemburg. Of course she is depicted as a revolutionary saint. The film would not have been shown here otherwise.

One might hope that watching it proved a counter-productive ordeal. Don 't nod off, or you'll miss the part where she deflowers Comrade Clara's son, the high point of the evening. Mutiny is too much to expect, but how about some signs of life? Dr. Susan L.M. Huck

When you've got a beer this rich and flavorful, why suck a lime?

Let's face it, amigos, any beer that needs a slice of lime to give it flavor can't be much of a beer. Discover Calgary Amber Lager... Its rich, imported taste is hearty and robust. Try it the next time you order beer, and hold the lime. Calgary Amber Lager. Join the stampede.

Imported by Century Importers Inc., Baltimore, Maryland.

Beginning at the Beginning: A History of W. C.

by Carter Roatner

Before I arrived at Washington College all Lever heard about the place was that it was a small liberal arts college on the Eastern shore embarking on its third century of existance. The first time I visited the campus I took quick note of the Hill Dormitories Reid Hall, and Smith Hall. What thrilled me the most about these buildings besides their

ings on the collegiate level to satisfy the educa- as an annual gift from the state to help pay tional needs of these young men The request was granted and Smith, in much the same manner as current president Douglass Cater, set out to develop the prosperity of the school and encourage its growth. On August 18, 1782 General George Washington, stationed at Newburg, New York with the American Army, sent a letter of approval for that undertaken

throughout the

at that time, including alge-

conic sections.

fluxions, surveying, navigation, philosophy, logic, metaphysics,

rhetoric, and

Middle Hall at one time served as the only campus building the request to use his name for the 'College at beauty of a time long gone, was the fact that students had been living and studying in those Chester'. The foundation was set and it was same buildings for over a century, as is the now up to Smith to conjure up adequate funds. case of the Hill dorms Smith traveled to every county on the Eastern In due time I was awed by the fact that shore, in Maryland as well as Delaware and students had been transversing the same paths parts of Virginia. This task was made more on this campus for well over a hundred years difficult by the absence of bridges; this forced Smith to travel circuitously, adding several now, preoccupied I am sure with many of the same thoughts as I am now. This lead to my times the distance presently required to reach curiosity of the origins of the school and what his destinations. He came up with a list of 294 student life was like over the past two hundred subscribers, among them General Washington who provided the generous gift of 50 guineas.

years on this campus Washington College originated in a state bill which was introduced in around in 1723 providing for the establishment of "Free schools" in each of the counties of the Eastern shore The bill authorized the purchase of 100 acres of land where the future school would be located. In 1728, the Visitors of the Kent County -School were success ful in procuring a lot of 100 acres from Simon Wilmer for the price of fifty pounds. There are no records indicating the exact time in which classes began at the new school, but when the Reverend William Smith was invited to take on the position of Headmaster for the Kent County School, the school was prospering with a reported 142 students in atten-

Several of these students enrolled were scheduled to graduate at the end of the school year. Thinking ahead, Smith realized that if these students wished to continue with their educations they would be forced to journey to Europe, or to one of the schools in the neighboring states. At this time Harvard, William and Mary, Yale, Princeton, King's College, University of Pennsylvannia, Brown, and Dartmouth were already in existance. A petition was sent to the Maryland General Assembly to request allowance for the school to include in its studies course offer-

"Among these items the "Unnecessary" talking along with the throwing of victuals during the meals was strictly prohibited. " > concentrated readings in Greek and Latin. Added on to this was the requirement that French be studied in What lofty expectations the school had of Fundraising and failures

Washington College started to design plans for a new building to replace the old school house believed to have been located where today the stone marker is located at the intersection of Maple and Washington Avenues. The estimated cost of the construction was believed to be $28,000, and to finance this the school sold several leases to plots of land that had been portioned from the school's original landholdings. This did not raise adequate funds, however, so the Visitors organized the first of many lotteries in the history of Washington College in an attempt to raise needed funds. Because of the difficulty in the fundraising, the General Assembly granted a state fund of 1,250 pounds salaries and related operation costs incurred. In addition, the Assembly imposed taxes on the sale of marriage licenses, peddlers licenses, and the sale of liquor on the Eastern shore in an attempt to raise revenue for gifts to the college.

When the building was completed. General Washington was called on to recieve the honorary degree of Doctor of Law at the comencement ceremonies which were held the following day.

Soon after Smith resigned to continue the efforts to restore the College of Philadelphia. Colin Fergusen was elected the next principal of Washington College to lead the college through its crucial years of develop-

The school's prosperity was threatened by the lack of funds, and a declining rate of enrollment. In 1805 the General Assembly completely withdrew state funding to Washington College which had a devastating effect on the school. The school's future looked dim as it was noted in 1805. (Washington College) has lost its reputation despite being provided with some of the most able tutors

Washington College found its way into a report on the U.S. by The Duc de la Rouchefoucault-Liancourt who visited Chestertown in 1796, and unfortunately saw the school in a poor state of condition. He noted that the college building was in very poor condition with glass missing from windows and building entrances without steps. At that time there were 40-50 students in attendance, with 16 boarders

The school struggled through tough times trying to expand with a school for women, however these plans failed

The conduct of students

In 1816 the board of Visitors and Governors adopted a set of rules and regulations in which to better govern the conduct of the The curriculum at this time was similar to students. Among these rules was the requirement for each student to be present at by students roll call and prayers every morning. Each student was required to "Attend to his busiother colleges ness, and not trifle away his time", and the preparation for recitation in all courses was required. During the school hours students must "Abstain from talking loud, or making bra, geometry, any noise within or outside of the college". Violation of the above rules resulted in fines (not exceeding five dollars) payable to the professor at the end of each semester.

Early in the December of 1817, the school's building nearly burned to the ground saved only by the re sponsiveness of several individu als, among them a Negro named Thomas Bowser who ensuing the incident was granted his freedom and compen sated two dollars for his efforts to the position of college principal, replacing Mr. Cooper, Before Dr. Waters arrived in Co. estertown, his request was met by the Boardon Visitors and Governors to provide the necon sarv repairs to the building in order to more adequately house the boarding students Along with the repairs came an adoption of the rules of conduct governing the boarding students which included 21 items. Among these items the "Unnecessary" talking alone with the throwing of victuals during the meatwas strictly prohibited. In response to the violation of the rules of the college by five students in 1825, the board agreed that if breaches of conduct occured in the future. the professor in charge was authorized to issue to all students punishment by the ferrule, which before applied only to student under sixteen years of age.

The fire of 1827

The school suffered another sharp set back on the evening of January 11, 1827 when the entire college building was destroyed by fire. The day in which the fire occured to president of the college was away on busi ness, yet upon returning home to Chesternum he reported seeing on the horizen the reflection of the fire which destroyed nearly all d

For the next twenty years the college wa forced to hold classes in rented house throughout Chestertown.

The Board grants vacations With the appointment of Richard Wiliamson Ringgold as the principal to the college in 1832 several changes were about to take place. On August 5, 1837 the Board received a request from the principal for the elongation of the holidays which the student traditionally received. The request notes that in the heat of the summer the ... pupils require prolonged relaxation for their progress... slow". The principal wished that a lengther ing of the summer vacation be authorized because. "A number of the students cannot (during the summer) endure a long confine ment in a hot sticky room, without increasing their liability to the attack of disease". Considering the climatic conditions of this region it is not surprising that two years after the request was submitted Board gave in and awarded the students and professors one week continued on page seven 1818 brought The Eim is a descendent of the tree under which George Washing Dr Francis Waters ton took command of the Continental Army.

Who Needs Books? We've Got a Salad Bar

The library is one of the most hallowed places on any college campus. It's where we spend our free hours studying, where stu-

where the graduating classes many years from now will spend their Yet, time spent in the library is only one of the constants which tie members of the Washington College community together; the books which fill the library are

The li brary is the focus for any academic activity on the campus books are the cement which holds together our education and re inforces every thing we learn.

So why are new books for the library such a low-priority item on the administra tions list of things worthy of expen- given where credit is due, the diture? There are so many unworthy library's historical books (e.g. old upon them (Can you justify thirty- best attributes; in fact, the majority thousand dollars on well-lit let- of the books in the library fall into tuce?) that the things on campus this category. Perhaps the answer to which desperately need money and the library's lack of current books is really make a difference to the stu- to sell the old ones to rare book dents are thrown aside as if they dealers and use the money for new in the window insulation (which is were flyers on the mail room floor. ones

As Washington College A weeding out of the old books promotes its "Campaign For Excel- would not only make research easdents fifty years ago studied, and lence," books should be the number ier, it would also allow a few new one priority, not last on the list books to be crammed into the shelves, which are about as crowded tions. as the mailroom at 11:35

Howcurrent books is below. only one of the problems which geous student who ventures into the Miller Library.

As the dark stairs to the second floor are crested, a harsh wind chills the bones of even the most determined led to believe that this bitter temperature is a scientific device to preserve and protect the yellowed

pages of the an cient books, others are thankful for the constant nudge it gives to keep the tired student from dozing off in things which have had money spent and unused) section is one of the its one of the study carrels seldom used by those reserving them.

> The first floor is some what better, but only when there is from dozing off." no draft blowing through the cracks never). This wind has disasterous Macintoshes in an area where which are stored disappearence of the latest issues ington College Dining Service Time, Newsweek, Current History, know of any other types of Passand any number of other publica- over?) the same building as one with too computerized file system (although much air on the first floor, there is that might be nice) or three hundred ever, the lack of not enough fresh air just one floor games on the library file server, face the coura- brary is hermetically sealed (perhaps there is an Eygptian tomb down there) and the air seems to be the same air that students breathed out in years past.

> Yet all of these physical problems in the Miller Library pale in comparison to the inconsideration fellow students for one another.

The noise level in the student. Some stu- echo chamber, more commonly dents have been called the Maryland Room, is louder than a pack of groupies at a Van Halen concert, and almost as stupid. theses

The idea of putting effects upon the current magazines people are socializing is almost as harebrained as labeling Matzoh for in this area, apparently causing the Jewish Passover (Does the Wash-

> What the students of It's hard to believe that in Washington College need is not a what we need is a decent amount of current research material on sub-The basement of the li- jects which are part of the Washington College curriculum.

off the cuff

Maybe then the powers that be may choose to grant Washington College a chapter of the most illustrious greek organization around-Phi Beta Kappa, and seniors would not have to drive to University of Delaware to finish their

"Some students have been led to believe that this bitter temperature is a scientific device to preserve and protect the yellowed pages of the ancient books...[to keep] the tired student

History

continued from page 6

for Christmas, one week for Easter, and the entire month of August, a btal of six weeks vacation throughout the year!

Disagreement on the location of the new building lead to years of delay in its construction. Eventually becomerstone for Middle Hall was this sounds strangely familiar lyed on of top College Hill on May, 4,1844. Within the cornerstone was seed the charter of the college, a at of the Visitors and Governors and several American coins.

Building Middle Hall The completion was a tremendous boost for the college, and in 1844 the first college catalog was printed listing entrance requiretents, curiculum, and costs which founted to a total of $134.00 for on, room and board, and wash-

The attic of Middle Hall housed boarders, in rooms which were and one-half feet in height. In Att of this the Board issued a statetett that no more than five persons ag for both the Winter and Summer be permitted to reside in each room. more than this they feared reasonably, would endager the students health. For the first time in years there was concern about the prospective increase in enrollment, and how the college would handle the increased need for housing. Enrollment at this time had been rising and new facilities were required to handle the housing crunch. All of

But credit should be

What the plans provided for was the construction of two additional buildings, one to the left and nd faculty, current newspapers, right of Middle hall appropriately named East and West Halls. In an attempt to reduce the cost of construction, the college purchased a brick making machine rather than transport the bricks from Baltimore. This plan failed, yet the construction of the buildings went on and in 1854 they were ready for occupancy

> Don't miss the next installment of the history of Washington Col-

Information for this article was taken from Fred Dumschott's book, Washington College.

Despite 9-4 Record, Athey's Bunch Struggles to Make MAC Playoffs

3 of 4 Losses Have Come to MAC Opponents, Against Only One Win

by Don Steele Although the record of the Washington College baseball team stands at an outstanding 9-4, there is one problem: the Shoremen are only 1-3 against MAC opponents. This by Swarthmore Against Wesley on Monday, diversity, winning the first game, 14-2, and then coming through, 3-2, in the second Eric Becker pitched a fine litter in the first game, inarguably his best performance of the season.

Dave Puskar was an offensive defeat. The Soremen could only make the playoffs.

snarkplug with four runs and three RBI's. Chip Bailey and Chris Driscoll helped out with three runs scored. Joe McAleer chipped in two RRI's

In the nightcap, Joe McAleer's week the Shoremen went 2-2, double in the seventh inning sweeping Wesley and getting swept knocked in Scott Jones to give WC a 3-2 win. Frank Davis walked away with the win. Davis is now 4-The Shorement again showed their 0, including the spring trip. A two run third inning paced the Shoremen to their win.

Facing Swarthmore, the Shore men could only muster five runs in two games. In the opener, Chris Long was handed the loss in a 10-2 piece together four extra base hits. Tom Auvil had both Shoremen

The second game was not much different from the first, as there was no real offense generated by the Shoremen. Swarthmore won 6-3,

Dave Puskar was the losing pitcher. Early on, the Shoremen looked good, scoring three runs in the same period. Charles Johnson looked good in relief for Puskar, giving up only 2 hits in 4 2/3 innings

The loss dropped the Shoremen to 1-3 in the MAC. So, even though a 9-4 record is very impressive, they have their work cut out for them to Senior Jackie Langdon tags Dickenson player late at first. Langdon has provided most of the Shorewomen's power this season, with

Enough to Rescue Struggling

Langdon, Smethurst Not

Hormes, Deniken, and Miller Lead Third-Ranked Shoremen Past Franklin & Marshall, Salisbury,

by Bill Beekman

The third-ranked Shoremen Laxter's picked up two important out. WCled3-1 at the end of one, but wins last week, upping their overall at halftime their lead was down to record to 7-4, with their only Divi- one, 6-5 sion III loss coming at Hobart.

Wednesday, when the Shoremen quarter showdown which WC won, visited sixth-ranked Franklin & 5-3; to give them a 13-11 victory

The game was tight through- the Shoremen,

After three quarters, however, Paul Deniken pumped in five the score was knotted, 8-8, setting goals and Tim Hormes four on the scene for the decisive fourth

Paul Miller added two goals for while Mike McGuane and frshman Ben Lamanna added one goal each. Miller also had a game high 5 assists.

Salisbury State did not prove as tough as Franklin & Marshall, as WC romped by their Eastern Shore rival, 14-6, on Saturday. The trio of Hormes. Deniken, and Miller ac counted for 11 goals Shorewomen's Softball and 6 assists, with Hormes leading the way with 6 goals. Mark Mickum had 16 saves. In the USILA Division III rankings, the Shoreman stand at third, behind Ohio-Wesleyan (7-1) and Hobart (5-2). Coming up strong in fourth place, however, is another New York school Nazareth which is 6-0 so far this scason. Nazareth will come to Chestertown later this month for a key game

Saturday, the Shoremen face eleventh ranked Roanoke on Kibler Field, starting at 1:30 pm. Last vear Roanoke surprised WC, upsetting the Shoremen 14-10. Historically, however, WC holds a commanding lead, having beaten Roanoke ten of the thirteen times that the two schools have met.

The Shoremen will also face Washington and Lee (April 23), Gattysburg (April 27), Nazareth (April 30), and West Chester(May 4), be-offs begin May 11

Centurion House P.O. Box 771 Chestertown, Maryland 21620

RBI's. According to Shorewoma Chris Pheeny, "Freshman playe Debbie Smethurst proved to be a peted in a home game this past excellent relief pitcher, putting the team's mind back in the game.

Hopefully, the team can begin the rest of their games the way they ended on Tuesday, with consisten and strong defense. The girls have busy schedule for the last two week of the season due to several previous game cancellations. Their will b double-headers at home both Salai too late for the girls to pull their Jackie Langdon highlighted the day and Sunday of next weekerd game when she hit the ball over the center field fence, knocking in three Good luck this week girls!

by Shari Golden

The girls' softball team com-

Tuesday against Galludet. Although the girls were not playing up to their potential for the first half of the game, a rearrangement of player positions turned the game around.

Unfortunately this change occured

15 April 1988

To The Class of 1988

Having wintered in this community for the past four years, the Class 1988 is the first class that I've had the opportunity to share life with from your beginnings here to graduation. During this time, it's been reward ing as a friend and occasional confidant to watch your growth choosing vocations, more clearly focus your personal values and lean how to creatively claim your uniqueness as persons. The time we share from conversations in the library to the frat parties, from moments shared joy to the growing experienced during moments of crisis ha given my life meaning too. It's been good to listen and share. As ye make your way into further defining your careers and personal goals, # prayers and best wishes for happiness are with you. Thinking truth and living love is a great challenge and worth the meaning it brings to life Good luck!

P.S. Yes, Sarah and I will be settling in C-town. Give us a call and us know how things are going, drop by as time permits. There will always be time.

11 win over sixth-ranked Franklin & Marshall

Midfielder Chris Dollar helped the Shoremen's cause with two assistsin WC's 13- forc the NCAA play-

Three of Five Men's Crews Prevail at Lafeyette

Women's crew travelled north for four and a half hours to row against Lafayette and Franklin & Marshall at Lafayette. At the end of the racing day three of five Men's crews had emerged victorious

The opening race of the day was the Women's Varsity Four in which Washington College finished third in the time of 8:17.00, several hoatlengths behind the winners from Franklin & Marshall who finished in 7:43.00.

WC's Varsity Eight paired off against Lafayette's Varsity Eight in the next race. WC easily won in a time of 6:08.00, the fastest time posted by all of the crews that afternoon. The Lafayette crew crossed the finish line several boatlengths behind(6:35.00)

On the schedule, the race was listed as the Men's Varsity Eight race which implies that the schools participating in the regatta enter their fastest Men's boat, yet at the end of the day it was revealed that Lafayette had entered their "Lightweight" Varsity into the race which, as everyone would soon see, was not the fastest Lafavette boat finished second (8:29.00) between Last Saturday Men's and the winners from Franklin & Marshall (7:56.00) and the last place finishers from Lafayette (8:36.00).

The next race was the Women's Novice Four race. The WC Four petitor

The second victory of the day was the first turned in all season by the Men's Novice Eight. This race was the first ever for freshman coxswain Petra Fajerson, who took over the position from Mindy Stark. The WC novice easily won this race finishing in 6:38.00, well out in front of Lafayette who finished in 6:45 00

The men's varsity Eight was split up into two Fours to challenge the two Fours assembled by Lafayatte. The first Varsity Four race was the second that day for coxswain Tina Smith and the stern four of the Varsity Eight. Here WC was up against the top four Lafavette oarsmen, with Lafevette com ing out on top in 6:38.00, followed by Franklin & Marshall a half-see ond behind, and WC last at 6:45.00.

The bow four of the Men's Varsity Eight were placed together to race the Lafayette JV Four. This boat was also coxed by Smith, her third race of the day, and successfully held off the two challegers from Lafayette to finish in 6:48.00. four seconds over the nearest com-

Petra Fajerson won in her first race in her first attempt, and Tina Smith coxed four races, two to victory as three of five of the Men's Crews emerged victorious over Lafeyette and Franklin & Marshall

Word Processing

Services. reports, term papers,

etc.-

prompt, accurate,

reasonable.

Call Cathy

348-2126

Smith replaced Dan Feiner to cox weights the Men's JV Eight race. It was obvious the Lafayette had stacked Lafayette boat, and the second fasttheir JV boat. The boat contained est boat in the entire regatta. Lafay-

"We got off to a slow start,"

The JV boat was the fastest the four oarsmen that had earlier ette won in the time of 6:25.00, the

For her fourth race of the day, along with four additional heavy- crew. WC came in two boatlengths behind in the time of 6:34 00 Congratulations go out to Petra

Fajerson for winning her first race in her first attempt, and also to Tina Smith who coxed four races, two in defeated the WC Varsity Four, fastest time turned in by a Lafayette winning efforts.

Breakfast S A.M. 41 A.M.

Sonps & Sandwich

Best Efforts of Season Build Confidence for Shore Laxwomen

by Bill Beekman

Two strong performances last week by the Women's Lacrosse Saturday, the Shorewomen tries, a 15-5 rout over Muhlenburg goal, a first half goal which tied the College. Although they = dropped their next game, 10-8, against Sal- "It's the best effort this young team has women scored five of put forth this year. They pulled things the final six goals. together better than ever before. (But)

Washington and Muhlenburg played evenly through the first half, with WC tying the score at four on a goal by Mary Beth score, 2-2 Enright with 47 seconds remaining in the first half though, against Salisbury on Mon-

A different Shorewomen team came out on the field in the second day half, however, outscoring Muhlenburg 11-1.

"In the first half," comments Coach Diane Guinan, "we played with a tentative confidence. It was our goal to turn that tonfidence into an aggressive confidence - and we did that - result- 5-3.

ing in a much more offensive

Sarah Coste led all goal scorteam have buoyed the spirits of this ers with seven. Beth Matthews knotted three goals, while Lee Anne Ledwin and Enright added a pair a registered their second win in seven piece. Amy Tiehel had WC's other we still have our problems..."

The momentum did not carry

The Shorewomen started

into the beginning of the next game,

slowly, as Salisbury jumped to quick 4-0 lead. But then Ledwin knocked in two unassisted goals and Coste added another and the Shorewomen were suddenly back in the game, down at the end of the half,

Charlie

says Guinan, "but halfway through the first half, the defense became sparked and turned on the aggressiveness Salisbury opened the second half scoring three unanswered goals, before the Shorewomen's offense again came alive, notching five of the game's last six goals. The comeback, however, fell short, as Coste's third goal of the game with only eleven seconds remaining still left the Shorewomen two goals short, 10-8. Matthews. Tiechel, and Enright added single goals to Enright's two and Coste's "At the end of the game, one might have thought Washington was the winner and Salisbury was the loser," explains Guinan, "It's the best effort this young team has put forth this year. They pulled things together better than ever before. We still have our problems and areas to work on, but it was ex-

Coach Diane Guinan

RESTAURANT CHESTERTOWN, MD. BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-5 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:30-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD

778-1214

Rt. 213 & 201

Fin Fur Feather

424 Bayside Ave. Rock Hall, Md 639-7454

Friday and Saturday Nights

live piano performance by MickeyDulin and

Prime Rib Special

Larrimore's Breakfast, Subs, Sandwiches, Dinner Platters South of Bridge, Chestertown 778-6022

Open 7 days Foreign Car Specialist Volkswagen and Imports Service & Repairs 778-1098

Coley

Laura Audra

Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists A & P Parking Lot estertown, Maryland 21620

No the computer did not crash, but the Shoremen base ball squad has this season against MAC opponents. MAC Despite a 9-4 record, the Shoremen are only 1-3 within Woes their division, and in danger of running themselves out of the playoff picture, (see story, page 8)

Applications for ELM editorial positions for 1988-89 are available in the Oueen Anne's dorm lounge.

ATTENTION COLLEGE SENIORS AND GRAD STUDENTS

Good News! You may already qualify for the CHEVROLET-GMAC COLLEGE GRADUATE FINANCE PLAN

SAVE $400 on the new Chevrolet car or light-duty truck of your Qualifying is easy. Take advantage of this special program and drive home the owner of a new Chevrolet

Call or come in for more information. Leasing customers Nucar Chevrolet · Buick

> Route 213 N., Chestertown, MD 21620 (301) 778-1922

DON'T DELAY, OFFER EXPIRES APRIL 30, 1989

welcome

Flatten Fat Rolls With a Fresh Attitude and Some Simple Changes

singing, trees are blooming and millions of Americans are emerging from their long winter's nap, grabbing their fat rolls and wishing they were thin

Doctor Iock

If you've bulked up over the winter and want to slim down before summer, now is the time to start. DR. JOCK has some foolproof and fat-free suggestions to help you lose the weight you want safely, slowly and forever Set a Goal. Decide how much weight you want to lose. Be realistic. Ten pounds in two weeks is not realistic. Figure on losing 1-2 pounds a week. Be kind to yourself. And patient. Sure, you can lose weight faster with some crazy crash diet but you won't be able to keep it off. The best way to lose weight and keep it off is to eat more sensibly and excer cise. Sound familiar? That's OK. This time is going to be different!

Avoid Fads, Gimmicks, and Special Formulas, Stupid diet plans are a dime a dozen. Remem ber the grapefruit diet, the food combining diet, the high-protein diet, the low-carbohydrate diet, the 6-banana-a-day diet, the Scardsdale diet. etc., etc., etc.? Forget them all.

Fad diets are foolish and can be dangerous: ditto for diet pills. In fact, forget going on any diet. Diets smack too much of deprivation. What you want is a whole new eating-and-exercise plan, a satisfying systen you can easily live with for the rest of your life.

Find a Well-Balanced, Low-Cal Plan. Most doctors recommend eating 1,200 calories a day, emphasizing natural (unprocessed) foods low in calories and high in nutrients, especially fruits, vegetables, whole grains, lean meats, fish and low-fat dairy prod-

Talk to your doctor or see a Spring is here. Birds are nutritionist or join an established slowly and you'll eat less. Chem support group, like Weight Watchers. Look for a program that encourages slow weight loss and long-term lifstyle change. Avoid sugar substitutes and artificially sweetened products. Read a good book on nutrition. The more you understand, the easier slimming down Exercise is Very Important. If you think you can lose weight without exercising, think again. Exercise burns calories. If you eat less and increase the amount of exercise you do, you'll speed up

"Diets smack too much of deprivation. What you want is a whole new eating-andexercise plan, a satisfying systen you can easily live with for the rest of your life."

our weight loss and tone up your body. Exercise makes you feel better and look better.

whatever suits you bike, run, etc. - but do it a least 30 minutes a session, at least three times a week. Don't worry about exercise increasing your appetite. Instead, substitute working out for pigging our...and watch the pounds More Tips and Tactics:

Keep a food journal. Writing down what and when you eat is a wonderful way to make yourself aware of your eating habits. For most of us, overeating is an unconscious act. Awareness encourages each bite and savaor the taste and smell. Gobbling leads to gluttony Smaller Portions. Scale down portion size, but don't skin meals. Weigh and measure your food until you learn to eyball a proper portion. Look for ways local back. If you like sandwiches for instance, use one slice of cheese (ne meat) instead of two. And thissliced bread is better than thick Eat Smart, Know what's good for you. Throw out the tare chips and cookies and stock up on fruits and vegetables. Learn to bake broil or poach food instead of frying or sautéing it in fat. Switch to skin milk and low-fat dairy products Cut way back on butter, cheese, salad dressing, and ice cream.

Trade High for Low. Learn to trade-off high-cal foods for tasty. low-cal alternatives.

For instance, instead of using 1/4 cup of sour cream (125 calories) on your baked potato, use the same amount of low-fat yogurt (70 caleris) and save 55 calories. Instead of 2 ounces of potato chips (320 caloris), go for 4 cups of air-popped con (no butter or oil) and save 220 calris. Instead of ordering french fries (270 calories), get a baked potate (80 calories) and save 190 calories These savings add up. The more substitutions you make, the better you'll look and feel.

Healthy attitude. Keep 3 positive, healthy attitude. Eating less and exercising more shouldn't feel like a punishment. You should feel proud and happy about the changes you're making. If you slip one day, don't hate yourself.

Think about why you did what you did (stress? boredom? anger?) and go back to your sensible eating plan. Be patient. Lifestyle changes take time. to yourself; you're not a bad person just because you weigh too much. The more you respect yourself and the positive changes you're making in you life, the easier it will be to reach your goal. And when you'd reach your goal, do something special to celebrate. You deserve it

| BIKEWORK 778-6940

High Street, Chestertown

Chestertown's Bicycle Shop

HAVE YOUR BICYCLE TUNED UP FOR SPRING!

> Tune- up Special: $25.00

Open 9-5p.m. weekdays Closed Sundays

Stam Drug Co. 215 High Street Chestertown. Maryland 778-3030

> e Greeting Cards Cosmetics

· Russell Stover

Candy Soda Fountain

Wilcox Impresses With New Exhibit

by Kelly Lamoree the show currently in the Gallery of the Fine Arts Building is this: GO. That said, here are the particulars: It is a show of paintings by Javis Wilcox, and Gallery hours are 3-5 p.m. weekdays

The work in this show is simply stunning. Certainly after the rather enid and uninspired photography exhibit last hanging there it is an improvement, and certainly still an improvement over the Juried Show of the Kent County Arts Council.

Why is this work so stunning? Simply because of the way it's done The subjects are mundane: still life, landscape, people on a beach, but the treatment is not. I struggle to find an art history term to describe it. for on one hand it had the matter-offactness, if you will, of realism, but the lighting and color techniques seem strangely and charmingly Impressionistic. Truly Impressionistic, not the fuzzy and saccharrine Renoirs that we're used to hearing about, but the tenet that the Impressionist movement was founded on: the desire to depict an image as it appears at one certain moment, an impression of an image at one point in time. Perhaps the easiest comtarison to make would be with that of the Haystack series by Moment.

The first thing to be said about which for your own sake I strongly hope you do, you'll see lots of strong, high key colors. You'll say, but how can this be Impressionistic Colors don't have to be pastels to be components of an impression. It is a skewed sort of Impressonism, and it may take some longer to realize exactly what I mean. Take a look at the paintings of houses in shade in

But for the general viewer, just enjoy the paintings. They are extremely enjoyable. Almost addictingly enjoyable. It's hard to say why, too. The point of view is challenging, as in the case of the picture with daffodils Go up to the painting and look at how he's applied his paint. Almost straight from the tube, and there is a lot of it. This smacks of Romanticism or Abstact Exressionism, maybe both, but certainly something very interesting.

The paintings I thought were especially effective were th ones showing the old house, the large beach scene and the daffo dil picture (they are all untitled). The colors in all of the paintings are so strong and so clean that even someone who isn't an art buff, per se, can enjoy them

CAMPUS CALENDAR

Monday, April 18: Literary Hous Talk- SOUTHERN VOICES:

TONI MORRISON AND THE

Sherry Magill, Speaker, O'Neill

iterary House, tea at 4:00 p.m.,

The Film Series-BLUE

Tuesday, April 19: William Jam

onen-HIGH TECHNOLOGY

GIOUS FAITH, Dr. John Scree-

fedical Humanities and Associa

fedical College of PA, Hynson

m, Chief of the Division of rofessor of Bioethics, The Vednesday, April 20: The Washington College Music

CITAL, Norman James The

epartment-STUDENT RE-

Thursday, April 21: The Drama

Department Presents- MADAME

UTTERFLY, Tawes Theatre.

RELI-

VELVET, Norman James Theatre

PROBLEM OF SLAVERY

alk at 4:30 p.m

MEDICINE AND

ounge, 7:30 p.m

8:00 p.m

ctured above is one of artist Jarvis Wilcox's untitled paintings, "Wilcox paints in a colorful, clean-cut. naturalistic style." Many of his paintings portray realistic scenes such as beaches, houses and flowers. Wilcox hails from Long Island, New York, and is the father of senior Charlie Wilcox. Viewing hours for this exhibit can be arranged by contacting Professor Robert Janson-LaPaime at 778-2800.

Madame Butterfly Spreads Wings

Next week, the Washington and Derick Serra. College Drama Department will present a performance of David Balasco's Madame Butterfly. The play, adapted later into Puccini's classic three act opera, was originally presented in 1900, where it ran unsuccessfully but memorably for some years. Since the play was written almost ninety years ago poses a unique challenge to the production of the show

Jason Rubin, who makes his Washington College directorial debut with this show, finds this challenge very interesting. He discovered the play after reading a review on The Girl of the Golden West, another play by Balasco. This in turn led to Rubin's rediscovery of Butterfly and the opportunities the play offers.

The play centers around Madame Butterfly, the jilted Japanese lover who waits patiently for her American military man to return to her. In the process, she must deal with suitors, traitors, and politics while trying to keep control of the situation which has befallen her. Wendy Snow plays the title role of the little Geisha girl trying to keep her sad world together. The rest of the cast includes Gina Braden, Geoffrey Girard, Douglas Henrey, Kevin Holland, Wendy Kloiber,

The play itself is described by Rubin as a "melodramatic potboiler." When he started to consider the play for production, he thought "Wow! Here's this 1900 melodrama with gutsy emotions, passionate highs, agonizing lows Great stuff," The challenge comes in making this 1900 melodrama into a believable play for a 1980's audience. Rubin hopes to "make it as modern today as it was modern in 1900." To do this, he intends to make the production palatable, believable, and accessible to the modern American audience, specifically

Rubin notes, "I realized, that although the play is rather cliché, there are still parallels to modern society that will prove very interesting." Referring to Vietnam, Amerasians, trade agreements, and such popular works as South Pacific, he feels the play still holds great rele-

Rubin's goal is to "recapture the emotions" of the text and to try to Photo Exhibit "investigate the emotional impact of the play." He calls this approach a "revisionist" look at the show, and aims to evoke these relations. To do this, a great deal of planning and effort has been put into the set and costuming. Stage manager Emily Lott has helped Rubin with this planning. The set will be a formal one, "classic in its simplicity," using actual Japanese measurements and architecture to evoke the feeling of Japan. Paula Jaworski, former art director of Baltimore Magazine, was called in as a "guest" costumer to help prepare the fabrics and patterns necessary to bring Japan to the Music will be added to heighten the experience throughout the show An unconventional but captivating light show is also planned to capture the play. Even the stage curtain, which Rubin says "has not been used in a very long time here, " will be used for the production. The challenge of the play is offering an unusual opportunity for all in-

Madame Butterfly will be performed on April 21, 22, and 23 at Tawes Theatre. All performances will begin at 8 p.m.

Next week, on April 21 and 22, an exhibit by photographer Helen Marcus, "Photographs of Contemporary Writers," will be shown at the O'Neill Literary House

Sophie Kerr Prize

The Sophie Kerr Prize is awarded to the senior deemed by the ophie Kerr Committee to have "the best ability and promise for ture fulfillment in the field of literary endeavor. vishing to submit samples of their writing are invited to do so. Submissions may be poetry, fiction or non-fiction. All submission should be in the hands of the committee by May 2 and may be rought to the office of the Acting Chairman of the English department, Bennett Lamond, for convenience and safekeeping. Manu cripts will be returned to their owners after commencement. All graduating seniors are eligible recipients of the award.

OLD WHARF INN ON THE CHESTER RIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

Southern Voices

On Monday, April 18th, Sherry Magill will be concluding the Mon day Series with a talk entitled. Southern Voices: Toni Morrison and the Problem of Slavery.

Magill first became interested the concept of the Morrison-slavby connection while reading Toni Morrison's widely acclaimed novel Seloved. She commented that she lelt "a real emotional experience in reading the novel and began to reflect back on things in the American past which are important in defining the American character." This also nade her think a great deal about the literary treatment of slavery and the fact that slavery co-existed with one of the great periods of enlightennt in American history

Morrison's novel also made Magili look back to her own youth, owing up in Montgomery, Alama at the time of the civil rights ment, and the forces which lped shape her own views. wed emphasized to her that We seem to have come to terms hith the race issue, but as the South grates legally, it becomes more more accepted by the nation. then Toni Morrison comes ng and picks our conscience and Magill will speak at the O'Neill cary House on Monday, April th at 4:30 p.m. The talk will be teded by tea at 4:00 p.m.

ENTERTAINMENT

Talking Heads Get Naked

by Jim Sobczak

Hello, you are reading. This is the arts and entertainment page The particular portion of the page you are reading now is the album review. This is easily identified by the album cover around which this text is placed Naked and is the tenth album by the tive Mr. Jones. Dylan sang of him Talking Heads. For the Talking Heads fans who missed the upbeat and danceable spirit that was somewhat absent in their last two efforts. Little Creatures and True Stories, I'm happy to inform you that it is back. David Byrne and the rest of the Heads have returned to the African and Haitian sound that began to surface in the Brian Eno produced Fear of Music and was made almost magical in Remain in Light, also produced by Eno. The popular Speaking in Tongues, which contains "Burning Down the House," is also filled with the quick paced guitars and drum beats that give the Talking Heads their unique sound.

Variety has been part of the Talking Heads repetoire for over a decade. Each album has been different and Naked is no exception. The most surprising element of Naked is horns. The opening track, "Blind," contains two trumpets, alto saxaphone, tenor saxaphone, bari-

When mixed with guitars, traditional and conga bass and drums, French piano, and cowbell, it creates the exciting and complex style which is also found in "Mr. Jones" and "Big Daddy," two other songs on the album

Following "Blind," is a song The name of the album is dedicated to Bob Dylan's conserva-"walking into a room with your pencil in your hand/You see somebody naked and you say who's that man/You try so hard, but don't understand /just what you will say when you get home/Because something is happening here but you don't know what it is/Do you Mr. Jones?" In the Talking Heads song Mr. Jones has changed. Now he has "Got curly hair/Drinking cold beer from metal cans...Mr. Jones is back in town/Aces high/Now his pants are falling down/He looks so fine/in those patent leather shoes.

The third track that is laden with horns tells the story of a family having bad times and is titled "Big Daddy." Obviously, because of the subject matter, the homs are not as jumpy and alive. A smoother rhythm results as the story evolves.

The second surprising element I found in Naked was Johnny Marr. Who's Johnny Marr? He was the musical composer and guitarist for tone saxaphone, and a trombone. the Smiths. Johnny accompanies

David Byrne on guitar on four of the "Ruby Dear," "Mommy Daddy You and I," "(Nothing but) Flowers," and "Cool Water

The third song containing Marr accompaniment is "(Nothing but) Flowers," When I first heard this song I was reclining with songsheet in hand paying careful attention to the song. After hearing the first eight or nine lines. I must admit that my relaxed reclining body was jolted into what seemed to be the beginings of a vomitous swoon. I gagged and screamed "are my ears deceiving me? Has David Byrne written some hippie love laden flower everywhere piece of trash? I don't believe it!" I am happy to inform you that my convulsive rage was quickly neutralized as I heard "If this is paradise/I wish I had a lawnmower." There I stood, feeling quite relieved and satisfied, for the meaning of the song was completely in contrast to my first impressions. In fact, I was so delighted I could hardly feel the embarrassment harsh side, while "Overload" tends stemming from my overreaction to be more bizzare. and lack of patience.

gize. I just couldn't resist). This harsh depiction of humanity stating, tune took me back to the sweeping, mysterious, floating sensation I first men will walk on Mars/But we will encountered when I caring "Over- still be monkeys/Down deep in-

HEADS

Talking Heads bare all with their latest album, Naked. which features the eclectic styles for which the Heads are revered load" off of Remain in Light . Though the slower tempo is common in both songs, "Cool Water" is disinctly different. It is a tad on the

If a Talking Heads greatest hits The final cut is titiled "Cool was ever produced, "The Facts of Water" and is also Marred (I apolo- Life" would be included. It is a "Someday we'll live on Venus/and side." This is sort of along the line of what five devolving spud-how from Ohio sang not so long ago,

Throughout this review yo may have noticed the difficulty Ita comparing songs from Naked 1 other Heads albums. Why is this This is because each album th Talking Heads release has new an different sounds that distinguishi from the others. This is why the have remained on the cutting ele and have lasted.

Chestertown Movie Theater

POLICE ACADEMY V

Hours: Fri.-Sun. 7 & 9 p.m

778-1575

Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30-9:00 Closed Sundays & Holidays

Tuesday-Saturday Complete Hair Care A Shear Design COMPLETE HAIR CARE

Janie Thompson (301) 778-0898

"BLUE VELVET is a mystery... a masterpiece... a visionary story of sexual awakening of good and evil, a trip to the underworld."

"Erotically charged... Whether you're attracted or repelled by Lynch's brilliantly bizarre vision one thing is for sure, you've never seen anything like it in your life."

Blue Velvet

BUDD TINCH...

GNOOD TINCH...

GNOOD TINCH...

GROOD TINCH...

GROOGE DOCKESON. GRAN SOCIORAL PRESERVE SHAS "THAN SPILE" — PRIECO MARKS

"COUNTRE DUNISH — THATE BUDD ANNIEL ENCHAND SOIN —TOWN THEN

TOWN TO THE THANKS OF T

Washington College Film Series Norman James Theater Friday * Sunday * Monday 7:30 p.m.

> $1 students/faculty/staff $2 all others

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 26

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, April 22, 1988

Student Suspended by SCC on Assault Charge

Protests Result as ACJ, Cater Uphold Decision by Tony Caliguri

dents assembled in front of William Smith Hall last week to protest the suspension of Matt Wickwire recent Student Conduct Council case. President Douglass Cater upheld the SCC's decision, but sanized an all-campus forum on the Issue to hear student concerns.

Faculty Promotions Announced process, Taylor recently delivered Teaching. Anderson has earned

Two Washington College sculty have been promoted to full ciate professorships

itical science, and Robert College committee work. erson, professor of philosophy, ere unanimously approved for otion to full professors

Taylor came to Washington College in 1972 as an assistant ofessor, and was promoted to ociate professor in 1979. He tived his A.B. from Dickinson ollege in 1964, his M.A. from ton University in 1966, and is Ph.D. from Princeton in 1972. A ialist in the field of American Situtional law and judicial Lindback Award for Distinguished an essay on the Constitution at a consistently outstanding teaching fessorships and three have been Bicentennial Conference at Hofstra evaluations. The author of two med tenure and promotion to University; this essay is now under recently published scholarly consideration for publication. articles, he is currently working on a John B. Taylor, professor of Taylor has devoted many hours to book on Plato

Washington College faculty in 1976 tenure and promotion to associate as an assistant professor, and was professorships for chemistry promoted to associate professor in professor Rosette Roat, psychology 1984. He received as A.B. from professor Marcia Pelchat, and Temple University in 1961, his M.A. from Yale University in 1965, has played a leadership role in the College's Honors Program and the Middle States Committee. The 1980 recipient of the College's

The Academic Affairs Robert Anderson joined the Committee unanimously approved drama professor Rick Davis

Dr. Roat joined the faculty in and his Ph.D. from Yale in 1976. He 1983. A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, she earned her M.Ed. in Natural Science in 1980 and her Ph.D. in chemistry in 1984 from the University of Delaware. She has served on various committees, including Academic Computing, Student Aid, and the Committee on the Status of Women. She was recently awarded a Young Scholars Program Grant from the National Science Foundation to fund a summer course in forensic chemistry for high school students.

A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, Marcia Pelchat earned her master's degree there in 1977, and her doctoral degree there in 1981. She was a post-doctoral research fellow in the department of psychology at Montefiore Medical Center/Albert Einstein College of

A Washington College been hit in the chest. student was suspended last week as the result of charges brought against him by the Student Conduct Council for the assault of another student. The punishment, which was appealed twice unsuccessfully, has sparked protests, a petition to President Cater, and an all campus meeting between Cater and numerous interested students. According to Student Conduct Council chair Brenda

Conner, John (Matt) Wickwire was charged with assault, endangering the well being of a Washington College Student, and conduct unbecoming of a Washington College student. The situation as described by witnesses revealed that Wickwire urinated in a bathtub in the suite of Eric Becker. As Becker confronted Wickwire upon learning of the incident, Wickwire proceeded to argue with Becker. According to Wickwire and two other witnesses present, Becker was screaming at Wickwire. Wickwire responded that he never had the slammed Becker's head against a wall four times and punched Becker in the nose. Becker was knocked back and found a shirt with which to cover his injuries. Because the room in which the incident took place was small, Becker had to pass by Wickwire in order to leave the room. As Becker attempted to push by , Wickwire struck Becker four more times. Becker then left the suite. The two again confronted when Wickwire struck Becker in the face six times and in the head four additional times. Wickwire was reported to have provoked two other incidents during the night, of the testimony. Following the incident, Becker was taken to Kent and Oueen Anne's County Hospital. There, he was found to have numerous cuts and bruises, a swollen black eye, and a visible lump on the head. Washington College security was notified of Becker's condition as standard operating procedure.

according to Conner's recollection

Following 20-25 minutes of deliberations, Wickwire was found responsible for all charges. According to reports by Security officers, Wickwire expressed no remorse over the act. In addition, it was found that Becker did not provoke the incident nor did he strike Wickwire. "It was the unanimous opinion of the SCC that this was not a fight, but a beating involving one assailant and one unwilling participant," Despite the decision. Wickwire claimed to have

Wickwire appealed the decision of the SCC to the All-Campus Judiciary Board, where his appeal was heard, then turned down, He claimed that the jury was loaded and that Becker initiated the incident. "The jury was so loaded that it was not even funny...there were four girls there I had never seen and one guy who I might see once a month, but who I have never seen out at a social event."

Wickwire the appealed the decision of both the SCC and the ACL to Cater's Office After meeting with Wickwire and his father. reassembling many of the members of the ACJ, and spending several hours listening to tapes of the proceedings, Cater upheld the decision of the SCC and the ACJ. Cater defended his decision under the grounds that there was no sufficient alternate penalty and that there was no apparent problem with the basis of the original decision. Wickwire opportunity to discuss the matter with Cater and that each time he did. he was "shot down.

The penalty, immediate sus pension and financial responsibility for Becker's medical costs, was protested on Friday outside the front entrance to William Smith Hall. At that time, a petition was passed around which protested the decision of the ACJ, appealing to President Cater to reverse the penalty on the grounds that Wickwire was "unjustly" charged.

Cater responded to the petition in an all-campus meeting held in Norman James Theater on the evening of Tuesday, April 26. During that time, Cater was met with charges that the SCC did not hear the case fairly, that the jury may have been "loaded", that the jury was in fact not one of his peers, and that Wickwire was the victim of a sudden change of policy in the College's reaction to fighting.

Cater responded that he listened to the tape of the SCC case and found that there were no signs of personal bias in the questions, therefore he did not see any evidence of a "loaded jury". Cater then asserted that Wickwire was not the "victim" of a sudden change in policies and that in fact the decision and penalty were consistent with past decisions. Cater stated that he has never acted lightly on acts of violence on campus, citing a student who was expelled in April of last year for such conduct.

continued on page 5

| Letters to the Editor     | page 2  |
|---------------------------|---------|
| World News Update         | page 4  |
| enior Brunch              | .page 5 |
| WC History                | page 6  |
| May Day Preview           | page 7  |
| oming Back from the Dead. | nage 8  |
| horemen Shell W&I         | nage 9  |
| Art Show Review           | page 12 |
|                           |         |

continued on page 5

Editorial

Stupid Human Tricks

Sometimes, Washington College students seem to try to outdo each other in acts of stupidity.

For the past several years, for example, Washington College students have been pulling false fire alarms. At 3 am last Sunday, however, some Washington College student or guest upped the stupidity ante another notch by igniting a poster on the door of a room in first floor Caroline and running away. With a little bad luck, instead of just filling the corridors with smoke, the fire could have easily spread to the ceiling and rooms of Caroline. With a little had luck, some students easily could have died

Washington College Security and the State Fire Marshall are investigating the incident. If the arsonist is caught, he faces immediate expulsion, and probably a large fine and/or jail sentence.

But while the sheer stupidity of this dangerous act seems apparent, we see an underlying problem which someday may kill a Washington College student. That student could be you

Since September, more than three dozen false alarms have gone off in Washington College dormitories. Last year, this problem forced the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Department to stop reacting to Washington College fire alarms unless Security determined that a real fire threat existed. This has the effect of delaying the response of the Fire Department in the event of a true emergency.

This year, we fear that students are becoming complacent when they hear the annoying buzz of the fire alarm. Students are reacting slowly and reluctantly, or else they are not reacting at all.

As a resident of Caroline, I know of several students who did not respond to Sunday morning's alarm. We all know of students who have hid in their rooms during fire alarms, and some of you readers are those very students.

Let us give you some advice: Don't stay indoors at the the sound of the fire alarm. People have died from staying indoors. At a recent fire at Delaware State that was frighteningly similar to Sunday's event, several students died because they stayed indoors. This has happened at other coleges across America

At worst, take a fifteen or so minute study break (or break from whatever else you may do here), and chat with some friends outside while Security checks out the situation. Someday, you may save your life by doing this.

False fire alarms and stupid and deadly pranks are not going to suddenly disappear, at least not while students tolerate them from other students. The Washington College student body showed tremendous unity last week in trying to save one of its own from expulsion. Maybe the student body should be equally as active in demanding that the minority of students who set fire to posters and pull fire alarms be kicked out as it is in keeping in students who bash the heads of other students against bathroom walls. When you know of someone who sets off fire alarms or starts fires, don't keep it a secret. You only contribute to the problem

In the least, respond to fire alarms. Your life may depend on it.

Washington College Elm

| Edite                     | ors                |
|---------------------------|--------------------|
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Keh         |
| News Editor               | Tony Caligiu       |
| Features Editor           | Jennifer M. Harris |
| Sports Editor.            | Bill Beekm         |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor |                    |
| Photography Editor        |                    |
| Graphics Editor           | Todd Ka            |
| Mana                      | ger                |
| Managing Editor           | Cathy Jew          |
| Advertising Manager       | Erin Hodge-William |
| Chambella Manager         |                    |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and am washe shility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed columns com-

taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff. All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the edi

All itterers to the oblice are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editors cannot sharp a publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that cannot sharp a publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the admitted point would by violated by disclosure of his mans. Students should include their year and major. Paculty and stuff members should include their positions and departments. Limit testers to 800 words or less and include day and everage phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked boxes at the editorial office or in the Dining Hall, or mailed clo The Elm Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters become the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Tuesday to be considered for publication in that week's issue.
The Elm's business and editoria ce is located in the main lounge of Queen Ann dormitory. Business hours are 7.00 m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:0 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor's Note: Some of the following letters have been held from last race; people who still persisted in week due to space limitations. Please refer to our editorial policy at the lower lefthand corner of this page when sending letters to the

Ballot Should Not Include Withdrawn Candidate To the Editor:

There were some rather odd facts reported in last week's Film The oddity lies not in the manner of reportage but in the facts that were relayed to your readership. The issue at hand is the SGA elections. The fact is that a candidate who had withdrawn received well over one hundred votes, and that they were counted in the final tabulation

This strikes us as very odd. SGA officials have state that there was a sign declaring that Bodnar had withdrawn; there was-beneath people signing the ballot, beneath SGA officials handing out the ballots. Many people we know were barely aware that Bodnar had withdrawn. It is wondered if people were so displeased with the choice of three other candidates that they had to choose one who was no longer running. It is wondered if people are so stupid that they would vote for someone who was not running. It was not fair for any of the candidate running for Vice-President to leave Bodnar on the ballot in the first place. Would it have really taken that long to cross his name out? Would it have been so difficult to place the sign somewhere more

There is pride among certain people that not only does WC have an election system but it is a fair and realistic one. Okay, fine. But if we are to believe that, then the Bodnar votes should be designated for someone else. The situation is rather

PART TIME - HOME MAILING PROGRAMS voting for Gary Hart or Pete DuPont would find that their votes and delegates would go to someone else. Delgates and votes should not die just because a campaign has. All fairness considered, it is even more unfair for someone who is not in the race to be part of it and on the ballot.

True there was an emergency Senate meeting to discuss this matter. Not surprisingly the matter was dismissed. Any body that would not only leave a defunct candidate on the ballot, and count his votes as they would an extant candidate. woud not see the sense of correcting this error. Maybe next year the rest of the school or the SGA - whichever is by then the least informed group of the two - can elect a President who doesn't even go here.

Sincerely, Kelly Lamoree, Senior Regina Pepper, Junior Brian Kroll, Junior

Flag Recalls Southern Pride o the Editor:

I am writing in response to the letter by Jonathan Sarris regarding the Confederate flag that hangs in the window of my room on the second floor of Middle Hall. I would first like to make clear the fact that the flag, although visible from out-

Reagan Overreacts On Policy In last week's political commentary, Mr. Bourjaily praised the Reagan administration's masterful use of "measured response" in its foreign policy. However, far from employing the moderation and se-leader Gadaffi's personal resident lectivity that this phrase suggests, Reagan has in political reality overreacted to many_ global situations, handled crises in a ians. All this in response for Libral blundering and near-sighted fashion, and substituted military policy for coherent foreign policy during his 8 years in office like in the primaries for the current side the building, is intended to be decoration for my room and not a adornment for the rear face of Middle Hall. I mention this to disas sociate the Washington Colle chapter of Kappa Alpha Order from this controversy. The Confedera flag is my personal property and decided to hang it in my room-K.A. had no input in the decision

HELP WANTED

The Confederate flag, just like any other symbol, can stand to many different things. There is a single correct interpretation of sonnet by Shakespeare any ma than there is one simple meaning to a Grateful Dead song. Literature music, and even flags are all opens interpretation and to refer to a interpretation other than ones our as "obfuscation" is a sign of a closel mind. Mr. Sarris is not omniscient and his is not the single correct opion of what the Confederate flag represents. To me, the flag is reminder of my home which I get to visit all to infrequently. It is also symbol of Southern pride. I an proud to be from the South [an art he obviously has little understaning of and I choose to demonstrate this pride by displaying the Confederate

Without even mentioning is sues of civil liberties and freedome expression, I would like to conclude my reply to Mr. Sarris by stating that Letters continued on page 4

Take, for example, M Bourjaily's depiction of the Libra bombing. Here the US launched massive air strike on conventional military targets, assaulted Libya in a thinly disguised attempt at a sassination, and killed scores of commentary innocent civil involvement in a German terrors attack which killed two Americans Was this really a "measured ® sponse?" Moreover, the claim this the attack was justified because i ended the "outbreak of terrorism" patently false, as the recent Kuwah hijacking and the kidnapping of US military observer in Lebans illustrate.

continued on page

Drugs Cannot Be Legislated Away

certainly becoming more conscious of the gore on him. To me that is phenomenal tion success, but it is a far cry from winning. roany farther I should mention that this is an of their value. I do, however, have a great deal

I look around me and see drug use be-many circles they are only as illegal as going often than either of you would like to admit. It astounds me that the government can have people whose lives are being destroyed by a room and smell the odor wasting out into the your business and keep on walking. Perhaps drugs." groblem. Anyone would have to admit that that is what we should do. As far as I am progress is being made. But winning? We concerned, if the only people who used drugs have a long way to go. It is like myself playing were responsible, occasional users, as most Biom Borg in a tennis match and managing to are, I would be an advocate for their legaliza-

But unfortunately, just as with alcohol. The question is not how we have im- people do not always use them responsibly. groved, but how we should be. Perhaps before And they cost. They cost jobs, schoolwork, happiness, money, and at times, human lives. article written by someone ignorant of the All of the bad stories sound like just one ioys of drug use. I have never know the commercial after another, until it happens to plases, the euphoria, of drugs. Iknow nothing someone close to you. Telling a friend that I was worried he was out of control was perhaps of experience with their evil, and so my opin- the hardest thing I've done. It also may have ions are guaranteed to be somewhat slanted. saved his life. It could be your best friend, the Drugs are illegal in this country, but in true party animal, who uses drugs a lot more coming less fashionable. Horror stories about fifty-eight in a fifty-five. When you walk past Under some circumstances, drugs are harmless, but in the wrong hands they are lethal. It drugs show up everywhere, and the nation is corridor, it is very easy to say that it is none of is for this reason that I justify the "war against

Ken Winkler

It is also because of this that I feel we have so far to go. Drugs, illegal substances find their way into this country by the boatload. Examine the small circle of this college. How much drugs use have you seen? For a nondrug user, I have seen a lot, and I probably don't know the half of it. Now consider that by some illegal means, all of those drugs have come to be in this country, sone home grown, Ken Winkler is a junior majoring in but the great majority of them by importation. philsosophy and minoring in music.

so little control over what enters this country. Winning the war on drugs? When so much goes on right in front of my eyes in a school that so often looks the other way, it's hard to be optimistic. One final point. Drugs cannot be legislated away. They already have been as much as they ever will be. The war on drugs is in our hands. Keep an eye on your friends, and on yourself. How often do I use them? Could I really quit anytime I wanted to? How much a part of my life is devoted to drug use? What effect does it have on the necessary roles I must play in my life? Care enough about your friends and yourself to ask these questions. Sure it's uncomfortable. But if they die and you don't say something, then how uncomfortable will it be?

Is the United States winning the war on drugs?

Sophomore

Felicia Shakman Freshman Annapolis, Md.

Junior Jefferson, Md.

Senior Tiajuana, Mexico

Chas. Foster Senior Earth Base 1

No, the time and money spent to No, the illegality of drugs doesn't stop the traffic should be channeled deter their use for many people. tisewhere.

gone down, meaning that more nol to Nodoz. cocaine is present.

No. Over the past years the price of Sure! We now have tamperproof Yes, in my four blissful years at drugs, for example cocaine, has packaging on everything from Tyle- Washington College, I've seen no instances of drug use.

Campus Voices

by David Johnson

Drug War Dangerously Insufficient

are beginning to win the crusade for a drugfree America." Ronald Reagan Our President made this particularly absurd statement during a speech last March. In the past seven years, the United States' total consumption of heroin has risen from approximately 627 kg to 1068 kg, and consumption of cocaine has soared from 5616 kg to 107,910 kg. This massive escalation in drug use during the Reagan Administration's tentre makes the President's reassuring words sound just a bit ridiculous

An anonymous senior State Department official was recently quoted as saying, "We 40n't know anything today about [Panama- are no strangers to selective ignorance. Case nian General Manuel Antonio] Noriega that we didn't know a year ago. What's changed stration that was willing to arm terrorists in poison our children in order to avoid upsetting nificant progress in fighting the drug flow, borders, and we as a people seem content to "The tide of battle has turned, and we a perceived geopolitical status quo. The although Colombia is practically run by the simply continue pouring money and the lives Noriega and even praised his cooperation in his country's corruption and drug trafficking finally forced the Administration to take ac-

We all know that Reagan and his cohorts in point: the only countries in the world listed as decertified - that is, denied U.S. aid bepolitics and Panama, not Noriega." All cause of their complicity in the production odications are that this is true. The Adminiand distribution of drugs - are now Iran, Afghanistan, Panama, and Syria. Colombia, Order to fund the contras has now revealed its the Bahamas and Mexico have been specially willingness to allow countries like Panama to praised by our President as having made sig-

United States paid $200,000 a year to General monolithic Medellin drug cartel, the Bahamas of drug enforcement agents down a hole and are a major shipment and money-laundering fighting drugs until the full public exposure of point for smugglers, and Mexico is the largest exporter of marijuana and heroin to the U.S. Mexico's corrupt law enforcement officials also allow 40% to 75% of Latin America's cocaine to pass through the country on its way Administration to admit it exists, and that our to the U.S

Right now our country is intercepting just 10% of the illicit drugs flowing across its Jeff Vail is a freshman.

hoping that things somehow improve. An answer does not come easy. However, just as the first step to overcoming an addiction is to admit to having a problem, the first step toward curing our plague of drugs is for the current efforts are dangerously insufficient.

To Bee or Not to Bee

The maintenance department's vacuum turn to the vacuum. cleaner contains more than than just dust - it includes a bee swarm as well. After a bee suffered approximately three stings while swarm was discovered in a tree outside Hod- vacuuming the swarm of some 600 - 1,000 son Hall earlier this week, the area was roped bees. Another employee was stung between off to protect students while maintenance the eyes. Gasoline was used to kill the remain-

Director of maintenance Bill Coleman found a way to dispose of the ways. Difficul- ing bees in the two-inch thick swarm in the ties in finding a bee keeper prompted them to morning, when the insects are less active campuses, holds national radio television interviews, and auth articles in such newspapers as

Washington Post, the New Yo

Times, and the Baltimore Sun

Institute in 1978 and become president in 1982. Prior, Fornos

a professor at George Washing

University and a Maryland S

resident of Washington D.C.

Fornos will meet with intere-

students at 8:30a.m. in 20 Smi

Legislator.

Fornos joined the Population

He is presently

"Measured Response" Does Not Stop Terrorists To the Editors I do not necessarily take the prove, except that Marines would be

My initial reaction to last week's political commentary was to dismiss the piece as another example of reckless banter from the College Republicans The commentary was characteristic of so much of the Reagan domestic policies which many wise analysts have described as

"intellectual primitivism." In many ways, commentary is remindful of the logic of the "McCarthy Fra " This was evidenced by the example that "the most rapid demobilization in history" was a conspiracy of "the isolationists,' rather than an economic reality side of the "Historical Revisionists. but would like to call attention to the "whole nicture" view of events as they really happened. No less can be asked of any politician. Republican and Democrat, alike

For a beginning, no one "forced the U.S. to become "essentially a police power" as described. Rather, the U.S. has assumed this position: for better or for worse. Many times this assumption has met with counterproductive and sometimes tragic consequences. Did the Berlin Blockade really prove anything except the competence of the allied air forces: What did the sending of Marines into Lebanon in 1958 really given a chance to one day die there. The so-called "show down" Cuba MissileCrisis of 1962 was probably a precipitant of the Bay of Pigs fi-

To claim that the Reagan Administration has "effectively used a measured response policy is a dubious charge at best. The Gulf of Sidra Incident of 1986 only exacerbated what was an already inflammatory situation. The evidence indicates that that encounter increased terrorist acts which led to the later Libyian Bombing raid. At present, most authorities recognize a rather minor reduction (if any) in terrorist acts of violence

Some important facts I should like to dispute is that the Reagan administration did not use diplomacy in either of these incidents, and when Ambassador Wilson attempted to do so privately, he was reprimanded. Also, the Reagan administration did not only bomb purely "military targets" in Libva. Three foreign embassies were hit in that raid along with residential targets including Oadhaafi's residence (killing one of his adopted children). And last, the action was not widely "applauded by the Western European community." In fact, the U.S. came close to being condemned in the United Nations. Those nations that did support our actions were very careful in show ing their support of friendship. So "the nutbreak of terror ism [did not] end," Further, with recent events we do not see an end of terrorism in suc. It would be nice if the Republicans could write a happy ending to the Reagan Administration's Measured Response, but unfortunately they can thousands of American troops to the country which were never used and not needed. Again, a gross overreaccommitment to moderation and measured response as Mr. Bourjaily suggests, but rather a clear pattern of inordinate and counterproductive muscle-flexing. Compare, for example, Mr. Reagan's foreign policy

"achievements," (the Libya bomb ing, invasion of Grenada, and the guerilla war against Nicaragua), with the record of Carter, who signed the Panama Canal Treaty, the Israeli-Egyptian peace accords, and

The Reagan record shows not a

W.P. Jones, '88

Fornos To Speak

Werner Fornos, President of the his efforts to curb the population Population Institute, will be visiting Fornos lectures at numerous coll Washington College on Tuesday. one week after the United States Congress declared the week of April 17 "World Population Awarenwss

Fornos has been at the forefront of the struggle to balance the world's population with the world's As the head of the Population Institute, Mr. Fornos devotes his time both convincing leaders of developing nations that they must balance their populations as well as encouranges leaders of industrialized countries to assist in Hall. Anyone interested shr reaching that balance. Unstinting contact Dr. Cades.

More Letters to the Editor from page 2

Confederate Controversy ou realize that the residents of erate flag be removed.

Middle Hall are not racists (as you admitted in your letter) then you should also realize that the flag in go back to his history books for question is not a symbol of racism real reasons the South went to we and, as such, should offend no one. Therefore, I respectfully refuse to honor your request that the Confed-

P.S. As for "malevolent ign rance", I would suggest Mr. San Daniel S. Trah

Sophone Galveston, Ter

WCDS Was Cooperative

appeared in the April 8 issue of The his willingness and cooperation Elm. I met with Mr. David Knowles, resolving the matter. Director of the WCDS, at his request. Together we went through the menus and changed any meals where there would have been After my letter to the editor conflict. I thank Mr. Knowles

> Lindenha Int

NEWS BRIEFS Yearbook Distribution

distributed today after 1:00 p.m. in rently working on the supplement Talbot 223. Yearbooks can be which includes spring sports a picked up from Pegasus editor-inchief Arian Ravanbakhsh. A second pledges of the Greek organization distribution opportunity will occur Tuesday night from 5:30 to 7:30 in fall.

diplomacy and militarism, between foreign policy and martial strategy component of foreign affairs, and must always be an option. But it cannot compensate for a lack of atve. Force can only supplement foreign policy, not substitute for it.

ception of the recent INF Treaty,

Reagan has failed to recognize this fact, and has made the military the master, rather than the servant, of American global relations.

Military power is an essential

The yearbook staff is o activities, including the a The supplement will circulate infi

Class

Officers Elected

The SGA announced the 161 class officers for the 1988-89 and demic year. The senior class elected Steve Leary, President; Detit Smith, Vice President; Elizabel Rexon, Secretary; and Dawn Chat political action and diplomatic initi-Treasurer The Junior class electedCari With the admittedly laudable ex-Blackburn, President; Mary Jo Ali son, Vice President; Laleh Mild Secretary; and Joe Van Nant relations. spectively: Beth Karukas, And Jonathan Sarris Tichel, Russell Gardner, and Bl College Democrats Kiefaber.

Sophomore officers are #

World News Update

Defense Intelligence has concluded that on three recent occasions hostile forces conducted surveillance probes of U.S. Bases in Panama in order to access their perimeter defense. The Pentagon said that until security was tightened recently, Panamanian Intelligence cocaine and heroin are so addictive Units used visitors' passes to enter at least five American bases to select potential targets for Sabotage Reports say that several hundred Soviet rifles and one hundred Cuban 'advisors' have been sent to help Noriega's security forces this Saudi Arabia has broken diplomatic relations with Iran, becoming the first of the conservative Gulf Arabs to do so." It is expected the Iranians will attempt to strike hat The Saudis said they will sign the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treat formalizing their pledge not to make or buy nuclear weapons.

Nation

Attorney General Edwin running drugs. Meese was quoted as saying "I would like to see the day when Urine test." However, Baltimor mayor Kurt Schmoke suggests le galizing and decriminalizing will alleviate the nation's drug problem He says, "Jail doesn't mean any thing to drug dealers, it's a cost of doing business." Experts fear that that legalization would only make the problem worse

The U.S. Supreme Court heard arguments surrounding the case to throw out a law authorizing Independent Special Prosecutors t Investigate Crimes in high govern ment places. The issue at stake is whether the law violates Constitu tional doctrines of Separation of Powers because federal judges ap

The Senate Foreign Rela tions Committee subpoenaed Olive North's private diaries. Committee said the diaries may shed light on accusations that som North operatives who secretly ran guns to Nicaraguan rebels were also

compiled by Mary Saravia

Force Only Supplements Policy the process suffered costs far outsion from Nicaragua by airlifting SALT II. It is a contrast between

continued from page 2

Or what about the deployment of US troops in Lebanon in 1982-83? The President sent in thousands of Marines to shore up a failing local government in the middle of a civil war. This policy ended in the sacrifice of over 200 American soldiers and compelled the subsequent ignominious withdrawl of the force. Where is the caution and moderation Mr. Bourjaily praises displayed in this instance

In a similarly deft manner, President Reagan launched a full-scale air/sea/land assault on the tiny isle of Grenada, which posed no significant security threat to the US, and in weighing the gains of the operation. Dozens of American casualties were incurred and the battle was almost lost due to military incompetence. "Measured response"

Mustard Seed

More recently, in the Persian Gulf, the Reagan administration has overestimated the threat to the oil supply coming from the Iran-Iraq war and committed the US Navy to an ill conceived escort operation. This policy has in fact resulted in an increase in Gulf tensions and imperiled the free flow of oil from the region more than any local conflict has. And in Honduras, Reagan responded to a limited border incuretc reasonable. Call Cathy

Word Processing Servicesreports, term papers, prompt, accurate,

348-2126

OLD WHARF INN

FOOT OF CANHON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21020

301-778-358

Bookshop English Literature American Literature
• Children's Books 778-6707

Mon - Thurs 11 AM to 3 PM

Fri 11 AM to 4:30 PM

312A Park Row

Chestertown Md.

Students Protest

down. She pointed out that there Although many complained have been many situations where the Student Judicial System is students have excused themselves fair and at times the meeting from cases for just that reason. She med to focus on a debate of the further stated that Becker "has a lot rits and problems with the sys- of guts" for testifying as openly as n rather than its intended focus, he did. At this time it is not certain er urged concerned students to whether or not Becker will choose to the Student Government Asso- bring legal action against Wickwire, on as a vehicle for amending the although it was Becker's decision to dicial system

Following the hour long instead of the local authorities eting, Conner also responded to arges that there was a "loaded by stating that any student who wels that he/she cannot judge the acts of violence." pation fairly is asked to sten have the case go through the SCC Cater closed by stating, " I am not prepared to see this College lightly condone or lightly punish

Faculty Promotions

Micine until 1983, when she idren concerning their eating Music Consort and in many other its has earned her national rec- college musical programs.

Rick Davis joined the faced the Washington College ulty in 1983. He received his B.A. in She has conducted theater and drama from Lawrence gnsive research into the nature of University in 1980, and his M.F.A. man food preferences and in 1983 from the Yale School of ctions of novel foods, and Drama, where he is a candidate for blished several articles relating to his D.F.A. A singer as well, he has research. Her work with young performed with the College's Early

In place of Senior remarks from President Cater will Convocation, the class of 1988 will precede the awards ceremony, hold a brunch at Hynson-Ringgold House to present departmental Difficulties in finding a convocation speaker prompted the President's office and the senior class to organize a senior awards ceremony instead, said Sherry Magill, executive assistant to the President. Past convocation speakers have included syndicated columnist Art Buchwald, political satirist Mark Russell, and Winston Churchill impersonator James

"We hope this will be fun," said Magill. "My understanding is that they (the senior class) are quite excited about doing this."

Magill said the awards presentation, a College tradition in the past, will focus more attention on the students than would the convocation, yet still provide an end-of-year celebration that is less serious than Commencement. Senior brunch at Hynson-

Sr. Brunch Replaces Convocation

which will be directed by Assistant Dean Lucille Sansing and Grand Marshal Ermon Foster.

Departmental awards for English, history, sociology, drama, music, mathematics and modern languages will be announced. In addition, the members of honor societies for history (Phi Alpha Theta), philosophy (Phi Sigma Tau), psychology (Psi Chi), and scholarship/leadership (Omicron Delta Kappa) will be recognized.

with a presentation of the senior class gift and awards by class president Cecilia Kosenkranius, who urged students to remember to

RSVP for the event. "They shouldn't blow it off and go home for the weekend," she

Kosenkranius also pointed out that the ceremony is a way for seniors and faculty to socialize in an

"It is a special day," she said. "We're recognizing the achievements of our fellow students.

Systems Errors

computer users in Miller Library, tem according to Head Librarian William Tubbs. Tubb explained that damage or lose complete docustudents are having problems saving and recalling documents when simple solution, according to they attempt to use software incompatible with the College's network system. Tubbs said that the most brary and to bring only document common mistake was the use of Ringgold will begin this Sunday at personal systems or outdated Miller Library.

Problems continue to plague MacWrite® programs with the sys-

As a result, students may ments saved on their disks. A Tubbs, is to check out a systems disk from the circulation desk of the lidisks without systems for use in

Superpower Role Forces Measured Response 's Note: Portions of the following the Soviet blockade of West Berlin, he also men among the dead. Once conclusive evi- role. Iranian h

the United States, since at least 1945, has wen a military superpower. Many people where that at the end of World War II the Inted States could have kept its war machine sactand conquered the world. As we know, U.S., instead, engaged in the most rapid mobilization in history. The United States hed to pull back into its pre-WWII isolationshell as it did after World War I, Unfortutely for the isolationists, world events, the din Blockade the devastation in Europe the general spread of Communism, forced EU.S. to remain active to protect the ideals democracy against anti-democratic forces. In U.S. became the leader of the free world. This role as a leader and essentially a man ordered the Berlin airlift to overcome

ment. In a daring showdown in 1962, Presi-Cuba to prevent the U.S.S.R. from placing the outbreak of terrorism ended.

nuclear missiles in

The measured response policy has been _

commentary

Administration. The best example of the success of Reagan's use of this policy was the U.S. response, in 1986, to Libyan sponsored terrorism. Terrorism had been on the rise through the early to middle 1980's. Terrorists sprayed the Vienna and Rome airports with deadly machinegun fire; killing only innocent te power, has forced the United States to travelers. The French people appeared to be eapolicy of measured response. President under attack. A German disco was destroyed by a terrorist's bomb, with American serviceat the request of the threatened Beirut govern- military targets inside Libya. The action was applauded by the Western European commudent Kennedy ordered a naval blockade of nity and other justice minded countries and political

In 1987, the Reagan Administra-

naval forces to the continued and used effectively by the Reagan Persian Gulf to protect Western and Japanese War. The Iranian response was belligerent. worm anti-ship missiles along the Iranian ships. This warning went unheeded and the achieve these goals U.S. Navy destroyed an Iranian oil platform which served a dual military and economic sicle were omitted when it was printed in the ordered aid to the Greek government so they dence was found linking Libya to the terror- Thursday, April 14th, when the U.S.S. assistee of this publication. The Elm regrets could fight the communist rebels. President ism and diplomatic avenues ran into dead Samuel E. Roberts struck an Iranian mine Eisenhower sent marines to Lebanon in 1958 ends, President Reagan order the bombing of The U.S. response was again tempered. The navy destroyed two major Iranian oil platforms which revealed their importance by the speed and ferocity of the Iranian counterattack. They sent half their navy after the U.S. Navy. The U.S. Navy then sank the Iranian warships and lost only one helicopter. It is tion sent American significant that the U.S. response has been controlled instead of reflexive. The world knows that the United States can launch a total oil interests from the expanding Iran-Iraq war against the Iranians and then hand them over to the Iraqis. The significance is that we They laid down mines and deployed silk- do not. We have shown responsibility, wishing peace, not war. The United States has Persian Gulf coast. The United States warned been and will continue to be a leader in the the Iranians against the use of the missiles or promotion of peace and stability in the world; mines against U.S. ships or U.S. flagged vet we will use force when necessary to Monte F. Bourjaily, IV

College Republicans

Larrimore's

Deli — Grocery Breakfast, Subs, Sandwiches Dinner Platters

uth of Bridge, Chestertown

778-6022

Open 7 days

Foreign Car Specialist

Volkswagen and Imports Service & Repairs

778-1098

MONDAY

$1.00 All Imports "Import Night"

WEDNESDAY

Lucky Bingo Night Win Your Drinks

215 High Street Chestertown, Maryland

778-3030

Stam

Drug Co.

- Greeting Cards
- Cosmetics · Russell

Candy Soda Fountain Advertise in

The Elm

Local ads $2 per column inch Call Erin Hodge-Williams 778-9839

Mexican Nite Corona's $1

25 CENTS DRAFTS ON BAND NITES

9:00 - 10:30 in the Back

RIDAY, APRIL 29 r. Cline

SATURDAY, APRIL, 30 Steve Taylor

778-1984

History Includes Coeducation, Sports Growth

by Carter Roatner New buildings

With the construction of East and West Halls the future of Washington College looked considerably brighter. These three buildings formed the whole camous, with the school principal housed in Fast Hall, and the other faculty housed in West Hall. To ensure the privacy of those faculty members housed on campus, regulations were adopted in 1856 which set departments in East and West Hall aside from Middle Hall as to be exclusively for the housing of the faculty members and their families and students were forbidden to .trespass on them in any way or at any time to incommode the porches or entrances leading to them'

In the school year 1857-1858, there were reported to be 92 students in attendance, forty in the collegiate level the remainder in the prep school level. The cost for the students living on the campus were $113.50 for the Winter session and $69.00 for the Summer

In June of 1860 the much beloved Principal Dr. Walter Chambers saddened all involved with the school when he submitted a letter of resignation citing the reason that his health would not hold up to the 'arduous and incessant labors' which the task of running the school required of him. The sad news of Dr. Walters' resignation prompted a heartfelt response from a group of seniors who noted that Dr. Walters' resignation was a 'serious calamity', and they mentioned how he had equally combined authority with justice and that his departure from the school would be heavily felt by the students.

Towards the end of 1860 the board elected vice-principal reverend Andrew J. Sutton to replace Dr. Walters. Reverend Sutton was to recieve $1,000 annual salary as well as the use of either the north or south end of East Hall. Since at this time there was a conflict developing between the northern and southern states, the school hired a tutor who was capable of drilling a company in military tactics. Maryland had not seceded from the Union, yet a great many Marylanders were sympathetic to the Confederates and chose to enlist in the Confederacy. It is not certain the number involved but it is generally assumed that several Washington College students were themselves enlisted in either the Confederate or Union Armies.

Although an esteemed scholar, Sutton proved to be incapable of carrying out his duties as principal and fell victim to heavy drink in an attempt to relieve himself of the pain stemming from his unfortunate affliction with turberculosis. What ensued in the years noted shortly following the outbreak of the Civil War were a number of cases where there were reported incidents of profane language used by both students and stewards. The emerging tensions between the college administrators and the students was an obvious sign of instability caused by absence of Dr. Walters and perhaps even the surrounding events occuring at that

"Wissahicons"

On August 12, 1864 the board allotted the sum of fifty dollars to be put forth for the purchase of gymnasium equipment. The equipment consisted of weightsand other heletic equipment and was located in the north end of the basement of West Hall. Soon thereafter a group of college men organized a board and also baseball team they christened the "Wissahicons", and in a losing effort they played Rivers to upsocial games against a team from Galena called the "Kents". In the years that followed the college men changed the name of their school. Rivers team to the "Chesters" and played games against teams from Centreville and Chestertown. The newspapers quickly picked on the games noting the intense rivalry which developed between the college men and the men from town

Declining enrollement

Possibly stemming from the increased tension within the school was a declining no guidlines by the faculty. enrollment dropping finally from ninety-two in the 1857-58 school year to thirty students total in the preparatory and college level in the school year 1870-71. In July of 1873 newly elected principal William J. Rivers noted that there were were only nineteen students enrolled in Washington College. In an effort to attract a greater enrollment the school appealled to students throughout the entire eastern shore, as a result of this however many of the students were not adequately prepared to enter college level courses and m distinguished himself at the University of South Carolina for research he completed on who died in the Civil War. River after taking the job of principal of Washington College that the school had 'fallen quite low in the favor of the people due to a lack of interest and discipline on the part of the college board and administration What followed was an effort on the part of the by Principal grade the standing of the placed students in classes where they were equal to others in aca- century. demic standings, and also suggested that the school's faculty help guide the direction of studies in which the students should undertake. This choice in study was previously solely held up to the students discretion with

Rivers soon issued a report of the college facilities and in the report he noted that the facilities were in a deplorable state. He stated that the library was in times used as a bedroom by the family of the stewardess. Also he noted that there was no security and that there were a great many broken volumes of books. In the laboratory he found there to be great dissarray as the entire rom was strewn > ber, and various pieces of hric-a-hrac'

> > "Study faithfully" The mounting problem of student discipline had also to be dealt with for the previous administrations had let it get grossly out of hand. Rivers issued a number a new rules for students; among them: 'To study faithfully, not to leave the college grounds after nightfall without permission, and to act as gentlemen everywhere'. The result of revised rules and the new direction that the school was heading under River's administration, the school began a steady turnaround and fell back into the favor of the town's people. By 1879 Rivers reached one of his goals in that the school now had four classes in the college level. He noted that of the students entering Washington Colle William J. Rivers was elected by the board to become principal in 1873. Rivers larger prepschools of the day offered stufra entering the bigger Universities.

Rivers continued to develop a strepm compiling a record of those native statesmen ened curriculum and the students reary

William Smith Hall as it stands on a campus today that is much different than the Washington College campus was in the nineteent favorably. Rivers effected a remarkable to around in the history of Washington Cole and in 1884 an alumni association had be founded in the effort to develop the prosper of the school. The creation of an alu association shows that there developed sense of pride of Washington College st dents toward their alma mater, perhaps as result of Rivers' persistant efforts to better

In his final report to the board River noted that of the students who gradus during his tenure, '76% had progressed professional work. Of those graduates were lawyers or students of law, 10 phys cians or students of medicine, 5 ministers the Gospel or preparing therefore, and to present, teachers', Although Rivers sent ingly had a successful and rewarding tenun Washington College, he looked back on it a time of his life which he partially wasted he failed to reach goals such as an ov increased enrollment. It was this conwhich prompted talk by the board of i removal from Washington College.

With the dismissal of Rivers came arrival of Mr. Thomas N. Williams and tempts ensued to create a distinctly septs prep school department. Up until this tine prep school students were taught by theo lege professors and with the creation of seperate department with exclusive poschool instructors, the college sought to m clearly define the the college from the low level prep school. Towards the end of 18 the school announced a decrease in the tuits and board fees in an attempt to attract to students. The move was apparently such ful, for the Kent News on October 8, 1 reported that the enrollment in the school far greater than it had been for some time

continued on page sevel

Anyway You Play, It'll still Be May Day

so as to not 'place a(n excess) bur- Middle Hall and there was a great sion the women were permitted to the school to develop plans for a women's dormitory called 'Normal

Hall', and on April 24, 1897 the the main building. The 'highway' is

The enrollment of the school

increased along with the activities available to students. There were three literary societies and in 1898

the Washington Collegian made its first appearance and was published monthly featuring articles pertain blossoms

Washington College blossomed in other areas as well. The school became progressively more involved in intercollegiate sports and in the 1890's boasted talented teams

ing to student life.

Around that time, while on a Kent News announced the opening boat trip to Baltimore, one of the of the new three story building professors of the college was asked which could house 32 people and by several young ladies why women was seperated by a highway from ington College, and then proceeded has been rumored, was intended to to explain their reason for why this discourage male visitors from venpolicy of not admitting women turing to the women's dorm.

This lack of space promoted need to increase study space.

Each year on May 1st, it is a tradition for Washington College students to bear their bodies to the Great God of Spring in celebration of her return. This joyful festivity has been celebrated in the most recent past by poetry readings and gatherings in the fire lane.

As a chance to escape the anadgeries of everyday life and get back to the purity lost with the Garden of Eden, students at Washington College should not only take off their clothes this Sunday, but take mem off creatively.

off the cuff

"How you take your clothes off is not an issue: the fact hat you do take them off is the issue," says May Day veteran Todd

Officially, May Day be gas at midnight on Saturday and lasts until way after midnight on Sinday. This extended 24 hour period gives students many opporunities, and much time to shed their divness can only be highlighted by the appearance of naked or semi-naked diners. After brunch is the best time to do laundry, when one knows that all of his clothes can be washed in If the afternoon is warm.

Streaking in the nighttime hours is a great way to warm up for daytime activities. Strip poker is a good way to ease into this. If one begins the card game around 11:00 P.M., by midnight the participants will be ready to go.

an old-fashioned game of baseball or frisbee can be organized. Sunbathing on May Day is a good time to get rid of those annoying tan lines. but remember your SPF 15.

At 3:00 P.M. on Sunday, the second annual Tribal Poetry Reading will be held at the George Washington statue. Before the reading, celebrants will engage in a water balloon throwing battle.

At this time "the Elm staff will be seen dancing nude around the Elm tree. We've been exposing other groups since 1930 - it's only fair that we expose ourselves as well," says Elm editor Andrea She adds a warning: "There's a Maenadic element among our editors, so irresponsible reporters should beware

At 6:00 the Writers' Union is sponsoring a picnic. With the advent of Nude Volleyball last year, there is no telling what those crazy writers will be doing. Erin Murphy, who earned the nickname Eve for her participation in May Day last year, notes that "Clothed spectators turn May Day into a perverted event, and ruin it for everyone else.

den on the teacher'. He stressed the classics, for he felt they trained the students' minds more so than the

were not permitted to attend Wash-

The professor was so impressed with the women that upon returning to Washington College, he relayed the conversation to Dr. Reid who suggested to the board that the school admit women for reasons ranging from increased enrollment to the improvement of the 'moral proved by the board and in 1893 the college catalog reported that twenty women were in attendance at the school. Miss May Matthews was In 1891 coeducation was ap-

Coeducation approved modern diciplines.

should be changed.

tone of the College'

walk accross the Chester River enrollment to 120 students as well as doubling the faculty and school's

In 1903 the school increased

The campus underwent a dras tic transformation in the creation of the new dorm as well as the gymnasium. Of the 218 students who had graduated since the construction of Middle Hall in 1845, 100 had graduated in the 14 years Dr. Reid was cludes junior Bob Caldwell. not more than twenty-five students located in rooms on the first floor of next to Normal Hall. And on occa-

leges in the state, a status from which the school has declined little since then. After all of this Dr. Reid felt it bridge if accompanied by a chaper- was time to move on and his resignation was accepted by the board on May 20, 1903. Dr. Reid died on March 20, 1920 and Normal Hall was then renamed 'Reid Hall' in honor for his accomplishments at Washington > teenth century Washington College made tremendous strides under the administrations of Principal Rivers 1873-89, and Principal Reid 1889-1903. Their achievements went far in transforming a relatively young and unstable institution into the forefront of educational establishments on the Fastern Shore

In 1903 Washington College was reckoned as one of the top col-

continued from page12

Paintings and prints by Michele are mainly pop, and include many colorful paintings for which food, particularly bananas, is the theme Despite the assumptions of many spectators, Balze insists her work has no sexual undertone; she simply silkscreening students, including a striking self-portrait by senior art major Charles Foster. Another print

Freshman Ben Jacobs adds, "It's a great way to assert your constitutional rights to freedom of expression."

Pegasus editor Arian Ravanbakhsh, may be joining those writers He says, "Previous Pegasus editors have distributed yearbooks while parading their bodies around, this year may be no exception.

At 7:30 P.M. seniors will read from their work. anybody's guess if the Senior Readers will be naked," says participant Dean Hebert. "I have bared all before, but only after dark, but now that I'm a senior...

And of course, their is the Great Gathering in the Fire Lane. It is here that people without the guts to bare their bodies come to watch those who do. "I'm just going to gawk," says S.G.A. President-elect Perry Finney. "I'm not going to do anything...." And as for the new S.G.A council, he says, "We all have terrible bodies ... we'll just look at people with good bodies.

"It usually takes a small group of people who can screw up enough courage to go out by themselves and motivate others to do the same. If you're really ballsy, you'll do it soher" says senior Tom

"Anytime you have a great number of people getting naked together, it can't be all bad," con-

In the second half of the nine-to be continued next week

"is a protest against the Sophomore

Washington College Under Reid's administration

enjoys painting the vivid colors and shapes of fruits.

There are also prints from piece in the show. This, Foster says, through graduation.

Art Review Writing Seminar, and not a personal attack on anyone." Foster also has several collages in pastels in the show, which are works independent Balze, a junior art and English major, of classes. In this exhibit are representational and abstract works expressive of the diverse and talented body of art students at Washington College. One must visit the show to appreciate the quality and quantity of work created. Several nieces have been sold, and many of the works on exhibit are for sale, which is a benefit to the viewer, who will undoubtedly find himself coveting at least some of the works presented. The show will be open of his is the only overtly political from 2:30-5:00p.m., every day,

History continued from page six

At this time an athletic program started developing rapidly and in 1888 Washington College held a football game against St. John's College of Annapolis which kicked off a football tradition at the school which would last well into the next intury. The score of the contest vis reported to have been 119-0 with the Washington College squad infortunately on the losing end

With the board deciding in 1889 that the school had made no rogress since Williams arrival they Rught, and got his resignation stat of that they did not feel he possed the qualities required to carry but the duties of principal of the

Reid elected principal Soon thereafter a man who school was elected to be princiand he would carry on to lead shington College into the twenteh century ptember of 1889, was elected to te over William's position, and his arrival we see the first evince of the foundations of the ideogy of the small college forment which enhances the dent-teacher relationships. Dr. ed stressed small classrooms of ald have a lasting impact upon Dr. Charles Weseley Reid, in the first women to successfully in football as well as baseball. A complete the program of studies at gymnasium was built to replace the Washington College and in 1895 facilities in the north end of the basegraduated with a degree. ment in West Hall and in a short time basketball was introduced for the Increased enrollment created primary purpose of keeping the a shortage of space for day students boys fit for the baseball season. For who did not have rooms but wished the women there were exercise sesto study between classes while on sions held in the gymnasium as well campus. At this time the library was as tennis courts erected for their use

Miracle Man Gewer Baffles Villanova's Rouse Amazing Comeback Victory Leads Shoremen Past Wildcats

Larry Gewer would not give up against Villanova, as he railled back twice from 5-0 deficits to lead the Shoremen to victory over their Division I foes fromPhiladelphia. Now Gewer and Company will attempt a few more miracles in the next three weeks, as the Shore netters try to bring a Division III National Tennis Championship back

Shore Nine Hammer DelValley, Still Can't Exorcise MAC Jinx

Athev's Team Stands at 13-7

Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists

by Don Steele

The baseball season is drawing to a close. The Shoremen stand at 13-7, but still only have one win in the MAC after sweeping Delaware Valley but losing to MAC rival Ursinus

Against Delaware Valley on Tuesday, the first game was a romp, to say the least. The Shoremen won 20-5. Frank Davis picked up the

The Shoremen offense was top form, as they broke out of the first inning leading 9-0. By the third inning, each WC starter had scored at least one run

Tom Auvil hit a grand slam, Bob Kuhn hit a three run homer, and Dave Puskar belted a solo shot, all in the first inning. Charles Johnson added a two run shot in the fourth inning to ice the game. The destruction was so bad that the game was called after five innings

Dave Puskar led the Shoremen through the second game. He was the winning pitcher and had two homeruns, giving him three for the

Chris Rosfelder's three run homerun in the sixth proved to be important insurance as Delaware Valley scored five runs in the seventh. Joe McAleer also hit a round tripper. Charles Johnson picked up Against Ursinus, however, the Shoremen failed to piece together much offense. Although the Shoremen got as many hits as Ursinus (6), most were singles and not back to back Eric Becker was handed the

The Shoremen were also scheduled to play St. Mary's, but the game was postponed.

Now the Shoremen enter the stretch run, with their final home game coming this Saturday against Widener at 1 pm. Tuesday, the Shoremen will wrap up their regular season at Washington Bible.

Larry Gewer brought new meaning to the word "unbelievable" on Sunday, as he led Washington

College to a 5-1 win over Division I Villanova University in men's collegiate tennis. victory over Gewer's

Villanova's Mike Rouse should be recorded in Ripley's "Believe It or Not" as it was one of the most amazing comebacks ever. Trailing one set to love and down 5-0 in the second set, Gewer miraculously escaped defeat to force a third set. He fell behind 5-0 again in the third set, and again fought back to win In February, Rouse had defeated Gewer, 6-4, 6-2, in the finals of the Swarthmore College Winter Invitational. No Washington College player had ever beaten Rouse. After winnig the first set 6-4 and with a seemingly unsur- 6 (7-2).

mountable 5-0 lead in the second set, it appeared as though the Villanova junior would win again. But the WC All-American refused to give up. Playing one point at a time, the South African native pulled out the second set, 7-5

But even though the momentum should have favored Gewer, the Shore netter quickly fell behind again 5-0 in the third and final set. And once again, Gewer fought back capturing five straight games to deadlock the set, 5-5.

On the strength of a service break, Rouse regained control at 6-5 and then led 3-1 in the twelth game, Gewer, however, would not succomb. He ripped a sensational cross court passing shot on the 3-all point to send the match into a tiebreaker. Taking a 4-1 advantage in the breaker, Gewer never looked back, winning the match 4-6, 7-5, 7-

While Gewer's victory clinched the team victory for Washington, David Marshall, Scott Flinpin-Read, and Claudio Gonzale's straight set wins gave the Shoremen a 3-1 lead. Two minutes prior to Gewer's conquest, Peter Maller put WC up 4-1 with a 6-7, 6-4, 7-5 triumph over Mike Freeman, Maller extended his individual singles win streak to 15, while Flippin-Read Gonzales, and Marshall stretched their win streaks to 13, 9, and 7 respectively.

Due to inclement weather doubles play was suspended, as WC had already secured the victory.

Returning home on Tuesday the Shoremen clinched the Southeast section of the MAC by whinping Widener University, 9-0. The MAC playoffs are next for the Shoremen, before they shoot for a national championship at the NCAA playoffs starting May 15th.

Calm Chester River Turns Choppy as WC Crew Fails to Win a Race

by Carter Boatner

College failed to win one event throughout an entire day of racing on the Chester against visiting crews from George Mason University, George Washington University, Villanova University, and Mary Washington College.

As the first event was taking place, winds began creeping up on the normally calm Chester. The weather got progressively worse through the afternoon, a considerable factor in the later races.

The Men's Novice Eight started things off. WC finished a dissapointing third in the time of 6:10.32, right off the bow of GMU who finished in 6:07.48 and well behind the winners from GWU who finished in 6:02

Immediately following was the Women's Novice Four race in which WC came in second (7:52.40) behind Villanova (7:12.40), the only other competitor in the race.

The Men's J.V. Eight race was next and turned out to be the closest Washington College would come to victory all day. The boats from WC and GMU started off in a rematch of the race held three weeks ago on the Occoquan in Virginia. WC had a strong start, rowing better than they had in the previous race. But in the final 1,000 meters of the race the crew from GMU pulled away to open up a lead and win in a time of 5:56.77, not far ahead of WC (6:00.51). The two times in the Men's JV race were among the fastest four times posted last weekend during the regatta.

Next the Women's Varsity Four was pitted against GWU., Mary Washington, and two boats from Villanova. WC finished fourth out of five boats in the time of 7:58,55, well off the winning time of 7:00.28 posted by the Villanova"A"

Last weekend. Washington the second time during the regatta in the Women's Novice Eight race. The Shore crew finished 4.02 seconds behind behind GMU, who finished in 6:41 80 WC easily heat out crews from Villanova and GWU.

The men's team put together a Novice Four to challenge a boat from Villanova. At this time the water was so rough that when the crews finished the races their shells were swamped with water because the waves were coming up well over the washboards. The Novice Four, consisting of rowers who had already competeted earlier in the day, managed a tough second place finish, eight seconds behind Villanova who finished in 6:57.00

The grand finale was the rematch for the the two varsity crews from GMU and WC. In their last meeting, GMU pulled away from WC with a tough sprint in the last 500 meters to win by a mere four seconds Saturday's race also featured crews from GWU and Villa-

By now, the wind had picked up considerably with white caps forming across the river. The crews came out even on the starts with Villanova at a rate of 41 strokes per minute (STM), WC at 38, and GWU and GMU both at a very low rate of 34 STM. All of the crews then settled the rate for the body of the race with the crews rowing at a 37, 34, and 30

GMU managed to pull ahead at the 500 meter mark with a "nower-20," in which the rate rose up two strokes to a 32. The move resulted in a lead and gained momentum for the crew. It also proved to be a crucial factor for GMU, as they did not relinquish their lead for the remainder of the race.

Villanova, after GMU's move, settled two more strokes to a 35 in an attempt to get more run out of the year.

WC came close to winning for boat and increase the length of the stroke. By now GMU was out in front, with WC and GWU battling for second. The order of boats remained the same; however, at the 1,500 meter mark with 500 to go, GMII and GWII started to make their final move and sprint for the finish. GMU had settled again to a 30 after the "power-20", and at the sprint raised the rate up to a 35 to move well beyond the reach of the other three crews. At their sprint GWU raised their rate from a 30 to a 34. Since Villanova was already rowing at a 35, they had difficulty bringing up their rate. They rose to a 36, not abig increase by any means. When Villanova started to move, the WC boat made their move to raise their rate from a 34 to a 38 for the sprint. This was a strong move yielding good effects, but it came too late. Although the WC crew managed to make up some lengthon GMU and GWU, there was too little time remaining for their position to change. The final results: GMU winning, in 6:03.80; GWU second at 6:09.80; WC third at 6:10.90, and Villanova fourth in 6:13.

WC will face GMU for the third time this season in two weeks on the Potomac in D.C. to determine the area champions are a better bost "I think if we are not per physically, b pared physically they will beat to again," said Bowman Andy Walbert. "At this point they have an edge psychologically.

Stroke-Captain Sean Kennedy feels that "we should catch GWU, but to get up on GMU it will take 1 great deal of improvement in the next two weeks" Tomorrow the Men's and

Women's crews will travel 10 Sellinsgrove, Pa. to challenge Bucknell, who defeated WC last

Shoremen Laxters Trounce W&L, 20-9

The 1988 Men's Lacrosse team es to wir

Generals out of first place. This cause year, however, the two teams are the Shoremen improving and the Generals not playing well Washington took a 7-4 halftime kad and outdistanced W&L in the second half to win convincingly,

The Shoremen were led in scoring by Paul Miller with 4 goals and assists. Paul Deniken added 5 goals and 2 assists, and Mike McGuane contributed 2 goals and 2 saled the victory for WC, finishing week, on May 11th.

On Wednesday, the men faced Gettysburg College in another Divi-Last weekend in Lexington sion III match up. The Shoremen Virginia, the Shoremen faced off easily prevailed, 13-3. Paul Miller, gainst Washington & Lee. Last Paul Deniken, and Tim Hormes the Shoremen knocked the each had three goals in the winning

With the two victories this going in opposite directions, with week, the Shoremen stand at 9-4. with three of the losses to Division I teams. Their only other loss is against Hobert

In a key match-up tomorrow starting at 1:30 pm, the Shoremen face fourth ranked Nazareth College from New York. Nazareth lost to Hobart by the same 15-9 score as WC. After Nazareth, Washington goals and 2 assists, Tim Hormes had finishes up its season on Wednesday against West Chester, with the gaming starting at 3:00 pm. The Goalie Mugsy Mickum NCAA playoffs begin the following

The Shorewomen played a

In challenging Haverford, the

The improvement can be espe

provided a spark on attack, while first year goalie Anders continues to pumping in three quick goals.

beat WC 26-7

play strongly

Improved Shorewomen Prepare for Tourney

by Rill Reekman Friday and Saturday the Shore-

men lacrosse team will finish out strong first half, finishing it knotted whathas been a building year for the at one on a goal by LeeAnne Ledcan at the Maryland Women's win. Haverford came out strong in larrosse Association Tournament, to start the second half, however, Nine teams will compete, with WC ranked at number five. Hopkins, Georgetown, Western Shorewomen showed how they Maryland, and Essex hold the 1-4, have improved over the course of Annen the Residence of the Annen the Season, Earlier this year, Haver-Arundel, Notre Dame, and ford beat Hopkins 12-8 and Hopkins Coucher are 6-9 seeds. "This team is a very different can than the one that started this cially linked to the defensive play of ason," according to Coach Diane Erin O'Neal. Matthews has also Ginan, "I am very proud of what bey have accomplished."

The Shorewomen went 1-2 this Dest week, with a win over Frostourg, and strong losses to Bryn Mawr and Haverford. The women ow stand at 5-9 for the season.

On parents' day, the Shoreomen beat Frostburg, 12-5. Sarah loste and Beth Matthews led the toring, with 4 goals each. Amy lithel added 2 goals and 2 assists. "The team flowed and played intensity, desire, skill, and anwork throughout the game, aid Guinan Against Bryn Mawr later that femoon, the Shorewomen put out tether good effort, but lost, 9-8. Bryn Mawr and Washington tated goals until Bryn Mawr 44-3, and then the visitors pulled By to end the first half leading 6-Two more goals by Bryn Mawr thy in the second half seemed to by the Shorewomen. But WC and backed, scoring five of the ine's final six goals. Several times a Shorewomen almost knotted the tre, but they fell one goal short. "I really thought that we were ng to come out on the winning commented Coach Guinan. Coste led the Shorewomen in 4 goals. Goalie Linda Anders corded 23 saves. The Shorewomen held a strong erford team in check for most of game on Wednesday before Baseball Change for the Worse by Brett Lankford Baseball has been widely accepted as the official American ation): sport. It is truly the national pastime, but this year it is obvious that this game has seen better days

chip shots

Baseball purists will glorify the days of the twenties, thirties. forties and fifties. Still, baseball has changed within the last ten years, in most cases for the worse. This does not include the steady and distressing decline of the Baltimore Orioles, who may set numerous records for inept performance this year. I have accumulated a list of my problems with baseball in the late eighties. and I'm sure I can get some support on many of these topics:

The enforcement of the balk

This was never a problem until this year, but it is causing quite a stir in baseball circles. commissioner's office ordered a crackdown on the balk, and the umpires have taken the suggestion overboard. Balk calls are running rampant, and the men in blue are the only ones happy. Stolen bases are down, since all of the baserunners have to do is wait and eventually get balked to the next base. The pitchers are forced to change the patterns they have been using for twenty rule also makes for dull games, and far too many close games have been won because of a balk call. Basically, the umpires have gained too much control of the game

Attitude of the players (a.k.a. The George Bell Situ-

Bell, Balks, and Corked Bats Make

This is one of the most disheartening of all problems. The spring training attitude of George Bell of the Toronto Blue Jays brought this to the forefront. This spring, Bell posed to be between the numbers of caused problems in the Blue Jay camp by blasting the Toronto management. George Bell was upset because manager Jimy Williams was moving him from left field to designated hitter. He was quoted as saying "Just because they pay me doesn't mean they can tell me what

"The most depressing fact of all is the realization that baseball has become too much of a business..."

This attitude is absolutely absurd. Bell does not seem to real ize how fortunate he is. He is paid almost two million dollars a year for eight months of hitting as mall white ball with a bat. Many people would scale the left field foul pole to be in

Bell cannot comprehend the fact that were thnot for reschall he become too much of a business, would be living a difficult life in the Baseball players are the Idols of Dominican Republic. The fact that the Blue Jays pay him does, in fact, mean that they can tell him what to do, at least on the baseball field. Far strikes, free agency, holdouts - these too many baseball players seem to all indicate that baseball is no longer share this superiority complex of the same game we grew up watch-

The changing of the strike zone This has been an ongoing problem over the past couple of years. and has continued to present difficulties in 1988

The Major League rule book suggests that the strike zone is supthe jersey and the knees. This could not be further from the truth. The umpires have continued to pinch the strike zone over the last ten years. This is just another problem presented for the pitchers, as if their job was not already difficult.

The strike zone now appears to be from the belt to the upper part of the shin. Still, the umpires always seem to call a strike on a pitch low and outside. The batter couldn't hit this pitch with a telephone pole, but this pitch is still frequently called a strike. It seems like consistency is the missing ingredient here.

These are just a few of the prob lems with modern baseball. There are also the corked bat/scuffed ball episodes, along with the increasing dependency of the lefty-righty statistic. It is proven that left handed batters are more effective against right handed pitchers, and vice versa. Still, a manager often takes this move to an extreme, putting up with this statistic The most depressing fact of all many children, and sometimes they do not handle their role model status well. Drug dependencies, player is the realization that baseball has

PIP'S LIQUOR STORE

Kent Plaza 778-0123

hours: 9 a.m. - 9 p.m.

WE'LL GIVE YOU CRED FOR BEING SMART ENOUGH TO RECOGNIZE A GREAT DEAL

GET A $400 REBATE AND PRE-APPROVED CREDIT WHEN YOU BUY OR LEASE A NEW FORD.

Want to know how much your college education's worth? Come to your Ford Dealer. Because if you're graduating with at least a Bachelor's Degree before January 31, 1989, you'll get a $400 rebate and instant pre-approved credit. And that's in addition to any other Ford retail incentive. Here's how much you can qualify for: $15,000 on Thunderbird - $14,500 on Taurus - $12,000 on 1989 Probe • $10,000 on Mustang • $10,000 on Tempo • $9,500 on Escort EXP & GT • $8,500 on Escort • $7,000 on Festiva • $13,500 on Bronco II • $12,000 on Aerostar • $9,500 on Ranger.

FORD'S COLLEGE GRADUATE PURCHASE PROGRAM WITH FORD CREDIT ASSISTANCE.

Strange things happen in the night. Last week, Tony Dougal's house was moved to Worton in order to make way for the future Academic Resource Center. Dougal is the Head Trainer at Washington College.

Student Screenwriters Become Movie Moguls For a Day

by Laura Hopper

Well, maybe mogul isn't the word, but four Washington College students, Andy Caporoso, Ryder Daniels, Janet Harvey, and Kevin Holland, will get a chance to turn four minutes of their screenplays into films. It's all part of the Screenwriting Workshop which is being sponsored by the Writers' Union.

The workshop, which grew out of student interest, is conducted by Mr. Perry Schwartz from Washingon, D.C. Schwartz is a director for Maryland Public Television, and specializes with videotape. He met with the students in the workshop three weeks ago, to review their screenplays, and taught them creenwriting techniques which al ow the writer to maintain quality ontrol over his or her work. Schwartz will return to campus on the weekend of April 30th to oversee the filming of the scenes. The udents are responsible for obtainng actors, rehearsing and directing heir scenes, along with editing the lms. The latter is crucial since each cene will be shot from four angles. apite the limitations in time (each tce cannot exceed four minutes), and location (restricted to Chesterand the College), the particihave come up with four very different films.

Ryder Daniels' scene is from a arger work entitled Nighthawks, spired by the Edward Hopper nting of the same name. Daniels escribes it as "an unusual encounbetween a performer and a police ficer; an unusual encounter in an characters also includes a nineteen year-old boy who works in the cofthe simution

Kevin Holland describes his still untitled scene as a surrealistic piece about two people running away from something that is never clearly defined. Holland's piece uses only one set and only two ac-

Janet Harvey has written a compelling drama about the relationship between a boy, Simon, who is pulled out of college when his parents read his diaries, and his father, who is convinced that Simon is involved with drugs. Harvey de scribes the scene she hopes to be able to film as the scene where. "Simon wakes up in the airport and sees Burger King. Burger King is a bum who's wearing a paper crown from Burger King. He asks Simon for a cigarette."

By contrast, Andy Caporoso's segment was inspired by the popular television show M*A*S*H. Caporoso's film centers around a college student who is working towards his thesis in Theology. The film is essentially the student going up to other students and asking them their opinions about God. Caporoso says he picked God because, "It's something kids talk about in col-

All of the participants expressed interest in another workshop for next year, preferably not the week before exams. According all-night coffee shop." The cast of to Bob Day, that will depend on the it turned out to be a comedy. students. "If there is an interest, Day says, "we will respond to it. expensive. Although the school reading at the O'Neill Literary meeting, beginning at 6 p.m. does own a video camera, it has to rent the editing machine. The purchase of a video editor is still many years away. Day suggests that Writer's Theatre, a workshop for playwrights, might be alternated with the Screenwriting Workshop. one in the fall, one in the spring. He also indicates that if the participants want to show their films, he would be happy to arrange a showing at the O'Neil Literary House sometime > Filmmaking has arrived at Washington College. If you see a bunch of people following a camera. it's our own filmmakers. So please. smile, but don't wave.

next semester

Journalism Awards

President Douglass Cater will present awards for nonfiction works printed in campus publications during the 1986-87 academic year and submitted to the journalism contest earlier this year on Tuesday, May 3.

The presentation will commence at 5:30 p.m. at the O'Neill Literary House; a wine and cheese reception will follow the ceremony.

This event is free and open to the public

Constitutional Chaos

"It's a funny, silly, ridiculous play, and it's not the sort of play I'd necessarily bring my Aunt Maude to [see]," is Professor Edward Weissman's estimation of 1787, the play he co-authored with Mary Wood, who is active in local theater.

Weissman and Wood met one year ago at a meeting of the local chapter of the Sherlock Holmes Society. They were introduced by a third party who knew that both were playwrights. Upon introduction to Wood, Weissman joked, "Let's write a play," to which she replied, "I have a theater." The result: a comedy of mistaken identities.

Although this is his first coauthored play, Weissman has written several musicals, which he points out as a collaborative art form. When asked if he enjoyed a partner in this endeavor, he replies, "I like it-it's not as lonely.

Weissman and Wood decided to compose a period piece about the ratification of the Constitution of the United States. The central plot involves four identical boxes which are scrambled. One holds jewels, one holds the only copy of the Constitution, a third holds an illegitimate baby, and the final box contains a sheath of marriage licenses. 1787 had to be a comedy, according to Weissman: "Since I can't write anything serious if I try,

The first draft of the play was fee shop and becomes involved in The only problem is money. This written during the winter and spring workshop, Day explains, is very of last year, and was presented in a House. 1787 was rewritten last fall, and again over Christmas. The fourth draft, completed over spring break, is "not the draft you'll be seeing onstage."

Choosing Sylvia Maloney to direct the play was a unanimous and immediate decision for both Weissman and Wood. Maloney teaches at Kent County High School and directs the shows performed by the drama club. "We first met her when she did a wonderful production of Camelot last spring. She has a wonderful sense of movement, of direction, and of what is theatrical, Weissman praises

Not surprisingly, the two playwrights who met at a Sherlock Holmes Society gathering want some mystery surrounding their opening night. "There will be a special guest star known to all," promises Weissman. "Everybody come! It's the funniest play you'll ever see and it's a wonderful way to end the semester-with a laugh. 1787 will premiere on May

5 at the Church Hill Theatre

Naked Lunch

See the best of senior writers read their prose and get naked all at the same time: the annual Senior Reading will be held this Sunday-May Day-at 7:30 p.m. at the O'Neill Literary House. This year's select best include Janet Harvey, David Healey, Dean Hebert, Kelly Lamoree Michael Rudin and Tom Schuster

Preceding the reading will be a Writers' Union picnic and business

Kudos for the Art Show

by Cathy Jewell

The student art exhibit, which onened last Friday, is one of the best displays of student talent seen in recent years. The show features works from this year's fall and spring semester classes. Pieces in the show were selected by Art Department Chairman Sue Tessem and art instructor Tex Andrews. The by each student enrolled in an art class this year and though not every student made it into the show. Ms. larly pleased with the final selecexhibit

The senior show was presented also won the Lynette Nielson recipient of the award, which is a cash prize in the amount of $250, is chosen by a panel of judges; this and deciding upon a thesis year the panel included Prof. Robert Ramsey and Sinja An. The winning work is an untitled triptych pastel green and grey

Chosen after a review of the entire exhibit, this work was selected for its originality and and overall mastery of the composi- and white line designs, and applied tional elemants of visual design: colors according to the techniques line, shape, value, color and texture.

Mrs Dunn Ramsey said that the volume of work presented by Miss Schmidt expressed unity and powerful imagery. Mrs. An furthered these comments, stating that Schmidt's ideas were unique and carried a harmony of composition, cluded in the show, much was from work to work. On the award, Miss Schmidt stated that she was, "honored and grateful," and extwo tried to select at least one work pressed her gratitude to instructors Tessem and Andrews. Ms. Tessem was quite happy with Schmidt's show, particularly Tessem stated that she was particu- the fact that that Dawn chose to create her entire show around a tions and the quality of the overall conceptual thesis, which she evolved of her own accord. Norby art major Dawn Schmidt, who compilation of the artist's work as amassed over his college career. Award for this year's show. The Miss Schmidt chose instead to create her entire show this spring, after doing extensive background work, half models and broken pieces, she

After considering the influence Janson-LaPalme, Marcy Dunn of Japanese prints upon the work of many other artists, Schmidt studied several masters, their styles of drawing in shades of yellow, red, composition and use of color. She then reassembled the prints, and oddly, the pieces left over afterward became the focus of her study. She reworked these scraps into black of the masters she studied jor Cecy Kosenkranius also had a thesis behind her work on exhibit: this was because the exhibit is part of her senior thesis for her major. Of her large selection of pottery inmodeled after the Pueblo Indian style. The study of Pueblo Indian culture and pottery was the area of her chosen major. Miss Kosenkra-nius utilized mostly modern techniques in her work, though some pieces were done by hand, and paint and minerals were mixed to create the correct stain, in order to give the Pueblo pieces their "rustic" look. The designs for the Pueblo mally, the senior show consists of a pieces also followed original

Pueblo designs, though some are abstractions of the original designs, used by Miss Kosenkranius to affect her own geometric patterns. In the concentrates on design, and the broken pieces are skillfully arranged, in order to give her display a sense of history, as though they were the product of an excavation. For the same effect, matte glazes were used to give these pieces a dull

The other works in the exhibit consist of charcoal and pastel drawings, acrylic paintings, collages and prints. Senior art major Sarah Luke's pastels, produced in inde-

Senior Dawn Schmidt accepts the Lynette Nielson award for he work from photographer Constance Stuart Larrabee and art lecture erTex Andrews. Schmidt's work is on exhibit at Gibson Fine Arts pendent study, are done in a fine ism, post-impressionism, reali impressionistic style. The paintings and pop. Paintings and prints by in the show cover the stages of cub-

Chestertown Movie Theater

MOONSTRUCK

778-1575

WISH YOU WERE HERE

Washington College Film Series Norman James Theater Friday * Sunday * Monday 7:30 p.m.

$1 admission — students / faculty / staff $2 - all others

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 59, Number 27

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, May 6, 1988

SCC Suspends Student For Pulling Fire Alarm

Case is appealed, heard by CSB by Tony Caligiuri A freshman male was friend. charged and found responsible in a proceeded down stairs to the second Student Conduct Council case for floor. After the second floor R.A. pulling a fire alarm in Minta Martin, asked them to leave the building, resulting in his suspension. A they proceeded to the basement. second student was also found There they reportedly verbally being of Washington College sturesponsible as an accomplice and "harassed" two Minta Martin resiwas charged, but not suspended. dents who were entering the build-

With no success, they

Minta Martin Hall looking for a unbecoming of a Washington College student. Both were found responsible on all charges. Because Maroney had no physical involvement in pulling the alarm, he was not charged with endangering the well dent. His responsibility to reporting the incident to Security was the During the proceedings, ing. While in the basement, Deri basis for the SCC's charges. He was Chris Deri admitted to what he admitted that he and Maroney dispenalized with an "Official College

Deri was not only the first student to be referred to the SCC for pulling a fire alarm, but also the first to be suspended from the College for doing so, according to Smith and Conner.

George Washington, who kept his clothes on for May Day, still found himself the victim of a springtime prank. The statue served as the location for the annual mass tribal poetry reading last Sunday. More May Day photos on page 12.

off the alarm while horsing around." At about 1:30 a.m. On the night of Saturday, April 23, Deri, time, Blash left the scene out of fear along with freshman Witney that the alarm would be pulled. Maroney and Brad Blash entered While in a conversation with Ma-east basement wing of the building in a "joking" conversation. At this roney about the mechanics of the alarm box, Deri testified that he swung his arm down over the box, breaking the glass bar in the trigger, and setting off the alarm. Although witness Deri admitted that his action resulted in setting off the alarm, at no time "did I want to or intend to pull accident. At the moment that the alarm went off, Deri and Maroney fled the scene out of fear, according to their testimony. They did not report the incident to security at that time or the next day out of fear over the penalties which might be imposed. Deri and Maroney returned about an hour later to visit friends, at which time the second floor R.A. asked them to leave the building a second time. They both admitted to have been drinking at the time of the

that the action was a "complete incident The two were brought up on charges by the SCC following an investigation by the WC Security office. Deri was charged with endangering the well-being of Washington College students, violating the College's standard of behavior. and violating the honor code by conduct unbecoming of a Washington College student. Maroney was charged with violating the College's standard of behavior and violating the honor code by conduct described as "accidentally setting cussed pulling the fire alarm in the Warning" and the responsibility for writing a letter of apology to the residents of Minta Martin.

> Deri was found responsible on the grounds that despite the circumstances, he did admit to pulling the alarm and he failed to rectify the situation, choosing not to admit his actions to security. Brad Blash was not charged, merely serving as a

The decision was appealed by either party charged, as was recommended by Chairman of the the alarm," said Deri, who reiterated SCC, Brenda Conner. According to Rachel Smith, Chairman of the Conduct Screening Board, the appeal was heard on Wednesday or Thursday of the same week. If the appeal was found valid, then the case would be heard by the All Campus Judiciary, and may be passed on President Cater's office. If the suspension is upheld, Deri will lose all credit for spring semester at Washington College as if he had withdrawn from classes. There will be no indication of the suspension on his permanent academic record.

Deri was not only the first student referred to the SCC for pulling a fire alarm, but also the first student to be suspended from the College for doing so, according to Conner and Smith. According to Conner, the SCC, upon finding him responsible for the action, had no choice but to put forth the punishment mandated in the Student Handbook. According to the Handbook, "Anyone found guilty of willfully setting off a false fire alarm or

MacNeil to Deliver Keynote Speech For Commencement

President Cater's office MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour. officially announced this week that Robert MacNeil, executive editor career began with five years at keynote imencement on Sunday, May of Doctor of Letters. the 13th year of the partnership of MacNeil and Jim Lehrer. In 1975 be half hour Robert MacNeil eport, with Jim Lehrer as Washington Correspondant, mired on WNET/13 New York. it two months later, Public roadcasting Service began ational distribution of the fram. Over the next seven years, he MacNeil/Lehrer Report, as is is renamed, won more than 30 ards for journalistic excellence, cluding a Dupont-Columbia ward and a Television Critics Circle Award.

ambitious undertaking, the

MacNeils's journalism and co-anchor of The MacNeil/ Reuters News Agency in London. Lehrer News Hour, will deliver the He moved to television in 1960 as address during an NBC News London-based foreign correspondent. For the next 22. During the ceremony, he will be three years, he covered such major sented with an honorary degree events as the fighting in the Belgian Congo, the civil war in Algeria, the The 1988-89 season marks construction of the Berlin Wall, and the Cuban Missle Crisis. In 1963, e public news team of Robert he was transfered to Washington where he covered the civil rights movement and the assasination of John F. Kennedy. In 1965, he became the New York anchor of the first half hour weekend network news broadcast, the Scherer-MacNeil Report on NBC. MacNeil returned to London in 1967 as a reporter for the British Broadcasting Corporation's Panorama series, reporting on both British and American news

In addition to his work the the Newshour, MacNeil has coauthored and hosted The Story of In September of 1983, English, a series run by the BBC and MacNeil and Lehrer launched their a book published by Viking Press. During Commencement, which will begin at 10:30 A.M., Julia Elizabeth Garraway, president of Maryland Independent College and University Association, will recieve an honorary Doctor of Laws. Garraway works to follow legislation in the State Legislature concerning higher education, securing funds for Maryland's colleges, including Washington College.

During Senior week, several events will be held for seniors and alumni. On Friday, May 20 at 4:00 continued on page 5

Robert MacNeil

continued on page 5

Editorial

Journalistic Fantasy

Washington College is a student journalist's dream. As my year-long tenure as the editor of The Elm comes to a close, I must recognize the first-rate journalistic experiences this school has made available

In addition to the broad education that an aspiring writer of any sort requires, the College offers students the opportunity to meet a number of distinguished practitioners of the profession. At many schools, such events would take place in large lecture halls; here, however, students share meals and glean advice on a one-on-one basis from the best in the journalism field today.

Undoubtedly, it is the rare school where freshman reporters meet Pulitzer Prize winners, such as New York Times reporter Nan Robertson or Washington Post editorial page editor / Newsweek columnist Meg Greenfield. Few college newspaper staffs are critiqued by experienced individuals like San Francisco Examiner editor Mary Anne Dolan, Baltimore Sun defense reporter Charles Corddry or Newsweek senior editor Jerrold Footlick

Likewise, few newcomers to any field have the chance to discuss its ethical questions with those who have faced the actual - not merely hypothetical - dilemmas of the profession for years, such as Working Woman editor-at-large Kate Rand Lloyd or New York Times labor reporter Abe Raskin

If that series of distinguished names is not sufficiently impressive, the list of literary luminaries that student reporters have the opportunity to interview - such writers as Lawrence Ferlinghetti, Toni Morrison, William Styron and Richard Wilbur recognized by any who have flipped through Who's Who

This outstanding support for the development of aspiring journalists will continue into the future. Richard Harwood, the deputy managing editor of The Washington Post, will coordinate a series of workshops for the staffs of The Elm and The Collegian with Post staffers. Moreover, the Douglass Cater awards in journalism, presented for the first time this year, will again be given out to reward and encourage the students who contribute to campus publications. Also, a budget enhancement stemming from the increased student activities fee will allow The Elm to print expanded issues in both the weekly newspaper and monthly magazine and to send delegates to national conventions for further training.

Washington College is well on its way to serving as a model for what a small liberal arts school without a journalism program without even a single journalism course - can do to help its students gain experience in the field

Thanks to this year's Elm and Collegian staffs for producing 396 pages of articles, photos, and graphics

Washington College Elm

| Editor                    |                    |
|---------------------------|--------------------|
| Editor-in-chief           | Andrea Keh         |
| News Editor               |                    |
| Features Editor           |                    |
| Sports Editor             | Bill Beekma        |
| Arts/Entertainment Editor | Susan DiLa         |
| Photography Editor        | Michele Bal        |
| Graphics Editor           | Todd Ka            |
| Manage                    | er .               |
| Managing Editor           | Cathy Jews         |
| Advertising Manager.      | Erin Hodge-William |
| Circulation Manager       | William Fau        |

The Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington College. The Elm is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and exam weeks. Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief. Signed colu

taries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the members of the editorial staff.

All letters to the editor are read with interest but, due to space limitations, the editors cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy grammar. Letters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would by violated by diclosure of his name. Sudents should include their year and major. Excelly and staff members should include their positions and departments. The except should be supported to the positions and departments of the support of the supp

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the main lounge of Queen Anni dormitory. Business hours are 7:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesdays and 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Wednesdays. The office phone number is (301) 778-2800, ext. 321.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Confederate Flag Offends Others

To the Editor

I am writing in response to Mr. Traber's reply to my earlier letter regarding his Confederate flag. First of all, let me dispense with the notion, implied in his article, that this controversy involves first amendment rights or freedom of expression; it does not. I fully recognize Mr. Traber's legal right to free expression, and would defend to the death the liberty which allows him to display the Confederate or any other flag. Rather, what I am disputing is his moral right to publically exhibit a symbol which so many find repulsive.

I acknowledge Mr. Traber's assertion that the flag has multifaceted meanings, and is interpreted by many as a harmless symbol of regional pride. I happen to think this view is wrong, but that is my problem. However, Mr. Traber should be sensitive to the fact that others may interpret the flag differently from he, and that many see the banner as a personal insult. Does he not realize that for black people, being exposed to this symbol is equivalent to a Jew being forced to walk under a publicly displayed swastika every day? Doesn't he know that for many the flag is a searing reminder of cruelty and bigotry? I know that he does not see the flag in this way, and I accept that. But for one who is so worried about respecting diverse opinions, Mr. Traber shows remarkably little regard for those of others. Just because he personally does not perceive the Confederate banner in this critical light does not give him the moral right to disregard the feelings of those who do (which I believe to be a considerable con-

Traber desires to hang the flag as a personal and private room decoration, then he should place it inside his own room, where only he and his chosen guests may see it and interpret it in a benign fashion. He should not exhibit it in the window, where it so deeply offends those themselves. But what in the hell are stituency on campus)

who find it abhorrent. I have a final historical note in reply to Mr. Traber's sadly ill-informed opinion on the "real" causes of the Civil War. It is the consensus of most modern historians that American slavery, and the moral/ political controversy it engendered, was the root cause of the Civil War. If slavery had never existed in this country, the horrific and soulwrenching war which destroyed it would never have occured. Even Southern scholars concur with this fact, Mr. Traber.

Jonathan Sarris

Progress Made In Athletic Equality

Our compliments to Audra Philippon for her summary of the report on the Status of women at Washington College in the April, 1988 issue of The Collegian. As Audra reported, great strides have been made in the area of women's athletics over the past several years although much remains to be done. There is one factual error which I would like to clarify. The article reports that $470, 93 was budgeted per person for men's athletics and $295.44 for women's athletics in 1987-88. The figures are actually those for the 1986-87 fiscal year The budgeted amounts per partipant for 1987-88 were $460 former and $400 for women. This new information provides the College community with further evidence the progress being made towards parity for women's athletics.

The Faculty Athletic Comm tee has assembled a prioritized list of improvements for facilities, suff ing, and intramural programmi which will be submitted to the Co lege administration for study and action. When implemented, then improvements will result in bea and more equitable athletic oppo tunities for all Washington College men and women

Sincerely Rosette M. Roat, Chair The Faculty Athletic Committee Dining Beefs To the Editor:

For those of us who choose to sit in the back section of the Dining Hall to consume our far from award winning meals, the fact that ash trays are absent accounts for the fact that the back section is reserved for non-smokers. We have rights at well; if you want to smoke, smokels the smoking sections; don't invade our right to fresh air. These facts seem to escape many who continue continued on page 4

Honors Program Prevents Stagnation

like to make a few remarks regarding my education at Washington College. Essentially, my concerns are the same as those of many of the students here: the writing seminar and the distribution requirement

In each of these examples If, as he says in his letter, Mr. these things are spoonfed to the student supposedly for his or her own good. I believe, however, that we are now at the age and level of consciousness where each student should be responsible for these decisions by himself. It may be countered that many cannot decide for

As a graduating senior, I would such people doing here in the fest place? In the instance of the writing seminars, good writers are beits relegated to an atmosphere of intel lectual brain-death with those who cannot write simple sentences, sel are then blithely asked to 'prof from the experience'. In fact this writing is not being enhanced at al. They merely make appearances in those who cannot write at all.

Students with purpose in the academic pursuits are asked to make side-trips to other programs that merely delay the fulfillment of the expectations with generally ineffor tual samplings of all the discipling see HONORS, page 1

Students Are Culturally 'Flabby"

ion is far more difficult to answer than my enior obligation. The difficulty for me lies (as every humanities student knows) in tradiwhat I have always been - and, since I have uthe University of Arizona and two at Washngion College) cultural literacy is about C-/ education ore towards the D+. A D+ usually is given and the radio. What a shame.

ahigh school and as my major in college, I've until the day it's due. I believe that college find deeper appreciations of our culture: how asked to give my opinion about the students aren't so much culturally illiterate, vultural literacy" of my peers. Readers may as culturally flabby. I include myself in this. find it strange, but the challenge of this ques- (Originally, I thought a humanities major would be "cake."

We don't like to read for the challenge, we don't normally go to foreign films or "art on Jam not a Montaigne, nor a Schiller, nor theatres," few of us study music with any an Arendt; given this, I run the risk of becom- rigor, and most of us only hit the museums ing a cranky Alan Bloom or a poltroonish when we have to take a field trip or when william Bennett. But I am a humanist - it is guests come from out of town, and even then we ususally say things like, "Oh! This is so een asked for my two cents, here they are: I great. How did the artist ever think of that. feel that after five years in college (three years Let's go eat lunch." This is a "norm" in our society-this is crazy!

I don't get riled up about this attitude Dt. That's not an insult, it is a reflection on because I feel that everyone should be a social how our society feels toward culture and critic, but it is because I'm disappointed to see a great lack of awareness on our part. We Society, culture, and education. In some believe that the United States is a great counway, shape or form, every critique on cultural try, by and large, because we have been told literacy cites these three institutions as the so: we're 10-1 in the wars we've fought, we mobilem. There is nothing terribly new, or have tremendous spending power so we do govocative, about this question of cultural not want for anything, our government has mmitment. But the mere fact that this survived certain traumas, etc. This is where estion can be asked by college students most of cultural study ends in elementary with such naive enthusiasm makes me lean schools and high schools, and on t.v. movies did the enlightenment influence the flexibility about the lack of student writing ability. This of our Constitutuion, or how has Dadaism influence the way media is presented to us in the eighties, or how have Swedish and Brazilian fashions influenced the decor of our homes, or, closer to campus, how have Black musical forms influenced the British musical invasions of the sixties and early eighties? Very few of us would think to research these topics for the fun of it during the course of a summer, yet some people do. Most of us would think this behavior "odd." This concerns me a great deal. If I find fault with our educational system, it would be in the fact that intellectual/cultural curiosity is neither nurtured nor enthusiastically encouraged until college (and even the only half-heartedly). Much of this is manifest in our inability to write and read

Pete Mendívil

Our inability to write and read is the basic stumbling block to educational reform. I'm sick to death of listening to major.

moan in hushed tones over coffee or cocktails is a national annoyance to me. Everyone, it seems, even clever students, cry out in digust about the inability to write The solution to this problem is simple: all of us need to roll up our sleeves and practice from the "beginning." I get the feeling we would be embarrassed to admit the need for remedial writing classes, yet this is what most evidence dictates. I am fed up with correcting essays from my classmates, or explaining to a junior or senior why he received a Dor an Fon an essay, and then doubting my own com-

Perhaps the college campus is not the place for remedial classes, or "seminars," but, what, then, do you tell the graduating class when they face their lack of skill? The question is not whether or not we are culturally literate, but what prevents us from being culturally literate. The challenge is straightforward, no blame needs to be placed, only corrective action is required.

Senior Pete Mendívil is a humanities

Are Washington College students culturally literate?

Peter Gaines Senio Timbuktu inb chops but not on pork chops?

John Bodna Junio Haverstraw, NY

classes, the opportunities to culturally enrich ourselves is limited.

Sophomore Queenstown, MD

Thy is it that one uses mint jelly on We have as much culture as any For the most part, no. It seems that other school. It's just that outside of an interest in cultural events and activiaties is sorely lacking on this campus.

Ruth Davidson Senior Palm Beach, Florida

There is a small percentage of students that are culturally literate but O's! for the most part I would say that they are not.

Drew Elburn Sophomore Balmer,MD.

I don't know but how 'bout them

ampus Voices

by David Johnson

earning Makes For Cultural Literacy

This question of cultural literacy is very right now. I was in a bookstore last week te they were promoting a new book by D. Hirsch, Jr., called, coincidentally, Culal Literacy. On the free bookmark I got it 5, 'What every American needs to know... you?" and gives a list of what Hirsch says should all know. On the back, at the m, it says, "Possessing the base informaneeded to thrive in the modern world." What is the base information we need? be culturally literate we need to know the ngs of the words: junta, fornication Furies, nymphomania and weather satelamong others. This may be true - I don't like discussing the definition of cultural cy. I just want to ask a few questions: Who made E.D. Hirsch the arbiter of ral literacy? What exactly is involved in ing" in the modern world? Should I lend list to the administration, so they know succeed? I learned what nymphomania is here; and The Furies is a hockey team, everyone knows that (there are helpful NHL facts in the back of your yearbook, don't worry). But there are some words and phrases I didn't recognize.

Chas. Foster

After $50,000, I am not ready to thrive in the modern world - in E.D. Hirsch's modern world. Do I get to make a list for him? Spridle and Chim Chim, straight-edge, Bob McAllister, home-boy, Mothra... Let's see him answer those. This whole notion of Cultural Literacy is ridiculous. Who cares? I've asked Washington College will have to teach? around, and the answers to this question run

Is it a liberal arts college's job to teach cultural the gamut: Are Washington College students tions with boring literati, that's for sure literacy, and if it is, does Washington College culturally literate? Yes, they are. No, they're Cultural literacy is a pompous term for knowlnot. Could you repeat the question? Students edge, and knowledge can't be divided into are culturally literate until their exams are cultural and un-. Knowledge is all around us over. Students who are culturally literate are all the time - we can't help learning. And no fun at parties Will my life be a living hell if I can't use or culturally illneoclassicism and sacred cow in the same Charles Foster is a senior majoring in UFO

those who are burning up to learn everything What if we're not literate (culturally)? are the smart ones, whether culturally literate sentence? I won't have as many conversa- sighting.

The following individuals have been appointed to positions on The Collegian staff for next year:

> Andrea Kehoe - Editor-in-chief Michele Balze - Photography editor Erin Murphy - Fiction/Poetry editor Alison Auber - Reviews editor Ben Jacobs - Advertising manager

Sophomore To Enter Miss Maryland Pageant

"I think I can compete with the best of them," says sophomore festivals, parades and ribbon-Wendy Snow, the recent winner of the Miss Cumberland title In addition to taking home a $400 scholarship, gift certificates, a wardrobe allowance, and a twomonth spa membership, the drama major will compete in the Miss Maryland pageant June 30 - July 2. Earning the state title would take her to the national contest - the Miss America pageant

"I think it's time for Miss Maryland to win (the Miss America contest)," says Snow, who hopes that the national title would boost her desired broadcasting career.

Cumberland will enhance her public speaking abilities, says The host of a public broadcasting television show on school news during her high school years, she intends to earn a masters degree in mass communications to prepare for further work in the field. Serving as Miss America would also give her exposure to the public, she points out.

"I'd love to do it. I'm going to try my best to get there," she says. "It would look great on a résumé."

A high school guidance the pageant process by nominating cutting ceremonies as Miss her for an outstanding teens competition. She earned awards in the talent, service and interview categories and was to continue to the national finals, but the pageant

> "I never even dreamed of winning and I did," she recalls. That success prompted her to enter other pageants: she won first runner up in the Miss America co-ed contest in 1986 and received the farm queen title for Alleghany county, later taking first number up in the state > for their work on the Sophomore

Writing Seminar issue and on the Professor Robert Day, a creative writing professor in the English

be distributed next week

shown to be widespread.

known for cheating."

Before getting Miss $600, and have a swimsuit cust Guest appearances at counselor first interested Snow in Cumberland, she won the Miss made for about $150. Alleghany-Garrett title. Although part of her motivation is scholarship weighted heavier than the oth money (the Cumberland contest Snow said she needs to polish) netted her $500), Snow confesses performance of excerpts from N

Since the talent category

"I never even dreamed of winning,

and I did ... "

that the chance to go on to the Miss America contest, the largest scholarship pageant in the nation,

Even with the preparation time the pageant requires, Snow has not slowed her pace at school. Active in drama productions, she recently played the lead in Madame Butterfly and appeared in the dance company's performance and the Renaissance Christmas dinner. A state of the major report, which will freelance seamstress, she makes costumes for both the drama and dance departments. In addition Snow teaches aerobics for the Kent County Parks and Recreation dedepartment who voted against the partment and for the Kent Athletic motion, explained that he consid-Her aerobics experience will ered it a "pretty extreme step" to help her prepare for the Miss Marytake when cheating has not been land pageant - the judges at the local level recommended that she "I think it called a lot of attentone up her legs. Snow also needs to tion to a problem that's not that profind the "perfect gown" from her nounced," said Day. "Sure kids $400 wardrobe allowance, a task cheat, but we're not a school that's that she estimates will cost at least school."

dame Butterfly, selected one a before the Cumberland contest, a must also continue to carefully pa newspapers for the interview to ment, which tests knowledge current events and speaking abiii

Snow says her participal has been supported by her paren particularly her mother, who wen the Miss USA pageant as the 19 Miss Virginia. Her father, ho ever, initially worried that loss might bring her disappointme Another of his concerns, that is contest might exploit her, is alle ated by the chaperones, who was what is written in the press. "Ever thing we wear, say, or do is to monitored,' says Snow Reaction from other stude has been positive as well, she say "They're excited," sa Snow. "They think it's neat that on day they might be able to say knew Miss America. She lived

my hall' or 'She went to n

Letters to the Editor and paper at one another and not Don't Forget

cleaning it up

go and get another?

management of the Dining Service needs to stop working on pleasing judges at food shows and their pleasing the students, for without the students, there would be no

Washington College Dining Serv-

Brian Kroll, Junior Carrie Naff, Junior

Tim Rohs, Junior

Regina Pepper, Junior

Mike Johnson, Sophomore

'image" and begin to concentrate on continued from page 2 to smoke in the non-smoking section. Did you ever get a glass or cur with a cigarette butt in it, or a tray or plate with a black ash mark? I have and it is mainly due to those who either smoke in the non-smoking section or have absolutely no concern for using a provided ash tray. Sharon Crew has been informed of the problem via the napkin board (what a joke) and the Dining Service Committee. Though she claims that she is doing something about it, she seems more concerned that we get six and only six scallops, not nine, instead of enforcing the simple nonsmoking rule.

The ignorance or selfishness of those who smoke in the nonsmoking section should be justly punished, either by means of a fine or forced labor on the dish line. However, that seems to present the problem of who will be delegated to enforce the rule. Well, the Dining Service supervisors seem to have a difficult time ungluing themselves from the napkin board area or from flirting with others, but what about the RA's? They are certainly responsible enough and it would be easy for them to enforce the no smoking rule, since there is at least one who regularly eats in this section. I question how difficult it must be for the supervisors to walk around the dining hall to make sure rules are followed. Maybe a routine walk would familiarize the supervisors with where certain groups of people dine; therefore, they would be able to deduct who has the disgusting habits of not bussing their

In addition I as well as ev-Arts 'Field" eryone who boards on campus, pay To the Flm . entirely too much for the bad service We know that students received. Not only are rules not Washington College are crazy enforced by the supervisors.

lacrosse, but some of us are com-(though according to MOM you can seurs of the fine and performi turn in one's name for throwing paper and they will be dealt with, but We see lots of space in the Eli why can't MOM correct this herdevoted to sports, very little devo self??) but also, the selfishness of to cultural events on campus. Ca the management is inexcusable with in point - the March 25 issueh respect to meal service. With an allseven pages filled with athlet you-can-eat policy, why is one only news; two pages minus six ads allowed one serving per sick tray if volved the arts and entertainme this is the alternative to dining in the The major performance of Dining Hall? Why is one only al-Dance Company received two co lowed X amount of serving when umn inches. many simply get that serving in We request the The Elm co disgust, place it at their table, then sider more equitable arrangement the future The Dining Service boasts

The artist is the antennae of the race.... Ezra Pound

when they serve "real" food or have a meaningless meal night, but they Let us not forget to give cro do not want to hear it when George's (and in fact advance notice ) for it is closed even when scheduled to be many students who spend hours open. The Snack Shop hours, acrehearsal time in pursuit of anot cording to the menu, are "Sunday kind of excellence. They too # through Thursday during dinner playing on a sort of "field" and or hours and Saturday Brunch." The

serve to be recognized

Artistic Directo Dance Compa Editor's Note: We do not agree! the lacrosse supplement—a speci issue intended to provide advancoverage of the game against WC biggest lacrosse rival — repressiva a "case in point" for The Elei weekly coverage of the arts. It is annual issue, not a regular feat of our sports department. Letters continued on page

Prof. Karen Sni

Established Math Workshop

by Andrea Kehoe A math workshop offering remedial help on a volunteer basis will be established next year. The faculty voted to set up such a program last Monday night at their final meeting for the 1987-88 academic year Staffed by a part-time director, workshop will be open to students who want help with gaps in their math background that affect their class performance. Currently, the pre-calculus course is divided into four levels of ability, forcing those at the bottom rung to try to catch up before the final exam. explained Dr. Albert Briggs, chairman of the math department.

Some faculty expressed concern that the College will teach skills that should be acquired in high school, and that remedial programs will spread across the curriculum

Briggs, however, said that such outcome is unlikely, since quantitative skills, like writing ability, are basic to more disciplines than is knowledge of other areas, such as chemistry or French.

We have to deal with reality, I think," he said. "The reality is that you have students in quantitative courses - even 100 level science classes involve arithmetic, if nothing else - and you do have students in trouble. You can fold your arms on your chest and say You should have learned that in high school" and refuse to do anything, or you can do something to help Junior Perry Finney, a precalculus "survivor," agreed that the workshop is a necessary addition to the academic program

"How many kids get out of this school and can't do basic algebra?" he asked. "They get creamed on the GRE's (Graduate Record Exam). They're numerically illiterate.

In other items on Monday's enda, the faculty voted down a proposal from the Academic Council requiring students to sign a disclaimer that they did not violate the Honor Code to complete a paper, bluebook or other work.

The proposal originated in the Student Academic Board, passed that body by one vote, and was approved by the Academic Council. SAB chairman Perry Finney expressed surprise that the motion went before the faculty

"It was such a controversial thing to begin with," he said, explaining that he personally considered the proposal an "innocuous" way to heighten student awareness of cheating. The statement, which would have read "I have not violated the Honor Code in preparation of this work," is based on similar ones at other colleges, Finney said.

"It's not any big deal or any great loss," he said, adding that he hopes this year's SAB will not be remembered for this suggestion but

Journalism

Washington Douglass Cater awards in senior Tom Schuster, as a writer and journalism were presented editor, and junior Andrea Kehoe, as Judged by Richard Harwood, deputy managing editor of The Washington Post, the contest awarded certificates and prize money to five students.

Senior Chas. Foster was recognized as "an enlightened cartoonist." alumna DePasquale ('87), as an all-around journalist

> Colev Charlie

Awards College's contributor to campus journalism;

Wednesday at the O'Neill Literary a features writer. Former student Barclay Green received an honorable mention as "a stylist."

President Douglass Cater, himself a former journalist. presented the awards at a wine and cheese recention. The competition established this year, will continue Sue to be judged by a distinguished

Laura Audra Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists tables or habitually throwing food

World News Update

ht-page brochure will show up in pately 107 million homes the U.S. entitled "Understanding ms" One hundred and ten mil on copies will be printed in English nd four million in Spanish. The nchure was sent from the office of ngeon General C. Everett Koop. to says, "This mailing speaks in k, simple, clear language about al, vaginal and anal intercourse as elected as a finalist in the Peer utstanding School Volunteer

Student

England, was nominated by teacher

The economics major began his volunteer work with special vestigate his interest in a career in aching. He arrived at the school at 800 to help supervise children

McGarrity, who is spending the year abroad at the e

Awards.

Elementary School.

Receives

Junior Gerald McGarrity was helping with art projects

outh category in the National of the physical problems that the School Volunteer Program's children have," reads the Vita Burt of Chestertown's Garnett vacation at his New Jersey home, education preschoolers to to Washington College next year tting off the buses and spent the relaxing," he said. "It's a good get-ay overseeing gross motor, away from college, and it's neat to visit this week

that AIDS cannot be transmitted by casual contact. Koop goes further to say that the disease cannot be con- of being "too trusting" by Ukrainia tracted by "insects, by donating Catholics whose religion is banne blood, from a kiss or from saliva, sweat, tears, urine or bowel move-

President Reagan abandoned anti-Soviet rhetoric and instead rec

"Gerald is uninhibited by any

Volunteer

Award

gives time, energy, and love without the expectation of anything in said he was surprised by the award.

He intends to continue his volunteer work at the school when he returns

"It's a lot of fun. It's really

McGarrity, who is currently on

For the first time, top health officials der Gorbachev. He said he believe have stated without qualification Gorbachev's "openness" policy

> Reagan has now been accuse in the USSR. They are protestin Reagan's plans to visit a state-sur ported monastery during the sum mit, less than four weeks away compiled by Mary Saravi

Stock Market Game Winners During the fall and spring se

mesters twenty-two Washington College teams participated in a tenweek stock market simulation game. The game, which is sponsored by the Business Management Department, the Washington College Center for Economic Education, and Legg Mason Investment Securities, allows players to trade stocks listed on the New York and American Stock Exchanges using $100,000 in computer money. First, second, and their place win-and hopes to drop in on the class to ning teams are awarded cash prizes The fall semester's first place inners were Tom Layug and Bob Morrow. Other student winners included Chris Huebner, Michael Winkelman, and Fred Johnston. This semester's first place winner is Bob Alexander, Joe McAleer, John Rickloff, Steve Pursley, Ben Crabbs, and Michael Winslow are also winners. The first, second, and third place teams will receive checks for $125, $75, and $25.

opportunity to wish everyone the best of luck on their final exams. To the graduating seniors, I wish them the best life has to offer and to everyone else: I hope you have an enjoyable summer. I look forward to seeing all

MOM!!! the center of Campus. The annual

The Outdoor Adventures Club repelled off the roof of Tawes Theater for their first activity. The club is advised by Registrar David Butters.

SCC Suspension continued from page 1 ity of the College.

tampering with fire equipment will be suspended from the college for the remainder of the semester. According to Director of Security Jerry Roderick, an agreement was implemented last spring whereas the investigation into any false alarm for which the Chestertown Fire Department does not have for vandalism.

The case was passed on to the SCC instead of the All Campus Judiciary by the CSB because the SCC would be "more serious," according Smith. According to Conner, this was Deri's second appearance before the SCC. The first was #### to respond would be the responsibil-Commencement Plans

continued from page 1 p.m., there will be a senior tea at the White Swan Tavern for graduating seniors. The Chemistry department is holding several events for graduating chemistry majors, while there will be a champagne reception

Eastern Shore Barbeque will be held on Saturday, May 21, at 11:30 the main campus. Alumni interested in participating in a number of alumni events, including those specifically for the classes of 1938, 1963, and 1978, should for the senior class under the Elm in contact Pat Trams

mory and auditory skills or get into their (the children's) world." Mom's Cookie Jar

This being the last "Mom's Saturday, May 14th, the last day of P.M.I would like to take this bookie Jar" article for this exams, breakfast will be served mester, I promise to keep it short. from 7:30 to 9:30 A.M. and lunch s Sunday, May 8th, the K.C.D.S. will again sponsor the fidnight Breakfast", from 11:30 be the last meal served for the spring M. to12:30 A.M.. The menu will thre scrambled eggs, sausage W.C.D.S. will jointly sponsor eks and donuts.

will be served from 11:15 A.M. to 1:30 P.M.. Lunch on Saturday will semester. The S.G.A. and the coffee and donuts in the Coffee of you next semester Meal hours for exam week will House during exam week, Monday in the same as usual. On through Friday, beginning at 11:00

On the Bay at Fairlee Creek Chestertown, MD 21620 301-778-2100

--- Serving Lunch and Dinner Daily Over looking the Water

-- Saturday Night Seafood Buffet

-Dave Brand Entertains Fri. & Sat. Nights

Thirty motel rooms - Restaurant & Lounge -Banquet & Meeting Rooms - Golf Course - Full Service Marina - Miniature Golf - Pool- Beach -Fishing - Sailboard Rentals

> Reservations requested for Parties of eight or more

Drayton Manor

Coopers Lane Worton, Md. 21678 778-2869

Double Room $30.00

C-Town liquors Deli

FEATURING: HOMEMADE HOT SOUPS

111 WASHINGTON CHESTERTOWN, MD

778-2988

W. C. Grows To Its Present Height

The many periods of Washington College's history are distinguishable primarily by the successive administrations of each presi dent and the changes enacted by them. With the unfortunate resignation of Dr. Reidin 1903, a Dr. James W. Cain was elected by the board of Visitors and Governors to succeed

Dr. Reid as principal. Because of increased enrollment Dr. Cain made motions toward the construction of a new campus building, for he realized that the existing facilities did not provide adequate housing. A site on the west side of campus was purchased from Mrs. Ringgold for the future construction of the new campus building to be called William Smith

The corner stone of Smith Hall was laid in 1906, and on June 14, 1907 the building was dedicated. It housed the commencement ceremony activities for the 125th anniversary of the college

The school refor expansion. quested the Board of State Aid and Charities to donate $20,000 for the construction of a new athletic facility. The request was granted, and on January 31, 1913 the new gymnasium was opened

The plans the college made for months increasing the campus facilities suffered a tremendous setback when on January 16, 1916 the recently erected William Smith Hall was destroyed by a fire which started from a bed of hot coals in the basement. The total dollar loss of the building was estimated at

The college quickly made plans for the recontruction of Smith Hall, this time with the heating facility to be housed some distance away from the building

With the outbreak of World War I in 1914, Dr. Cain suggested that the school establish a department for the military training of the students should their aid be requested. This recomendation met little response for some years until in 1917 a Department of Military drills as well as classes in the art of

Dr. Cain handed in his resigna tion to the board on June 18, 1918 after fifteen years at the college.

Dr. Jones accepted the duties as principal of the college, until the board could find a permanent replacement for Dr. Cain's position.

Soon thereafter, the college was designated a training school to be directed by the War department. At this time the facilities of the college were to be controlled by the United States Army. Each man wishing to do so was enlisted as a private in the Army and recieved $30 a month pay to be equipped, fed and trained by the government. When the armistice of November 11, 1918 bought war to an end, 18 of the students enrolled in the military training program remained at Washington College to continue their studies

Before the war ended a Dr The school continued to plan Clarence P. Gould was offered the job as principal yet had to refuse for he was serving in the U.S. Navy at the time. However with the end of the war came the end of his service and he was able to take up the position, thus relieving Dr. Jones who has served as principal for seven

Dr. Gould called for the school to make efforts to increase enroll. ment and the library holdings which were destroyed when Smith Hall burned three years earlier.

Gould made motions for the development of a coeducational program in which men and women would be educated on an equal basis. To promote this motion, the board created a free tuition scholarship to female Maryland residents who had completed studies on the high school level.

With the reconstruction of Smith Hall the college anticipated the future. In 1921 Normal Hall was refurbished to house the incoming

The school remained fairly stable and with the transfer of the dining facility to from West Hall to urged to abide by the following room for a period of time rules: 1. Freshman must not cut campus at any time, 2. Freshman

Science and Tactics was estab- Reid Hall, the building was geared laxed, however penalty for violation catalog in 1926-27 warms lished. The study included military to accommodate freshman who were was usually confinement to one's Stemming from conflicts with the board Dr. Gould resigned from must use the back door of William his post as president of Washington Smith Hall, 3. Freshman must not College. Dr. Paul Titsworth reuse the walk leading from William placed Dr. Gould as president of Smith Hall to the flag pole, known Washington College as the sacred L., 4. Freshman must invitation from an upperclassman.,

11. Freshman must help decorate the gymnasium for special events.,

12. Freshman are not allowed to smoke on campus unless they use a corn cob pipe. As the years pro-

On October 22, 1925 the Daughters of the American Revoluhold themselves ready to do reasontion placed a tablet and stone comable tasks for upperclassmen, 5. memorating George Washington Seniority must be observed at all times, 6. Freshman must salute being granted the Honorary Doctor upperclassmen at all times, 7. Fresh of Laws. The stone and tablet are man must not wear any loud colsituated directly in front of Minta ., 8. Freshman must purchase a Martin before the walkway to Smith Freshman Cap as prescribed by the Hall. Also to commemorate George Washington, a second generation Student Government...(it) is to be seedling of the Elm in which he worn at all times when out of doors or until further notice., 9. Freshman stood under while taking control of the American Army on July 3, 1775. must attend all cheer practices., 10. freshman must neither enter nor pass in front of East Hall without an

At this time automobiles were becoming an indulgence of the American middle class and as a result there was an increase in automobile ownership among the students, and many students relied on automobiles to get back and forth from school. Reacting to the ingressed the rules sometimes re- crease in automobiles the college that;"The automobile and the or lege ordinarily do not mix. Stude ownership or use of cars...is a dea ment to good work and to the mor of the student body. Students a forbidden to keep or operate or except by permission of the Dear

In December of 1932 Dr. To worth resigned as president Washington College.

Mr. Gibert Mead was select to succeed as the president of college and at the innaugeration his term, President Franklin Delan Roosevelt accepted an invitation be present and receive the Hone degree of the Doctor of Laws 1 ceremony was scheduled to a place October 2, 1933 and wastn the first visit of a President to 0 estertown since 1789 when Geor Washington visited.

President Mead noted that it college's facilities greatly needed be improved, and planned constr tion resulting in the creation Hodson Hall, the George Ave Bunting Library, and eventually Dunning Science Hall. The new cilities, according to Preside Mead would have a tremente impact upon the quality of stude

In June of 1945, Washingto College was again graced by 0 presence of a great leader of a nation, this time president Has Truman. On Saturday June 1, Pro dent Truman was awarded the Hi orary Degree of Doctor of Laws.

As veterans started returning the campus after the end of WW a new building was being planned accommodate the increase in cu ment which was expected to be w over 300. In 1950 the building wa ready for occupancy.

An era of outstanding gro and development came to pass president Mead succumbed to po health and on March 25, 1949 on With the death of Preside Mead in 1949, the board elect Daniel Z. Gibson as the next pres dent of Washington College.

Immediately facing the n continued on page l

Cain's Seafood 206 Cannon St.

Chestertown, MD

778-6183

Maryland Crabs Are Here!!!

Live or Steamed Mo

$9, $12 & $15 a dozen

Open 7 Days A Week: Mon. - Wed: 9:00 - 6:00 Thurs.-Sat.: 9:00 - 7:00 Sundays: 11:00 - 5:00

PIP'S LIQUOR STORE

> Kent Plaza 778-0123

Hours: 9 am - 9 pm

Stam 215 High Street Chestertown,

Maryland

773-3930 <sup>a</sup> Graeting Cards · Cosme

e Russell

Candy *Soda

A Senior's Last Words:

Mastering the Plan

by Kelly Lamoree Despite the fact that the Master Plan is already in action, there seem to be some things that the Administration has overlooked. Isn't that amazing? Years spent on a project and they forget things. Since the folks over in Bunting are busy it is my aspiration to assist them. As a graduating senior, it is the least I can do. For example, if we can build tear up Gibson Avenue and raise mition every year, we can have orange soda in the dining hall. Can't we? As well as unrunny tomato soup? Maybe there's a problem with the color factor here. Does the phrase beverage bigotry ring a bell? Also, the Committee who decided which contractor to use cussion, which usually centers neglected a unused workforce here at the college. The plan: All incoming freshman shall be issued brandnew overalls and a pick ax during regristration. They can work to build the college they'll enjoy. Those with delicate complexions will be issued hats. Those with a measureable IQ will be offered the chance to take classes if they wish. Rather than facing the rigors of the Dining Hall, the Freshmen-Work force shall have a special gruel line set up, where they can partake of a wonderfully nutrituos beverage/ meal two times a day, provided they have ginished their workload. Oh, and any Rising Sophomore (note correct spelling of the word) who had written an ignorant letter to the Editor will be recruited also.

Since there shall be so many more students who wish to attend Washington College, each of whom will wish to bring at least one car (freshmen, of course, shall have no need for a car as they will be so busy with their work that they shall have no desire to leave at the end of a workday) parling requirements must be met. It is understood that there are plans for a new parking palace, but realistically, the only way there wil ever be enough space for parking is to chop down the Elm tree and make the whole quadrangle of soft green grass into a giant parking lot of hard black asphalt. Maybe the asphalt could be painted green to resemble grass. Bored students in Smith Hall could entertain themselves by watching confused birds and insects try to peck at the grassphalt" in vain. Piece of the chopped down Elm could be used as firewood in the Literary House; some argue that in way it already is.

Speaking of the "Lit" House, hat is one place that has been neglected in the Master Plan. There is time to amend that oversight, which would not only make the cople there happy, but many other people, i.e. those who want to be filers but do not want to have to be officially designated as such

The plan is as follows: Add another couple of stories to the exing edifice, making it truly the Castle of Literature and certain to around Kant, Hegel or the infamic infuriate anyone whose department is not similarly endowed with an embarassment of riches. Add a tower or two, for good measure. Fly flags and post sentries. The sentries can be armed with flaming arrows and submachine guns, to represent the subtley with which outsiders are greeted in the day to day happen-

Best of all a moat can be dug, the Academic Resource Center, and about eight feet deep. It shall be stocked with piranahs, sharks and that sort of carniverous creature; in the bushes surruonding the House/ armed sentries are able to have first Castle, poisonous vipers can be placed to symbolize the feeling of brotherly love present on most occasions when someone" different" they are sure not to survive. walks into the kitchen during a dis-committed by the various Deans. Don't worry about having to discuss actual literature or the act of writing with anyone under twenty one. It just doesn't happen.

There can be constructed a screening process by which anyone different-looking can be tested to make sure that idelologies do not clash with the Correct One, i.e. theirs. This screening process, modelled after the security system in the Library, can be cleverly hidden in the shrubbery so that the crack at a Non-Believer. If they fail, a secondary unit will be on guard to toss said infidel into the moat, which

"party Barn" (is this like Steak Barn not wait to find someone to switch or Dress Barn? Why not name it with them. Unless of course the Party Shack, Party Hut, Party SCC (or whomever would handle Place?), if it's going to be built, do it such a thing) responsible for adright. Make the resorts of Atlantic ministering sentences for murders City or Las Vegas pale in compari- and relief from frayed mental states. son. Build a couple night spots like There has to be a better system than Hammerjacks or Trax. Make it into there is. It seems sometimes as if one a real showplace. Waiters, glass has to stand on ones head and elevators, Prince playing every whistle the Star Spangled Banner night. Have Cordon Bleu chefs, a backwards and three times fast befine wine cellar. Of course the fore Administration believes that "disco ball" from the Dining Hall one's roomate is deficent in some would be moved there. The Barn manner. Notice that I wrote "seems" could have several level for several as I'm sure that this complaint is the types of entertainment, from 'rude exception rather than the rule. and raunchy' to the baked brie and strawberries type.

The Master Plan should also Donald Trump to help us. feature a place with accomodations Back to the Master Plan, for people who can't stand their

The Master Plan. What it is. what it could be. If only we had

$2 OFF ANY LARGE PIZZA!

Ooohh, the aroma of sauce spices, herbs and bubbly melting cheese. Aaahh, the savings. Mmmmm, the great meal you get at a $2 savings right now. Or save $1 on a medium pizza. P Your choice of styles-including our special Pizza Hut® Pan Pizza-and any of our scrumptious toppings. Eat here or carry out. But don't miss this offer.

$2.00 off any large pizza, or $1,00 off any medium pizza. Hurry-this special offer expires soon. One coupon per party per visit at participating Pizza Hut® restaurants

Pizza Hut Kent Plaza Chestertown, MD 21620

Please present coupon when ordering. Not valid in combi

SPORTS 3rd Ranked Shoremen

Stifle #4 Nazareth, 16-6 Enter NCAA Tournament With Seven Game Winning Streak

by Joe Van Name

The 1988 Washington College Men's Lacrosse team finished play in the second half." In the up their regular season with two solid wins. The wins brought the up and sealed the fate of Nazareth. Shoremen's record to 12-4, with a Division III mark of 12-1.

Division III play was a 15-9 loss to Hobart. Washington's NCAA ranking is third, behind Ohio-Wesleyan and Hobart, making Chestertown a likely location for a first round of the Division III Men's Lacrosse playoffs. Last year, however, the Shoremen finished the season ranked in the same position but were forced to travel to Ohio during finals week to face Ohio-Wesleyan in their first round playoff game, a 12-4 loss. Last week, however, the Shoremen demonstrated why they should be hosts in the first round.

Saturday, the Shoremen rolled over fourth ranked Nazareth College from New York, 16-6. Nazareth had lost only to Hobart, by an identical score as WC's Hobart loss. But the Shoremen were prepared for Nazareth WC brought a 5-2 lead out of the first half, then nailed down the victory by outscoring the Golden Flyers, 11-4, in the second half.

Coach Corcoran was not satisfied with the Shoremen's play in-the first half, but he was pleased with the Shoremen's "more alert second half the Shoremen did not let Tim Hormes led the Shorenen with 5 goals and an assist. Paul The Shoremen's only scar in Miller added 3 goals and 3 assists as the Shoremen attack did the bulk of the damage. In goal, Mugsy Mickum was a stalwart, contribut-

A young West Chester University team next tried to knock the Shoremen from their number three perch, coming to Chestertown with an 11-3 record and dreams of an upset. But the Rams from West Chester were not quite equal to the task, losing 19-7.

Hormes again led WC scorers, with 4 goals and 3 assists. Paul Deniken and Paul Miller both netted 4 goals and an assist. Mickum recorded 7 saves, while Todd Emmons and Bill Carr each had one during their time in the net. Coach Corcoran was pleased to be able to play a lot of people in preperation for the playoffs.

Washington College will most likely host a first round game on Kibler field next Wednesday May 11th, although the time and exact information will not be out until Sunday night

Championship Bound!

Freshman Scott Flippin-Read helped to bring Washington College its third consecutive MAC championship. Friday, the Shore Netters defeated Franklin & Marshall 5-0 for the Southern Division Championship, and then on Saturday WC routed Drew University, 9-0, to clinch the MAC title. Now the Shoremen are one of eight Division III Men's Tennis teams still in the hunt for the National Championship. The NCAA playoffs begin May 15 at Washington & Lee.

The Showomen finished their season with a six game marathon last weekend, in which they picked up the wins, three losses and a tie. Sarah Coste led the way for the Shorewomen, netting twenty goals.

Five Game Winning Streak Helps Athey's Nine Forget MAC Problems

Shoremen Finish 1988 Campaign at 16-8

by Don Steele

With five straight wins capped by victories over Widener and Washington Bible this past week, the Shoremen baseball squad bring a mostly successful 1988 season to a close. The Shoremen finish at 16-8. Against Washington Bible, back to back to back homeruns by Tom Auvil, Alan Lerch, and Dave Levine in the eighth inning paced the Shoremen. Graham Wildman pitched a four hitter to pick up the victory in the 9-1 win. Scott Jones also added a homerun.

Saturday's games against Widener brought two more wins. Both victories came in MAC play, where success has eluded the Shoremen for much of the season.

Pitcher Chris Long came through when needed in 8-7 decision. Scott Jones scored three runs. while Joe McAleer knocked in two. A four run fifth inning keyed the

The Shoremen completely outclassed Widener in the second game., 19-3. Eric Becker was the winning pitcher. Dave Levine provided the offensive spark plug with six RBI's, including a third inning grand slam. Matt Almony hit a two

ing sixth inning homerun

Reflecting on the Shoremen's 16-8 season, Coach Ed Athey is pleased with the season but "very disappointed, as is the team, with the poor MAC record."

> "Coach Ed Athey is pleased with the season but very disappointed, as is the team, with the poor MAC record."

The pitching and defense satisfied Athey, but at times he was disapointed with the offense, although the homerun production of Puskar, Rosfeldfer, Auvil, Lerch, and Levine run shot. Tom Auvil socked a tower- ances of shortstop McAleer and third basemen Levine and Wildman were bonuses

"Going into the season we knew that Auvil and Kuhn were stable on the right side of the dismond but the performances of McAleer, Levine, and Wildman was a pleasant surprise. The outfield of Jones, Pusku, Lerch, and Chip Bailey also played well this year. With Bailey the orly one from this group graduating, the outfield looks set for next year. Frank Davis was a stead pitcher all year, as was sophomon Chris Long. Chuck Johnson and Eric Becker had up and down year Puskar and Wildman also pitched effectively

At catcher, Rosfelder deserve praise. "He has played excellently behind the plate for the last for years. Mike Hearn and Chris have given us four years of steady per-formances behind the plate and will the bat," said Athey

Next year, in addition to Balts McAleer, Kuhn, Rosfelder, Heart and Davis will also be gone, open ing up a number of holes for the 1989 Shoremen to fill as they tryb Defensively, the solid perform- improve upon this year's record

Fin Fur Feather Inn

424 Bayside Ave. Rock Hall, Md. 639-7454

Our Congratulations to the GRADUATING CLASS of '88 Hope to see you for dinner!

Try our prime rib Special!

Men's Varsity Eight Crew Cruises at Bucknell

nany competitors were the only pace in the qualifying race concerns Washington College row are had to contend with at the Buck-hist weekend at Selingsgrove, Pa. The crew competed against a large field of boats from Bucknell Hopkins University, squehanna University, Franklin Marshall College, Hobart College, Wilkes College, Trinity

Coillege and Cascadilla Boat Club. A total of 63 crews competed that The day of racing opened with he Men's JV four. WC entered a new into a field of five. The race as quick, with WC coming in secdin 5:48 14.8 seconds behind the inners from Bucknell University. The men's Novice Eight event followed in which there were two was with the ton three crews in the first heat qualifying to race in the inals. WC came in fifth in the finals with a time of 5:47.9, some distance behind the winners from LaSalle University who finished swiftly in ington Area Championships.

An incredibly fast current and finals was just two seconds off their

The Women's Novice Eight had to row two races, like the men's, nell 5th Annual Invitational Regatta the first being qualifying heat in which the top three crews proceeded to race in the finals.

The women easily won the thiversity, LaSalle University, qualifying heat yet did not fare well in the finals. They caught a crab prior to the sprint and fell some distance back to finish 11 seconds short of the winning time, losing to a competitive crew from LaSalle University who finished in 5:45. No times were available for the qualify-

> The Women's JV Four, com peting against five other boats, finished fourth in the time of 6:41.60, 20.5 seconds behind the Franklin & Marshall crew who managed a first

> The final race of the day was the Men's Varsity Eight race in which the men had one more opportunity to put it all together before this eekend's race against strong Dad Vail contenders vying for the Wash-

WC Crews will fight for the Cadler Cup on the Potomac tomorrow In this race the men came off field and win convincingly in 5:11, the line fairly even for the first 1,000 3.7 seconds ahead of second place meters. At the midway point, Bucknell. Last year Bucknell deall together to pull away from the same race.

though, the Shoremen Eight put it feated Washington College in the

The crews are anticipating the Cadle Cup races which will be held tomorrow afternoon on the Potomac River between the Virginia and

Bad Luck Capitals Continue to Frustrate Fans

by Arian D. Rayanbakhsh

er do anything right? What is it ing to take? Just when you ought that the Washington Capials were making big strides on the of to the Stanley Cup Finals, they ell flat on their faces. Sure they ran to the most surprising team in the HL Playoffs this year — the New

chip shots

sey Devils. But that does not ake up for a couple of very poor wings in their seven game series ith New Jersey.

To the fans of the Washing-Capitals, this year was just anher year in a string of playoff appointments. And every year it ms that the playoffs bring a fresh we of hope, only to have the tals be on the unfortunate end Hockey luck

In April of 1985, the Washton Capitals met the New York inders in a best-of-five Patrick ision Semifinal. The Capitals ed nearly perfect hockey in the two games, jumping out to a ick 2-0 lead. They won the first in overtime on an Alan orth goal, the second was thed in double overtime on a Gartner goal.

The Capitals then went to York for the next two games. I mber one play vividly from two games in New York 16 #4, Caps trailing 5-4, one le to go. Caps pull goaltender Riggin for the sixth attacker. e putting extreme pressure on Islander goal, New York deman Ken Morrow deliberatly dges the net from its morings. te Andy VanHellemond rules it was a deliberate attempt to and awards the Caps with just as he is turning to stop the shot.

a penalty shot against Billy Smith They did it again. Can't they Fifty goal scorer Bobby Carpenter is appointed to take the shot. Carpenter skates in alone, dekes to his left pulls the stick back, and just gets enough of the puck to direct it towards the top corner of the net. Billy Smith pushes his right arm out and the puck bounces off of the arm and away from the net. The Capitals lose Game 4 and the series. Clearly, they had a chance Most Capitals fans would prefer to forget the events of April, 1986. The Capitals, in revenge for the 1985 series, sweep the Islanders in three straight. The Capitals dominated every phase of those three games, while looking like Stanley Cup Champions. Meanwhile, the upstart New York Rangers were upsetting the Philadelphia Flyers. The Capitals road to the Cup was clear. All they had to do was beat the Rangers and they would have escaped the Patrick Division.

This seemed easy; after all the Rangers had finished 27 points behind the Capitals during the regular season. But after horrible performances in Games 1 and 5, the Capitals went out with a wimper. Another season of disappointment

An old adage goes, "the third time is the charm." Never had this seemed so accurate as in April of 1987, when the Capitals flew out to a 3-1 lead in a best-of-seven playoff series with the New York Islanders. After a weak performance in games 5 and 6, the series was tied at 3 and came down to one game, in front of 18,130 screaming Capital fans decked out in white. The Capitals had a 2-1 lead with six minutes left to play. Things looked good. Suddendly, Islanders forward Bryan Trottier tossed a weak shot towards Caps goaltender, Bob Mason. Mason breaks a screw in his skate

He looses his balance, the puck Washington Capitals acquired playtrickles in behind him resulting in a ers that were supposed to propel the 2-2 tie and overtime

I remember thinking how important it would be to come out quickly in the overtime and maybe get a goal early on. This year could be the year that the Capitals finally get over that playoff hump. The Capitals stormed the Islander net, but each time Islander goaltender. Kelly Hrudey had the answer.

Capitals over playoff hurdles. During the regular season, the Capitals were the most inconsistant team in the league. After the all-star break. the Capitals went on a tear, winning 13 of 15 games. This streak pushed the Capitals into first place in the Patrick Division, Poised to enter the playoffs with this good fortune, the Capitals were clearly destined to fall Meanwhile, every New York shot flat on their face. They did, by was kicked out by Bob Mason. losing nine of the last ten games that hind 3-0. Things looked bleak.

Overtimes begin to pile on top of they played. Coupled with this

... every year it seems that the playoffs bring a fresh wave of hope, only to have the Capitals be on the unfortunate end of Hockey luck."

one another. Saturday drags into decline in the standings, was the Sunday. The players are still skat- realization that this team lacked the ing. Suddenly, Caps forward Bob fundamental maturity to win the Gould has Hrudey beaten. Gould Stanley Cup.

fires his shot - only to have it bounce off of the goalpost and wide ous finish, the Capitals were forced of the net. The teams stay tied.

On to overtime #4. The fifth longest game in NHL history was ended when Pat LaFontaine of the Islanders fired the puck blindly towards the net. The puck sailes through a screen set up by the Islander forecheckers. Mason can't see the puck. The puck flies over his shoulder, heading for the upperright hand corner of the net. Clank! The puck bounces off the crossbar and down into the net Islanders win after 68 minutes and 47 seconds of overtime hockey. Lady Luck, if she was still awake, was on the Islander bench. Yet another tough loss for the Capitals in the NHL playoffs. different. During the off-season, the witnessed teams coming back from

Due to their less than glori-to meet the Philadelphia Flyers in the first round of the playoffs. In game four, the Capitals hit the bottom, playing the worst hockey of the entire season. After building a 4 to I lead with ten minutes remaining, the Capitals blew it, losing in overtime on a Murray Craven goal. This put the series at three games to one, in favor of the Flyers. All indications were that the Capitals would be forced out of the playoffs in the first round again. But the team did something that few fans did, they believed in themselves

By winning both games 5 and 6, the Capitals rallied to force a game seven. Suddenly, the shoe This year was supposed to be was on the other foot. After having similar defecits against the Caps. they were the team doing the chasing, not the one being chased. In game 7, the Caps fell be-

Midway through the second period the Cans decided to show what they were made of. Blasting three goals behind a stunned Ron Hextall tied the game. Both teams exchanged goals in the third period, forcing another sudden-death overtime This time, the team that had been down for so long got a break, and what a big break it was. Dale Hunter split two Flyer defensemen and went in alone on Ron Hextall, putting a beautifully placed shot between Hextall's pads. The Caps had won a big game and a big series. Everything was looking up, this team had confidence and the ability

Or did it? The series with the Devils, which the Caps trailed at one point 3 games to 2, just disappointed Capital fans even more. They failed to convert chances, they failed to simply put the puck in the net. A goal by John MacLean won the series for the Devils, and multiplied the suffering of Washington Capitals fans. Will it be next year? Who knows? Right now, the Capitals can be compared to the Brooklyn Dodgers in the 1950's. As any baseball fan knows, the Dodgers had their 1955. The question still remains, when will the Capitals have theirs.

Word Processing Servicesreports, term papers, etc.-

> prompt, accurate, reasonable. Call Cathy 348-2126

Deadly Clogs Can't Keep WC From Hacking It Then I went outside and hackey sack all day," he remem- about playing with a female friend my body do what it w

Your back becomes your the game that has evolved into a campus-wide pasttime, particularly on the Literary House deck. Aiming to keep a two-inch leather and plastic bead ball off the ground using both feet and legs, players employ a variety of kicks to pass the "foot bag" or "hackey sack" to others. Feet remain parallel to the ground to send the sack straight up in the air it bounces off the side - or flat part - of the foot. sack took off in the early Eighties, knees after an injury, the game is little ball again based on an ancient Chinese sport that involves flipping a flat, feather-

The art major first encoun-D.C. frisbee festival while he was one doing it was a fag. still in high school. After purchasing a hackey sack by mail, he prac- became intrigued when he saw the ticed kicking and catching the ball in skill of junior Rob Albers outside (for hackey sack)," he explained his room until he could make it go up Bill Smith one day and down.

friend," said senior Chas. Foster of Since then, he has introduced several friends to the game and given a hackey sack lesson to a local brownie troop.

The senior said that most but quickly catch onto the various moves. "With a little practice, espeinside, outside, toe, knee, and back cially if you're in a circle of people, a giving circle of joyful people perit's not that hard to do."

'That Stupid Little Ball'

Some, however, initially Foster guesses that hackey react negatively to the game. Foster hypothesizes that students at his The Complete Book of high school felt threatened by the Hackey Sack, a how-to manual with presence of a new pasttime: "We'd complimentary hack, was pub. get really hostile reactions to it. lished. Invented by a Coloradoresi- Girls at school would say, 'Oh, you dent trying to strengthen his legs and guys are playing with that stupid

When sophomore Mike Cannon, a prospective psychology malike structure up in the air from the jor, first encountered the game at Colgate University in New York, here his sister attended college, he tered the game at a Washington, had little interest. "I thought every-Last year, though, Cannon

"I blew off class and played wowed the neighbors," he said. bered, explaining that he was ini- who was wearing a skirt. tially frustrated by his unfamiliarity with the game. Four months of daily practices at least 20 minutes long took him to a level of competence. Like Cannon, sophomore people feel unable to play at first, Jim Sobczak, also a psych major, began playing by observing others.

"To me it always seemed like spiring slightly, but exuberant in spirit and relaxed by the flippancy of admitted. the action," he said.

Female Hackers

Relatively few female students at Washington College hack; the male players attribute this to women's increased timidness about equipment was nearly destroyed. appearing foolish we're told that girls can't hack." Cannon adds that the wider pelvises and increased flexibility of women's bodies should enhance their abilities to play hackey sack, but he theorizes that wardrobe acts as a hindrance

'A lot of them wear skirts and funny shoes and that's no good To illustrate his point, Can-head with a clog," he remembered. body. It gets your mind and body "I could have been killed." Other dangers exist in the world of hacking. Cannon, for instance, sprained an ankle when he fell over a brick wall to retrieve a

"I was dizzy and sedated and shouldn't have been playing," he

Sobczak confessed that he and Cannon, who are roommates, indulged in hackey sack last winter in their Kent House room. Sometimes the hack would fly out the window into the snow, he recalled; on other occasions, their stereo

"Our Sunday nights con-"It's the society," said Fos- sisted of eating dinner, lying ter. "From the moment we're born around, then playing hackey sack until Monty Python came on," Sobczak remembered.

Mind/Body Split

Despite the dangers, hackey sack seems to possess some addic tive quality. "If I don't play, I feel kind of lethargic and down," explained junior Rob Albers, a philosophy major: "When I play it non told a hackey sack horror story uplifts my spirits to get out and let of exercising your mind all they "She almost hit me in the you need to do something for

Additionally, Albers said game allows him some social to chat with friends while he had usually two or three times a week four-hour intervals. As the reco elected vice president of the St he hopes his new duties will no into his playing time significant Other hackey sackers, s as Sobczak, confess that they so any opportunity to hack. At year's Fifties' Day lunch in the ing hall, he and Cannon pay along with Foster and alumnus Forzano ('87) to the music of King Cole and Don Ho.

Hacking produces nume sensations in those who make Cannon, for examp habit claimed that it makes "enriched, alive, tired." Sobczak, on the other ha said the activity often makes h feel like "frolicking" afterwa "with the unending exuberance "It's kind of like the felt you get from biting into a York? permint Patty, but not really,

said. "It's like your body is aliver oozing in altruistic feeling." 26,000 Kicks

But the question remains hackey sack a sport?

Foster calls it an "alternati sport," pointing out, that like in bee, it is noncompetitive, that freestyle tournaments do exist latest world record he can recal 26,000 consecutive kicks, execu in four - six hours, he said.

"I've seen some guys rare just insane," said Foster, ain that he has played with the E Coast champions, who employs tricks as using their head, backs neck to relay the hackey sack

Though the game has no cial "rules," certain rules of quette have evolved. Those it hackey sack circle never st themselves; instead, they was kick the ball to another to be play. A "spleef" occurs whenever person in the circle kicks the be without it touching the grou Other hacking lingo includes" as a synonym for "great," and or spondingly, "dry" in place of "to Unlike other sports, the life weight equipment can be carrie a pocket at any time. "You can? it out and hack at the bus stop of between classes," Foster poiss

While hackey sack is and weather activity, Sobczak szid prefers a 70 degree temperate blue sky, sunshine and a ship breeze. "When you're out all b hacking in the sunshine, you pretty close to polyunsaturated, may be so bold," he said. Whatever hackey sack is,

game brings people pleasure. "The wonderful thing she hackey sack," said Albers, "is everyone wins because they's having a good time."

Bek RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP.

107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620 Drive-in Window Service

301-778-3181

Andy's

Live Entertainment

Wed. 11- John MacDonalds at the piano

Sat 14-The Swing Sisters Wed. 18-Kate Bennett Sat. 21-The Nivon Brothers

return Now serving Lite Fare in Evenings

Parents Welcomed ! Come down & enjoy our relaxing atmosphere! proper I.D. required - 337 high st. - 778-6779

Stor & Lock

Self Service Storage

U- STORE IT U- LOCK IT U- TAKE THE KEY

Boats, Records, Merchandise .... Anything

> located on Rt. 213 1 mile north of Chestertown (Hopewell Corner) Chestertown, Md. 21620 778-6464

Maryland Tourney Ends on Positive Note for Shorewomen

The Shorewomen brought two vins, three losses, and a tie home from the Maryland College's Women's Lacrosse Tournament held at Goucher College last week-

Things looked bleak coming WC to make some defensive shifts. Despite a solid offensive effort, the Shorewomen had trouble adjusting to the defensive changes in their first game against Anne Arrundel Community College, as they fell.

10-8 The Shorewomen improved their performance against the ytournament's second ranked team, Georgetown, but still came out on the losing side, 5-2. "We played equal to Georgetown," comments Coach Diane Guinan, but "we tarely missed some offensive opnortunities to score" which allowed Georgetown to finish on top.

Continuing the lacrosse marathon against Notre Dame, the Shorewomen played capably to gain a 7-7 tie. "We played well, but not as well as in the past," said Guinan. The defense continued to struggle and the team had some trouble moving as a unit Playing the fourth and final game of the long day, the Shorewomen were still unable to win, as they were downed by a talented Western maryland team; 9-2. "I believe that we have the talent to have played them closer, but I also believe that they were the better team - at least at this point in our development," said Guinan, "I also feel that will change in the future."

Sunday brought the women some elusive wins, as they topped fused to give up.

Anne Arundel 11-7 in the rematch and then defeated Goucher, 12-6 "As the tournament progressed, we were gradually coming back into our style of play," according to Guinan. "Sunday confirmed our belief.

"As has been characteristic of into the games, as an injury forced this team, they hung together and kept plugging and finished very impressively

For the tournament, Sarah Coste led all WC scorers with 20 goals, followed by Beth Matthews with ten and Lee Anne Ledwin with seven. Amy Tiehel, Angela Henneman, and Mary Beth Enright also Coste, Matthews, and goalie Linda Anders were selected as members of the Maryland College's Women's Lacrosse Association's Select Team, and will participate in the United States Women's Lacrosse Association South Tournament, to be held at Goucher College May 14 and 15.

Considering that the Shorewomen started the year with only one player who had more than one year of college experience and ten players with no college experience. including several who had never played lacrosse before, plus a goalie who had never played that position before, the limited success which the Shorewomen achieved this year is a good initial step toward building a strong women's lacrosse program at Washington College

After losing all but two of their first nine games, "we certainly hit a crossroads this year, of pulling together and continuing or giving up and merely fishing the season," says Guinan. "These young ladies re-

Anthony's Flowers and Landscaping Flowers for Graduation!

778-2525

located on Rt.213-2/10 south of bridge

REMINDER TO ALL VARSITY ATHLETES:

The Annual Athletic Awards Banquet will be held on Sunday, May 8, 1988 at 4:00 p.m. at the Lelia Hynson Pavilion

Rain will move the event to Hynson Lounge

With a Few Minor Changes, the O's Could Win the Series this Year

Since the beginning of the base ball season, it seems that the main topic of conversation has been the plight of the Baltimore Orioles. In the past five years they have gone from world champions to the worst team in the major leagues. Any number of suggestions have been made concerning the improvement of the Birds. Still, it is doubtful that any of these helpful hints can have a profound effect on the Orioles this season. I have come up with some ideas that could possibly salvage the performance of the Orioles. The commissioner would not accept any of these suggestions, but it's still nice to dream

The changes could start with than she will know, and the managerial position. Frank Robinson has done a wonderful job with limited talent, but it seems that he was far more effective as a player. He could be a starting outfielder for the team, since he is still better than anyone else out there. He may not be as fast as he once was, but he can probably still hit. There is still a managing career in his future, but the O's need help now.

Who should become the new Oriole manager? Earl Weaver already had his chance, and he blew the opportunity. Well, "Manager Robinson" has a nice ring to it, so we should search for someone with this last name. Simon and Garfunkel

Orioles much needed spiritual assishelp from friends in high places.

There is also an obvious problem with the Orioles' hitting this year. People such as Ripken, Murray and Lynn have the hitting prowess, but everybody could benefit from a few minor changes. For example, every ball hit by an Oriole should be ruled in play. This could #### Offer the (manager's) job to Mrs. Robinson. Jesus loves her more

this will give the Orioles much needed spiritual assistance..."

make for some cheap home runs off of lazy foul balls into the stands. It pitchers could only throw underable to hit Roger Clemens, but this whole

some desperate help. The earned whole lot easier. Even if these sugrun average is approaching infinity, gestions are not taken seriously, the and it does not look to change in the Orioles will still recover - eventuoffers the solution here. Why not couple of small alterations in the time and effort offer the job to Mrs. Robinson? rulebook can save the staff. For After all, Jesus loves her more than instance, let all balls become strikes she will know, and this will give the and all strikes become balls. This would make it much easier on the tance. It will be wonderful to have pitchers, and their hall-strike ratio would skyrocket. All pitches hit out of the park could be automatic outs. Also, the opposing batters could be required to bat from the other side of the plate. The increase in victories and the decrease in earned runs would be astounding.

If all of these suggestions fail to produce changes, something should be done with the schedule. The American League East is far too difficult, and the American League West is starting to cause problems. The Orioles should start playing teams at the Class AA minor-league level, with occasional games against major league teams mixed into the schedule

After these changes, the team would win a large percentage of the games, and the fan support would remain strong due to pride, not bewould also help if the opposing cause of sympathy and dedication. The embarrassment would be over handed. The Birds still may not be and Baltimore would be looked at as a first-rate team once again. It is pitching style will help on the doubtful that the league office would permit these changes to take The pitching is also in need of place, but it would make things a near future. Once again, just a ally. It will just take a little bit more

WASHINGTON COLLEGE MAY HOST NCAA MEN'S LACROSSE CHAMPIONSHIP PLAYOFF GAME

Wednesday, May 11, 1988 4:00 p.m.

NCAA Championship regulations require a $3.00 admission fee for all people over the age of 12. In the hope of attracting students who normally attend the home games for free, the Washington College Athletic Department will pay for the first 200 students who bring their ID and pick up a ticket at the Athletic Department Office before noon on game day. All students will be charged the $3.00 admission fee.

May Day

Memories

Discarded clothes are scattered about the Lit House lawn as May Day revelers celebrate spring with contradict this minimalist trend is

Education According to the Least Common Denominator

HONORS, from page 2

on campus. It might be argued a)that a distribution system allows those who are unsure of their interests to gain some direction in their education and b) that students are ensured of getting a broad educa-Has no one considered that perhaps some students don't know what their interests are precisely because the current distribution system does not allow them the time to develop any interest at all? As for a broad education, I submit that the worthy students will do that for themselves. Those who must be led to this have no business here at all.

What these efforts amount to is education according to the lowest common denominator, whereby everyone is assured some sort of "success" and we can all learn at the same level of intellectual poverty. But there is no worthy reason why motivated and intelligent students should be hindered in this manner. Perhaps the brightest hope to the Honors Program. This program recognizes intelligence and personal motivation and seeks to encourage it in the individual student. Yet this positive educational program has been perceived by some as elitist and a detriment to the intellectual life of the student body. In fact, the Honors Program is a detriment to the "equal shares" approach to education. Thank God. For with this approach to education there is no intellectual life, but only intellectual stagnation

I urge those who shape the educational atmosphere of Washington College not to structure educational policies according to the lowest common denominator. The College cannot continue to fashion the quality of education here as an apology for those who do not belong here at all

J.M. Fragomeni '88

W.C. History

continued from page 6 president was the problem of housing. More than two million dollars worth of repairs were needed to get the campus in shape. President Gibson looked into the possibility of revising the College curriculum. In April of 1958, the plan for curriculum revisions was submitted for approval by the board, and the board gave their approval of the plan to be enacted in the 1959-69 school year. This new plan of study included the "four course plan", based on the idea that a college education should put emphasis on depth, not variety.

In 1961 the board approved a resolution to increase the enrollment of the college from 500 to 750 students. To meet the demands made by an increase in students, the Philosophy major (Kent House, Queen Anne's House, students.

enior Jim Fragomeni shares the literature of beer bottles at the May and Caroline House)and added the Fine Arts building. By 1969 a new Merdinger accepted the position as gymnasium had been constructed school president, the college is which was called the Cain Athletic creased enrollment to 800 students. center in honor of the former College and along with the construction of school enlarged Hodson Hall to take President, and in 1971 the Clifton M. Dorchester, Cecil, Talbot House, on the apearance that it now does, Miller Library had been completed and eventually the Casey Swin

In 1972 as president Charles I. it's present day appearance.

constructed additional dormitories and was being used by the school's Center, the campus developed into music. If Ms. Lamoree knew anything about college radio stations, she would know they are far from conservative. College radio # tions are known to be progressive when it comes to playing music. The idea is to play from jazz to punk and everything in between Before the club was formed we questioned the Deans about what can and cannot be played > spectrum of music As for her reference to headbanging screaming, drug head music that might be played, I'll just say to Ms. Lamoree to each his own. If you don't llike it, don't listen; yet better off get a broadcast license and cont down and play the type of music you think the campus and local residents would like to hear.

When one looks at the overall costs of a radio station, it really isn't that much compared to all the renovations that are taking place. We'relooking to play music and pro vide information and entertainment for WC students and the surrounding population. 50 Ms. Lamoree please get you head out of the and, open your ears and mind, and listen to the sounds of music.

Steven Huettner

Letters to the Editor Sandy Reeder, Mackey Streit, and Joyce

Alpha Omicron Pi Anniversary

To the Editor:

Alpha Omicron Pi's Sigma Tau chapter at Washington College celebrated its 50th Anni versary on Saturday, March 26. A luncheon was held in Hynson Lounge drawing close to a hundred Sigma Tau alumnae, representa-tives of several other chapters and members of the Alpha Omicron Pi Executive Board Speakers included Peg Crawford-International President, Kathleen Campanella-President Baltimore Alumnae Chapter, Dolly McCool Thorton-Charter Member and Chap ter President and Sandy Reeder-Regional Director. The charter members in attendance were presented with 50 year pins and certificates by Peg Crawford and Beth Lund. A Sigma Tau 50th fund was started by alumn for the occasion, collecting over $2,000 in donations for the chapter.

A very special thanks to Sarah Dunning for organizing the event with help of her committee of: Dana Loy, Georgia Schafer, Davis. Thanks also to April Dean who served as toastmistress and Judie Berry, our chapter advisor. As one of the nineteen oldest chapters of Alpha Omicron Pi, we are looking forward to another half century of Sigma Tau.

WC Master Plan Is For Students

In the SGA election coverage there is some misinformation I am compelled to call

It was stated that the College Master Plan funding contained less than 10% specifically earmarked for student use and facilities. The Master Plan includes a new art studio, new science laboratory and classroom facilities, new field house, renovation of Cullen, Minta Martin, and Reid Hall dormitories, and in the soon to be constructed Academic Resource Center a computer center, language laboratory, student/faculty post office, and a forum with state-of-the-art audio visual equipment All of these facilities are for student use. The all the deejays will play the same type of campus walks, landscaping, and additional parking are all designed to enhance the physical environment for the entire College community, the major component of which is the student body. All that remains of the Master Plan is the renovation of Bunting Hall and although this space is for administration, students have bee known to stop by the various We would just have to follow F.C.C. regula offices from time to time tions. The music played would represent the particular taste of each deejay, a rather broad

A more accurate description of the Master Plan would to paraphrase the Ivory Soap commercial, 99 44/100% for students Gene A. Hessey

Sr. Vice President for Finance

Student Deejays Not Just Headbangers

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to Kelly Lamoree's article concerning a Washington College radio station. I myself, being one of the 36 students that attended classes to receive a broadcast license, took offense to Ms. Lamoree's comments.

First off, I don't see how she can say that

Larrabee Recalls Paton and Memories of Africa

by Susan Di Leo

Ixopo into the hills. These hills are grass- moving to return there with him." covered and rolling, and they are lovely beyond any singing of it. The road climbs seven miles into them, to Carisbrooke; and from there, if there is no mist, you look down on one of the fairest valleys of Africa. About you there is grass and bracken and you may hear the forlorn crying of the titihoya, one of the birds of the veld. Below you is the valley of the Umzimkulu, on its journey from the Drakensburg to the sea; and beyond and behind the river, great hill after great hill; and beyond and behind them, the mountains of Ingeli and could run after it and catch it for yourself East Grigualand

-opening paragraph of Cry. the Beloved Country, by Alan Paton

In 1949, soon after Alan Paton's book was published, Constance Stuart Larrabee met with him while both were living in South Africa. During this time, the two went to the gins; there, Lar

a nortfolio del

Paton and the

ter her meeting

with Paton, Lar

Those pho-

rabee completed "You just knew that he was a boards have photographs of fine man. You felt you were in duced into the African culture. the presence of someone with tryside. The lographs re- tremendous compassion, wismained dormant for nearly forty dom, and love for his fellow years. Soon af- man."

Constance Stuart Larrabee

noce moved to ______ just amazed—_____ just amazed—______ just amazed—_____ Chestertown, Maryland. It wasn't until 1986 the people were there, but their lives had Washington College, an event Paton witone another since their meeting in the 1940s. isn't it?" A 40th anniversary edition of Cry, the Beloved Country will be published this year. illustrated by Larrabee's photographs.

In March of this year, Paton and his wife, Anne, invited Larrabee to spend a week at his home in Botha's Hill, near Durban, Natal. Of the trip, Larrabee reminisces, "It was a great privilege to be with such a great and noble nan. It was a splendid experience." Less than amonth later, Paton died at the age of eighty-

"We retraced our steps to where we'd There is a lovely road that runs from been forty years before. To me, it was quite

> The small toy train climbs up on its narrow gauge from the Umzimkulu valley into the hills. It climbs up to Carisbrooke, and when it stops there, you may get out for a moment and look down on the great valley from which you have come. It is not likely the train will leave you, for there are few people here, and every one will know who you are. And even if it did leave you, it would not much matter; fo. unless you are a cripple, or very old, you

from Cry, the Beloved Country

Porty years later, the train in Paton's novel no longer exists. The railway of Larrabee's photographs is gone, replaced by a bus stop. Today, Larrabee saw very few people dressed in their ethnic clothing, "All the children in schools wear uniforms, and the region where Cry, the Beloved Country be- towns that were simple have been Western-= ized.

> been introbeautiful counphotographs as I took them in the 1940s could not be taken today, because the culture has changed. I was that those photographs were unveiled here at changed." Larrabee declines to pass judgement on this transformation: "It's just nessed, as he was in America at the time. It changed. They no longer rely on the land to You felt you were in the presence of someone was the first time he and Larrabee had seen support them. Life is really full of change,

> Larrabee photographed Alan Paton 8000 feet up into the Drakensburg Mountains. The nobility of the setting does justice to Paton, and Larrabee considers it one of her finest works. She took the photograph as a friendly gesture, not a professional one; it turned out to be one of the last photographs ever taken of him. "It's almost as if I was meant to be there to take that photo," she says

Leadership, one of South Africa's most stood for, and fought for, will triumph be-

Constance Larrabee photographed Alan Paton 8000 feet up into the Drakensburg Mountains. The nobility of the setting does justice to Paton, and Larrabee considers it one of her finest works. "It's almost as if I was meant to be there to take that photo," popular magazines, published Larrabee's was grateful that life made it possible for me final photograph of Paton on the cover of its April 29th issue. "They're using it because go when I am called it's timely, taken in the country he loved best," according to Larrabee. Also in that issue. Leadership became the first magazine to publish excerpts from the second and final volume of Paton's autobiography, The Journey Continued (the first volume is carred

God Bless Africa Guard Her Children Guide Her rulers And give her peace

Towards the Mountain) You just knew that he was a fine man. with tremendous compassion, wisdom, and love for his fellow man," is Larrabee's affirmation of Alan Paton's character. Others confirm her views; the Chief Minister of Fri., May 6: Kwazulu, Chief Mangushthu Buthelezi was 8:15 a.m. - 2:00 a.m. quoted in a South African newspaper: Throughout his life he was a shining light of hope and wherever he went and in whatever courage, and commitment to eternal values for all people across all time. His value as a human being will never die and that which he cause of people like Alan he did, he shed that light to illuminate truth,

Paton

Jonathan Paton, in an article penned after his father's death, wrote: There cannot be a better way of ending this tribute than by quoting the concluding sentences of The Journey Continued: I shall not write any ig more of any weight.

Extended Library Hours

to pursue a writing career. I am now ready to Sat, May 7: 10:00 a.m. - 2:00 a.m.

Sun., May 8: 10:00 a.m. - 2:00 a.m.

Mon., May 9 through Fri. May 13: 8:15 a.m. - 2:00 a.m.

Sat., May 14: 8:15 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.

OLD WHARF INN ON THE CHESTER RIVE

FOOT OF CANNON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 2166

301-778-35

FREE HORS D'OEUVRES EVERY FRI. AT HAPPY HOUR

25 cent DRAFTS on band nites in the BACK

Congratulations to the Graduating Class of '88! Come and Celebrate at the Pub....

Where you'll always find good drinks, good friends and a GOOD TIME!

> Sat. May 7 Steve Taylor (no cover)

778-1984

Arts Grads Talk About What They've Don

by Susan Di Leo "Make a note of it, Healey"

English major David Healey has been an active participant in the various areas of writing. On the iournalism front Healey served as the Arts editor of the Elm for the academic year of 1986-1987. He has written for campus publications in addition to the Elm, including the Collegian and the Washington College Review

Apart from journalistic writing, Healey is the author of several short stories, and recently completed a novel for his senior thesis. He has completed three years of creative writing with Professor Robert Day. His interest in writing developed in high school: "I've always enjoyed reading, and one day in trigonometry class, I decided to write a short story. Needless to say, I haven't learned a lot about mathematics, but

Washington College. Healey will continue in the field of journalism as a reporter for Collegian, the Elm, and various Delaware

David Healey

Philosophical Photographer Although J.M. Fragomeni will receive his degree in philosophy, he has an enduring interest in photography. For over two of his four years at Washington College, he was the photography editor of the Elm, and has generally contributed his talents to most campus publications. "If it has pictures in it. I worked for it." he Fragomeni's interest in photography developed in his senior year of high school, when he took a course in basic photography. Upon arriving to the college, he began working for the Elm, improving as he worked.

Fragomeni's future includes graduate school at Syracuse University in photojournalism. "After that," he says, "I'd like to get on staff at a newspaper. Ultimately, I'd like Dean Hebert to work as a magazine freelancer."

Persistent poet English major Dean Hebert published three semesters of his magazine, Fallout Shelter, which included poetry, comics, satire, and I have learned a lot about writing at illegally reproduced magazine advertisements. Hebert has also contributed his work to Broadsides, the the County Courier in Middletown, campus magazines. About the conception of his craft, he says, "I was a really tortured kid in high school. So I wrote awful, horrible poems which have been burned, (something] I regret." Hebert visited the college for Freshman night when Charles Wright spoke: that event convinced Hebert to come to the college. He subsequently was accepted into Professor Day's creative writing class. Hebert says he learned a lot about writing: "I think

I'm doing better." Of his future plans, Hebert says, "I wouldn't mind teaching college someday."

Drama mama Much of drama major Joanna Wilson's area of expertise focuses on costume design and technical work for theater productions. During her first two years in college, she helped with technical and costume work; in her junior and senior years, na Wilson

Bed and Breakfast Inn

design, which entails buying the material, making the costumes, and renting other necessary items. For her senior project, Wilson designed the costumes and did the lighting for the production of On the Verge.

Originally, Wilson intended to be an English major, but changed her plans after becoming involved with the college's drama depart-At the moment, "I'm looking into teaching, but I'd ultimately like to do costumes for professional shows "Wilson says

So you want to be a writer .. Mike Rudin "went through a drug phase in high school," and began writing poetry. His stoned biology lab partner told Rudin, "You should be a writer." Today, Rudin questions the artistic value of his high school friend's judgement; nevertheless that event led him to continue his writing at Washington

He has been active in the college's literary scene. During his freshman and sophomore years, he was the editor of Broadsides; he also had his work published on Broadsides last semester. Rudin was the Fiction editor of the Collegian this year: in addition, he worked on editing and layout on the Review . He has published his work in both of these publications

Rudin will to attend graduate

Wilson was in charge of costume school at Eastern Washington University in Cheney, Washington, where he plans to work toward an M.F.A. in creative writing. In addition, he will teach freshman English

He used to edit newspapers, now he works on bodies Tom Schuster developed an interest in journalism through writing for his high school newspaper. When he arrived at the college, "I decided I wanted to be editor of the Elm." Schuster achieved this by writing for the Elm freshman year He became Features editor of the Elm in his sophomore year, for the academic year of 1986-1987, Schuster was Editor-in-chief of the Elm. This year. Schuster was the Editor-in-chief of the Collegian; he has written pieces for both the legian and the Review. Here received the newly-estable Douglass Cater Journalism A for editing and writing.

Tom Schuster

Schuster's future plansing managing a body shop in Balt which caters to the servicing BMWs and Mercedes. Marvy artist

Of Dawn Schmidt, fellor major Chas. Foster praises, 2 contributed to the general of and marvy good looks at 7 Schmidt's contributions to the eral culture include intensiv work for the past three years, of nating in her senior exhiwhich won the Lynette Ne

Award. She dabbled in art pri

At the bookstore ...

*Champion Athletic Shoes - 30% off

* May 7th is the Last Day 20-30% for our CLOTHING SALE

- * Mother's Day (May 8th) Cards
- * Graduation Cards
- * We are buying back used books:

May 9th - May 13th 10-12am and 1-3pm

MAC OWNERS!! Protect your investment Come see us about "AppleCare"

and What They Hope to Achieve in the Future

Dawn Schmidt dege, she says, but she didn't come serious about it until after ming to WC. "Ihope to pass comps and I will ne back here in the fall and take he Education Block and get certi-

ed to teach children art. She raised our ire with satire

Kelly Lamoree may be an art ory major, but her great love lies her dedication to writing. Lamte says that she was writing prior college, but she had problems th it during her freshman and homore years. Professor Day rged her to keep writing, and "now n unstoppable." Lamoree has duced two novels, and has three or in the works "I have learned wto write, helped run the Literary se, made lasting friendships, loccasionally I'm a fun person to around." She and Bill Beekman we produced a satirical magazine, ers, worked on the Review iff, and assembled Freshman teative Writing worksheets for years. Lamoree is probably st-known for her controversial tirical pieces in the Elm.

As for her ambitions, Lamoree s, Twant to write, and I want to my novels published, and I wan be on the cover of Spy. The fact important thing and I think it's the thing that will stay with me.

Temperamental artist Janet Harvey's interest in writ ing began at a young age: "I started writing little books when I was about six. I was a pain in the butt when I was a kid, and my grandmother threw paper and a pen at me to keep me out of everyone's hair. I started writing biblical stories after

Harvey was an editor of Broadsides her freshman year; during her sophomore year, she produced a campus magazine, Tales from the Hardcore Wars. Harvey spent her junior year at Manchester College in England, where she wrote and directed a play, It Came From Beneath the Waiting Room; of that play she relates, "I also inadvertently acted, sang, and cut wire for it." Last semester, Harvey was the Fiction editor of the Collegian and contributed to the Review

Paying off her student loan looms ominously ahead for Harvey; in the long run, she says, "I'm hoping to do something in the theater, and to travel a lot

The naked interview

Charlie Wilcox's obsession with acting developed after taking a class from Rick Davis-"that's all it took." During his stay at WC. Wilcox has directed two shows, acted in "ad nauseum bit parts," designed lighting for four shows, and taken on the chore of technical direction for four shows. To that list, add a summer internship at Musical Theatre Works in New York City, and the founding of Phoebe's club, dedicated to the promotion of theater appreciation.

This summer, Wilcox will participate in the Maryland Shakespeare Festival, and "with luck, I'll be doing an internship at Center Stage." His distant plans

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS

HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:30-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE
SCHEELER FIELD

778-1222 Be. 213 4. 201

Ceci Kosenkranius

include writing, directing, and producing in theater. "I'll be profes sionally involved in theater for at least the next five years, [and] I expect to be working in theater for the rest of my life.

Thesis by design

Whenever Ceci Kosenkranius went to any kind of art show, she always looked for the pottery first. She took pottery classes during her junior and senior years at WC, and 'really enjoyed it." For her senior thesis in Humanities (with an art minor), Kosenkranius decided to integrate her knowledge of pottery with her paper. She studied the designs of the Pueblo Indians.

Kosenkranius has played the piano for about twelve years, and has provided musical accompani ment for a play at WC; she has also performed for President Cater, as well as in Washington at a party for an Alumni Chapter. She has participated in the Early Music vocal con sort; last year, as the President of the junior class, Kosenkranius organized a violin concert at the college

This summer, Kosenkranius plans to "have fun. [After that], I might try to find a job in graphic arts." She is also considering the possibility of graduate school.

Transient Translator

Many of German and Spanish major Sean Ireton's literary contributions have been related to translating; indeed, Ireton recently produced a magazine aptly titled Translations. In his freshman year, he contributed translations to a shortlived magazine called Barbarisms.

However Ireton's writing is not strictly confined to translating He has taken two years of creative riting, and has contributed to the Elm. His interest in writing developed through his fondness for reading: "[I was] like every high school kid dabbling in creative writing."

He rates his affinity for writing work of others on an even scale: "[There is] more satisfaction in writing your own stuff, but translating is fun because you translate things you wish you had written." In a way, he points out, translating is more difficult because you're accountable" for communicating an author's ideas effectively

Ireton has spent three semesters at the University of Mainz, in Germany, studying German literature. He recently won a Fulbright Scholarship for Graduate Research, so next year he will return to Germany Following that, he'll attend graduate school at the University of California-Davis, where he will work

CHESAPEAKE INNS

Gracious Country Inn Lodging on Maryland's Historic Eastern Shore -A Vacation Delight.

> FOR INFORMATION CALL 1-800-345-4665 Ext. 609

ENTERTAINME

by Don Steele
With the album Conscious

Party, Ziggy Marley finally seems Marley to be coming to grips with being the his feeli Crowned Prince of reggae music. Down." Ziggy is the son of the Bob Marley, who was the person who brought the come th world reggae music. The album is hear/Th Zigg's third and most impressive With this album Ziggy to come pushes himself into the forefront of sings th the reggae scene ner that Ziggy Marley and the Melody as any l Makers consists of Ziggy, Cedella very int Marley, Steve Marley and Sharon Pendergrast. Although this is the Melody Makers' third album, it is the first to get world wide recognition. The production team of Chris Frantz and Tina Weymouth (of One into Talking Heads fame) has taken the Melody Makers from being a band Steve A of Bob Marley's kids into being a unanimo respected reggae band. They have similiar brought forth a new style to the and Bob Marley's voice. Melody Makers.

Party." This has a traditional reggae tures Rolling Stones guitarist Keith family are part, can get back to sound and message. Most songs Richards This song is about an deal with peace and freedom. This deals with the peace aspect. "And I just criticisms that surround it. "Lee know there'll be no fight/ At such a and Molly -White guy loving black move into the forefront of the reggae conscious party/ Everyone is happy beauty." Ziggy says in the song that tonight/ At the conscious party/ The the love they have is stronger than spirit of Jah (Peacae) passes through/ I can feel it so can you." This song is a request by Mar- Jamaica

Ziggy Throw A Conscious Party

nion but the law going down." Marley depressed maning the upbeat music ext three songs "New Love." to Hell?" all showyou eve Marley's songwriting. case Zi "A Who interracial relationship and the unthe love of other couples. These relationships are scorned upon in naica has alway People," adds the use of a piano, an n with violence, so unconventional instrument in regover this song to voice gae. This song wants the people in the world to start working for a beting "Tumbling ter future. "Tomorrow's people megedon. "Here where is your best?/ Tomorrow's eagle. Here comes the people how long will you last? re fighting to control the Marley wants people to stop working for themselves and to work for the world. This song and "Lee and Molly" also showcase something cates his fright as much rarely seen in reggae- a guitar solo. loes. One thing that is The solos aren't out of the heavy metal with screaming guitars, but more just a little fling on a guitar. To close out the album Marley Who a Say?" and "Have sings "What's True?" another political commentary that questions the promises and stories politicians ng about the song say and why they never make the ay?" is that it is sung by changes made. The final song is a by. Most critics are new African-influenced "Dreams in their voting of the of Home." Hugh Masekala, the between Steve's voice famous African singer helped in the production of this song. This song is The second side opens up with really a wish that the Rastafarian The first song is "Conscious "Lee and Molly." This song fea- peoples, of which Marley and his Africa, their "Holy Land."

> Ziggy Marley seems poised to scene. He has proven in his album "Conscious Party" that he has his own musical talent and that even though his dad was Bob Marley, Ziggy Marley is a musical entity o himself with talent and flare.

Conscious Party, the third release by Ziggy Marley and the Mei Makers, was produced by Chris Frantz and Tina Weymouth of Tab ing Heads: It is the first release by Marley to gain national actial Conscious Party is available on Virgin Records.

for everyone to be free and Chestertown Movie Theater

BAD DREAMS

778-1575

Faculty, Staff, and Students, Have a GREAT summer!

Thanks for your Patronage!

335 High Street 778-6090

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 1

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Tuesday, September 6, 1988

Freshmen set high standards

by Susan Di Leo

Besides continuing the ready rise in freshman enrollent of the last few years, the Class of 1992 represents an preased selectivity in the dmissions process at Washngton College

Of the 1200 students who applied for admission this fallincrease of nine percent from he previous year-approxiately 250 freshman are enolled at the College

Kevin Coveney, Vice resident for Admissions and Incollment Management says Because we had more applicaos for fewer available spots. were able to be more selecve. In fact, we made fewer ffers of admission to this class han last year.'

With the return of approxinately 600 upperclass men and men, the student populaon numbers about 900, the argest enrollment in Washingon College's 206 years. Academically, the fresh-man class boasts impressive latistics: 51% ranked in the op fifth of their high school duating class, while 77% lated in the top two-fifths. ording to a memorandum m Coveney and Dal Holmes, ese are "the strongest peratages by rank in twenty Coveney maintains that he College is not sacrificing a leative element in order to it more academically orinted students: "We're very sitive to (the arts). I think areas of creative expression continued on page 7 be completely gutted. "It was a Freshmen moving in. The Class of 1992 has the highest percentage of women-57%-of any entering class in Washington College's history. The incoming class also represents increased selectivity in the admissions process at WC.

The Master Plan continues

Washington College's Master Plan continues. Among the projects completed so far are Reid Hall, the Cardinal Dorms, and the Alonzo Decker Science Center, while the Eugene B. Casey Academic Resource Center is still in its planning stages, except for a no longer existing wall of bricks and mortar

Reid Hall is one of a string of dorm renovations that began with Cullen Hall and Minta Martin. It was funded in part with the money borrowed in 1984 for all three renovations.

To the College's dismay, Reid turned out to be a bigger project than was originally anticipated: the building had to by Adrienne DeAngelo Minta Martin job all over history, the College is concerned again," says Gene Hessey, Vice President for Finance. Because of its size, however, Reid cost approximately half that of the Minta Martin renovation.

Although the rooms are ready for returning students, Reid is unfinished. The third floor bathroom and the basement are not renovated. The bathroom was useable, so it was painted and cleaned. The College will house the Elm and Pegasus offices in the basement when renovations are

The Cardinal Dorms, or "Cater's coops," as they're nicknamed, are actually modular homes, having a normal life span of five to seven years. Hessey thinks they can last even longer.

Originally, he was worried about the houses withstanding the wear and tear of college students, but his worries were appeased when he visited 19 ar- old modulars which were still in good condition.

"As long as (the modular homes) are viable, they will be used," he says.

Many question the College's decision to buy temporary dorms rather than build a new one to accomodate the has accepted the largest number of students in its 206 year that enrollment will decline sharply in the next few years. While a new dorm is a potential waste, temporary housing offers some more economical

Modular housing is flexible; it can be sold, and relo-cated if it is no longer "viable." Additionally, the homes could be rented to people other than

The Cardinal Dorms house 51 students. They are behind the Blue Bird and in front of the playing field. "[They are] sky boxes off the baseball field," comments Hessey.

What they lack in accessibility, the Cardinal Dorms compensate in comfort. They are made up of several suites, each with its own kitchen and bathroom. There is an attic for additional storage.

Students who have seen the dorms comment that despite their outward appearance, they are the nicest rooms on

Michelle Darling, a sophomore who opted to live in the Cardinal Dorms to give freshmen more room in Minta Martin, says, "They make you feel as though you're in th privacy of your own home. You're not rising enrollment. Although it as easily torn away from you studies, but you're still close to continued on page 6

New faculty announced

As it welcomes the freshman class, Dean Baer's office announces new appointments to its faculty

Calvin L. Forbes, the Visiting Assistant Professor of English and Director of the Literary House, is replacing Professor Robert Day for the academic year. Mr. Forbes received his M.F.A. from Brown University, and has taught at Emerson College and Tufts

Gail A. Kaplan is the new Assistant Professor of Mathematics. She received her Ph.D. from SUNY at Stony Brook in 1979. From 1979 to 1987, Kaplan was an Assistant Professor at the U.S. Naval Academy.

Taking the place of retired Professor Charles Halstead, Emilie M. Amt is the Assistant Professor of History. She received her B.A. from Swarthmore College in 1982, and her Ph. D. from the University of Oxford in 1988. Ms. Amt has also performed research on medieval studies through computer technology

Elizabeth D. Robinson-Guy is the Visiting Assistant Professor of Psychology for the academic year while George Spilich is on leave. Dr. Robin-son-Guy received her Ph.D. from Virginia Polytechnic and State University.

John R. Bloomingdale is the Visiting Assistant Professor of Psychology, replacing Ralph Erber. Bloomingdale received his M.A from the University of Virginia. He expects to receive his Ph.D. there in May, 1989.

Shirley Peterson is a Lecturer in English for the academic year. Peterson will receive her Ph.D. in December from the University of Dela-

Also a Lecturer in English for the academic year, Beverly Wolff-Young received her Ph.D. from the University of Delaware. She has taught at the University of Delaware and at Michigan State University.

Ben H. Fuller is the Visiting Assistant Professor of Business Management. Fuller received his M.B.A. at Loyola College and has taught at Towson State University.

Kenneth D. Wantling was appointed Visiting Assistant continued on page 7

NSIDE:

Dean Baer 's welcome.....page2 RA photos.....pages 4 and 5

Peer advisors.....pages 6 and 7

Libby Cater's letter.....page 11

Sports info.....pages 12 and 13

Chestertown guide.....page 16

EDITORIAL

Orientation is Over

rientation is over, and you're supposed to be oriented. You know how to get from your dorm to Dunning Hall, and where to get your mail. You went to your classrooms to make sure you know where to go each hour, and you figured out the cereal machines in the Dining Hall. Ready or not, it's time to hit the stack of unopened books on your desk.

Step back for a minute, though, and look where you're going. An uncountable number of students have passed through their freshman year at Washington College. Before yours slips by, realize that the class of 1992 is the most important class at Washington College this year. With four full years ahead of you, you are the class that will see the College reach many of its expansion goals. You are the class that will help set the new goals and shape the future of the College.

Two or three years down the road, members of your class will be leading the student body at the head of The Elm and The Student Government Association. One or two year from now and you will be leaders in the Greek Organizations and the Student Academic Board. But there's no need to wait a year, you can start now.

Student elections will be held for positions on the S.G.A. Senate in the next month. Even if you don't run, you continued on page 6

Welcome to the Class of 1992

from Dean Elizabeth R. Baer

ou, the Class of 1992, to the Washington College community. You are the largest entering freshman class in Washington College history (250 students). Your class includes the largest percentage of women (57%) of any Washington College entering class. This reflects the nationwide trend of larger numbers of women entering higher education. Your class has also submitted more results of Advanced Placement tests than any previous entering class. You have the strongest percentages by class rank in 20 years: 51% of you graduated in the top fifth of your high school class, and 77% in the top two-fifths. The Class of 1992 is also a record breaking class in terms of geographical distribution. While 114 freshmen hail from Maryland, there are more freshmen from out-of-state than has been the case in ten years of entering classes. Approximately 20 of you come from New York, New Jersey, Penn-sylvania, Virginia, and the combined New England states. Among you are also citizens of

Since my own field is English Literature, particularly Women's Literature, I am delighted to report that 25% of the Class of 1992 hopes to pursue a degree in English. Eighteen percent of your class hopes to changes on the campus that many, Latvia, Nigeria, and I am pleased to welcome pursue work in History, Inter- have occurred during the su national Studies, Law, or Political Science, ten percent in Business, eight percent in Psychology, and six percent in Science and Pre-Med. But twentyone percent of you entered the College with you major listed as "undecided", and that's fine. We are confident that your first two years will enable you to discover new intellectual pas-

Von are a diverse group in terms of co-curricular activities. As might be expected, many of you have been active in athletics, and worked summer or parttime jobs as life guards, camp counsellors, fast food workers, retail sales people, and house painters. Many of you have served as referees or umpires, are active in sailing, and have had an Outward Bound type of experience. And there are some members of the Class of 1992 who have done rather unique things: managed a jai alai fronton, worked as a ranch hand, served in a soup kitchen cleaned limosines, worked with abused children, cared for terminally ill friends or family members, worked as disc jock-China, Korea, the Netherlands, Sweden, and West Germany. eys, cleaned and built boats, Some of you graduated from done organic farming, catasecondary schools in Australia, logued oriental sculpture, and Canada, and Switzerland; you trained as emergency medical have parents who were born in technicians! Cuba, Ecuador, France, Ger-

Finally, on a humorous note, 20% of you are named either Jennifer, John, Amy, or David. Prepare for some confu-

I am also eager to welcome back the upperclass students. You will find many

mer. The physical changes perhaps most obvious, inth ing the opening of our beauti new Decker Laboratory 0 ter. I hope you will take af moments to wander through building if you do not he classes there this sement This coming academic years be a time for changes in "intellectual campus" of Wa ington College. While you w working hard at your sum job, several members of Washington College comm were working equally han review the Washington Coll curriculum. This Sub-Com tee of the Academic Cou comprised of Professor And son, Chair, Professors Cal Creegan, and O Connor, students Sean Ireton and Bland, met on a regular to from early June to the first August. They produced a page report which covers topics as the Four-Course! the Freshman Year at Wash ton College, faculty exp tions, and long-range plan departmental staffing. recommendations of this re which were reviewed by a long meeting of the facul August 24th, will be disc in appropriate committees administrative offices in coming academic year. We forward to student partit tion on these committees to us ventilate these ideas suggestions for new pa the academic programat W ington College.

> My best wishes for 8 cessful academic year Washington College stude

The Landmark of Lunch

Named after one of the favorite landmarks on campus, The Elm is a landmark at lunch on Fridays when diners are greeted by great stacks of the newspaper. Here is what you can expect each week when you spread the paper out around your lunch tray.

Our News section sports a brand new page this year which we hope will be a stimulating source of information about world and national news. And keep your eyes open for updates on the master plan, and news about the faculty and the students.

Look for your roommate's face in our Campus Voices section, as five students' opinions are solicited and published with their pictures each week.

Washington College and Chestertown are often the features of our Feature section. Look out for Off the Cuff, a regular column for essays which are often satirical in

On the Sports pages, you'll find more than the action continued on page6

Washington College Elm

| Jennifer M. Harriso |
|---------------------|
| Susan Di L          |
| Anne Lindenbau      |
| Carter Boatn        |
| Michele M. Volans   |
| David Johns         |
|                     |
| Bill Beekm          |
| Erin Hodge-William  |
| Jim Sober           |
|                     |
|                     |

Circulation Manager

The Washington College Em is the official student newspaper of Washington College. It is published every Friday during the neademic year with the exception of vacations and exam weeks.

The Washington College. It is published every Friday during the neademic year with the exception of vacations and exam weeks.

The State of the State College Em is a state of the state

"It's okay. You're in college now."

year, even for a senior boarding school med with the worries of ring the "real world" with boyfriend ling status, is an uncom able prospect. Although surroundings and situns can make every day an enture, the anxieties and ssive introspection of a hman's existence would any upperclassman ch at reminiscing. Here's at I remember, albeit un-taking four showers a to survive a late summer t wave in a third floor Reid in which the window ed only part way meeting, for the first lingly:

Looking back at fresh- time, people who had attended

-missing my high school writing my high school boyfriend a month into the semester to ask him please not

- missing my parents, and writing home weekly (voluntarmixing whites and colors in hot

- meeting someone with a known was possible

phro for intro philosophy and toast on the first attempt wondering if piety is pious because the gods love it, or if the gods love piety because it is pious

- following my faculty adviser's direction and signing up for 8:30 classes five days a

- wondering if I should - standing over an open start wearing black clothing and washer trying to remember stop shaving my legs, then what my mother had said about deciding not to and joining the Writers Union anyway - wondering why so many -wishing strangers would alums are on the eight year stop drinking out of my cup at plan socially, even if they gradu-

- worrying about embarsexual preference I had not rassing myself by not knowing how to use the dining hall's

- reading Plato's Euthy- toaster, and then burning my from the Lambdas

- reading about the wed- the Sigs at breakfast dings of people with whom I graduated from high school, and the Macintosh were real comfeeling glad that I'd gone to puter whizzes college instead

Andrea Kehoe

high school yearbook, and run- new students to keep in mind ning across people I hadn't are the words of wisdom given thought of in months had done a pretty good job in whom I encountered as he was matching me with my roommate, the only other student I bathroom at a party: "It's okay. met that year who shared my You're in college now. disdain for the use of the word "party" as a verb

- accidentally sitting near

-thinking people who used

Freshman worries and misassumptions are universal. affecting budding Lambdas and Lit House types alike. Perhaps thumbing through my the most important thing for me by the first Washington thinking Student Affairs College art major I ever met, shaving (sans water) in the

Andrea Kehoe is a senior and - not knowing the KA's former Editor-in-Chief of The

SSUE:

What do you remember most about being a freshman at Washington College?

Senior Mt. Airy art Keller's Basketball shoes md Patriots making the super-

Andy Webb Senior Salisbury, Maryland "The ice cold water in Kent."

Westfield, New Jersey "Living with Erika DelPriore "Pledging. and the bears in the primary colors."

Steve Leary Senior Rye, New Jersey

Rachel Smith Senior Geneva, New York "Stalagtites and Stalagmites in Minta Martin show-

Campus Voices

Being a freshman is supposed to be hell "Well, it was a long time ing with someone named Raul

nerve to turn me into a shman again. "You're a freshn, you're a freshman," she Kibler field! "But I don't want to," I lained "But you have to," she isted. "It's for the sake of e ELM, and for the sake of

"Um," I said. "So tell me how bad it was

"It was hot as hell," I ared "And we didn't have an conditioner, or even a fan. I ght I was going to die."

The ELM goddess put her rting hand on my shoul-There, there," she said. w tell me all about it. And that hell all over again." t squeezed my neck hard.

ago, you know. Or at least it. seems like it was a long time. I lived in Kent House, before they reked. "Now get to your tent had carpets or clean bath-

Bill Beekman The ELM goddess was disturbed. "But I thought that all freshman lived in tents on Kibler field?"

"Not really," I said. Her eyes glistened. "Well I have to make a note of this. They should be housed in tents on Kibler field. They will when

I'm through." "Well, go on," she continued. "I don't have all day, and you only get five hundred

"Well, when I got one of the many slips of paper that tered, I found that I was room- cry Felipa. The name frightened me. All that I could imagine was that I would be living with some greasy-haired, greasy-bodied Peruvian who only spoke Portugese had lots of body hair and never took showers. That kind of thing can kill you, especially after you've been lost in Delaware for five hours with your sister and brother-in-law, and their eight dogs and two goats."

"Two goats?" asked the ELM goddess.
"That's a long, ugly story, for some other op-ed piece. Anyway, when I first saw Raul, he had just returned from soccer practice. He was sweaty and smelly, everything that I dreaded. I dropped a pile of socks on my brown and yellow was given to me when I regis- striped mattress. I wanted to

'Hi,' he said. 'I'm Raul. I'm And professors are supposed to going to get a shower now, so I'll laugh at you when you speak in get out of your way while you class, and give you D's on all of unpack. Nice to meet you. "I let out a deep breath.

'Nice to meet you, too. I'm Bill." "That's it?" interrupted the ELM goddess.

"Well, we became best of friends after that, and talked about God and politics and the Chicago Bears every night be-fore we went to sleep."

"That's too nice," the ELM goddess said. "Being a freshman is supposed to be hell. You're supposed to hate your very existence, and bad, humiliating things are supposed to happen to you everyday. Upperclassmen are supposed to throw French's mustard in your laundry and steal your clothes from the shower and make you their books in the wrong hand.

your papers, with things like You are an illiterate freshman" scribbled across the top in red ink. Don't you know anything?"

"Well, I did get lost two or three times, maybe, and once a few people laughed at me when I dropped my tray in the dining hall. I guess that was a little embarrassing."

"This is useless," whined the ELM goddess. "I wanted to punish you, not give you a semirewarding experience. What am I going to do now?" I laughed. "I guess that you gave me the wrong punishment. If you really wanted me to suffer, you should have turned me into an ELM editor."

Bill Beekman is a senior and do fifty push ups for carrying formerly the sports editor of the

RA of 2nd floor Minta Martin, Cyndy Dingus is a senior businessmanag ment major and is president of the Alpha Chi sorority.

Sharon Orser is a junior biology major from Baltimore. RA of third floor Minta Martin, she is involved in volleyball and softball, and works as a tour guide.

As 2nd Vice President of the ZTA sorority. Adrienne Cupka serves as RA to 4th floor Minta Martin. She is active in softball.

Junior Ann Urban is Reid first floor's The biology major is from Passo Maryland, and plays on the volle

Tina Smith is a junior sociology major from Andover, Massachusetts. She is RA of 2nd floor Reid, and is currently the men's crew coach.

Sandy Perez, a senior psychology major is from Miami Florida. RA of 3rd floor Reid, she is researching memory for the psychology department and is involved in the Campus Christian Fellowship.

Wendy Kloiber is a junior majoring in English. She is from Syracuse, New York, and is RA of 1st floor Queen Anne's. She is the founder of The Yong Democrats Club Carole Reece is a junior from Pocons Maryland. She is RA of second is Queen Anne's, and is active in worse athletics, including field hockey.

A senior, double-majoring in English and history, Cathy Jewell is RA of first floor Caroline. She is from Grasonville, Maryland, and plans to open her own House of Beauty

Baltimore(originally from Canada) who is majoring in the Theatrical Arts and Philosophy. A member of the Writers' Union, he is RA of 2nd floor Caroline.

International Studies major Chip Schaller is RA of the International Floor, 3rd floor The senior halls from Caroline. Centreville, Maryland.

Brian Kelly is RA of Kent first floor for A junior majoring in business i noring in psychology, he is active the Theta Chi Fraternity and the New!

RA of Kent first floor south, Mark Bradley is a senior majoring in political science with a philosophy minor. He is currently Vice President of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity.

Senior English major Matt Kelleris a veteran of Kent House life as he returns this year as RA of second floor north. Working for AV and Student Affairs also keeps him busy.

Steve Attias is a junior psychology major with a business management minor and RA of Kent second floor south. He plays soccer, and is a member of both the KAs and the Campus Christian Fellowship.

Junior Andy Chandler is RA of the Sigma Kappa House, East Hall history major is involved in the Department, and plays the saxspl He is from Massachusetts.

Hailing from Sallsbury, Maryland, senior Andy Webb is RA of The Kappa Alpha House, Middle Hall. He is a business

April Baugher is the RA of the science building, West Hall. She is a junior from Lavale, Maryland, Senior Jim Spencer is RA of the quiet floor in Worchester first floor. He is a business major from West Chester, Elizabeth Rollins Is a junior English major, and is RA of second floor Worchester, a quiet floor. She is a leader in the Writers'

Thea Bournazian returns to Washington College from her junior year abroad in England. She is the RA of first floor Wicomico, and is a senior

Senior Rich Gerhardt halls from Connecticut, and is RA of second floor Wicomico. He is a business management

Raul Felipa is a senior majoring in business. The soccer player is RA of first and second floor Somerset.

Senior Tom Conaty returns from his junior year abroad in England to RA third and fourth floor Somerset. He is an English major involved in crew, and is a member of the Phi Sigma Fraternity nior Scott Jones is a political science isjor from Mt. Airy, Maryland. He is RA the Theta Chi House, Dorchester.

Senior psychology major Kim Cavolo is from Timonium, Maryland and is RA of Talbot House.

Steve Leary is a senior majoring in American Studies. He is Senior Class President, a member of Lambda Pi Delta, plays soccer and is RA of the Cardinal

Rachel Smith, a senior majoring in political science is RA of the Cardinal Dorms. She Is from Geneva, New York.

Fine Framing · Select Gifts Artists' Materials

> POBox 402 311 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-5292

Come to the allcampus Elm meeting on Wednesday, September 7th at 7:30PM in the O'Neill Literary House.

In The World...

Presidential Candidate Michael Dukakis, speaking at the Massachusetts statehouse, pressed the Vice President to reveal his role in the Iran-Contra affair. Governor Dukakis was joined by Senator George Mitchell who is the co-author of a book about the Iran-Contra Affair that is very critical of the Vice President and his role in the scandal

Breaking with Reagan Administration policies, the Vice President announced a comprehensive program to clean up the environment. The plan calls for stricter clean up efforts, a global conference at the White House to discuss the "greenhouse effect", a program to curb acid rain causing pollutants, expansion of the National Park System, and a more efficient use of the

"Superfund" to aid in the clean up of Toxic Waste sites.

Sixteen people were killed and thirty four were hospitalized following the crash of a Delta Airlines 727 at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport in Texas. The jetliner crashed during a take-off attempt when one of the engines caught fire. United Nations

United Nations Secretary General Javier Perez de Cueller has asked the Security Council to aid him in breaking the deadlocked Ifan-Iraq peace talks. The Secretary General says the talks have become deadlocked over an Iraqi demand. The Iraqis have declared that they will not surrender Iranian territory or agree to return captured Iranian Prisoners of War unless the Iranians guarantee the safety of Iraqi shipping in the Persian Gulf

The United Nations General Assembly voted to allow the P.L.O. to maintain their observer mission at U.N. Although the United States is against allowing the P.L.O. to maintain their mission, President Reagan has announced that he will accept the Assembly's decision.

Chile General Augusto Pinochet was named as the sole candidate in the upcoming Chilean

511 WASHINGTON AVE

Presidential Referendum. If ratified by the voters, Pinochet would serve as President until 1997. If Pinochet is rejected by the voters, a multi-candidate election could be held in Chile in late 1989 or early 1990. Panama Ousted Panamanian President Eric Arturo Delvalle arrived in the United States on Monday to meet with State Department officials. Both the White House and the State Department have denied rumors that Mr. Delvalle and his wife are seeking political asylum in the U.S.

Lech Walesa said that the strikes in Poland would not end until the Government agrees to talks. Chief among his goals is the legalization of Solidarity.

Mr. Wladyslaw Baka, the new Polish Central Committee Secretary for Economic Affairs, unvailed the new economic plan for Poland. It calls for smaller, more "flexible" businesses, free markets for raw materials and equipment, and plans for allowing workers to purchase shares in their companies. Mr. Baka is the former chairman of the Polish Central Bank, and is considered to be a possible contender for Prime Minister.

The Ethiopian Government has begun the bombing and raiding of villages according to the Eritrean People's Liberation Front. The Eritrean's have been fighting the Soviet backed regime of Col. Mengitu Haile Mariam for the past 27 years. They claim the government's actions were in response to recent rebel gains.

Subs · Salads · Soups · Daily Specials Liquor • Beer • Wine

nt Plaza Shopping Ce estertown MD 21620

Full Service Banking

CHESTERTOWN • 778-298

rkers set one of the modular units of the Cardinal Dorms into its platform. The dorms have a lifespan of five to seven years. continued from page 1 Until its completion the social life classes normally conducted in The Alonzo Decker Sci-Dunning Hall are moved to ence Center is undergoing the William Smith Hall or to the final touches; renovation of the new wing. Faculty member center section and the east wing are temporarily banished from will be finished during the their offices into three trails academic year. It will consist of behind Dunning Hall. several new classrooms and lab Throughout the academ facilities, including new lab year, construction will continu benches and microscopes given on Gibson Avenue. continued on page

by the Pew Memorial Trust.

A Shear Design

ehind Barber Shop . 505 Washington Ave. Chestertown, Md

Special for Students

FREE Gift with any Hair Service (limit one per student)

25% Discount for all Washington College Students (thru the month of September)

778-0898

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP. 107 N CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

One Day Service Available 301-778-3181 Located Downtown next to the Court House

Interested in a Fashion Bug Charge?

Inquire at our Store located at Kent Plaza

Open Mon-Sat 10-9 and Sunday 12-5

778-2900

24 "OUR TELLER MACHINE

continued from page 1

University of Tennessee.

Professor of Mathematics for the academic year. He received both his B.S. and M.S. from the teach part-time as a Lecturer of Drama for the academic year.

Schertler received her B.A. from the College of St. Catherine.

Nancy J. Schertler will

Robert Shelburne is the

Walter C. Carrington,

Class of '92 continued from page 1 are evident to us in the admissions process." "We're always on the look out for creative people. I think we have a built-in bias for the creative arts," he says.

Furthermore, Coveney believes that increased selectivity enables the College to "look beyond (traditional academic standards). Success in college is at least as much attitude as it is aptitude. We're looking for people who want to take advantage of all the College has to offer."

In the past, 800 was the unofficial limit on the number of students enrolled at the College; however, Coveney stresses, "One of the things we don't want to do is give up the opportunity to pursue growth."

He believes that WC can successfully grow, to an extent, continued from page 2 become an automatic member of the S.G.A. by enrolling in Washington College, so it is at least your duty to vote. Set an example for the apathetic crowd and take some interest in the direction of the student body and the college.

Other organizations will be waking up form their summer naps this month as well. crats to the Campus Christian watch than perform, dramatists

while serving its purpose as a small, liberal arts college

Coveney admits that the question of the number of students the College can accomodate is "ongoing," requiring input from faculty, board members, and the academic and financial administrations. The Cardinal Dorms were recently erected to accomodate the housing needs of an increasing student population.

"I think it's going to be a series of short term assessments [and planning]." Among the other characteristics of the freshman class: .57% are women, the largest female percentage of any entering class:

graduates;

.. the incoming class contains the largest number of outof-state students in a decade. representing the New England states, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Virginia

Fellowship to the brand new Maggie Horsley Society-a club concerned with women's issues (come to the first meeting and find out who Maggie Horsley

The athletic teams need the support of both athletes and fans. Look for fall sporting events to attend, like soccer, field hockey and tennis.

Look in your handbook for a list dramatic side, try out for a play. of clubs to join from the Young It's true-sometimes freshmen Republicans and Young Demo- getthe lead. And if you'd rather

.. countries over the globe re represented by citizens of China, Korea, the Netherlands, Sweden, and West Germany.

...freshman study interests are as follows: English, 25%; History-International Studies-Law-Political Science, 18%; Business, 10%; Psychology, 8%, Science, including Pre-Med, 6%, and Undecided, 21%.

Master plan continued from page 6 gene B. Casey Academic Resource Center is the largest renovation undertaken by the College. The first stages have

The new entranceway and .56% are public school parkinglotare useable, but will not receive the finishing touches until the fall of 1990, when the entire project is expected to be complete

> Next summer, a pedestrian walkway behind Hodson. always welcome a large audience (and who knows, you may be invited to the cast party). And one more thing-The Elm is looking for a few good people. Do you have a camera and want some darkroom experience? Do you have a pencil to draw with, a pen to write with? Come to The Elm office-find out what you can do. You may If you lean toward the surprise yourself. Little did we know we'd find ourselves at the helm of a newspaper. After all we were just freshmen two years

Kent, and Somerset will access buildings. With a State of Maryland grant, the fire lane will be turned into a brick walk-

Over the next two years, the Academic Resource Center will be under construction. The Center will include seminar rooms, the Admissions Office, Bookstore, Computing Center, and Mail Office.

At the same time, the Art Visiting Assistant Professor of House will be completely gut-Economics. Dr. Shelburne reted, and the Art Department ceived his Ph.D. from the Uniwill relocate into the old water versity of North Carolina in retainage plant. 1984

Throughout the construction, the electrical system will be redistributed to accomadate the additional load of the Science Building and Academic Resource Center. All of the electrical wiring will be buried underground, eliminating telephone poles and above-ground wires, eventually looping to all buildings on campus.

continued from page 2 of the week's sporting events. Here you'll see the face of the Athlete of the Week and enjoy the ingenuity of Chip Shots, an essay that goes beyond the boundaries of scoreboards and for Arts and Entertainment. Turn to this section to read the Campus Calendar, and discover statistics.

appointed as the Goldstein Chair, will teach courses in history. A graduate of Harvard Law School, Carrington was appointed as Commissioner of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination in 1957 He served as Executive Vice-President of the Afro-American Institute in New York from 1971 to 1980 who make up the college and local arts community, the individuals who are behind the poetry readings concerts and

At various times through out the year we'll add supplements and guides, and make The last section is saved sure you look for our monthly magazine The Collegian.

art exhibits

Now that you know what where to go for fun in Chester- to expect, we hope you'll be town from our resident expert. looking for our first regular You'll also read about the people issue on September 16.

PEOPLES BANK

An Independent, Community Bank

Main Office Chestertown High Street - 778-3500

Washington Ave. Chestertown 778-5500

Branch Offices Rock Hall 639-2233

> Galena Branch 648-5681

> > Member F.D.I.C.

Peer Advisors

Michele Balze

Steve Bruchey

John Buettner

Lynn Burris

Tony Caliguiri

Becky Cox

Michelle Darling

Adrienne DeAngelo

Maria Karukas

Renee King

--Serving Lunch and Dinner Daily Over looking the Water

-Saturday Night Seafood Buffet

On the Bay at Fairlee Creek Chestertown, MD 21620 301-778-2100

Thirty motel rooms - Restaurant & Lounge -

Banquet & Meeting Rooms - Golf Course - Full Service Marina - Miniature Golf - Pool- Beach - Fishing - Sailboard Rentals

Reservations requested for Parties of eight or more

Lisa Lambert

Cynthia Naff

Paije Osworth

Cynthia Panowicz

Arian Ravanbaksh

Tim Rohs

Jennifer Vaughn

Kristine Winschel

Stor & Lock

Self Service Storage

U- STORE IT

U- LOCK IT

U- TAKE THE KEY

Anything

Boats, Records, Merchandise....

located on Rt. 213 mile north of Chestertown

778-6464

Michael McGinniss

SEPTEMBER 8TH IN THE COFFEE-HOUSE

OM LARSEN BLUES BAND

SPONSORED BY THE S.G.A
9:30 PM

free admission

Stam Drug Co

Chestertown, Maryland 778-3030

- Greeting
- Cosmetics
- Russell Stover
- Candy C

Taking 'student affairs' to heart: voices of student advocacy

by Anne Lindenbaum

I find the most rewarding part of the job those opportunities one has to work one on one with the students," says Dean Maureen Kelley McIntyre of the Student Affairs office. Located on the first floor of William Smith Hall, McIntyre and Dean Edward Maxcy are able to work individually with students at a moment's notice.

"While Deans Sansing and Baer rather than working together. are concerned with the academic as pects of student life, Dean Maxcy and I are more concerned with those compo-

Dean Maureen Kelly McIntyre is entering nents of a student's life that are nonacademic. What we do runs the gamut from working with Ra's, peer advisers, student leaders, just helping students with their own leadership roles, right through housing, student activities, fraternities and sororities, and the student judiciary systems," says McIn-

"On the down side," says Maxcy, vandalism. But on the up side, we try to academic obligations," says Maxcy. be conduits for sharing students' concerns and getting any ideas they have. .Ideally, we'd like Student Affairs to be a joint effort between the students and us to improve the quality of life for individuals and for the entire campus. Sometimes," he continues," I'm afraid that students see this as confrontational

Mc Intyre, who has been with the College for twenty years, has seen a significant change regarding cooperation between the College and the stu-"When I first came here, we exerted much more control over the day to day life with curfews, required attendance at certain events, very strict control. The whole college operated that way. Students weren't on committees - decisions were made for them, not with them. Over the years the students have assumed a greater and greater role in helping govern the institution; they sit on all the committees, and student organizations, like the SGA, operate very independently now

"Our role has gone from being monitors of what's going on to facilitators," says McIntyre

While much of McIntyre and Maxcy's work involves direct contact with students, whether it be with a specific group or an individual student, an equal amount is also devoted to working with the administration. "There must be hundreds of things that we do on a regular basis which have a her twentieth year with the Student Affairs positive effect on student life that the students never hear about," states

> Lobbying for extra housing is just one example. With the housing crunch continuing this year, adequate housing for upperclassmen became an important issue to the Student Affairs office. "We strongly feel, that because of the nature of our academic program, that wherever humanly possible, seniors should have single rooms so they have come from a different point of view, other members of the administration may see the priority as the full use of the facilities. We respect that, because this institution is not highly state-supported and must be self-sufficient. . .but we look at it from a different point of view."

"Quite rightfully, because they

order to make themselves more at sible. "We stand in the hallway or lobby between classes so someonem say, Are you Dean so-and-so? and question, rather than seeing a s tary and making an appointment. Maxcy. "We're here to help. Someth help requires discipline and what try to do is help the student find they discipline to be successful, academia

Dean Edward Maxcy has eleven years of experience with Student Affairs. Maxo helped lobby for extra housing this year.

many committees, feel that their responsibility is really to be an advocacy voice for the students. "If ninety percent of our job is working with the students, then the other ten percent is orking with other administrators so that they look at things from the point of view of why the institution exists, which is because of the students," says McIntyre. "People who don't work every day with the students, and whose work is not affected by the pace of student life need to subtly be reminded of this." High visibility is also an important priority to Maxcy and McIntyre, in

To get off on the right foot st beginning of each academic year, M tyre suggests thinking carefully the kind of student you'd like tobe getting in good academic shape "The reputation you make yourself the first month here willfa you for a long time," she says.

Whatever we can do by policy example, by effort, or by working other administrators to help understand where students are g we can help the students. We're working for the same thing," conth

WELCOME FRESHMEN

The BOOKSTORE not only has your books . . .

- · W knapsacks and totes
  - eat clothes!
  - * Posters and Art supplies
    - * Stationary, Calendars, greeting cards
      - * Records, Tapes, and CD's
        - * Computer Supplies

Come test drive a Macintosh computer (starting September 12th) and you could win a CD player.

> Washington College Bookstore (basement of Hodson Hall) 8:30 - 4:30 Mon through Fri 10:00 - 1:00 Saturday

The first regular issue of The Elm will come out on Friday September 16th.

Austin Carpet

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport

1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

Kent Plaza 778-5068

Store Hours Mon-Fri: 10-9 Sat: 9- 10 Sun: 11-4

Greek guide: Introducing the Campus Sororities and Fraternities

by Anne Lindenbaum It's all Greek to them. burrently there are three somities and four fraternities on ampus. All three sororities re based in Minta Martin and re as follows

Alpha Chi Omega (AXO), housed separately around the Chapter, hosts the fall softball wight" annually

Sigma Tau Chapter.

"welcome back" parties each Christmaspartyforunderprivi-

The four fraternities are

Alpha Omicron Pi (AOPi), campus and are as follows:

Zeta Tau Alpha (ZTA), Beta Omega Chapter, hosts the Gamma Beta Chapter, hosts annual "Beach Bash" and Kappa Alpha Order (KA). leged children tournament and spring "Heineken" party.

holds the annual Halloween

the "Major Series" each spring. February.

Women wishing to rush much have a cumulative 2.0 average. Men wishing to rush Phi Sigma Kappa, Colony, must have had a 2.0 average the previous semester. This party and the occasional Toga has changed from the required ty. 1.75 last year. Rush will be Lambda Pi Delta, hosts held during the first week of

Association is a democratic organization that promotes student welfare by representing student opinion, and con-tributing to both social and

Divided into three sec- jors tions, the Senate, the Student Academic Board and the Student Conduct Council, all full time undergraduate students receive representative vote in S.G.A. proceedings.

The Senate is the legislative body of the S.G.A., composed of the executive board. class presidents and elected senators. The senators are elected in the beginning of the year by the individual dormito-

The Student Academic The Student Government Board is responsible for student involvement in the formulation of Washington College policy. It is chaired by the Vice President of the S.G.A. and made up of representatives academic needs of the students. elected from the academic ma-

The Student Conduct Council is the judicial branch of the S.G.A.

The officers of the S.G.A. are elected by the students of Washington College in the spring. For the academic year of 1988-1989, the president is Perry Finney, vice president is Rob Albers, secretary is Brooks Durkee, treasurer is Tom Jackson, and social chairpersons are Tiffany Quell and William Bertles.

For fraternities and three sororities constitute the Greek on campus: Kappa Alpha, Theta Chi, Phi Sigma, and Lambda Pi Delta; Alpha Chi Omega, Alpha Omicron Pi, and Zeta Tau Alpha

Awareness, involvement, make education 'outstanding'

ming students. The Caters, who have been at Washington ege for six years, stress involvement and participation as ert of a well-rounded education.

Welcome back, upperus to all the freshman class. You have arrived at a time of excitement and innovation at lege. Washimgton College. Major surgery is being performed on the heart of the campus. You are the pioneers in preparing Washington College for its third century. In the months ahead, try to look on the open trenches and protective fences not as annoyances but as signs of progress-the necessary props for the class act that will follow

What about now, you ask. Today is what counts. Agreed. Now is an exciting time for college and for country. History is in the making. We are in the quadrennial process of choosing our leaders. George Washington would not, we think, be amused. What, he might ask, are we thinking of when over half of our citizens choose to ignore the most vital work of democracy? "Pay attention!"

To the students of Wash- some justified pique. Listen fortunate in the communitycarefully and choose wisely. The next four years are critical for classes. A warm welcome from America and for the world. And they are critical for you, the students of Washington Col-> fered? You have challenging teachers waiting to share their love of learning with you. But that is not all. You have a myriad of activities outside the ing. It is all here waiting for classroom to enrich your college experience.

If I were given a magic wand with the power to fulfill good education an outstanding one wish for you, it would be that you take off your blinders and look at the choices all around you. Be a joiner. Join the audiences to see and hear outstanding lecturers, musicians, actors and dancers that come regularly to Washington College. Join clubs to pursue interests that can enrich you through life: photography, sailing, swimming, languages. Sign up for volunteer groups to offer one might hear him say with a helping hand to those less the handicapped child or the lonely senior citizen. And, yes, join protest groups when you feel that your strong beliefs are

Become a part of the life What are you being of- on campus, from the newspaper to the student government. from the international club to the debate society, from intramural sports to acting and singyou. The friendships you form will last a lifetime. Take advantage of these opportunities or you will miss what makes a

> Finally, there is an open door and a warm welcome for you at Hynson Ringgold House. The mile that separates us is a pleasant walk and the Caters welcome the chance to get to know you better. I hope we meet soon

> > Have a good year!

Libby A. Cater

Whatever your game is, W. C. has it

by Carter Boatner

There is certainly no doubt that Washington College has a great deal to offer its students, however one must take the initiative to get involved. Whatever it is that you choose to become involved in will certainly enhance your time spent in undergraduate stud-

As far as athletics go, Washington College offers a variety of sports for the students to take advantage of and enjoy. By late August members of the vomen's volleyball team, the women's field hockey team and the men's soccer team had arrived Chestertown to begin preparation for their upcoming Fall seasons in NCAA Division Ill competion. Additional programs becoming active in the Fall will be the men's lacrosse team which continues a strong W.C. tradition along with both the men's and women's crew programs

For those students who are not interested in becoming involved with the established competive sports programs just mentioned yet wish to take part in some form of athletics, the College has developed a Recreational Sports program. This program is aimed at involving all students in activities ranging from Softball and Tennis to Aqua-Aerobics and Skin Diving. The Recreational Sports activities schedule is not as demanding as the Competitive Sports programs, and is open to partial sponsorship by fraternities and sororities.

Women Volleyball's head coach Penny Fall looks forward to another good year.

Women's Field Hockey

Head Coach Diane Guinan leads her team into the 1988 Fall campaign after coming off of a strong season last year in which they ended up ranked 11th in the NCAA South Region, posting a record of 9-7

Other honors amased last season was the distinguishing feat of being the only W.C. women's team to defeat a nationally ranked team (Catholic Uniersity), posting a undefeated record in Chesapeake Women's Athletic Conference, and having 8 players selected to participate in the USA Field Hockey Southeast Tournament. All of these achievements were earned by the squad in only their first year in the Middle Atlantic Conference League

With the absence of last years MVP, the squad is left with six, possibly nine returning players, among them Seniors Linda Anders (1987 MIP), Sandie Coulter and Juniors Beth Matthews and Carol Reece. In the off sea son, however Coach Guinan led a strong recruiting effort which she feels has payed off and might help this years squad with 10 potential new players. "I have a good feeling about the group, but we lack experience - however the recruiting payed off and we have a good group coming in", said Guinan.

Assisting Guinan in the coaching responsibities will be W.C. newcomer Beth Armstrong who was a member of the U.S. Field Hockey Squad from 1977-

Lacrosse

At Washington College, Lacrosse has remained a strong tradition; this season heading the program in his seventh year will be veteran Coach Terry Corcoran

